Porter French also makes beneficial use of his vocal organs, but in an entirely different manner. In other words, he is a member, in fact, the president of the college warblers. Porter is an ardent devotee of the bicycle and, if the weather is favorable, will soon be seen once again cruising smoothly over the highways and byways upon his mechanical means of taking a walk. Porter will be conspicuous by his absence on the campus next year and will leave a space that will be extremely difficult to fill.

CAMPUS TALKIE

Was the rumor that Kemp Davis made a talk on "Cooperation" at the Almshouse Sunday, founded on fact or was it a malicious untruth?

Bill Norville— "Linton, got a match?"
Linton Lane—"No, I don't smoke."
Bill Norville—"No, you blow all the time."

"D" is supposed to represent a certain grade on reports, but with a dash after it, it becomes the opinion of the college student concerning it.

Would the calf of a Holstein cow be called a halfstein?

Inez: How much will you give me for these jokes?
Editor Keeton: Two yards start.

Girls may not always keep their agreements, but they certainly keep their compacts.

Perfect poise is not looking guilty when you're sitting next to your girl in the library and Professor Ellis glares at you.

If, as Dorothy Dix says, it's every woman's business to be (?) it's no wonder that business is terrible in our metropolitan centers.

Boaster: "No girl ever made a fool out of me."
Sceptic: "Who did then?"

FIRE BIRD

Sometimes I see her, just at sunset,
Flying through the sky, with wings aflame.
She lights the clouds till all the west is burning,
Vieing with her radiant self.
And when the glow is trembling near its peak,
She gathers all her fiery plumage, and leaps into the west,
Carrying with her all the color of the sky,
Except a few purple shadows.
And then, from where she is, a crimson feather
Is wafted slowly to the earth.
It lingers long upon the tree tops and the grass,
A gentle, faint, reminding after math
Of her quivering flame.

Weird Mystery Play Chosen By Seniors

The senior class has selected an eerie mystery play, "The Black Flamingo" by Sam Janney, for its class play to be given on June 2. This production will be a novel event in dramatics at Maryville, because very few mystery plays have been staged here.

Mrs. West, herself, is directing the play in a spirit of anticipation and adventure, since she has coached so comparatively few mystery dramas. However, this type of play is in vogue at the theatres, so that in choosing "The Black Flamingo" the seniors are quite modern.

Not only the ghost element will make the play fascinating, but also its historical basis will add interest. It is reported that Mrs. West is collecting data about its historic setting, which in itself is intensely interesting, and which will be available for publication in the near future.

In direct contrast to the recently produced "Escape", which is a one-man play, "The Black Flamingo" is everybody's play. Nearly all the characters have major parts.

GIRLS' GLEE CLUB

On Wednesday evening the Girls' Glee Club gave a concert in the auditorium of the local high school as a municipal park benefit.

As was the case in the concert given on the Hill March 6, "The Carpenter's Shop", "Sleepy Time", and "The Two Clocks" were outstanding numbers. In the early part of the program the blending of voices was particularly rich. Good lighting effects improved parts of the program, especially the "Grecian Frieze", "Pierrot and Pierrette" and "The Minuet."

Miss Lavinia Jones contributed two readings to the program. Violin numbers were rendered by Misses Eleanor Henry and Mildred Purviance.

Highlanders Win Double Bill From Bowden State College

Coach Honaker's Highlanders Win Their Sixth Straight Victory By Defeating Strong Georgia Team

A Cleveland Scout Watches Scots in Action

Coach Honaker's Highlanders batted out their fifth and sixth consecutive victories of the year Saturday afternoon by taking both ends of a double header from Bowdon State College from Bowdon, Georgia. The Scots won an 8 to 5 victory in a long drawn opening game then made it two straights by winning out 1 to 0 in the nightcap.

The visitors drew first flood in the opening canto of the first game when Chambers walked, advanced to second on Wood's bunt and scored when Downing, one of the best outfielders seen here this year, laced a single to cented field. Leftwich ended the innings, however by flying to Hurst in center field.

The Highlanders went into their half of the first determined to get that run back and they did just that and had runs to spare. Benn reached second when McCay hastily grabbed up his slow roller down the third base line and threw it wildly over the first baseman's head. White hit to short who made an attempt on a fielders choice and Joe Woodard scored White and Smith with a timely single to left center. Hurst struck out but reached first when he catcher dropped the ball. During this wild first inning four runners chased across the plate and the Scots had an opporutnity to score more but the inning ended when Teffeteller failed to bunt on a squeeze play and Smith was out at home.

The Highlanders added another in the fourth and the teams added one each in the sixth then the visitors went on a spree in the seventh and scored three runs to close the gap between the score considerably. The Scots scored one in the seventh and eighth and held the enemy scoreless during the rest of the game and won out 8 to 5.

The first game was featured by the briliant all round playing of Tom West who clouted out two triples to carry off the batting honors of the day. The Rock has been in a slump all season but he certainly gave evidence of snapping out of it Saturday afternoon. He played brilliantly in the field and his big bat was almost totally responsible for the first victory. Wonder what that Cleveland Scout thought about Tommy?

The Highlanders won the second game in the very first inning. They played seven of course but so far as victory or defeat was concerned, it might as well have ended after the first canto. Smitty was given a free pass to first and Big Joseph Woodard waltzed to the plate and slapped one on the button to deep left center for three bases and Smitty scampered home with that precious run. Wonder what that Cleveland Scout thought about JOE?

Woodard's triple in the very first inning was the Scots' only hit of the game and the visitors collected three bingles off the delivery of Emmett Stidham but they could not produce the goods with men on the sacks and after all, that's what wins the old ball games.

TENNIS TEAM DEPARTED THIS MORNING FOR WEEKS TOUR OF SOUTHERN COLLEGES

SPORTOGRAPHY

By Bob West

Seemingly the weather is just about as distracting to sports as this column is misleading. However, the Highlanders played their best game of the year last Saturday, after warming up for nine innings. A close inspection of the score book shows that there was not a single error made during the game.

Victory with only one score to their name means air tight baseball. Coach Honaker should have nothing to worry about for the remainder of this season.

—:—

The inter-class or varsity practice track meet, run off in elegant style for entrants who have had several weeks of practice. Of course for purely class entrants the matter is not worth discussing. It appears on the surface, as if an interclass track meet is composed of the Varsity which is the "Class" and the entrants which means those taking below second place. I remember a track meet in which most of the winners "fed the fish". Much enthusiasm could be aroused by a real inter-class Amateur track meet.

This near May sunshine is arousing a seasonable interest in the swimming pool. But the swimming pool is not so enthusiastic about the matter. It is becoming rather shaky in the head and one side seems rather inclined to lie down on the job.

The tennis team is away at last so now we can talk about them for the chances are that they won't ever see this column anyway. The two doubles composed of Strain and Talmage, Fischbach and Buchanan, any one of which are capable solo artists, ought to bring home some clean silverware.

INTERCLASS TRACK MEET

April 23—Sweeping aside other contenders with ease the class of '33 today won the annual track meet, scoring 67 1-2 points out of a possible 126 points. Their nearest competitor was the class of '32 with 26 points while the Seniors came third with 25 3-4 points. The freshmen came last with a total of 6 2-3 points. "Smilie" Richardson was individual high scorer with 16 points while "Dip" Felknor and Roy Taylor were tied for second place with 13 points each.

In taking the meet by such a lopsided score the Sophs took first and second in five events and first alone in four more. The Seniors were credited with three firsts and the Juniors got two.

Strain, Ed. Buchanan, Fishback And Talmage Comprise Team On Trip

Long Trip Includes Matches With Best In South

The tennis team left this morning for a week's tour of southern colleges. Those making the trip are: Coach Smith, Manager Landrum, Dick Strain, George Fischbach, John Talmage, and Edward Buchanan. According to the schedule the teams will be back Saturday night but will leave again on the following Monday for another schedule:

The schedule is as follows:
Carson-Newman, April 20th—There
Middle Tenn. Teachers, April 25th—Here
Univ. of Chattanooga, April 27th—There
Howard College, April 28th—There
Univ. of Alabama, April 30th—There
Birmingham-Southern, May 1st—There
Middle Tenn. Teachers, May 2nd—There
Tusculum College, May 4th—There
Centre College, May 8th—Here (tentative)
Tusculum College, May 13th—Here

Due to the fact that neither the University of Tennessee or Tennessee Wesleyan has a tennis team this year there will be a scarcity of games on the home courts as these teams have always furnished us with matches every year both here and there.

The two courts by Mr. Proffitt's home are reserved for varsity practice every day after 3 p. m. All men that are not ranked within the first eight must give up these courts at that time in order that the team may practice.

All men on the squad that are not out for practice at least three times a week will be dropped.

BUSINESS MANAGER

Students wishing to apply for appointment as business manager and assistant business manager of the Highland Echo for the coming year must submit their applications by Friday, May 8. Statements from former employers or other evidence of their business experience must accompany the application.

These applications may be presented to any member of the student-faculty committee on selection composed of Norma Spilatore, Mildred MacKenzie, Alice Renegar, Clarence Bratschie, Miss Green, and Professors Walker and Hunter.

Coach Thrower gave the members of the track team something to run about, when he made the statement that last year he had a better track team than pistol, but this year the situation had been reversed. This statement would not have been so bad, had it not been that the pistol snapped immediately after, when he tried to start the one mile runners.

Echo Staff Rewarded By Annual Banquet

Last Tuesday evening from six until eight-thirty, on the third floor of Science Hall the Staff of the Highland Echo enjoyed its second annual banquet. Those present included twenty-eight members of the Staff, four members of the faculty, and, as special guests, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. B. Hedge, Jr., of Maryville.

The room and the table were decorated with dogwood. Favors at each plate were whistles and balloons. With the aid of these two instruments varying sounds were produced during the evening.

The four courses of the dinner were: "A Reporter's Inspiration", "The Feature Article", "Last Minute News", and "Editorial Comment."

Dr. Hussey, as toastmaster, was assisted by the following persons: Roberta Robison, who addressed in poetry, the Editor; Julia Terry, whose fancy, also poetic, was directed to the faculty; and Bob West, who dedicated his remarks to the Business Manager.

After dinner Dr. Hussey introduced Mr. Hedge, who gave a very interesting and instructive talk "About Printing". Mr. Hedge is the editor of The Maryville Enterprise, in which office the Highland Echo is printed, and he has been a very kind and helpful friend to the staff for several years.

After Mr. Hedge's talk, Dr. Hunter spoke "Concerning Policy". He emphasized the very great extent to which the success of the paper depends upon the efforts and attitude of the entire staff.

Prof. Davis concluded the trio of talks by some highly entertaining remarks on "The Banquet."

As the final gesture of the evening Dr. Hussey presented each of the four members of the staff with a small box. Although their contents were not disclosed to the others present, we are sure that they were all expressive and symbolic of Dr. Hussey's appropriate and eulogistic remarks to each of the four.

EL CLUB ESPANOL MEETS

April 21—This afternoon El Club Espanol enjoyed a party at the home of one of its members, Miss Faye Lequire. Mr. and Mrs. Smith, as well as Bobbie Jean, were guests. Several children's games were played with a great deal of enthusiasm. The final game was "Tinaja". The tinaja was a large paper bag decorated with yellow and white, the Spanish colors, and filled with peanuts and candy. Everyone was blindfolded and given a stick with which to break the tinaja. When the bag broke everyone scrambled for the peanuts and candy scattered on the floor. After the tinaja game refreshments were served.

COLLEGE MAID SHOP GETS ORDERS

Orders for choir robes for two more churches were received in the College Maid Shop last week. The Firwood Presbyterian Church, in Wilkes-Barre, whose junior choir the Shop recently outfitted, was so pleased with the robes that an order for adults, vestments has been sent. The Oneida Baptist Church, Oneida, New York, has ordered fifty robes.

Mrs. J. Alvin Keen, an alumnus of Maryville, showed the College Maid vestments to more than sixty of the Westminster Choir student conductors. All of them were impressed, and the Shop has reason to hope for many more orders.

Mrs. McMurray recently made a selling trip to Nashville. The trip resulted in requests for samples from the Belle-Meade Corporation and "Old Hickory", the Pierpoint Rayon Corporation near Nashville.

College Maid garments are so popular that other establishments are copying them. The shop now faces competition with cheaper products of inferior quality, but the superior material and workmanship in the smocks and dresses made here is insurance against underselling to the industrial concerns who know values.

DR. LLOYD CORRECTS

While giving news to the Echo from his office this week, Dr. Lloyd called attention to the mistake made in last week's Echo in the date of Dr. Wilson's sailing. He will sail from Syria on the 20th of May, not on the 10th, and he expects to arrive in Maryville ten days after Commencement.

HONOR RANK GOSSIP

Being placed between Dean Hunter and Kemp Davis at the Highland Echo banquet, the writer,— like the wedding guest—could not choose but hear their short discussion of the Honor Rank System for Girls.

"How, will you be able to tell to which rank a girl belongs?" quiried the canny business manager. "Will they wear uniforms—green for the freshman and etc?"

"We'll brand them every spring", retorted the English Department Head, as he carelessly stowed away the food.

"Won't it be rather embarrassing finding out from the girl to which rank she belongs?" This from the breezy West who had overheard the remarks.

"Finding out who's the rankest"—corrected Dean Hunter under his breath. Every one missed that one.

"Why", put in the inimitable Kemp, you'll just go up and say, 'Are you a three nighter or a four nighter—'?"

"Or a one town dater"—added Dr. Hunter.

Kemp pushed back his plate, and folding his hands over the rotundest part of his anatomy, he announced judiciously:

"All I've got to say is, the Faculty has the Honor, and the girls have the System."

SENIOR PARTY

On Wednesday evning, April 29 the class of '31 will have its last party. The affair is to be held at the home of Ruth Hannah and will take the form of a lawn party. The lawn will be lighted with Japanese lanterns and games of various sorts will be played.

The party will be rather formal—perhaps the most formal one of the year next to the open parties.

Mabel iDckerson is general chairman for the party. Under her direction the committees which have been oppointed are working efficiently. Chairmen for these committees are Elizabeth Caldwell, decorations; Dorothy Bassel, refreshments; Hessie Keeton, entertainment; Carl Story, clean-up.

As has been said, this will be the last porty of the year. The Senior Hike will take the place of the party for the month of May.

Self Help Students Closely Tabulated

A new and efficient method of handling the records of student workers has been devised and is now being used in the self help office, according to an announcement from Miss Clemmie Henry late last week.

Last summer Miss Clemmie Henry decided that the 3"x5" cards on which she kept her student worker's records were too small. Accordingly a larger card was made up. These permanent record cards are interesting and informative. On one side is the student's photograph and the information he gave on his application blank. On the reverse side is kept a record of his earnings for every month in the school year for four years. There is also a work record grading (excellent, fair, poor), a loan record, and a scholastic record kept on this side for four years. Thus this card shows at a glance the student's ability financially and scholastically, and becomes invaluable when the college is asked for recommendations.

At present student help administration is carried out in three ways: scholarship grants which are few and limited; loans on the student's notes; and employment, which aids the greater percentage of students. Most students are familiar with the application blank which they must complete, giving their probable income and budget for the year. This information was formerly transferred to small cards.

Miss Henry remarked that in the last five years there has been a marked improvement in the student's method of meeting his financial obligations in regard to loans.

She has compiled some interesting statistics in regard to the number of magna cum laude and cum laude students who were working students, showing that of the five "highest honors" awarded since 1927 four have been won by student workers and that almost half of the "cums" have gone to workers.

These records speak well not only for the working student but also for the self-help system used at Maryville.

With the minds some women have, they ought to change them often.

Maryville Men Enjoy Course In Home Ec.

"When three meals a day must be planned and cooked, some knowledge of food values and daily food requirements is necessary to combine economy with nourishment." Thus runs some of the practical knowledge that is being gained by the men's Home Economics Class.

The last semester of each year, a course in Home Economics is given exclusively for junior and senior men. It corresponds to the bride's course in cooking which is given for junior and senior women.

From an interview with Miss Meiselwitz, the real purpose of the class was made known. "Most of the students, she said, "think that the whole course is a joke, but to those who take it, it is just the opposite. It is one of the most practical courses on the hill."

The main emphasis of the course is placed on home life. Miss Meiselwitz added: "The idea isn't to make cooks of them, but to give them an idea of appreciation that goes in cookery." Likewise, all the men are given a chance to act as butlers, not to train them to be butlers, but in order to appreciate good service when they see it.

The work for the first part of the semester dealt mainly with cooking. Meat and the art of carving, camp. cookery, invalid cookery, breakfast dishes, and cake baking were all studied. At present the class is learning how to prepare and serve breakfast.

However, the course is not all related to culinary art. Other practical things are olso studied. Architecture is to be taken up next with the main study being placed on good house plans. To finish the course there will be a lesson in the selection of clothing, correct colors, materials, and styles.

It is evident that the course is practical, and Ed Buchanan says: "It's the best course on the hill!"

COLLEGE MAID SHOP

The College Maid Shop announces the establishment of a stylish-stout department catering to women whose proportions are fifty or more inches around by anything and the shorter the better!

Good news doesn't always travel at top speed, and so for the clientel of this new department has been confined to Knoxville. The customers have given their orders to student representatives.

Measurements for the balloon-tire sizes begin at 56-52, which is, being interpreted, 56 inches horizontally by 52 inches vertically. Another dress is to be made to the scale of 52-50, but the frosted birthday cake and thirty-nine pink candles is cut in two for these: 52-46 and 52-44, with the larger half awarded to the latter!

A curious unanimity exists among the customers ordering these frocks in that all of them are to be made of vivid candy-stripe print in striking combinations of peach or orchid with white. The patterns demand that the fabric be cut so that the stripes meet each other at various and intriguing angles.

The two worse ones are to be sunback style.

She (archly): "My forbears came over on the Mayflower."

He: "Yes, back in the days when immigration laws weren't so strict."

COLLEGE PROPOSES NEW HONOR RANK SYSTEM FOR GIRLS

individuals, and the establishing of rules which have a reasonable chance for enforcement.

Upon these foundamentals the privileges are drawn up and they should be considered as privileges rather than restrictions. The committee who, worked night and day n this new system, are: Dr. Lloyd, Dean Hunter, . Professor Howell, Dean of Men, Miss Molly Caldwell, Dean of Women, Mrs. Worley, and Mrs. Snodgrass.

PROF. QUEENER BUYS FARM SOUTH OF TOWN

The faculty farmers are rejoicing over the fact that they have acquired a new member who has decided to leave the city bred and join the ranks of the corn fed. This adventurous man is none other than our history professor extraordinary, Verton Queener, B. A., M. A., P. A.

His decision to buy this farm has long been pending and whether or not the action was taken after some important historical data was found on the precincts, is not known. He plans to build sometime and thus civilize the old frontier on Niles Ferry Pike.

When his house is completed it is hoped that he and Mrs. Queener will remember that the feminine members of Maryville College may accept Sunday invitations to dinner. "Little Queener" has not yet expressed himself as to the Tennessee Purchase but the professor and his Yankee Wife are elated—in fact we've heard that they are considering trading the baby carriage for a tractor.

Mrs. Alexander in English Lit. Class—"Very few people know about all the purple there is in the landscape. You have to stand on your head, as I understand it, to get the full effect of all the color that is there."

A RANK SYSTEM

aforementioned ones are: fourth rank men may shoot Roman Candles from Carnegie providing they direct their shots over Memorial; all fourth rank men may reserve the Carnegie lobby once a day for purposes, moonshining or otherwise, providing they make a public announcement in chapel.

Honor rank men are those seniors who are receiving "F" in at least two subjects. They have the privilege of deposing the faculty on any provocation providing they dismiss classes for the rest of that illustrious day. Honor rank men may go to Little Town unchaperoned providing they patronize Martin's Drug Store, Byerly's General Store, the Shoe Shop, the Southern Cafe, and other points of interest.

The system as planned above is merely a start for bigger and better boys and additions and subtractions may be made at all and any times.

TO GO BY BUS

Committee Refuses To Divulge Theme For Yearly Function

May 11 is the date chosen for the junior-senior banquet which will be held at Tallassee Springs, about eighteen miles south of Maryville on the Little Tennessee river. The hotel contains the largest log cabin dining room in the world and is beautiful in its rusticity. The fountain in the center and the fireplace at one end of the room help to make the room an attractive place for a banquet.

Busses will convey all the juniors and seniors to the hotel—landing on the near side of the river. After crossing the ferry there will be a walk of perhaps a quarter of a mile to the hotel.

The main theme of the banquet, which is not yet being divulged, will be carried out in the decorations, program, and in every other respect possible. Naomi Willingham, vice-president of the junior class, is in charge of the banquet. Helping her, as chairmen of the various committees are: Margaret Auld, Lawrence Somers, Lenore West, and Weldon Hina.

It is important to emphasize the fact that only juniors and seniors who have paid their dues are eligible to go to the banquet.

This year is the first year that the banquet has ever been held at Tallassee Springs and with the beautiful location and excellent accommodations, the banquet promises to be a most enjoyable affair.

New Echo Staff Elects Weldon Hina Editor

Staff For Next Year Chosen Last Tuesday

April 29—Weldon Hina is to edit the Highland Echo next year, according to a vote taken by the new staff tonight in the Echo office.

The editor-in-chief was elected from the four staff editors—Julia Terry, Nathalia Wright, Robert West and Weldon Hina. Julia Terry, Weldon Hina and Robert West were nominated as possible candidates, but Julia declined the nomination. Hina and West did not cast votes, and therefore the potential voting strength of 35 was reduced to 25. When the ballots were counted, the results stood, Hina 14; West 11.

April 28—The members of next year's Highland Echo staff were chosen this afternoon at a meeting of the Committee on Selection held in Prof. Davis' classroom.

The staff editors elected were Julia Terry, Nathalia Wright, Weldon Hina and Robert West. Julia has served as staff editor all this year, and her re-election was merely a matter of form. Nathalia Wright did not have to go through the Cursus Honorum but was elevated to her position from that of sophomore cub.

Roberta Robison, Winn Barr and Robert Stevenson were chosen from this year's sophomore cubs to serve as junior associate editors. Mary Eloise Harmon, Margaret Parnell, Dorothy Casseres, Charles Beale, Bob Rule, and Richard Orr are the sophomore cub reporters chosen from the twelve freshmen apprentices.

The committee on Selection consists of four faculty members—Dr. Hunter, Dr. Hussey, Prof. Walker and Prof. Davis of a committee of

OUR SCOTCH LASSIES

May 2—It is not only the women of Shakespeare's comedies who assume masculine disguise to gain their purposes. We have on our campus two young women who resorted to the same ruse because the chapel announcement of Theta-Alpha Sigma joint meeting read: "Fifteen cents per person, and twenty-five cents per couple."

Tonight Esther Horton— active member of the senior class—and Kitty Hodges—a junior high light—dressed in men's clothing, were waiting in the stag line of Pearson's Hall. Soon Anne Smartt and Bess Mitchell tripped down the stairs and were claimed by the pseudo swains.

A man usually spoils such a scheme. Clarence Bratschie appeared later in the evening. Like Viola, Kitty sighed for her woman's weeds. Esther and Anne invited Bess to come home with them. She did so, lamenting that Kitty had stepped out of her masculine role.

Eminent Tuskegee Scientist Lectures In Voorhees Chapel

Dr. Carver Shows Variety of Products Derived From The Peanut

April 29—This afternoon at four o'clock Dr. George Washington Carver, noted negro scientist, from Tuskegee Institute, Alamaba, lectured in Voorhees Chapel.

Dr. Carver is known particularly for his work in synthetic chemistry, having made many valuable products from various plants. From the peanut alone he has derived over two hundred and eighty articles, and he has made nearly two hundred from the sweet potato.

His lecture was based upon an imaginary conversation with the Creator and during the course of the talk he produced samples of varied products derived from the peanut: milk, butter, beverages, oils, soaps, dyes, paints and many other articles of utility

This is the second appearance of the scientist to Maryville students, the first being two years ago, and his reception was even more hearty than the previous one. Approximately three hundred persons were in the audience.

The Y. M. C. A. sponsored the visit of Dr. Carver and J. Stuart James, president of the local chapter, introduced Mr. Hardwick, traveling regional secretary, who, in turn, introduced Dr. Carver.

May 2—This morning Mrs. Alexander's literature class was discussing the feminine characters of George Meredith's novels. This author creates strong, independent women, who think for themselves and act for themselves. Dorothy Wynn promptly illustrated this type of womanhood by forcibly removing Mary Caroline Ludman's shoe and tossing it out the window, despite the fantic protests of Francis Collins.

National Music Week

This week is music week at Maryville College. The observance of music week is customary throughout the United States, but this is the first time that the college has made an effort to have special music in accordance with this custom. The purpose of such a week is to bring before the public the best compositions of the greatest composers so that everyone may become familiar with them.

Miss Hale is responsible for the movement here. It is her plan that the Music Department will provide special music during the chapel the music department will provide hour. Such compositions as the famous C Sharp Minor by Rachmanninoff will be rendered, and in the afternoons throughout the week More detailed information will be given in chapel each morning.

Princeton President To Address Seniors At Commencement

Dr. Lloyd To Deliver Baccalaureate Sermon; Has Heavy Schedule

May 1—Dr. J. Ross Stevenson, President of Princeton Seminary, will deliver the commencement address here on June 4, according to a report issued at the president's office today. It was also stated that, in addition to numerous other engagements, Dr. Lloyd would preach the baccalaureate sermon here on May 31.

This will not be the first commencement address that Dr. Stevenson has given at Maryville; he was here in that capacity in May of 1912. Dr. Stevenson who is a director of the college, is prominent in national and international religious circles. As a student, he attended Washington and Jefferson College and the Presbyterian Theological Seminary of Chicago. He was pastor of the Brown Memorial Church in Baltimore and of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church in New York. In 1914 he became president of Princeton Seminary, and in 1915 was Moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian church

The Maryville baccalaureate sermon is perhaps the most important item in Dr. Lloyd's heavy schedule which includes sermons, commencement addresses, talks on prohibition, speeches on vocations, and addresses to Christian Endeavor conferences.

Orchestra Concert Merits High Praise

Chorus Successful Innovation; Sponsors, Critics Pleased

May 2— The success of last night's concert exceeded the highest anticipations of its sponsors and put to inarticulate shame its critics. Those who went to jeer remained to praise; hose who went to moonshine declined the privilege.

A chorus, singing with orchestral accompaniment, is an innovation at Maryville, and is a notable step in our musical progress. The cultivation of almost fifty hitherto untrained voices is not the least arduous of tasks, and for Mrs. McCall to prepare them to sing the "Seraphic Song" of Rubenstein was a masterly stroke. The audience heartily approved the selection from "Carmen", in which the male voices were particularly good, but the "Seraphic Song" was the crowning achievement of the chorus.

Miss Pearson, soloist, showed thorough training and remarkably good control. It will be remembered that Dr. Williamson, director of the Westminster Choir was favorably impressed by Miss Pearson when he heard her sing earlier in the year.

Miss Butcher is to be commended for the excellent performance of the orchestra. Both the "Cavatina" and the "Tannhauser March" were enthusiastically applauded. The "Concerto in D Minor" was rendered in a truly professional manner.

The above picture is of the throne scene in the May Day Celebration held Friday, May 1, in the Alumni Gymnasium.

Chilhoweans To Be Distributed When All Bills Are Paid

Annuals Will Be Given Out On May 11, If Organizations Pay Dues

The Chilhoweans were not distributed May 1, as had been expected and announced, because of the delinquency of various organizations in the paying of their bills for pictures in the annual. Until all the money is in no Chilhoweans will be distributed.

It is hoped by the staff that the oganizations will respond promptly so that the annuals can be given out Friday, Saturday, or at least by Monday, May 11. It is discouraging and distasteful to those many students who have paid their fees to be forced to wait for a few who have not.

If all the money is not In the hands of the business manager by Wednesday, May 6, a list of the organizations who have not paid will be posted at various conspicuous places on the campus.

As the day draws near for the distribution of the annuals, the staff becomes more curious and perhaps anxious as to the reception of the year book. Of course, it cannot be pleasing to everyone but with the work, the planning, and the "hard thinking" that the staff has done, it is hoped that the annual will be generally well received.

FORMER MAY QUEENS HERE FRIDAY

May 2—Two former May Queens returned to the scene of their triumphs yesterday. Lois Miles, who was Queen in '29, and Elizabeth Myers, last year's sovereign, were in the audience that gathered in the Alumni Gymnasium to view the annual May Day festivities.

Elizabeth seems to think it quite a come-down from a queen to a school marm. Our attempt to get an interview with Lois was unsuccessful because her attention was centered on the May Day program, and on some young man who hovered near.

Cast Selected For Senior Class Play, "The Black Flamingo"

Esther Horton, Robert Anderson, Russell Gilmore Have Major Roles

The cast for the senior play has been selected and rehearsals have begun. The play promises to be an excellent production for practically all the characters are experienced and well able to correctly interpret their roles.

Although most of the characters have major roles, the real leads are taken by Robert Anderson, who acts as Tringaud, and Russell Gilmore, who is a priest. The romantic lead is taken by Esther Horton.

All of these people have proved their talent in various other college productions. Bob Anderson will be remembered for his excellent portrayal of the college booby in "The Poor Nut". His realistic characterization for "Uncle Jed" in "Shavings", the cup-winning mid-winter for 1930-31 received much favorable comment. Russell Gilmore as Charlie Yong in "East is West", Bainonian's Mid-winter for the season 1929-30 also a cup-winner, showed his ability in the mastery of that difficult role. Russell also appeared in "Shavings". Esther Horton, acted the part of Mrs. Emily Billings in "The Big Pond" very creditably. Esther was also stage manager of "Tilly of Bloomsbury", Theta mid-winter for 1929-30.

Other former stars who will appear in "The Black Flamingo" are Ed Buchanan, who made such an excellent fop in "Green Stockings", Louise Marley, who has had parts in "The Swan", "Green Stockings" and "The Big Pond". Leland Gilmore also has a part. As villian or handsome young lover his parts are equally well portrayed.

Dr. Lloyd's Parents Visiting On Hill

The president's mother has been visiting in Maryville for about three weeks. Dr. R. H. Lloyd has recently arrived, having come from his home in Chicago by automobile.

While walking down a flight of steps last Tuesday, Mrs. R. H. Lloyd, mother of the president, fell and broke her arm. No other serious injuries were suffered, and she seems to be making a speedy recovery.

Mrs. Ralph W. Lloyd is in Pittsburgh visiting friends. She will return to Maryville in a few days.

Y. W. C. A. MOTHER'S DAY AT "HOUSE IN WOODS"

Next Sunday the Y. W. C. A. will hold its Mother's Day meeting at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Stevenson, as the organization has been accustomed to do for several years. Mrs. Stevenson, as well as her husband, has been an interested friend of the Y. W. C. A., and this meeting at "The House in the Woods" will be, as it has always been, one of the happiest programs of the Y. W. C. A. girls.

Advice To Room-mates—Julia Terry

Although it is rather late in the year to attack the subject of "Roommates", the circumstantial evidence has acquired such proportions that expostulation is necessary and well founded. (Author's note: there are no personal implications herein).

The first way to get along with a roommate is to let him sleep wherever he chooses—top deck, first story, ground floor, desk, chair or trunk. Also be sure to let him sleep whenever he so desires, unless the disease proves contagious. However, snoring is not defensible on the part of the producer. The application of any snore-consuming machine or snore-preventive medicine is justifiable.

If your roommate chooses to use your hairpins, by all means express magnanimity. But here is a helpful hint to hasty hair-dressers: acquire a roommate whose hair is of a different hue from yours—or one that has no hair at all.

Be sure to use all your shirts before your roommate uses his so that the borrowing will be subjective instead of objective. If he likes your ties, select a few that you publicly announce as your favorites and put them in easy reaching distance. However, choose the ones for which you really do exhibit a genuine affection and put them under lock and key—Yale, Harvard, Princeton variety—and guard them with an English bull. Maybe a reverse

"May Day in Mother Gooseland" Held in Transformed Gymnasium

Although the May Day sun did not smile on the campus for the annual festival last Friday, the gym was decorated unusually well, and filled to overflowing with interested spectators for one of the best May Day programs recently presented.

"May Day in Mother Goose Land" was opened by a little girl, who while reading her story book, fell asleep. In her dream Mother Goose soon appeared, and taking her to the open pages of a large story book, showed her all the characters come alive.

The litte girl was entertained first by a Flower Dance. King Cole was the next to appear, followed by his court. The Fiddlers Three entertained the company for a while, but were interrupted by the royal heralders of the Queen.

Queen Sarah and King Donald were preceded by little Ruth Lloyd as flower girl, and Lillian Howard as crown bearer, and were followed by attendants Kathryn Kizer and Derrill Eagleton, Marion Morrow and Donald Briggs, and Alma Allis and Joseph Quinlan. When the Queen had been duly and impressively crowned, the Old Woman in the Shoe and her many children trouped out of the shoe to dance for the court. After a few minutes the Old Woman chased them all back with her broom to make way for the Black Birds.

Former Registrar Of College Visits Here

Dr. Clinton H. Gillingham Present at Vesper Service

May 3—Dr. Clinton H. Gillingham, former registrar and head of the Bible Training Department of Maryville College, arrived early this morning on a two-day visit to his three children who are living in Maryville. He is on his way to the commencement exercises of the Louisville Presbyterian Seminary, of which he is a director.

For many years Dr. Gillingham was connected with Maryville, both as student and teacher. For nearly two years now, however, he has served as president of the Philadelphia School for Christian Workers. He resides in Glenside Pa. just outside of Philadlephia.

Three of Dr. Gillingham's children are in Maryville. One of them, Wilson, is a student in the college, while the other two are living in the town of Maryville.

The Vesper congregation was surprised this evening to find Dr. Gillingham in its midst when Dr. Stevenson called on him to pronounce the benediction.

West Resigns

May 2—Today, Robert West, newly elected staff editor of the Highland Echo for next year, announced his intention of resigning from his recently won position. He gave as his reason lack of ability.

Elected last year as sophomore cub he gave faithful service. He has been in charge of the sport page this year. All those associated with him in this work are unanimous in their expression that he posseses an affable, congenial manner that make him a pleasant fellow with whom to work.

Keeping Up With The Mock Turtle

The Mock Turtle in Alice in Wonderland, in describing his early education, said between his tears, that he only learned reeling, writhing, drawling, stretching and fainting in coils. Some of the members of the Mock Turtle's class must have been like some of the students in our classes. We refer to those who, when they begin to recite, cause their classmates to reel, writhe and stretch. It is only by exerting strong self control that we refrain from fainting in coils in our disgust with such confused noise.

It is a rather common belief that to win the required quality credits, students need not bother about self cultivation, but should do everything—except study—to win the affection of the professor. Consequently they begin it early. Teachers are only human, consequently, the rest of us must suffer in silence while some teacher-cultivating, uninformed bluffer rhapsodizes or tells all that he knows about that which apparently he knows nothing.

It is certainly refreshing to the class—and we hope that the professors share our feeling—to hear a student admit frankly and promptly that he does not know, that he is not prepared, or that the lesson does not interest him. However, if such admissions were made frequently, we would not learn in a satisfactory manner the approved ways of reeling, writhing and stretching, and fainting in coils would be entirely neglected.

Was Crates Right?

Among the many themes which the Roman youth had to debate was the question "Was Crates, the philosopher, right when, having met an ignorant boy, he administered a beating to his teacher?" The debate which ensued over such a provoking question must surely have been of more general interest to students than is the weighty subject of free trade. However, it is not our purpose to comment on debate questions, but to dwell upon the action to which the encounter with an uninformed lad provoked the philosopher.

Evidently the judges awarded the decision to the debaters who maintained that Crates was not right. Certainly it is the learner and not the teacher who has always had to take the flogging. Was Crates right? If he was right who will administer the beating? Like the timid mice in the old fable we will all stand back and ask, "Who will bell the cat?"

Should a Crates-like philosopher—who has lost his school boy awe of teachers—meet some of us we tremble for our instructors. We have mental pictures of them writhing under the blows inflicted by the theorist who would do right by our glorious youth. We wonder if we'd urge the philosopher on to heavier blows by displaying more fully our ignorance. Or would we confess, manfully, that it is our fault?

Was Crates Right?

SUPERIOR COTTIES

From time to time in the past few weeks this would-be scribe has been hotly reminded of the fact that although Maryville holds antiquated conceptions as to the nineteenth amendment, women are not entirely without place on her campus. With the exception of our fair editor and one of her cohorts, the women of the senior class have been allowed to rest in peace thus far in the year. We who conduct this column of connivance have hesitated at nothing in the case of the men, but our sense of chivalry has, until now, prevented us from publicly discussing the women. However, with only four more issues of the Echo in the offing, we have decided to take a chance; taking at the same time, nevertheless, great care to avoid the subjects of discussion. We have selected from the vast army of honor rankers a pair of outstanding students, Carol Cushman and Hope Snider.

We hoped to be allowed to present a list of Carol's accomplishments in this column, but the literary editor informs us that our allotted space does not permit this. Suffice it to say that she has held nearly as many offices on the Hill as President Hoover has appointed committees during his administration. She has served this year as chief executive of the Y. (W.) and in many other similar positions. She was vice-president of her class in her junior year, and was chosen the most popular co-ed on the campus. Her latest feat has been the discovery that her muscles are very legible, or so it seemed to the onlookers when, last Friday night, she "unconsciously" led Russell Gilmore to a pencil hidden in Dr. Hunter's coat pocket. Russ says that she has a bright future in store should she decide to become a professional library for muscle readers.

Hope Snider was among those forced to carry glasses of water, umbrellas, etc. during Pi Kappa Delta initiation week; rumors state that her thesis, presented on initiation night, was one of the most meritorious offered. When Tiny Waters diverted the throng, along with his fiddlers, elves, etc. on May Day, the queen was in power thanks to having received only two (possibly three) more votes than did Hope. Medicine (the occupation, not the substance) holds a fascination for Hope. She has received more excellent grades in the science courses than many students have in the whole curriculum.

PRE-MED MEETING

At a meeting of the Pre-Med Club on Thursday evening, Miss Green and Dr. Olin were the speakers. Miss Green gave a talk on a new cure for deep-seated bone infections using the grubs of the blue bottle fly. This cure was discovered during the war and has been used for fifteen years by an eminent surgeon in Johns Hopkins.

Dr. Olin talked on the importance of the first two years in Medical School. He stressed the importance of getting thoroughly those subjects which, though they do not seem as practical as they might, contain the fundamentals which must be known later in the actual practice of medicine. Several visitors were present and the program was enjoyed by all.

BAINONIAN-ATHENIAN

Members of Bainonian and Athenian literary societies got into the true spirit of spring in a garden party held on the second floor of Thaw Hall Saturday night. The Hall was beautifully decorated with dogwood, honeysuckle and ivy which was used to the best effect by the addition of lattice work and floor lamps placed about in the garden.

Each society contributed several interesting numbers to the program. One of the features of the program was the life cycle, given by Bob Wallace, with Shirley at the piano. Lois Cupler of Bainonian and Donald Benn of Athenian acted as hostess and host to their fellow societies.

Co: "I didn't accept Bill the first time he proposed."

Ed: "No dear; you weren't there."

"Why does a red-headed woman marry a meek man?"

"She doesn't. He just gets that way."

Highland Flings

"Do you make life-size enlargements from snapshots?"

"That's our specialty."

"We will now read a chapter in unison."

Frosh: "Say, is unison in the Old or New Testament?"

Stude: "Let's walk down here, Aunt Martha, I want to show you our foot ball field."

Aunt Martha: "Oh, how sweet, I've always wanted to see a field of foot balls in full bloom."

Chinee: "Doctor, what time you fixie tooth for me?"

Doctor: "Two-thirty—all right?"

Chinee: "Yes, tooth hurty me all right, but what time you fixee?"

Prof: "When was Rome built?"

Stude: "At night."

Prof: "Who told you that?"

Stude: "You did. You said Rome wasn't built in a day."

"Ah, it certainly does seem good to be dancing."

"Yes, I suppose there's nothing like the feel of a good toe under your feet again."

CAMPUS TALKIE

Irish (on Wednesday afternoon): 'Supper is dinner tonight."

Miss Gamble: "The mother instinct is entirely out of date."

Dr. Lloyd: "When in doubt ask the matron."

Ed Raney: "Marriage is not instinctive."

Porter French (making a speech in Roman history): "I have a quotation or two here that I liked, but I won't have time to read it, I suppose."

Miss Bassett: "We will take the quotations rather than the discussion."

Miss Meiselwitz (telling a story about her sister): "She had to go home in a blizzard."

Mrs. McCall: "Why didn't she go in a Ford?"

Carnegie Sleeping "Perch"

Over-sleepers have been especially active of late. For several nights the residents of the fourth floor of Carnegie have heard queer muffled sounds above them at retiring-time. Then at six o'clock in the morning there would come shouts that formed syllables which when put together meant, "Hey, Hina, we hear you. Let up!" And presently, three sleepy boys, three mattresses, and three sets of blankets would descend from their luxurious roof-garden sleeping porch.

This Needs No Headline

Prof. Fred Albert Griffitts,
Maryville, Tennessee.
Dear Sir:

Nothing is farther from my mind than the intention of indicating that my comprehension of the vast and weighty subject of Chemistry warrants an application for an assistantship. My limitations are thoroughly recognized and admitted by myself and by those who attempt to teach me. However, I am not of the opinion that I am entirely useless in this world. If that were true, my melancholia would know no bounds. Having studied my aptitudes seriously, I wish to apply for the position of Towel-Washer to your Highness, and Chief Scrub Woman of the Stock Room. I am also willing to dust bottles, mend acid holes in Your Highness' aprons, push Your Highness and your assistants around on the two ladders located in the Stock Room, and be generally a Little Ray of Sunshine for the purpose of improving the State of Mind of anyone in the Chemistry department who needs it.

Might I be considered also for the position of Assistant to the Assistants!? I realize that there are no positions such as I have mentioned, but the time comes in the History of Any Institution when some changes and additions should be made. Although I have no criticism to make of the way in which your present troupe of assistants have performed their duties, I believe the strain they must endure would be relieved if they were helped to express themselves by some student majoring in English.

Trusting my application will receive immediate attention, I am,
Sincerely yours,
Ima Enthusiast.

DR. STEVENSON'S SORE THROAT

(Special to the Highland Echo)

May 3—Dr. Stevenson assured the reporter this evening after vespers that his absence on Thursday morning from the chapel service was caused by no serious sickness. "I've been around every day this week", he said. "It was just my throat; I could hardly chirp Thursday morning. I don't know what the matter was. Just hoarseness, I guess!"

"Got any ice-cream?"

"Yes".

"What kind?"

"Black walnut and pineapple sherbert."

"Well, I'll take a Milky Way."

"Hey, Georga, do you by, any chance, have some sandwiches?"

(No response until the overworked clerk emerges from the depths of the ice-box.)

"No, we've quit making them."

"Well, I'm glad you have, I didn't want one any way. I'm on a diet."

"Who's next?"

"What kind of cold drinks do you have? Any tall ones?"

"Sure, any kind you want."

"Well, I want a tall one because you get more. (Back five minutes later). Do I get a refill? No? Well where shall I put the bottle?"

"In the case of course—" (Even Job would lose his patience).

"All right, all right, I'm docile."

"Got any ice-cream?" (The sixteenth inquiry).

"Yes black pineapple and walnut sherbert. I mean black walnut and pineapple sherbert."

"Got any bargains? Giving away any samples?"

"What d' you think this is An advertising agency?"

"I want an orange."

The fatigued clerk passes out a Hershey bar.

"I said an orange. You must be getting dippy in your old age."

"Yeh, if you'd dipped as much ice-cream as I have you'd be dippy too."

And so far, far into the night until the lights flashed at ten o'clock.

Agnes McQuire and Mary Ella Sullivan, members of the class of '30 were on the Hill Saturday.

An impromptu complexion—one that makes up as it goes.

"How long could I live without brains?"

"Time will tell."

The Highland Bard

TRAGEDY OF THE GARDEN BORDER

Daffodil cups were meant to be filled
With the golden light that the sun has spilled
But I wakened this morning and looked below
And found them filled to the brim with snow!
Their long green stems were stiff with fright;
The cold had dropped stealthily down in the night,
Had shaken them rudely, had gagged them with snow
And gone off and left them hours ago!
I should have been watching; I should have known
When the whole house shivered and wind had blown
That even the bravest daffodil flowers
Had need of me in those cold dark hours.

LITTLE LAMB

I wonder if I were as small as you,
As limp and helpless and as sad as you,
When I was but four hours old and lay
All swathed and bundled in far softer cloth
Than that which Daddy has tucked in around you
To keep you warm and make you want to live.
Your mother doesn't love you, little lamb,
But we do, or we'd not have brought you in
In from the drafty fold where careless sheep
Might trample on you with their cloven hoofs.
Our kitchen is a better home for you.
Lift up your head and drink this sweet warm milk
To give your funny awkward legs some strength
Then show us that you do possess a voice.

Track Team Defeats Chattanooga For First Win Of Season

Tennis Squad Wins Four, Loses One On Extensive Southern Tour

Joe Woodard Hurls Javelin For New College Record

Maryville's four high geared racqueteers, with Coach Smith and Manager Landrum, breezed into Maryville late last Saturday night with the scalps of four opponents and about 25 pounds of recently consumed food under their belts. They had just completed a thousand mile trip, traveling four hundred miles and badly defeating Middle Tennessee Teachers on Saturday. The only match lost by Maryville was at the hands of the University of Alabama at Tuscaloosa where they lost 5-1. Alabama had, the day before, trounced Mississippi A. and M. by a score of 6-0.

The trip was begun last Monday. The first match was at Chattannoga where Maryville won 5-1. While in Chattanooga the team elected Dick Strain captain for this year. At Howard College, Wednesday, Maryville won by a score of 5-2. On successive days, Maryville played matches against Alabama, Birmingham Southern, and Middle Tennessee Teachers. They lost 5-1 at Alabama and won the next two matches 4-2 and 6-0. This left a record for the entire trip of twenty-one matches won and only ten lost.

Three matches will be played on the Maryville courts the last of this week. Today Maryville's team is playing at Tusculum. Next Thursday, Friday, and Saturday Maryville will play Chattanooga, Centre College and Howard on the varsity courts. These teams should provide plenty of competition to Maryville's squad and likewise attract the interest of the Maryville tennis fans.

SPORTOGRAPHY

By Bob Rule

It must have been with quite a bit of satisfaction and pride that Coach Honaker read the glaring streamer headline across the sport page of the Knoxville Journal last Saturday morning which read: "John Stone Steals Home As Tigers Defeat Indians, 4 to 2."

Those who remember Stone as a fence bustin' outfielder on the Maryville College team of a few years ago will not be greatly surprised at his ability to steal the major league catchers' sox because base running was always Johnny's long suite.

And like the Stone of old, he keeps hitting that horsehide with pleasing consistency. Since the season started he has been alternating with Gerald Walker, former Ole Miss football hero, in left field against left and right handed pitching, and the majority of Stone's hits so far this year have been for extra bases.

He is tied with Rogers Hornsby, manager of the Chicago Cubs, for the major league leadership in home runs, and has slammed out a large number of triples and doubles and has a batting average of slightly over .300. It has become known that the New York Yanks have been trying to buy Stone from the Tigers.

BASEBALLERS LEAVE ON FOUR DAY ROAD TRIP AFTER FIRST DEFEAT

Market House Bulls Shut Out Scots, 5 to 0

Although they are still undefeated in college circles, the Maryville College baseballers have a 5 to 0 defeat by the Market House Bulls chalked up against them. The Bulls, who compose one of the fastest amateur teams in the News-Sentinel Baseball Association, invaded the Scotties' own backyard last Thursday afternoon and took the men of Honaker for a ride.

Boasting three of the best pitchers that East Tennessee has ever produced, the Bulls saw the Highlanders swing for nine long innings at the combined offerings of that star trio, Bonny Hollingsworth, Buddy Coker, and Neil Corum, and the result of their trips to the plate was four hits. This is the first time this season that any pitcher, or pitchers, has almost completely silenced the Maryville bats in a regulation nine inning game.

The visitors scored two runs in the third inning. Collins and Butler singled in succession and both raced home when Sheeny White laced a double to right center. They scored two more in the sixth stanza when Loye Atchley, who is property of the Detroit Tigers, came through with a home run, with Price on base. The scoring was completed in the eighth when the same Mr. Atchley reached first on a fielders choice and came home on Briggs' triple.

with a double and Easy pulled up Atchley with a home run and, a single led the batting attack for the winning team while Woodard with a triple and West with a double were the only Highlanders to connect with the apple for extra bases.

To Play T. P. I. And Bethel On Season's First Trip

Coach Honaker, Manager Pee Wee Overly, and twelve Maryville College Highlanders left here this morning for Cookeville, Tennessee, the stomping ground of the Tennessee Polytechnic Institute baseball team. The Highlanders play a two day series with T. P. I. today and tomorrow will move on to McKenzie, Tennessee, where they engage Bethel College in a pair of games.

The Highlanders will be out to win their seventh and eighth consecutive college victories when they tie up wih T. P. I. And, although they won both games of a two-game series here, they will find the Cookeville boys plenty tough to whip on their home field and before friendly eyes.

T. P. I. came here with only three days' practice behind them and their playing was of everything but college calibre and the Scots won easily, but you can bet your best pair of sox that they will have a better ball club by now.

Very little is known of the Bethel team other than the fact that they are always strong on the diamond. They take their baseball seriously and look at it as one of the best college sports.

Scots Take Eight First Places To Win 67-50 On Foreign Track

Outclassed Only By University Of Alabama Team

Saturday, May 2—The Maryville Highlanders today added the scalp of the University of Chattanooga to their belt of vicories on the cinder path. The meet was fairly close and the final score was 67-50. Maryville swept four events and University of Chattanooga swept two. The teams broke about even in the number of first places captured, Joe Woodard broke the college javelin record which he made himself last year, by a heave of 163 feet 3 inches. The summary:

100 Yard Dash—Byar (M), Shackett (C); Time .10 3-5.
Mile Run—Taylor (M), Moore (M); Time 5:57
220 Yard Dash— Shackett (C), Byar (M); Time .24
Pole Vault—Gross (C), Bratschie (M); height 11 feet 3 inches
High Hurdles—Felknor (M), Gross (C); time .16 2-5
High Jump—Gross (C), Merrit (C) tied at 5 feet 5 inches
Discus—Shadden (C), Munro (C); distance 112 feet 1 inch
Shot Put—Merrit (C), Byerly (M); distance 35 feet 10 inches
440 Yard Run—Paul (M), Wood (M); time 55 seconds
Two Mile Run—Burns (M), Taylor (M); time 10:55.2
Low Hurdles—Munro (C), Felknor (M); time 27 3-5
Javelin—Woodard (M), Ellis (C); distance 163 feet 3 inches
Half Mile—Hitch (M), Stevenson (M); 2:11.3
Broad Jump—Sheddan (C), Wood (M); distance 19 feet 11 1-2 in.
Relay—Maryville.

SPORTS REVIEW

A review of this season's sports shows that Maryville's teams have done much better than hold their own in the won-and-lost column, with all opponents. Maryville won the conference championship in football, having a perfect record against her conference opponents. In basketball Maryville suffered a setback in the confeernce tournament by Carson-Newman. Maryville's five had a right to feel somewhat compensated over this loss, since they had previously defeated both Carson-Newman and Milligan, who won the conference title. This spring, everyone's attention is called to track, tennis, and baseball. Contests that have been engaged in thus far give evidence that Maryville has teams in each of these sports capable of holding their own against any worthy opponents.

If prospective material is an indication for a successful season, Maryville's gridiron supporters can feel confident of seeing next year's team as a winner. Next year's team will lose Watkins, Cash, McDonald, Smith, and Captain Storey. The positions of Quarterback and Center, left vacant by Smith and Watkins, will probably be the hardest to fill. A gap will be left in the line by the loss by graduation of two guards and a tackle. If Wilson, Calloway, and Woodard retain their positions next year, Maryville should have ball carriers who can go through almost any line, if they are provided with the right kind of interference.

Pearson's Kitchen Force Interviewed By Echo Reporter

Interesting Side-lights On Food Preparation Obtained

That biscuit you ate this morning in Pearson's dining hall is just one out of 1171 more, so far as the kitchen force is concerned. These five negroes bake seventeen pans of almost 100 biscuits each and every morning for breakfast. And to hear them talk, you would think that, after all, baking biscuits for 600 eager young seekers after knowledge is just another usual incident in the day's work.

The Pearson's kitchen force consists of three negro women: Lily Rorex, Alice Carr, and Belle Shadden; and two men: John and Ed Henry. Lily Rorex has been here only two or three years; Alice Carr since 1909; and Belle Shadden laughed and said she "couldn't remember how long." These three women come to the Hill at five o'clock in the morning, and leave at five-thirty in the afternoon. In answer to the question how long it takes to prepare a dinner, Lily said they started stringing beans about 9 o'clock in the morning; and she volunteered the information that they usually cook most of the afternoon, too.

When asked how they liked the work, all agreed they "liked it fine." Alice, with a twinkle in her eye said at first that she "couldn't make any comments", since she had been here so long. In the summer Alice "takes care of her family", and Belle "takes in washing."

At least two of these three women are typical Southern negroes, and they are highly interesting and entertaining personalities. Although to the writer's interview was added the local color of rattling dishes rather than white cotton fields, his imagination transported him to the latter, and he believes here is a fertile field of inspiration for some rising young Maryville author, as well as for any aspiring scientist of the same habitat who has resolved to learn the secret of successful bean-stringing and potato-peeling.

Ministerials "Set To" In Nautical Banquet

April 28—Tonight the members of the Ministerial Association, headed by Admiral Lloyd, took their Maryville Port brides on board their good ship Service, for an annual banquet. The sixty gay sea farers gathered around the festive board to dine upon Noah's Ark soup, oil-skin gliders, life savers, white caps, sinkers and floaters, hard tack, and anchors, prepared and served by the Home Economics department.

Admiral Lloyd, as toastmaster, recounted many of his experiences on shipboard during his travels across the Atlantic. He described rather vividly the symptoms of sea sickness. First Mate Duff gave a short speech of welcome to the lady passengers and Geraldine Smith thanked the sailors with a few well chosen remarks.

Ensign Bowles opened the program for the evening with two songs. Interpreter Testa gave a readin about a modern Columbus in Italian-American dialect. A quartet composed of midshipmen Bowles, Wallace, Garman, and Duncan sang a few rollicking ditties, followed by some "eggs from the crow's nest" by Second Mate Wood and Pilot Waters. Lieutenant Duncan resounded some echoes from the deep, and Captain Edris brought the ship into port with a few words of farewell to the seniors.

tions preceding, the pie was broken open by the Black Birds, who climbed out and danced around the empty pie. In direct contrast to the Black Fowls, the next entertainers were six Spirits of Spring who, in white Grecian robes presented a Grecian dance.

Then came in rapid succession four Elves, Jack and Jill, and five Humpty Dumpties. The Spirit of Mother Goose Land was represented by Jane Duke in a solo dance.

The May Pole Dance concluded the dream of the little girl. The characters all went back into the pages of the book, and the Queen led her Court's recession.

Y. W. C. A. Reading Room Redecorated

Popularity of Radio Necessitates Regulations

The Y.W.C.A. reading room is to be from now on a distinctly Y.W.C.A. reading room, and not a place for meetings of all kinds. This change in policy has not been prompted by selfish motives, but by the desire to give the women of the college a room that is truly theirs to enjoy at all times. Since the radio has been installed, the room has become a doubly popular rendezvous. In keeping with the new policy of trusting the students absolutely, considerable freedom has been granted in the matter of regulations for the use of the radio.

Rules governing the use of the room are:

1. The reading room may be used for study during library hours every night.
2. There will be a Y.W.C.A. girl in charge of study period every night.
3. A list of these girls and the date of their duty will be posted.
4. Every girl going to the reading room for study period at night must sign out "Y. W. reading room" before leaving the dormitory.
5. The radio may be turned on during study hours so long as it does not disturb those in the library or the lecture hall.
6. The reading room will not be used for regular meetings of clubs.
7. No dancing is allowed at any time.
8. The radio may be used on Sunday at any time except during Sunday School and Vesper hours, at which times the room is not to be used at all.

The most worthwhile programs are being posted daily by Lucy Ann Voorhees. The booklet What's on the Air will also be found in the room.

The room was kept closed all last week while Mrs. Smith's interior decorating class took charge of it, cleaning up and redecorating. A freshly decorated room, magazines and a radio, what more can the girls ask for?

BEHIND SCENES AT MAY DAY FESTIVAL

Witnessing May Day from the middle of the grandstand as one contentedly munches candy or peanuts, is a charming way to spend an afternoon, but watching the same performance from behind scenes is a doubly interesting diversion. there are plenty of peep-holes in the screen through which to watch the stage, and one has "inside" information as to costumes and stage devices as well.

One arrives through the stage entrance into a babble of voices. The usual requests for a safety-pin and for "someone to see if I look all-right" vie with exclamations over King Cole's pipe and the persistent demand of Humpty-Dumpties that their shell-tails be tucked in.

Grecian dancers trip daintily about, keeping their pretty feet clean; the Old Woman Out of the Shoe busies herself with her daughters' sashes and her sons' suspenders. Blackbirds chatter to each other like magpies as they crouch in their pie and wonder whether their legs will break before they have a chance to dance. One of King Cole's fiddlers gingerly takes a few steps to see if his blue-bowed shoes will adhere to his feet. The wardrobe mistress exerts herself in one last effort to keep the Court Fool from ringing his bells long enough for her to finish his cap.

A sweet young thing cooed to King Cole, "Oh, where did you get the diamonds? I'll bet you have your own diamond mines in South Africa!"

"Yeah."

"And did the rubies on your crown come from your own ruby mines?"

"Uh-huh", grunted H. R. H.

As he turned to go, she espied the white fur on his cloak.

"Oh! look at the ermine."

"You can just bet it's from me own ermine-mine!"

French Oratorical Contest Saturday

Seven Athenian Orators To Compete For Medal

The gold medal for the annual French Oratorical Contest for Athenians has been improved in design and size, so that the winner of this year's contest to be held on May 9 will receive, instead of the usual medal, a smaller and neater souvenir of his oratorical attainments. In former years the medal has been almost too large and noticeable for the wearer's comfort.

The Athenians who have thus far announced their intentions of competing are mostly freshmen. Bertram, Don Buchanan, Campbell, Pippert, and Kirchner are the freshmen. The other contestants are Homer McCann and Winn Barr. Ed Shelley, president of the Athenian, remarked that this is an unusually large number, but that more yet might enter before the time set for the contest. There will be no limit or subject except the orator's own sense of propriety.

The medal, which is worth $20.00, is given by Mr. C. T. French of Albuquerque, New Mexico. Mr. French is a former student of Maryville and a member of Athenian.

When Georga Burk was told that Dr. Carver, the famous negro scientist who has made innumberable products from peanuts, was also the agent and owner of Tom's Toasted Peanuts, she opened her eyes wide and said, "You don't mean it." Forthwith Georga made preparations to see Dr. Carver in anticipation and with assurance of receiving peanuts for the "Y" store at a reduced price.

Whether or not she made a Burk-like speech on conciliation with the peanut man is unknown but Georga usually gets what she goes after.

method is the psychological one. As yet the writer has had no experience and thus is forced to theorize on hearsay, imagination and logic.

On cold mornings be the first out of bed, be the martyr window-closer. By thus arising you can have your choice of the wearing apparel which the 2-in-1 closet inadequately affords.

Of course, you will be the roommate who has to clean the room. However, this is easily, efficiently and effectively done by merely sweeping the contents, debris, and cast-off underneath your rommmate's bed. I have no solution for this problem if your roommate sleeps on top deck.

If your roommate studies aloud do not reprimand him. He is merely unconsciously developing and strengthening your powers of concentration, a virtue possessed by the disfavored few.

And now if these rather inadequate suggestions are followed you will find the last few weeks of school a haven of delight and the years to come a veritable paradise.

Juniors-Seniors Enjoy Moonshine Banquet Tonight

Five Gallons of Good Spirits And Six Swigs Are Promised

MORE STILL

Crossing Little Tennessee River By Ferry Is Feature Of Trip

At last the preparations are completed, the program has undergone the final rehearsal, the junior class is financially nil—the Junior-Senior banquet is holding forth at Tallassee Springs Hotel.

For those who are unable to attend the banquet a brief resume of what is going on might prove interesting if not instructive.

The huge log cabin dining hall is decorated with flowers and fern. which lend a rustic tone. At one end of the hall is a fireplace over which has been placed a moon—indicating the theme of the banquet, Moonshining. The senior class last year chose as the theme of its annual, Moonshining, and so the junior class is respecting the preference of theme and applying it to the banquet. Small tables are being used instead of the conventional long, banquet tables.

The printed progams are in the shape of a keg (depicting another kind of moonshine). The program consists of six numbers or "swigs" as they are more appropriately named. The entertainment is composed of the popular quartet: Bowles, Shelley, Briggs, Overly; readings by Lavinia Jones; a chorus of underclassmen: Jean Martin, Virginia Wright, Helen Thompson, Ruth Carver, Virginia Ross, Johnnie Metcalfe, accompanied by Margaret Melody. The chorus and quartet apshining. The program is also featured by extemporaneous toasts. The toastmaster, J. Weldon Hina, president of the junior class, can be pear twice on the program. Bill Hannah and Harry Wood have prepared a skit on some form of moon-

Bertram Wins French Oratorical Contest

May 9— Marshall Bertram, a freshman comparatively unknown in forensic circles on the Hill, won the annual French Oratorical Contest at the Athenian Literary Society tonight. Mr. Bertram's subject was "Woodrow Wilson, the Great Idealist." The prize was a twenty dollar gold medal given each year by Mr. C. T. French of Albuquerque, New Mexico, a former Maryville student. The judges were Dr. Knapp, Dr. Rodgers, and Professor Davis.

The contest was very close and Yankee Lewis, another dark horse, ran a very close second, according to the decision of the judges. Mr. Lewis spoke on "The Sacrifice that Failed."

Pi Kappa Delta Elects New Officers

May 6—Today Pi Kappa Delta elected officers for the coming year. The following officers were elected: President, Robert West; Vice-president, Elizabeth Duncan; Secretary, Benjamin Groves; Editor, Winn Barr.

Three of these officers, Elizabeth Duncan, Benjamin Groves, and Winn Barr were taken into the society this year. All of them have shown themselves to be capable and eloquent debaters.

The past season for Pi Kappa Delta has been a successful one. With these officers to pilot Pi Kappa Delta through next year, all signs point toward another successful season.

On May 17, the Octet from Knoxville College will sing here, according to a letter written by J. Kelly Griffen, President of Knoxville College, Knoxville, Tenn., to our college, pastor, Rev. W. P. Stevenson. The hour is seven o'clock.

Dr. Lloyd, Dr. Orr To Represent College At General Assembly

Highest Court of Presbyterian Church To Hold Annual Meet, Week of May 28

When the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America holds its annual meeting, this year in Pittsburgh, the week of May 28, Maryville College will have two members of her faculty present.

This Assembly meets annually in different cities of the United States. It is attended by a thousand official delgates, one half of whom are ministers. Several hundred other leaders in church affairs are also present. This organization is the highest court of the Presbyterian Church.

This year both Dr. Lloyd and Dr. Orr will attend the meeting of the General Assembly. Dr. Orr is going as one of the two ministers from the Union Presbytery, of which Maryville and Knoxville are members. Dr. Miller, from the same Presbytery, is the other minister.

Dr. Lloyd is going, not as a delegate, but as an invited speaker. He will make two addresses: the first one on the morning of May 27, at the Pre-Assembly Conference, on the subject, "Evangelism"; the second on the opening night of the General Assembly, at a meeting sponsored by the denomination in the interest of young pepole.

Dr. Lloyd will return before the conference week is concluded, in order to be here to deliver the College Baccalaeaurate Address on May 31, but Dr. Orr, as one of the official commissioners, will remain for the entire session.

WRITERS' WORKSHOP ELECTS

May 6—At a meeting of the Writers' Workshop today, the following new members were elected: Ralph Walker, George Brown, Conrad Ouenelle, Eleanor Henry, Nathalia Wright, Inez Hamrick, Winn Barr, and Jeanette Eshelman.

The initiation of the new members will take place on Wednesday, May 20, when the Shop holds its annual spring picnic. Rachel Grubbs, Weldon Hina and Junius Allison, who were elected earlier in the year, will also be initiated at the same time.

MOUNTAIN HIKE PLANS

At 7:15 Friday morning approximately one hundred ninety students and chaperons will leave the Hill for the annual spring mountain hike. The hikers have been divided into nine groups and eight buses are chartered. One group goes to Cades Cove, one to Ekmont, one to Calderwood and six to Indian Gap.

Breakfast will be at 6:00 o'clock. The buses which will be parked between the post office and Pearsons—will be provided with straw, but the nature lovers are advised to bring cushions. Truck assignments by groups will be posted in the various Halls by Wednesday.

National Music Week Fittingly Observed By M.C. Music Dept.

Twilight Concert, Three Chapel Programs Rendered

Music Week was appropriately celebrated in Maryville last week. Chapel programs were presented on Thursday, Friday and Saturday mornings and a twilight recital was given on Wednesday afternoon.

On Thursday morning the orchestra played two selections. The first was "Overture" by Baumann; the second was "Concerto in D Minor" by Mendelssohn.

On Friday morning a varied program was presented consisting of three numbers: a three-piano piece, Prelude in C sharp Minor by Rachmaninoff played by Mildred McKenzie Virginia Carter, Margaret Melody, and Ruth Henry; two vocal selections, (1) Italian Cradle Song, and (2) Stars Brightly Shining sung by a trio composed of Ann Smartt, Jane Duke and Naomi Willingham; "Spring's Awakening" from the Deer Cynt Suite, which was sung by the Vesper Choir.

Saturday morning the program was opened by "Majesty of the Deep", for three pianos and the organ, played by Beulah Duggan, William Crothers, James Shirley and Frank Neff. The stringed ensemble played two selections, Brahms' Famous Waltz and Slunicko's Serenade. As special guest of the morning, Miss Hale presented Miss Edna Hayes, of Knoxville, a member of the Tuesday Morning Musical Club. Miss Hayes sang four selections, "Dawn", "Nobody Saw", "Lift Thine Eyes", and as an encore, "The Little Gray Dove".

These three mornings devoted to musical appreciation and entertainment were very much enjoyed, and they cast a splendid reflection on the members and the head of the College Music Department.

Bob West Elected President Pro-Tem Of Student Council

New Executive Announces No New Policy

May 7—Tonight at a short meeting of the Student Council Bob West, a member of the junior class, was elected president pro-tem of the Student Council for the year 1931-32. Bob is well known in campus activities and his being elected to the presidency of Pi Kappa Delta shows his abilities in the line of leadership.

He hopes to continue the work as carried on by the retiring president, Richard Strain, in much the same way that it was conducted this year. Although the Council has been somewhat limited in its powers it is hoped that when the new constitution has been formulated the duties of the Council will be more clearly defined and the powers will be more extensive.

With a group of representative students who will have the interest of the student body at heart and who are cooperative, the president pro-tem hopes to make the Student Council a worthwhile organization and work for the benefit of the College.

Count Cagliostio

In Sam Janney's production, "The Black Flamingo", which will be presented by the Senior Class on June 2, is the historic and mysterious character, Count Cagliostio, who lived in the troublesome times of Louis XIV and Marie Antionette. The role will be sustained by Russell Gilmore.

Was Cagliostio a charlatan and a rogue, or was he a philosopher, a mesmerist, and a hero? Here is indeed a fascinating study. He stalks through "The Black Flamingo" like a sinister and uncontrollable forces working his magic to confound his enemies.

His real character will be disclosed in the play.

Miss Henry To Present Four Voice Pupils In Recital, Wed., May 13

Misses Willingham. Duke, Smartt, Spilatore To Sing

On Wednesday, May 13, at 4:15 o'clock in Voorhees Chapel Miss Frances Henry will present four of her advanced pupils in a recital. Naomi Willingham, Jane Duke, Ann Smartt, and Norma Spilatore will sing. They are all well known on the Hill and elsewhere or their talent in the field of voice culture, and the recital promises to be a lovely one.

All four girls are members of the Women's Glee Club, in which concert they did solo and group work. They are continually called upon to sing before various campus and town organizations so that their abilities are not by any means limited to audiences on the Hill. Everyone on the Hill and in town is cordially invited to be present at the concert.

The accompanists are, Lois Cupler, Virginia Carter. Williemae Renegar, and Mildred McMurray.

Miss Henry has shown her ability as a voice teacher, song leader and director in a great many ways and her work with these four students is to be commended.

COLLEGE MAID HEAD IN NORTH CAROLINA

Mrs. McMurray, director of the College Maid Shop left late last week on a business trip to Asheville, N. C. Among the firms to whom she will show samples of College Maid uniforms is the Enco Rayon Corporation, one of the largest in the state.

While she is away Mrs. McMurray will visit, also, the Spencer Corporation, at Spindale, N. C. This is another firm with a great potential buying power, and Mrs. McMurray was very much pleased to receive their request for her to show them a full line of samples.

Monday Holiday Loss Justified By Efficient System

Proper Distribution of Classes Purpose of Change In System

TENTATIVE SCHEDULE

Students Taking Normal Schedule To Have Three Afternoons Free

Beginning next September the schedule of college classes will be extended over six days instead of five as at present. This change finds its chief justification in the fact that three-hour classes cannot be properly distributed in a five-day week so as to provide for alternation of scheduled class hours with the students' and teachers' free time. For example, under our present system, "c" classes meet in the order cccCC instead of in the more desirable cCcCc order, which is possible with a six-day program. This is true also of "d", "e", and "f" classes.

It is, of course, apparent that no one will have more work because of this change, and practically everyone will have sizeable blocks of free time. As will be observed upon working it out, anyone having a reguar fifteen-hour schedule of "a", "b", "c", "d", "e" classes will have free afternoons, Monday, Wednesday, and Saturday. Everyone will be free after 11:15 on Saturday.

The scheme of schedule published herewith is tentative and subject to change in matters of detail, but it indicates the general scheme which will be followed. Science courses will have their laboratory hours on two of the days taken by classes of the same letter symbol extending an extra hour into the period preceding or following the regular hour. The lecture hour will come on the other regular class day. For example, a "d" science will have its laboratory from 10:20 to 12:10 on Monday and Wednesday and its lecture at 11:15 on Friday.

Mrs. Alexander Entertains With Tea

May 8.—Mrs. Jane B. S. Alexander entertained thirty-five girls of the English department at tea this afternoon from 3:30 to 5:30 at her home in Maryville. Receiving with her were Dr. Alexander and her two sisters, Miss Belle Smith and Miss Elizabeth Smith.

The entire house was hospitably open to the girls, who spent much time in wandering about to look at the books and pictures, listening to Mrs. Alexander tell bits of history connected with them, and enjoying the views of landscape from the upstairs windows. Dr. Alexander showed the girls a large number of curios from his collection, and told interesting facts about them.

Refreshmens were served on the porch and the lawn, which commands a marvelous view of mountain scenery.

After tea Miss Belle Smith held open house in her studio. She showed many of her pictures and a number of curios from her private collection.

Recent action of the faculty of U. S. C. bars the senior valedictorion and the senior speaker of the law school from the commencement exercises. These speakers who are elected by the student body will present their speeches at some other time during Commencement Week.

The Future Of The Race—Mable Dickerson

One of the best pieces of writing done for Advanced composition

This a very sad story. If you have tears to shed, prepare to shed them now. It all goes to prove how dangerous a thing is a little bit of knowledge.

It started as it ends in a psychology classroom. The professor was peeking over his spectacles, blinking wisely and saying, "When you marry, marry someone better than you are. I may be taking too much time off the lesson, but young men and young women, I want to impress it upon you. It isn't your own happiness alone which is at stake, but also the strength and usefulness of the race——."

He continued at length, the whole class smiling gleefully because Professor Gillard had gotten started on his pet subject. That is, the whole class was smiling except Nancy Sue Arnold. She was sitting on the front seat, her rounded chin resting on her delicately shaped hand. Her large gray eyes were fastened intently upon the professor, her soft rosy lips were half open, a warm glow spread over her fair face. Every word of the instructor was forming an indelible impress on her mind.

"When you marry", continued Professor Gillard, "take many things into consideration. Would you want your children to inherit any or all of the qualities of the one you marry? But," he interrupted himself, glancing at his watch, "I didn't mean to do all of the talking today. Mr. Johnson, just what did you understand our author to mean by a 'solipsism'?"

"Well-er", Mr. Johnson stuttered, disconcerted by this rude awakening", a solipsism is-er-a term which the author uses to indicate that—er"—and hereupon the bell rang, mercifully relieving Mr. Johnson from the painful necessity of a recitation.

The class, with much jostling and pushing and laughing, went out to the corridor. Nancy Sue was not pushing nor laughing; her thoughts were still idealistically high.

"Would you want your children to inherit any or all of the qualities of the man you intend to marry?" she murmured softly.

Just then a light touch on her elbow made her aware of a presence beside her—a presence not unknown to her—one, in fact which was often waiting discreetly by the door of any classroom which Nancy Sue might be gracing by her presence.

"Hello Jerry", Nancy Sue said, "Prof. Gillard spoke to us so wonderfully today; he told us so much that every one should know. He said never to marry unless——"

She glanced up at Jerry and stopped short. Why had she never noticed before how violently red his hair was? Why it was a veritable carrot top. She shuddered at the mental image of little Jerry's whose hair would range from a rose pink to an orange henna!

Jerry, astonished that she had stopped speaking so suddenly and was gazing at him so critically said, "Why what's wrong Nancy? Are you sick or something? Answer me, dear!"

"I guess I must have indigestion," she said weakly. "That fish at lunch."

Nancy Sue's roommate was astonished to see the determined look on her face as she entered the room and threw her books on the bed.

"Well, Jerry and I have dissolved partnership", she announced.

"What?" Elsie ejaculated. "Broken off? Why, at noon you were looking at him as if he were the one and only man on earth. Since when?"

"Just today—that is, we haven't exactly broken off yet—but we will! Why I could never think of marrying him!"

"Why not?" demanded her roommate curiously.

Am I My Brother's Keeper?

At a recent vesper service Dr. Stevenson turned our attention again to the age old question "Am I my brother's keeper?" It was comforting to us to learn that his answer differed from the conventional one. We agree heartily with his idea that people resent the attitude that the keeper is commonly considered to assume toward his brother. No sermon was ever preached at a more opportune time. An attempt is being made to force the girls who wait tables and wash dishes to assume the responsibility for the conduct of all the students who eat in Pearson's dining hall. Neatly printed, carefully worded little 'ultimatums' are given to each girl. If she wishes to retain her present job, or to secure the same one for next year, she signs her name to all that it stands for. It begins with the words "I promise faithfully."

Hereafter the girls who wait tables and wash dishes are to maintain order and decorum in the boarding club. They must report all misbehavior. To them, also, is alloted the disagreeable task of collecting from any stranger at the table twenty-five cents for each meal that he eats. If the guest cannot or will not pay he is to be reported, and the waitress must be the reporter.

The sutdent workers' jobs are not easy ones. The girls who work in the dining hall earn every cent that they get. It is absolutely unfair to demand that they act as disciplinarians and culture guides for the other students. It is even worse that the authorities who make such a demand should encourage—nay even require tale bearing. We admit that the student behavior in the dining hall is not what it should be, but it is not the waitress' place to attempt to regulate or control it.

We do not believe that such a decree is in keeping with the spirit of Maryville College. The little document begins "I promise faithfully"—. Is one obligated to keep a promise made under compulsion? Can a girl be blamed for signing it if she had to keep her job? Under such circumstances are we to condemn the girls who frankly admit that they will sign, but do not intend to abide by the regulations?

Are they their brother's keepers? It looks as if they'll have to be—at least in theory.

Dr. Hunter: Colleg e athletics are beneficial in that they develop strong bodies in the players, and strong lungs in the others.

SUPERIOR SCOTTIES

Ye Scribe, along with some several other throwers of the male bovine, has decided that, since this is an institution of learning, it is only befitting that some of its number be lauded for their proficiency in the art of extracting knowledge from the bewildering maze of information presented by the textbooks. Such a senior is Ed Raney.

Ed came to Maryville from Washington College, in his home town of St. Louis. He is one of the honored number who have their names published on the opposite side of this sheet at the end of each semester. To make a long story short, as the prisoner said when he answered guilty, Ed is a member of the Honor Roll. He is a model of efficiency in all of his classes, but when Maryville psychologists are arranged in order of importance, "he is de boss", as Dr. Stevenson and Andy Brown would word it.

Bob Anderson, recent alumnus of Maryville, will make two more public appearances here as one of the seniors, one on the night of the senior play, and the other on graduation day. Since Bob is not here to defend himself, then, it is only in keeping with our principles of Safety First that we should place his name in this column ere he returns to prevent it.

Bob, while a student here, held numerous positions, but the one by which he is chiefly remembered is the one he held in the dramatic spotlight. He was leading man in almost as many plays on the Hill as the new Honor System has subheads. New students, however, remember him for his work in "Shavings", the Athenian cup-winning mid-winter. He used to earn his daily apportionment of beans and old lady by announcing bad news, in the form of saxophone players, from the broadcasting station in Knoxville. We have no idea where Bob has been dwelling for the past semester, but we welcome him back to the campus in behalf of the vast horde of students who won't read this column, but who will attend the senior play.

TRIANGLE CLUB REVEALS TRUTH ABOUT NIGHT CLUB

May 5—Alma Schoeller lived up to her reputation as an original entertainer when she staged a novel portrayal of New York night club life at this evening's meeting of the Triangle Club. She is one of the program secretaries of the tri-state club.

The entertainment consisted of songs and fitting readings in a background, of orchestral conversational, and bacchanalian hilarity of the night club. A touching reading brought home the moral of the performance, that the combination of wine and women is not the best in life and very often leads to ruin.

counted upon to add wit and wisdom to the banquet.

The menu consists of—real food under disguised names pertaining to moonshining. The four courses are termed "quarts" thus making "a full gallon of good spirits."

Besides the seniors there are several faculty members as guests of the juniors. Busses have been chartered for transportation to and from the hotel, and the trip is made even more interesting by the necessity of crossing the Little Tennessee River by ferry. Something different always adds to the attractiveness of an affair of this kind.

Chemistry offers its problems to everyone, especially freshmen. Professor Griffitts says that never before has he had a class that absolutely could not digest them—especially after the same dose has been administered three times!

Sammy Broughton: "You could turn her over to some one else."

Homer McCann: "I wish they'd offer a course in household astronomy!"

Jane Duke: "Jack wrote and said that he expected me to go on the mountain hike, but that he didn't think I'd go with the mountain.

Prof. Griffitts (blowing in a reducing flame) was asked by Robert Toms: "Why don't you use compressed air?"

Prof. Griffitts: "That's what I'm using."

Student: "From now on every body will be busy getting people to sign their names in his Chilhowean."

Miss Gamble: "Commencements are like weddings—they have to be embellished to make them look like some thing."

Pauline Throne: "Professor, I've heard of people drinking carbolic acid for intoxication purposes."

The Highland Bard

TO MOTHER

When God made me He looked around
And tried to find a mother who Would love me for my defects, so
At last He sent me straight to you.

You were the only one He saw
Who would deal patiently with me;
You were the only one He knew
Who willingly would try to see

Some good in anything He sent,
Some clay worthwhile in any clod;
He had a poor, weak thing to send,
And you got it, and I thank God!

J. O'Dell

Someone handed this to us stating that it reminded her of the way the members of the orchestra sang the "Star Spangled Banner" last Thursday morning in chapel.

Oh! say, can you sing, from the start to the end
What so proudly you stand for when orchestras play it,
When the whole congregation, in voices that blend,
Strike up the grand tune, and then torture and slay it?
How Valiant they shout when they're first starting out,
But "The dawn's early light" finds them floundering about.
'Tis "The Star Spangled Banner" they're trying to sing,
But they don't know the verse of the precious old thing.

Hark! "The twlight's last gleaming" has some of them stopped,
But the valiant survivors press forward serenely
To "The ramparts we watched", when some others are dropped,
And the loss of the leaders is manifest keenly.
Then "The rocket's red glare" gives the bravest a scare,
And there's few left to face "the bombe bursting in air". r
'Tis a thin line of heroes that manage to save
The last of the verse and the "Home of the brave".

"Oh! Why does the fiddler tap his shoe Because his feet are cold?"
"No, it isn't that, my little lad,
He has music in his sole."

Was it Anne Smartt who ended some sentence with "Well after awhile when we're all teaching chool, married or dead"?

Valet: "Sir, your car is at the door."
Master: "Yes, I hear it knocking."

THE OPEN FORUM

May 7.—Today Maryville College acquired about sixty police-women under force. It seems that if a girl desires to earn half her board or must by necesesity wait on table she must, at the same time, assume the duties of a full-fledged officer of the law. She must report everything she sees that is not in accordance with a despotic set of rules. When a guest comes to her table she must immediately relieve him of twenty-five cents or else report him for punishment and probably banishment. Courtesy is not considered a part of this table duty.

She must remain after meals and count the slices of bread or grains of sugar to see that none has been carried out of the dining-room. Indeed it seems unjustifiable to demand that no food be taken out of the dining-room. Every student who eats in Pearsons pays voluntarily, or otherwise, $14 a month for which sum, it seems to me, he is entitled to anything that is set before him whether he eats it at the table or prefers to carry it to his room. The food is paid for by us students—therefore, it belongs to us.

Instead of letting the waiting on table a pleasant duty it becomes burdensome, despicable drudgery. The pledges that the girls must sign in order to keep their positions are kept as evidence against them in case they fall short of living up to the arbitrary contents. We expect that there will be a Boarding Club in its literal sense established by which misdemeanors will be corrected.

CHEMISTRY CLUB HIKE

Deflying Jupiter Pluvius to do his worst, the Chemistry Club left the campus Monday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock for its semester outing.

McIlvaine Springs, a nicely wooded spot about one mile east of the college, was selected as the site for the festivities. Twenty members of the club participated in the hike across the college woods and down the road to the springs.

Hamburgers, weiners, and fruit contributed greatly to the pleasure of the occasion and when all had returned at 7:00 o'clock a certain air of satisfaction was evident in each person.

NIGHT AND A FAST TRACK!

A TRACK man will tell you that records are broken when the track is fast. Think of this setting—a cool evening, the stands overflowing, the whole spectacle brilliantly lighted with G-E floodlights, and a fast track—a record simply couldn't stand the "gaff."

Nighttime, when people naturally turn to diversion, is the logical time for a track meet. Lack of support will be a thing of the past. And just watch the athletic fund grow.

G-E floodlighting projectors, largely the development of college-trained men, are easily adapted to any occasion whether football, track, tennis, commencement, receptions, or plays. Efficient G-E illumination promotes athletics and builds school spirit.

Baseball Crew Successful On Five Day Road Trip

Track Season Ends As Scots Defeat Tennessee Tech.

Two Games Won From Bethel; T.P.I. Gains Even Break

Team Shows Improvement In Hitting.

Maryville College's baseballers returned home after a wild and wooly road trip on which the Scots won three and lost one. Coach Honaker and his men went to Cookeville, Tenn., Monday afternoon and dropped their first game of the season to a college team, losing to T. P. I. by a score of 15 to 4. The second game of the series, which was scheduled for Tuesday, was rained out and the Maryvillians moved on to McKenzie, Tenn. where they trounced Bethel College in a pair of games by scores of 13 to 11 and 16 to 4. The Highlanders went back to Cookeville Friday afternoon and engaged T. P. I. again and came out on top by 15 to 10.

The first game of the series with T. P. I. saw the Highlanders play their worst ball of the season. The team collected 11 hits but were unable to make their bingles NO. FIFTEEN count for runs while T.P.I. jumped on the offerings of Chandler and Kiser for 16 hits and 15 runs. White connected for a home run while Smith, West, Woodard, Hurst and Benn collected two hits each.

After being kept idle by bad weather on Tuesday, the Scots moved on to Bethel and avenged their dfeat at the hands of T. P. I. by trouncing the boys at McKenzie by 13 to 11 in a wild contest. Stidham started on the mound for the Maryvillians and was hit rather freely, although he managed to keep the visitors fairly well in check. Woodard with a home run and a double, Smith with a triple and a single and White with a three base hit and a single led the assault for the Maryville team.

The Scots ran literally hog wild Thursday afternoon in the first game against Bethel and took the boys for a ride by a score of 16 to 4. The men of Honaker murdered the offerings of Keathly for 14 hits and took advantage of Bethel errors to score 16 runs. Tom West went on a little batting spree of his own, collecting a home run and four singles in six trips to the plate and shared the batting honors with Joe Woodard who smashed out three singles. Chandler was on the hillock for the Maryville team and was effective throughout the game.

The game at Cookeville Friday afternoon was another wild affair. The men of Honaker unleashed another furious batting attack and scored runs almost at will. They collected bingles of the combined offerings of Carlen and Comperry, while Stidham managed to stick the entire game, granting ten hits and ten runs; West with two doubles and a single, and Smith, White, Woodard, Hurst, Teffeteller, Watkins and Benn with two hits each led the batting for Maryville.

Both teams had one big inning. The Scots hit Carlen and Comperry with everything but the water bucket in the third stanza and scored ten runs on five hits while Tech came back in the fffth and slaughtered the offerings of Stidham for five hits and eight runs. Both of these wild scoring rampages were marked by numerous errors.

The results of this trip gave the Highlanders a record of eight victories against one defeat in college competition. They previously defeated T. P. I. in a two game series and also carried off all the honors in games with Bowdon, and Hiwassee.

Four Good Baseball Games This Week

Maryville College Baseballers have four more good baseball games scheduled for this week and these contests promise to give the fans some of the best baseball of the season. This afternoon they will open a two-game series with a fast Junior Order team from Johnson City as a part of the Junior Order celebration that is being held in Maryville.

This team is composed of some of the best amateur players in and around Johnsen City and they should be able to give the Scots plenty of trouble. Thursday afernoon the Bethel College team, whom the Highlanders defeated in two games on the road last week, will come here for the first of a two day series.

MARYVILLE'S RECORD BREAKER

The remark, "an unknown Greek entered the Olympian games and carried away the honors" can apply to an event which happened at Maryville Wednesday. While the Grecian track men were practicing for the next Trojan combat, an inconspicuous freshman, Ray Russell, came by and stopped to watch the feat. The javelin-throw was being practiced and Coach Thrower was watching the efforts with secret pride. One of the men was removing his jacket in order to heave the spear which he dropped near Russell.

"What d' ye call that?" asked the inexperienced freshman, curiously eyeing the painted javelin.

The knowing Captain, Roy Taylor, strument to ascertain the solidity and elasticity of the arm."

informed him that it was an "in-

"I don't know what that's for, but I'll bet I can throw it," Russell answered, picking up the spear. Without form or style, the freshman hurled it one hundred seventy-one feet, beating the college record by seven feet. Coach Thrower sent a boy to find the "instrument" and told Ray to be ready to go on their track trip.

Some of the boys heard that Russell was going to enter the next meet, and asked him what he was going to do. Ray answered idly,

"I am going to throw that painted stick. What d' ye call it—javelin?"

When asked how he attained such proficiency in javelin-throwing the record breaker said carelessly, "Oh, I've been down in the bottom throwing corn stalks a lot of times."

SPORT SLANTS

By BOB WEST

While glancing thru the columns of the Orange and Blue, a Carson-Newman student publication, I stumbled onto some very interesting reading matter, which caused me to smile loudly. Yea, very loudly.

The story was, in general, about athletics, but what interested, (or amused) me most was a paragraph or three about football. Yes, and a statement about Maryville College which caused me to stop and think (?) and shake my head doubiously.

From what I could gather from this column in particular which I was reading, he Eagles' plan is for the ensuing football campaign is: "to defeat Mars Hill, T. P. I., Milligan, E. T. S. T. C., Tusculum, Mercer, King, and give Tennessee a good game and make Maryville think that they had spent an hour in Hades". Ahem, it's waxing warm, Oscar.

Well it's not a bad plan at that, but we must remember that Burns or some bird once said that "the best laid plans of mice or men are apt to go the other way", or something to that effect. So it may be with the Eagles' air castles. As for the trouncing of the rest of these teams and making it interesting for the Vols, that's all well and good, but this thing about Maryville is likely to be a large amount of stagnated muddy water.

In Maryville's roster next year will be found the names of Capt. L. Calloway, G. Bean, F. Wilson, M. Gillespie, H. Gillespie, Woodard, Blazer, Payne, Boretsky, Tope and Peacock, all backfield men and Ferguson, D. Wilson, Overly, Tolliver, Teffetaller, Chandler, White, Rule, Quinlan, Atkins, Richardson and possibly Judge Carper, all linemen. 'Nuf sed.'

Well, at least everything that I read while plundering through the exchanges didn't give me ecstactic hysteria. There was one story in particular that impressed upon my mind the fact that some of the best track men in the South are found right here at old Maryville.

After careful application of a few trigonemetric functions in compiling the statistics, I was overwhelmed with joy to discover that Felknor, Woodard, Taylor and Hitch were turning in better times (and distances) than the respective runners (and—and throwers) at North Carolina State College, a member of the Southern Conference.

I haven't the slightest intention to discredit North Carolina but I am sure that the Tarheels won't object to a little harmless "comparison" just for the fun of the thing, for there is no doubt that Tarheel teams are vastly superior to Maryville's as a whole.

Very little was said last week about Dick Strain being elected captain of the Tennis team while the racqueteers were away on their trip last week. Well, he was.

Centre College Bows To M. C. Racqueteers

Smith's Men Stage Great Rally To Win 5-2.

Maryville's fast stepping tennis squad continued their victorious winning streak last Friday afternoon when they defeated the Centre College aggregation in a well played match. The final score stood five matches to two in favor of Maryville. After the first two matches Maryville assumed the role of underdogs, shaking off a 2-0 lead gained by the visitors when their first two matches were won from the Buchanan brothers.

Centre started off to take things well in hand by winning the first two matches. Don Buck lost to his opponent, 7-9, 6-4, 6-3, and Ed Buchanan was defeated by a score of 6-2, 1-6, 6-1. In the most interesting and most closely contested match of the day Dick Strain barely defeated Chambers of Centre 3-6, 9-7, 6-2. The feature of this match was a smashing comeback by Strain which, ater several prolonged games gave him a narrow victory. Last year at Centre, Chambers defeated Strain 6-2, 6-2. In the other two single matches Fishbach won with ease from his opponent in two sets and Talmage won in three sets. The scores were 6-1, 6-0, for Fishbach and 3-6, 6-4, 6-4 for Talmage.

The double matches were won easily by Maryville's crack double teams. Fishbach and Ed Buchanan toyed with Centre first two ranking men to win easily and take the match. Strain and Talmage won handily 6-2, 6-2. Both double teams have been functioning par excellence all year. To date Fishbach and E. Buchanan have a perfect record in the won and lost column in six starts while Strain and Talmage have their record marred by only two defeats.

Awards Are Given To Women Athletes

Hamrick, Kitts, Babcock And Cushman Lead.

The point system for women's athletic awards was concluded Saturday afternoon, May 2 with four women earning letters and sweaters, ten earning letters, and fourteen Maryville monograms.

Acording to Coach Queener more interest was shown and kept up this year than any previous year. Due to this fact more honors were awarded. "It's hard to make a letter and sweater", she said, "but that's the way it should be. If they were easily made there would be no honor in wearing them." She concluded her statement by saying that she hoped that the women who came out and did not make the required number of points for a reward, would not be discouraged, but would profit by this year's work and would try harder next year.

The point system has been arranged so that it covers every phase of athletic endeavor, and also scholastic work. Points are awarded on the basis of teams made, tests passed (which include swimming, track, stunts, hiking) scholarship, and health. Honors are awarded as follows: 500 points Maryville M with sweater; 400 points Maryville letter; 300 points, Maryville monogram.

The following women earned awards:

Hamrick—516; Kitts—503; Babcock—500; Cushman—500; Foster—477; Heidel—445; Storey—465; Purviance—452; Frost—435; Wilson—454; Gamble—420; Mullen—418; Thompson—416; Houston—400; Cupler—388; Little—375; Wayland—395; Hicks—365; Hale—355; Keller 354; Kinnamon—337; Farlee—326; Barr—321; Olson—308; Nash—305; Macrae—300.

Capt. Roy Taylor And Dip Felknor Lead Way To Win

Ray Russell Breaks Woodard's Javelin Mark

Cookeville, May 8—Maryville College track team defeated T. P. I. here today by a score of 83 1-2 to 33 1-2.

Sullivan, of T. P. I., was the only man for the losers who was able to score to any extent, but he did a good job of it by scoring 20 points and carrying away individual honors.

The main lights for the Highlanders were Taylor and Felknor with ten and eight points, respectively. The victory was mainly due to the consistent scoring of firsts by Maryville in practically all events.

Russell, Maryville College freshman, set a new record for the javelin throw in the meet when he flung the spear a distance of 172 feet 5 inches.

Summary:

100 yard dash—Sullivan (T), Byar (M); Time 10.3.

Mile Run—Taylor (M), Moore (M); Time 4.52

Pole Vault—Felknor and Bratschie (M) tied; Height 10 feet 6 inches

220 Yard Dash—Byar (M), Wood (M), Hinds (T) tied; Time 24

Shot Put—Byerly (M), Calloway (M); distance 35 feet 10 1-2 in.

High Hurdles—Sullivan (T), Felknor (M); Time 16.7

440 Yard Dash—Paul (M), Hinds (T); Time 54.6

Low Hurdles—Felknor (M), Richardson (M); Time 26.6

Two Mile Run—Taylor (M), Burns (M); Time 11.8:0

Discus—Calloway (M), Hall (T); Distance 97 feet 10 inches

High Jump—Sullivan (T), Bratschie (M); Height 5 feet 8 inches

880 Yard Run—Hitch (M), Stevenson (M); Time 2.10:5

Javelin—Russell (M), Hall (T); Distance 171 feet 5 inches

Broad Jump—Sullivan (T), Burns (M); Distance 20 feet 5 inches

THE FUTURE OF THE RACE

"Why, Elsie, don't tell me that you've never noticed how red his hair is! Why, I'd never marry a man with red hair."

"Red hair!" Elsie's laughter exploded. "Of course he has red hair, Simple. But it isn't a shade redder now than it was at noon when you were simply devouring him with your eyes. Since when the aversion for red hair?"

"Oh, you don't understand, Elsie. It isn't so much that I myself mind red hair so much—although it is an impossible shade. It's that marriage is such a serious business, Elsie. You can't go into it with your eyes shut. It isn't your own happiness alone that is at stake—you must also consider the happiness of the future generations." . . . . . .

Three months later found Nancy Sue in the same seat on the front row of the psychology class room. She was looking curiously at June Bennet the girl to whom Jerry had gone for solace—a girl who evidently had no aversion for red hair or who was not considering her obligations to the race. Nancy Sue noticed that her features were not at all good; her mouth was too wide and she had freckles. What in the world could Jerry see in her?

Her musings were interrupted by Professor Gillard who asked, "In this case, Miss Arnold, what do you consider to be the relative influences of heredity and environment?"

Nancy Sue, caught unawares, floundered around. What case was he discussing anyhow? "Well, as usual, heredity is the strongest factor, but environment cannot be completely overlooked."

"That's it exactly", said Professor Gillard, smiling benignly at his star pupil. "The woman undoubtedly had a splendid ancestral heritage of high intellect and exceptional musical ability. If she had not fallen in love with this dashing young fellow, there is no telling to what heights she might have risen. When he took her out to his farm in Idaho, however, where he was wedded to the soil, she too became interested only in rural affairs, and particularly in her own cows and chickens. They were far from all cultural advantages and she could not associate with people of her level. The result was a gradual deterioration of her esthetic nature—due entirely to environmental conditions. And what kind of children would she have? They would be the product not only of the combined heredity of their parents, but would also be the products of the environment. You can't think too seriously about such matters, young men and young women. I realize that I'm doing all of the talking again today, but I feel that it is worth your while to have such matters brought to your attention."

When the bell rang and Nancy Sue went out into the hall, there was a young man waiting for her. It might be a matter of common interest that his hair possessed not even the slightest glint of red. It was a coarse sandy-brown, slightly wavy, which no amount of hair tonic nor of Nancy Sue's persuasion could tame down to anything approaching order. Jim's hair was rather indicative of the rest of him—he had an air of the untamed. His splendid physique towered over Nancy Sue's petite daintiness as he smiled down on her.

"Well Nan", he said, "I just had a letter from Dad, and he said something that I've been thinking for a long time. He says that I'm not built to be a lawyer—and I'm not. Nan! Why I-I-I' I st- st-s stutter—you see what it makes me do just to think of it. Lord, hon, don't look so down and out about it. Farming's respectable business, and that's really what I'm cut out to be. Aw-please, hon—don't cry."

Poor boy! Little did he know what an inopportune moment he had chosen. With Professor Gillard's words still ringing in her ears, Nancy Sue looked down at her dainty white hands. Could you imagine those hands milking a cow? or patting butter? She grimaced at the very idea. Why country folk would laugh if she played on her harp. A harp in a farm house! Distraught though she was, she had to laugh at that! Marry a farmer? Never!

It was May. The trees were covered with fresh green leaves, the fields were full of daisies, all life was starting anew with fresh vigor and enthusiasm. Birds were singing and flirting—everything was alive and calling to love.

Spring had played havoc with a young man's heart. This young man, whose name was Ernest, did not have red hair, nor was he going to be a farmer. On the contrary, he was a theological student. A combination of his wooing and of the efforts of that cupid, Springtime, was about to break down the high fortresses around Nancy Sue's heart. For four days her heart had not been on the psychology lesson.

Her wandering attention was caught by Professor Gillard's saying the following rather astonishing words:

"No matter what outside forces are brought to bear upon a person, he cannot rise above his mental level. That is the point in which most social work fails. The church which takes up a collection to send a girl to college who has a mentality high enough only to do things with her hands, is making a mistake. They make the girl dissatisfied with her former life without really fitting her for life on a higher plane. Everyone should be trained to make the most of his or her life on the existing mental plane. So much philanthropic work does not take into consideration the mentality level of the individual."

Nancy Sue nodded her pretty head in agreement. That was a good point. She must take that up with Ernest the next time they had a discussion about his work down at the Mission. He was too idealistic; his head was always up in the clouds; he could not see the practical viewpoint of life.

That evening found Nancy Sue and Ernest sitting on a divan.

"Well, what have you been doing today Ernest?"

"Down at the Mission again. Something happened today that encouraged me very much indeed. You remember Runt Gordon whom I told you about?—the one who used to be such a bully? Well, he's quieted down a great deal lately, and today he asked me if I thought he could go to college. Isn't that great?"

"Great?" Nancy Sue laughed scornfully. "College isn't what he needs. He needs to be taught something useful which he can do with his hands. Don't you know that a person cannot rise above his mentality level? You should not open gates to him which he can never enter."

And so on—but why should we go into the argument which ensued? It changed the opinions of the two principals not a whit, and would probably change neither yours nor mine. At the end of the hour, red danger signals stood out on Nancy Sue's cheeks, and disillusionment shone forth from the young man's eyes. This girl whom he had long considered the embodiment of all virtue, charity, and high ideals, was taking such a fatalistic attitude! He left her with sad look on his face.

She flounced into her room and threw herself face downward on the bed.

"Well, you and Ernest had it out?" asked Elsie without looking up from her darning.

"Oh yes—that self-righteous religious, hypocritical, high-ideaied preacher! One thing I'll never do Elsie. I'll certainly never marry a preacher!" . . . . . .

Graduation Day took Nancy Sue away from her Alma Mater. She shed tears of regret when she told Professor Gillard goodbye.

When Elsie and Nancy Sue kissed each other a fond farewell they agreed to correspond at least once every two weeks. The time between letters lenghened—as it invariably will—and in May of the next year Elsie realized that she had not heard from Nancy Sue for three months. Then, one day, she went home to find a letter from her in which she apologised abjectly for her negligence in writing. But she knew that Elsie would understand and forgive when she told her that she was engaged. His name was Horace—and he was simply divine. Elsie just must meet him. The reason for this particular letter was to tell Elsie that she and Horace were coming back to the old Alma Mater for commencement— and couldn't Elsie come too? She couldn't get married without Elsie's blessing.

Elsie smiled as she folded the letter. Would she go! It was with more than idle curiosity that she seized pen and paper and wrote a prompt reply to Nancy Sue's letter.

Elsie's interest in the paragon of virues increased as Commencement drew near. She and Nancy Sue had planned to have a long visit together, since both were planning to arrive on the last regularly scheduled class day and stay throughout all the festivities.

When Elsie arrived at the college she went straight to the dormitory and to her old room. She was sitting there, chatting with friends when Nancy Sue burst in and enveloned her in an affectionate embrace.

"You old sweet Elsie, you haven't changed a bit!" she said happily.

Elsie looked at her; Nancy seemed more awake than she had ever been before. Zest for living sparkled through her eyes. She was so much in love that she was lavishing her affection on everyone and everything.

"Oh Elsie, he's so sweet! Just wait till you meet him!"

"I can't wait", Elsie said smiling sympathetically.

"He's a combination of everything that's perfect."

"I'm sure he is, Nance. When's it coming off?"

"Next fall. You see he has another year yet in seminary. But it's the luckiest thing Elsie! He owns a farm within three miles of the seminary. So we can get married next fall, and if we economize just an awful lot and I do all my own housework, we'll do just splendidly."

Elsie had the grace and the wisdom not to smile. Instead, she said "Lead me to him, Nance."

"He's waiting downstairs. You know, Elsie, I feel so sorry for you because you can't be in love with him too."

As the two girls went down the stairs, the only person Elsie could see was a young mon with red hair. She looked around for Horace, but there wasn't anyone else there. Could it be? But it must, for Nancy Sue was leading her proudly toward the young man.

"Elsie, this is Horace", she said.

"Oh, he is nice," Elsie thought as she looked into his eyes. Before fifteen minutes were over Elsie was a stanch ally of Horace. No wonder Nancy Sue could forget all of her silly prejudices with such a man.

Never had Elsie seen two people so manifestly and insanely happy. Horace might have red hair; he might be both a farmer and a preacher, but with real love, what did such minor things count for? Elsie, standing there and looking at them saw many happy years ahead for them.

And so it would seem that in spite of a little bit of knowledge Nancy Sue had found the road to happiness. But did I not say that this was a sad story? And do you not feel the same dark premonitions that Elsie did when Nancy remarked, "You'll have to excuse Horace and me, Elsie. Prof. Gillard is having his last psychology class of the year—the very same class that I was in! Isn't that lucky?"

"Why, you're not going over to listen to that queer old duck on a pretty day like this, are you?" said Elsie, making vigorous negative signs to Horace.

"Why Elsie", Nancy Sue sounded forth, "you know quite well that Professor Gillard is my Ideal. I want Horace to meet him."

"But Nance", Elsie said, deranging her tactics, "here I haven't seen you for a whole year and you're rushing right off to an old psychology class." Her motions to Horace grew more frantic, but he smiled blandly on.

"He probably thinks I'm crazy," Elsie thought as she saw the rapidly disappearing backs of the happy couple as they moved toward Lagrange Hall. "I'll wager, though, that before Professor Gillard gets through he'll wish that he'd paid some attention to me. It's too bad, too. He seems a very likable fellow."

When Nancy Sue and Horace approached Professor Gillard, Horace's first thoughts were, "Elsie was right. He is a queer looking duck." But he smiled politely and tried to fulfill Nancy Sue's expectations of how a fiance should act when introduced to be an Ideal. He was inherently honest, but he was also accomodating; and so, when Nancy Sue, with radiant starry eyes, asked him what he thought of Professor Gillard, he answered weakly, "He must be fine, Sue, if you like him so much."

Her expectant eyes clouded, and she cast rather a dissatisfied glance at Horace. Then she turned all of her attention to Prof. Gillard as the words of wisdom began to fall from his lips.

Horace did not pay much attention to the professor's words; his interests were centered on a most alluring curl at the nape of Sue's neck. It was by the greatest strength of will power that he refrained from touching it. His eyes strayed to her intent face.

"An intelligent little nut," he thought fondly. "How can she keep her mind on anything so dry as psychology?"

What in the world was the old bozo saying now? Something about love—that love was nothing after all but a combination of sex and ego. "What bunk!" Horace thought. "Why anybody who'd ever been in love would know better than that." He drew closer to Sue just to disprove this statement and in the hopes of drawing a reassuring smile from her.

His advance was not, however, looked upon with favor by the young lady, who gave a disapproving glance and moved a little farther away.

He was disconcerted and at a loss for an explanation of her actions. Little did he know what was flitting through her head.

"Love—just a combination of sex and ego—I wonder—could that be true?"

Is it necessary to go into the painful details? Need I say that Horace did not stay till the end of commencement? That Elsie's and Nancy Sue's reunion was not a success, merely because the former thought the latter was a fool? That Nancy Sue spent most of the time with Professor Gillard, discussing matters of deep psychological importance?

Fifteen years later in the same institution, in Lagrange Hall, and, indeed, in the same class room, words of wisdom were again being imparted to impressionable youth.

"Never marry unless you can marry someone better than yourself", were the words which had been spoken and were now being elaborated upon. Even after sixteen years these words had a familiar flavor

The students joyously answered the call of the bell. As they pushed their ways down the steps one boy was saying, "Well, we sure got old Lady Arnold off the track again today. Gosh! I was glad! I hadn't looked at the lesson."

"So was I glad," agreed his companion. "The old lady got pretty 'het up', didn't she? Guess she's still waiting to find somebody better than she is."

A few feet behind, two girls were walking together.

"Did you see how sad Miss Arnold looked when she talked about marriage?" asked one of them.

"Didn't she? I'll bet she was disappointed in love once."

"Of course she was—haven't you heard? She was in love with an army officer—a colonel, I believe. But he was killed in the World War. She loved him so much that she would never marry anyone else."

"Is that right? You know, I'll bet she was pretty when she was a girl. I think she's right when she says that you ought not to marry unless you marry someone better than yurself. Don't you think so?"

"Oh undoubtedly. Marriage is a serious proposition. You have not only yourself to consider, but also he future of the race."

"Then And Now" Theme Of Novel '31 Chilhowean

Silver Anniversary Number Proves Popular With Students

MISS BASSETT HONORED

Freshman Section Thoroughly Enjoyed By Upper-Class Men

On Monday, May 11, delinquent organizations had responded to the urgent call of the staff by paying their debts and at eleven o'clock two cars made a non-stop trip to Knoxville and returned in nothing flat with the annuals. By one-thirty about two hundred annuals had been claimed. From the comments that have been heard the staff feels well repaid for its work. The theme carried out is the twenty-fifth anniversary, Silver Anniversary, since this issue is the twentyfifth one that has been published. Miss Bassett to whom the annual is dedicated is indeed more than worthy of the distinction. She was an outstanding member of her class having edited the Chilhowean of 1909, having graduated in expression and having attained many other honors. She was a freshman when the first annual was published and can no doubt appreciate the contrast, change, and comparison that has gone on for these twenty-five years.

One of the outstanding features of the annual is the beautiful padded cover of silver and blue. This is the first time that a cover of this kind has ever been used on a Chilhowean. It is a "Kingskraft" and the designer is certainly to be commended. The method of contrast "Then" and "Now" in all the clever drawings is effectively used in the various sections. Willamara Minton, the art editor, has more than shown her originality and talent in the work she has done for the annual.

Sophomores Elect Amsbury President

At a class meeting held last Wednesday the sophomore class elected as its junior president, Allen Amsbury. Further officers elected were: vice-president, Inez Hamrick; secretary, Marion Morrow; treasurer, Robert Stevenson; editor, Yankee Lewis; Girl's Athletic Director, Jean Campbell, by acclamation; Boy's Athletic Director, Jack Atkins.

The candidates for vice-president ran so close a race that it was necessary to hold a second election on Thursday, when Miss Hamrick was chosen from among Dorothea Thomsen, Marjorie Jones, and George Vick.

The Necklace

The disappearance of Marie Antoinette's necklace at the time of the French Revolution has been the subject of many novels and plays. In fact, the history of those trouble some times assures us that the buying of this necklace, and its subsequent disappearance, played its part in precipitating the French Revolution, and changing the history of France.

Sam Janney has wrapped this historic robbery in the mysterious play, "The Black Flamingo", which will be presented by the Senior Class on June 2.

BOTANY TRIP

The students in the two botany classes, biology 4 and 18, left at 4:30 this morning on a field trip to Mt. LeConte. They hope to collect a great many specimens of Tennessee spring flora. They are cooking both breakfast and lunch, but hope to return to the campus in time for the evening meal.

Miss Hudson and Mrs. Olin are the instructors in these courses and are in charge of the trip.

A copy of this issue of the Highland Echo is being sent to every alumnus of Maryville College through the courtesy of the Alumni Association. In the words of Professor Queener we are making the Echo a little more historical than usual since effort has been made to secure news that would be of interest to Alumni.

For the special Alumni section see page two. The sports editor, Bob Rule, has also prepared a resume of the year's athletics which appears on third page.

Callaway Elected For Head Position Of Athletic Board

Football Captain Gains Added Distinction In New Position

May 12—Lea Callaway was elected president of the Athletic Board of Control at a meeting held tonight in Voorhees Chapel of approximately one hundred students and graduates of the college.

This organization is the official body of the school that determines the standards that must be attained by the athletes in order to receive a letter. It is composed of a president, vice president, secretary, and two representatives each from the men of the school, the women, the faculty and the graduates.

The other members of the Board for this year are: Inez Hamrick, vice president; Blundon Ferguson, secretary; Don Wilson and "Smiley" Richardson, men representatives; Martha Storey and Iva Babcock, women representatives; Dr. McMurray and Professor Queener, faculty members and George Crawford and Joe Gamble as representatives of the alumni.

Y.W.C.A. Grandmother Receives Greetings

Mrs. Stevenson Hostess On Mother's Day

More than a hundred Y. W. C. A. girls were the guests of Mother Stevenson on Mother's Day afternoon. The service on the lawn of "The House in the Woods" was beautiful and filled with a deep spirit of appreciation of mothers. For the first time since Y.W.C.A. has observed Grandmother Bassett's birthday, she was unable to be present, but every girl sent a note of special greeting for her eightieth birthday, May twelfth.

Grandmother Bassett has been called the Y. W. C. A. Grandmother for nearly twenty years now. Years ago, when there were no Pearsons or Thaw, when the Bassetts lived where Professor Proffitt lives now, Grandmother Bassett always held open house to the girls of the college. Whenever girls wanted to wash their hair (a task in those days), or make candy, or play or study, they were welcome at Grandmother Bassett's. Even when the Bassetts moved to town, the custom of visiting the Bassett home went on, and has been handed down from year to year. Grandmother Bassett has been kept in bed since October of last year, first by a fall which caused a broken hip, and then by a stroke which left her right side paralised. Miss Bassett tells us that her mother still loves girls and deeply appreciates the notes they sent her. She asked that the messages be kept carefully so that they be read to her again this summer.

One week after commencement Dr. Lloyd plans to go to Florida as Director of the State Young Peoples Conference at New Symrna Beach. This conference extends over a period of one week.

The following week he will speak at the Young Peoples Conference at Asheville, North Carolina.

It's a long lane that has no parked cars.

Eleven Professors Reveal 'Tricks Of Trade' To Reporter

Practice Teachers Getting Real Experience

(by 'Nez Hamrick)

If the truth were known, there are eleven professors on the Hill besides the regular faculty. Very little is heard of them it is true, but perhaps it is because they do most of their teaching almost a mile from the college.

The professors just mentioned are members of Miss Gamble's practice teaching class and have been getting their "practice" at the Maryville High School. When asked how they liked the work they all answered "fine", but the writer could not tell whether it was sarcasm or the truth.

Professor Marley (better known to us as Louise) has been trying her hand at conducting an English class. When she asked her pupils to prepare an artistic description to be read in class, here is what one pupil read: "Did you ever see a cow eat grass? She wraps her tongue around it like she's eating spagetti and then comes into the barn and does it all over again." When the laughter subsided, Professor Marley asked how many thought that was artistic description. Immediately the reader replied: "I do. I used some pretty fine figures of speech." Professors Dickerson, Morrow, Crawford and Vanderslice have also been "practicing" English.

Calvin Bass, professor of biology, refused to talk a great deal about the work, but a few statements which he had jotted down in class will be sufficient to give us an idea of what his class is learning. The following statements were heard: "Muscles are usually male or female." "Birds won't lay eggs in molting season; I've tried it." "Roots are usually white—the texture is sugar and starch." Geotropism is the contraction of the earth." "The root is divided into cells and the water is heavier and

Juniors Outwitted By Seniors Tuesday Morning At Chapel

Class '31 Pestered Again On Following Morning

May 12—This morning the seniors outwitted and embarrassed the juniors by the use of a clever ruse.

It is customary at Maryville for the graduating class to march into chapel once before commencement in their caps and gowns. It is also customary at such times for the juniors to subject them to every possible discomfiture.

This morning when the juniors heard that the seniors had gone to the College Maid Shop to prepare for the grand march, they immediately wired the seats of the seniors' chairs to the backs so that they could not sit down.

The seniors, however, had gone on a different mission, which was to receive instructions for tomorrow and incidentally to deceive the juniors. They appeared in chapel in their street clothes.

At the suggestion of President Lloyd the rest of the college tendered a standing vote of sympathy during the entire chapel service.

May 13—Nothing daunted by the disrespect which the juniors manifested yesterday, the seniors donned their graduation attire this morning and marched to chapel.

They arrived in state at the door of Voorhees Chapel at 8:10, where their triumphal progress was halted by certain husky juniors who for several minutes successfully held the pass. When some faculty members who appeared to be coming as reinforcements mutinied, the juniors retreated. Most of the class, in fact, retreated to the seniors' seats and the lowly graduates sat where they could.

Music was furnished by those who carried tin pans.

M. Auld: "Mex, you hardly ever wear glasses, do you?"

Mex Horton: "No. Just when I study."

THREE LITERARY SOCIETIES ELECT NEXT YEAR'S OFFICERS

Women Choose Julia Terry and Naomi Willingham As First Term Presidents; Alpha Sigma Elects Bob West

May 16—Tonight, at the regular meetings of the women's literary societies, officers were elected for next year. Julia Terry was elected president of Bainonian, and Naomi Willingham president of Theta. The other officers were:

Bainonian

Vice-president, Janet Stanley; Secretary, Kathryn Hodges; Program secretaries, Pat Henry, Georga Burk; Publicity Chairman, Eunice Grant; Treasurer, Ellen Metz; Editor, Dorothy Casseres; Critic, Lou Repass; Sergeant-at-arms, Martha Gushert; House Chairman, Mabel Hembree.

Alpha Sigma

May 16—Tonight at the regular meeting of Alpha Sigma Literary Society, Bob West was elected president for the first term of next year. The other officers were: Vice President, William Landrum; Recording Secretary, Robert Overly; Assistant Recording Secretary, Joe Quinlan; Program Secretary, Reno Smith; Assistant Program Secretary, Cecil Marley; Treasurer, Donald Briggs; Censors, John Tope, Floyd Waters, Dan Hicks; Sargeant-at-Arms, Lee Merrick; Janitor, Steve Boretsky.

Dr. Lloyd's Inauguration

Many have asked if the inauguration of, our president, Dr. Lloyd will be in connection with commencement. The formal inauguration will not be held this semester. The tentative date is October twenty-first and twenty-second, but no detailed plans have been worked out. The program will extend over two days.

Dr. Lloyd has the promise of several prominent people who will speak; they are well known in the field of education, religion, and achievement. They will discuss the various questions related to education and college in modern life.

No definite date will be made until the meeting of the Board of Directors, commencement day.

Annual Presentation Of Honor Awards Scheduled May 30

Students To Be Rewarded For Scholastic And Extra-Curricular Honors

The annual presentation of awards for scholastic and extra-curricular honors will take place on Saturday, May 30, at the morning chapel service. The most important of many such prizes will be:

The T. T. Alexander Prize for oratory the sum of one hundred dollars awarded to the winner of an oratrical contest under the supervision of the Bible and Religious Department. Last year the contest was open to men, and the winner was Forrest Robertson. This year the prize will go to Mildred Crawford.

The William H. Bates Prize for oratory; the sum of forty-five dollars awarded to the winner of an oratorical contest. Last year the contest, open to women, was won by Viola Petitt. This year Roy Taylor is the winner.

The Rush Strong Medal awarded to the member of the Freshman class who shall write the best essay on "The Value of Truth". Last year the medal went to Alfreda Scobey.

The Theta Alpha Phi cup for the best mid-winter, this year was awarded to the Athenian Literary Society for presentation of "Shavings."

Several prizes awarded for proficiency in Chemistry department.

Various medals and awards for athletic and Y. M. C. A. honors.

Men's Glee Club Sings From Station WNOX

Radio Audience Responds With Commendatory Letters

Tuesday evening, May twelfth, the Men's Glee Club sang from station WNOX in Knoxville to a large and appreciative radio audience, if one may judge by the commendatory letters the broadcasting company has received.

The eighteen members of the Club made the trip in cars, their number augmented by Miss Virginia Carter, their accompanist, George Osborne in the role of chauffeur, and Dr. Knapp. Enroute they were as tuneful as over the air, although they refused to give any list of the songs for publication. That might be, to some, more interesting than the official program which follows:

1. Marching Men
2. Grandfather's Clock

Glee Club

1. When the Organ Plays at Twilight
2. I am the Melody, You Are The Words

Quartette

3. Cornfield Melodies
4. The Old Road

Glee Club

5. Old Pals
6. Ninty-nine Out of a Hundred

Quartette

The quartette is composed of Bowles, first tenor; Shelley, second tenor; Overly, baritone; and Briggs bass.

Mabel Hembree: "Dr. Rodgers, will you tell us what is meant by an envelope psalm?"

Dr. Rodgers: "An envelope psalm is like an envelope."

Highland Echo To Be Sent To All Alumni Next Year

Plans Under Way To Establish Regular Alumni Section In Paper

1324 ALUMNI

Association Hopes To Have Permanent Paid Secretary Next Year

May 14—Every member of the Alumni Association will be sent a subscription to the Highland Echo next year, if the present plans are carried out, according to a statement made today by Professor Verton Madison Queener, who is president of the Association. The plan is to establish a regular alumni section in the Echo and to include a subscription to the college paper for the two dollar fee that is expected of each alumnus.

Arrangements are being made for securing a permanent paid secretary to take care of the business of the organization. The present secretary, Mrs. F. L. Proffitt, says that there is enough work to do to warrant the employment of some one who can give all his time to the business of the Association. The work includes getting out a bulletin each month, and conducting a wide correspondence.

The Alumni Association was organized in 1871. There are now 1324 alumni of Maryville College. The executive committee consists of nine members. They are: Class of 1931, Helen Ott, Mr. Earl Storey, Mr. Volta Goddard; Class of 1932—Dr. A. L. Jones, Mr. George F. Crawford, and Mrs. J. C. McTeer; Class of 1933—Miss Ruth Reagan, Mr. H. R. Crawford and Mr. J. A. Gamble. The officers are President, Prof. Verton Madison Queener; Vice President; Frank Baker, Secretary-Treasurer, Mrs. F. L. Proffitt. It is customary to elect the president of the senior class vice-president of the Alumni Association.

Actors' Fraternity Initiating Three

If you had been Dr. Hunter last Saturday morning at chapel, you would have been presented with three sticks of grease make-up paint by three young, interestingly dressed aspirants to the order of Theta Alpha Phi.

These three students, Lavinia Jones, George Osborne, and Wesley Culver, were invited to join the Maryville organization of the national honorary fraternity by action taken at a meeting of the society last Thursday afternoon. That all three persons have accepted their bids is, and will be, in daily evidence until Thursday, when the final bit of initiation will be administered. Meanwhile, the remaining part of the student body awaits with interest each new device of torture of which the collected minds of Theta Alpha Phi are able to conceive.

Alexander Jones Elected Business Manager For Echo

May 12—Alexander Jones was selected business manager of the Highland Echo for the 1931-32 school year at a meeting of the Committee on Selection held today.

This is one of the most important positions on the Hill held by students and in placing Mr. Jones the committee has shown its confidence in his capacity to carry the responsibility. As assistants Ben Groves, John Talmage, and Walter Pippart were chosen.

PI KAPPA DELTA

Last week Pi Kappa Delta inducted Mary John Metcalfe into membership, inaugurated its officers for the coming year, and made plans for their anual spring frolic.

Mary John Metcalfe was sick in the hospital when the other new members were taken in, so that the chapter held a special ceremony for her.

To The Alumni

It is seldom that we get the opportunity to express our opinions to so many readers. The Alumni Association has made it possible for you to receive this one issue of our paper. We hope that you will enjoy it, and that next year there will be an alumni section every week.

We also wish to welcome you back for commencement exercises.

—O—

Our Last Words

It was about this time last year that the retiring editor was saying his good-byes through the medium of a farewell editorial. He intimated that the work had been interesting if not altogether peaceful. We cannot remember whether he used Pilate's 'hand washing' expression or St. Paul's assertion that he had fought a good fight. We do remember that he wished the next year's editor the best of luck and predicted that it would be the hardest job on the Hill.

How foolish we were not to have heeded the sound advice that was given us! We had had the idea that our editor didn't do any work. He was the big boss who put some four and twenty underlings to work for him. All that he had to do was to write an editorial each week and to see that the stuff was thrown together in readable form. We often wondered what he did while we were trying to make the lead sentences shape into coherent expressive statements. How pitifully uninformed we were about an editor's trials!

Somehow it never occurred to us that even members of a college newspaper staff procrastinate; that many articles must be rewritten and that headlines do not write themselves. We had never dreamed that there would be some weeks when we'd be barren of ideas for editorials, and never had we realized what a whale of a difference a misplaced letter in a person's name or status makes!

In saying our famous last words, we would assert that it has certainly not been dull. One argument for war is that there's such a pleasure in battle. Things have been made very easy for us because the faculty has been disposed to be good humored, and the students have criticized us behind our backs. The staff, on the whole, have pulled together admirably.

Just before we breathe our last we wish to express to the new staff our fondest hopes for a quiet and successful year.

—O—

NO ECHO NEXT WEEK

With this issue of the Highland Echo the present staff ceasese to function. Since only thirty issues are published each year, there will be no Echo next Monday. The next paper comes June 1, and will be edited by the new staff under the direction of Weldon Hina.

Dr. Rodgers (in Bible class): "We will end this course with Lamentations."

Many Alumni Expected Here Commencement

Alumni Dinner To Be Held In Pearsons, Wed., June 3

The Alumni Secretary and the Executive Committee of the Association are making plans for the entertainment of a large number of former graduates during Commencement Week, May 30th to June 4th.

The class of 1911 which had 29 members, is planning a reunion, at which they expect a large percent of their number to be present. Mr. Wm. F. Buchanan, now an attorney in Atlanta, Georgia, is carrying on an extensive correspondence with the members of his class and is receiving enthusiastic responses.

The ten-year-class—1921—with 46 members is also expecting to attend in large numbers and some of the class expect to introduce the other member of the family to Maryville.

Plans for the Alumni dinner, which will be held at Pearsons Hall at 6:30 on Wednesday evening, June 3rd, are underway and about three hundred and fifty guests are expected to attend.

The students will be served at an earlier hour so that the dining hall may be used for the Alumni meeting.

A very interesting program is being prepared. This with good music and an excellent menu promises to make it an occasion of rare pleasure for all who attend.

As is the usual custom, the members of the class of 1931 will be guests of the Assoiation, and will be voted into full membership at that time.

PERSONALS

The death of Rev. Hubert S. Lyle, D. D., '99 and, at the time of his death, the president of Washington College, Tennessee, was a great shock to his many friends and admirers and, also, an irreparable loss to the cause of the education of needy boys and girls. Dr. Lyle was a worthy son of Maryville and was devoting every ounce of his time and strength to the cause of Christian education.

Rev. Ralph A. Armstrong died March 18th at his home in Ecorse, Michigan. Mr. Armstrong was doing a splendid work and his many Maryville friends will be grieved to know of his death.

Dr. Ernest B. Ewers, '08, with his family is returning from Korea to the United States, via Europe. Dr. Ewers was in medical mission service in China for a number of years, but more recently during the Civil war has been located in Korea.

Dr. Lawrence L. Cross, '14, pastor of the North Brae Community Church at Berkeley, California, is also well known on the west coast as a radio entertainer. He may be heard each week-day morning over K G O at 8 o'clock in "Cross Cuts." A recent copy of the "Broadcast Weekly" gives a most interesting account of the work Dr. Cross is doing.

In a recent letter, Mr. Tienze Chang, '20, of Hankow, China, sends greetings to his American friends and expresses the warmest feelings of gratitude to Maryville and his college professors.

Six Localities Have Active M.C. Clubs

Alumni Association To Foster Club Organization

There are 1324 living alumni of Maryville, and they are scattered over the United States, with residents in all but three states of the Union and also in 17 foreign countries.

The executive committee of the alumni association is fostering the organization of M. C. Clubs wherever possible and they are proving both a great pleasure to the members and a source of helpful influence for the college in the communities where they are located.

The Atlantic Highlanders, with headquarters at Princeton, New Jersey, are making a careful study, this year, of similar clubs in other places, with a view to increasing the interest in their own club.

In Los Angeles, a large group of Maryvillians are located and recently they had a most enjoyable evening with Homer Hammontree, '09, when he was engaged in evangelistic work in that city.

Very recently Dr. and Mrs. Geo. W. Burchfield of Maryville have been in Los Angeles, as the guests of Dr. and Mrs. F. G. Cooper, '18 and '19 and they were also royally entertained by the M. C. Club.

Chicago, Cincinnati and Birmingham all have a large number of Maryville people, who meet together from time to time to renew old memories and make plans for rendering continued service to their Alma Mater.

Highland Flings

Senior: "What mades you scratch your head?"

Freshman: "I'm the only one who knows it itches."

"Fall in Love With Me"—if you can swim out of it.

"When Your Hair Has Turned to Silver"—dye it.

"Yours and Mine"—clothes, cosmetics, books, etc.

"Throw It Out the Window"—the portable down the hall.

"You're Driving Me Crazy"—tests and Saturday afternoon classes.

"Tears"—if one eats onions.

"Something for Everyone"—work.

Johnny: "Do I need a hair cut?"
Dick: "Oh; that's the trouble, is it? I thought you had a fur cap on."

Jonah: "You can't keep a good man down."
Cleopatra: "You're an easy Mark Antony."
David: "The bigger they are the harder they fall."

Columbus: "I don't know where I'm going but I'm on my way."
Queen Elizabeth: "Keep your shirt on, Raleigh."

A Scotchman, an Irishman and a Jew were eating dinner together. When the meal was finished and the waiter came with the bill the Scotchman promptly said he would take it. The next day a Jewish ventriloquist was found dead.

Student: "Fourth floor, please."
Elevator Man: "Here's your station, son."
Student: "How dare you call me son? You're not my father."
Elevator Man: "Well, I brought you up, didn't I?"

"If I work late at night", says a novelist, "I invariably have difficulty in going to sleep afterwards." It is only our desire to be helpful that makes us suggest that he try reading over what he has been writing.

The "Red and Black" publication of the undergraduates of the University of Georgia has started agitation concerning a five-day school week. They argue that better work would be done if no classes were scheduled for Saturday. Which goes to prove the old truth that folks are never satisfied with what they have for students on our campus have been agitating in favor of a change from a five day school week to a six day school week.

CAMPUS TALKIE

Reno Smith: "I've changed my major in English to contagious diseases."

What is happening to the English language when Dr. Stevenson calls the two elderly gentlemen 'old birds'?

We hear that Dr. Hunter suggests that Dr. Stevenson write a sonnet on the golf ball.

This is what some one says is very appropriate description of our news:

"Twas whispered in Heaven
Twas muttered in hell
And Echo caught faintly
The sound as it fell."—Fanshawe

Prof. Ellis—(coming up to Dr. Rogers who is rubbing bald spot): "You can't ever hide that. It's bald as can be."

Dr. Rogers: "Well of course if I'd want to have hair too, if I had that to hide which you have."

Maryville College Teams Lead In Smoky Mountain Conference

Highlanders Seldom Drop Game To College Foe

In looking back over the athletic records of the season of 1930 and 1931 we again find that Maryville College's teams are vastly superior to the majority of their college opponents. It is really news if a college team bowls over the Highlanders.

This year's football team was perhaps one of the best that has ever been produced, even though there were four defeats charged against the Honakerites. They were defeated by teams that rank with the country's best and, considering the fact that all of their small college opponents were defeatedby comfortable margins, the Highlanders are better than the average college team.

The University of Tennessee, Kentucky, Howard College and Emory and Henry were the teams that took the Scots' measure but Coach Honaker's men ran rough shod over everything in the Smoky Mountain Conference. They defeated Mars Hill 46 to 0, Tennessee Wesleyan 19 to 7, Carson-Newman 14 to 0, Milligan 39 to 0 and closed the season by trampling Lenoir Rhyne 13 to 7. Tennessee and Kentucky scored 54 and 57 points respectively against the Maryvillians, Howard gained a 12 to 6 verdict and Emory and Henry was lucky to eke out 7 to 6. The Highlanders had an undisputed claim on the conference title but the championship was not officially awarded and no team was recognized as the best.

The varsity team was composed of White and Rule, ends; D. Wilson and Overly, tackles; McDonald and Storey, guards; Watkins, center; Smith, quarter; Callaway and F. Wilson, halves; and M. Gillespie, full. Callaway, Overy, McDonald and Don Wilson were chosen on the all conference team, it was McDonald's third year on the all star team, while it was Callaway's and Overly's second. Lea Callaway was chosen to succeed Carl Storey as Captain.

Capt. Kemp Davis led the basketball team through a successful hardwood season. They played nine games against college opponents and eight professional and independent teams winning ten and losing seven. They were defeated by Carson-Newman in the second round of the conference tournament by two points, who in turn lost to Milligan in the finals.

The most impressive victories that the Maryville team turned in were: 46 to 30 over L. M. U.; 44 to 25 over Kansas Tornadoes; 43 to 27 over Tennessee Wesleyan; 31 to 26 over Milligan; 58 to 33 over King and last but not smallest, 40 to 28 over Carson-Newman. They lost close games to L. M. U., Tennessee, Chattanooga Tepcos and Carson-Newman. The team was composed of Davis and White, forwards; Cooper, a freshman, center; Woodard and Nee, also a first year man, guards. Wilson, still another freshman earned his letter as a forward. White was elected Captain for next year.

The baseball team is clicking as Maryville College diamond teams are supposed to click. They have won twelve games and lost only three so far and have a good claim to the state championship. The usual quota of major league prospects have been developed also and Joe Woodard, third baseman and Tom West, short stop, have been offered contracts by major league clubs.

They have won two games from Hiwassee, three from T. P. I., three from Bethel, two from Bowdon and two from the Johnson City Jr. O. U. A. M. T. P. I. and Bethel managed to win one game each out of four and the Market House Bulls, a strong amateur team from Knoxville, defeated the Scots in a single game.

The track team broke even in the season's meets but Coach Thrower was forced to completely rebuild his team this year and an even break is not a bad record for an experienced team. They won over the University of Chattanooga and Tennessee Polytechnic Institute and lost to the University of Tennessee and L. M. U. The feature of the track season was the setting of a new javelin record by Ray Russell, a freshman, who threw the stick 171 feet.

The tennis team recently made a tour of southern colleges and universities and came home with four victories and one defeat, which was at the hands of the University of Alabama. They also defeated Centre College in a single match played on the Maryville courts. Capt. Dick Strain, Fischbach, Buchanan and Talmage compose the team.

The outlook for all branches of athletics for next year is exceedingly bright and unless the inevitable happens, Maryville College teams should heap some more glory on the school next year.

SPORT SLANTS

By BOB RULE

I have seen athletes of various types become irritated at petty happenings during games of different kinds, but I think that I saw the most completely irritated personage the other day at the ball game with Bethel that I have ever seen. That personage was none other than Captain Robert Thomas Farmer Watkins and the incident was when the Maryville leader pounded out his second home run in as many days only to be called out by the ump for not touching second base. When Farmer realized his unfortunate plight he turned loose the most amazing selection of plain and fancy cuss words that I have ever heard in any league. He grabbed off his cap, mussed up the bats, kicked over the water bucket and said dern, but just the same the ump's decision was not altered a whit.

Maryville College's colors are being carried on the field of battle in a sport that very few people know about. Bob Wells, popular member of the sophomore class, has been entering just about every golf tournament that comes along and the newspapers always see fit to comment on the steady playing of the young Maryvillian. Bob came to Maryville from Miami, Florida where they build bigger and better golf courses and it is only natural that a fellow who had been reared with the cry of "fore" ringing in his ears should attain such proficiency in the royal and ancient Scottish pastime.

A piece of very interesting and encouraging news reached my office the other day. (P. S.—The office is located in front of any of the town's drug stores). This little story was simply the fact that Big Judge Carper who for three years scratched the opposing linemen's eyes while playing tackle for Mr. Thrower, was returning to school next year. When I last saw Carper he was driving a Tea model Ford around the streets of Maryville looking for a job so that he would have the dough to go to school on next year. Surely some of the Maryville banks need a new president.

I want to take some space in this column, which is still in its infancy, to lament on the fact that Maryville College does not have a golf team. As Dr. Stevenson said the other morning in his chapel sermon, golf is a game that can be played as a good, clean recreation not only while you are in college but after you have graduated. There is certainly a large number of fellows who are interested in this sport and I believe that some more laurels could be won for Maryville if it were represented by a golf team. We might also have a golf course of our own right here on the campus some time.

I understand that this edition of the Echo is to be sent out to the former students of the school. I am just wondering how the old athletic heroes are entertaining their lady friends or maybe worse, their wives, these days. Of course they played baseball, football and basketball for old Oshkosh but they did not have the opportunity to play golf and I am sure that they do not take their mates out and play any of the other three sports with them. I tell you, Oscar, something ought to be done about it.

SCOTS WIN STATE BASEBALL CROWN

No Team In State Can Compare With Maryville

Maryville College's recent victories over Bethel College and Tennessee Polytechnic Institute leaves Coach Honaker's team as undisputed Champions of the State.

No other team in Tennessee has made a record that will compare with the one made by the Scotties and Coach Honaker stated that he believed that there was no question about the Scots' superiority. The only club in the state that has a record that will even approach Maryville's is Vanderbilt and they would not schedule with the Highlanders when they were written for games. They have played a very short schedule, however, and would not have a just claim on the title on this account.

This is the second time in the last few years that Coach Honaker's teams have been undisputed Champions. They won the title a few years ago when the names of John Stone, Jack Gabbard, J. D. Davis and others graced the line up.

Baseballers Win Consistently As End Of Season Draws Near

Junior Order Team Beaten Twice; Split With Bethel

Maryville College Highlanders brought their season's standing to 12 won and 3 lost last week by defeating the Johnson City Junior Order team and dividing a pair of games with Bethel College, from McKenzie, Tenn.

Coach Honaker saved his regular pitchers for the Bethel series and sent Mildred Smith, veteran right fielder, against the Juniors in the first game and Smitty came through like a big time hurler. He held the Johnson Citians to two scattered hits in the seven innings that he worked and his mates played well behind him to grab the lead. He was relieved by Kiser, another inexperienced pitcher, in the seventh and the Highlanders won out 4 to 2.

On Tuesday afternoon, he started Doc Duff against the Juniors and again the Maryville team played good baseball and gave their pitcher fine support and the Johnson City team fell by 5 to 2. Duff hurled creditable ball for Coach Honaker's team for seven innings and gave way to Steve Boretsky, who continued the good work.

Holding two victories over the Bethel team earlier in the season, the Maryville team seemed a little over confident and donated the series opener to the visitors by 7 to 4. They held the lead throughout eight innings of the game but, after two were out in the ninth, they permittel the boys from McKenzie to score four runs and win 7 to 4. Newport, hard hitting pitcher, was the hero of the game, clouting out a home run in the fatal ninth with two men on base to win his own game.

In the second game of the series the Highlanders played baseball their defeat at the hands of Bethel by taking the game 4 to 2. Tom West, classy short fielder, smashed out a home run and a triple in his first two appearances at the plate to account for all of the Maryville runs

Teams Deadlocked In Class Swimming Meet

Seniors And Freshmen Tie For First Place

In a very interesting and closely contested inter-class swimming meet held Saturday night the Seniors and Freshmen tied for first honors with twenty-five points each. The Juniors trailed closely behind with twenty points and the Sophs copped the booby prize, accumulating a total of eight points. The meet afforded unexpected competition and kept a good sized crowd constantly on edge.

Two marks worthy of mention were made in the fifty yard back stroke and in the plunge. Young swam the backstroke in 38:2 and French plunged a distance of 45 feet. Individual honors were earned by French and Edris. French scored firsts in the 25 and 100 yard free style, and took first in the plunge to amass fifteen points. Edris scored a total of twelve points. The freshman scoring was divided among seven entrants. Goodwin took first in the dives and Young won the 50 yard backstroke. With the score two points against them the frosh pulled a fast finish to take the relay and tie the score. The seniors came in second in the relay and the juniors copped third.

It is probable that the seniors and frosh will hold a dual meet next Saturday night to definitely decide which team shall win possession of the swimming cup for this year.

"I will drive this car", said the infuriated wife as she climbed in the back seat.

"The Campus Muse" To Recognize Poets

Poets, here's your chance. "The Campus Muse" of Muhlenberg College, feeling that the college poets of today, who may be the future leaders in this field, are not receiving the proper encouragement or attention, is offering $100 in prizes for the most outstanding works of college poets in the United States in 1930-31. Furthermore, arrangements have been made with a prominent publisher to have the prize-winning poems, as well as the most outstanding remaining works, printed in book form this summer. Copies of this will be sent to representative college libraries and metropolitan newspapers for review just to show the literary world what the "college muses" can actually accomplish.

Poems for this contest have been divided into ten groups; a prize of ten dollars in gold is offered for the best work in each one of the ten classes. These groups are as follows: (1) Life and Living; (2) Loyalty: to Country or Alma Mater; (3) Children, Pets, and Hobbies; (4) Campus Life; (5) Humor or Parodies; (6) General Theme. At the top of each contribution the division into which it is entered must be stipulated.

There are no particular rules to the contest. Manuscripts, however, must be typewritten, double-spaced, on one side of ordinary eight and one-half by eleven inch sheets of paper. Each page must have the name, address, college, and publication in which poems may have appeared, typewritten in the upper left-hand corner. Poems should be sent immediately to The Campus Muse, Muhlenberg College, Allentown, Penn., for the contest closes at midnight, June 1, 1931. Authors should enclose a list of personal data, prizes they may have won, campus activities, etc., with the names and addresses of their hometown newspapers, so that these may be notified immediately if their contributions should be awarded a prize or be accepted for publication.

"THEN AND NOW" THEME OF NOVEL '31 CHILHOWEAN

ed faithfully throughout the year, and was ably assisted by a cooperative staff consisting of: Julia Terry, associate editor; Kitty Hodges, literary editor; Bob Wallace, photographic editor; Bob West, activities editor; Merle Beebe, typist; Lea Callaway, athletic editor; Willamara Minton, art editor. The financial side of the annual was carried on by Hadley Webb who did a commendable piece of work considering the scarcity of money. Dr. Hunter proof read the annual and served as faculty advisor.

It is interesting to hear and see the various expressions of comment or criticism as the annuals are examined. "Oh, I like this!" "Isn't that darling!" "H'm, not so hot." "Will you look at the way they've spelled our names. I think that's mean". "Wake up frosh, you have three years to go." "Just look at my picture." Of course this roll call could be carried on indefinitely but the necessity is not apparent.

And then, of course, the next important detail after looking over the annual is to see how many names one can get in his annual. It is indeed easy to spot a freshman because his book is always the most thoroughly defaced of all. However, we all go through the name-signing stage. No doubt it is a form of collecting and hoarding, which all good juniors know is a dominant urge.

In enumerating some of the changes that have been made in an uel as comparing it with former annuals several might be mentioned. The pictures are block instead of oval: the football section consists of photographs of the men in headgear instead of action pictures; the freshman section is printed in lower case; the flattering senior writeups have been omitted; junior majors and minors have been left out; the faculty has a picture in the annual; universities where the members of the faculty received their degrees are named: the cover is padded instead of flat: the front views are named; the change in administration has been given attention; the arrangement of all the classes has been changed—these and many other differences make the Chilhowean an outstanding volume.

The Home Economics Club will meet on Friday at 6:30.

Indian Turnips Crime Wave

Never have truer words than these been spoken: "As as ye sow, so shall ye reap". A substantiation of this fact can be proved by relating the following episode. Last week end Lois Blessing and Miriam Swann were introduced to the pleasing tidbit called Indian turnip. The results were so astounding that they were determined to treat their friends with the same dainty morsel camoflauging it of course under disguised names.

The willing, yet unsuspecting victims were many and the influence of this unusual bit of foodstuff still remains with some of the most unfortunate.

In order to repay these generous dispensers of Indian turnip for their kindness two of the victims obtained the rare-smelling mercuric acid and fumigated Miriam's room with it. Miriam immediately moved out and established herself wherever possible. She had fed so many innocent third-floor girls, however, that her invitations were few.

When asked about the situation she says "Well, Lois gave the wild turnip to most of the girls while I supplied the laughing element." Which is worse? Both Lois and Miriam are partners in this dreadful Indian turnip crime and the case is far from being settled.

CHILHOWEE STAFF PARTY

On Tuesday evening, May 19 Miss Bassett will entertain the members of the Chilhowean staff at an informal dinner at Viewmont on the Niles Ferry Pike.

The 1931 Chilhowean is dedicated to Miss Bassett and this party is just one expression of her appreciation. She has been interested in the annual throughout the year and has given aid whenever her advice was sought.

The staff indeed appreciates this party given for them and are looking forward to the occasion.

A GUTTURAL ADMIRATION

Courting is done in a great variety of ways and in innumerable places. We have a street named "Court Street", in fact we have a Court House. However, the latest method of courting is that known as "admiration from the gutter" or shall we call it guttural admiration?

It seems that one day last week the gutters on fourth floor Pearsons were being cleansed of accumulations of various kinds when the fearless human fly became so attached to the gutter outside the window of a particular room that he almost scrapped the gutter from its moorings. The object of admiration was seated inside, but the eyes had it when she attempted unsuccessfully to glance surreptiously at her gutter-snipe. After four or five trips in front of the window the gutter had been worn so threadbare that the courting had to cease—thus ends the first episode of a guttural admiration.

Kappa Sigma Kappa, honor service fraternity of the University of South Carolina is debating the matter of clipping the hair of freshmen, beginning with next year's class. The discussion arose out of a realization by the upper classmen that freshmen were not wearing their "rat caps" and consequently not showing their college spirit. Hair-clipping was suggested to remedy the defect.

Juniors To Empty Class Treasury

May 14—Tonight the junior class held a meeting for the purpose of deciding what should be done with the money that remains in the class treasury.

After various discussions as to the advisability of saving it for next year and after much haranguing as to certain parliamentary procedures the class voted by a small majority to have some kind of informal party.

The committee in charge consists of Kitty Hodges, Clarence Bratschie, Junius Allison, and others. The party will probably be held in the College Woods at which time the officers for the coming year will be installed and any remaining business of the class for this year will be completed.

Y. M. C. A INSTALLATION

May 17—This afternoon in the chapel the Y. M. C. A. held their installation service at which the newly elected officers and cabinet were formally inaugurated.

Richard Strain and Raymond Young were in charge of the devotion. Dr. Orr, chairman of the advisory committee, gave a short charge to the new administration. Stuart James, retiring president, spoke a few words of farewell. The service was concluded with a talk by Ralph Tefeteller, the new president, in which he urged for more cooperation and interest on the part of the student body.

NANCY IS HER NAME

Our paper seems to gain in popularity every day. In fact, it has almost become a household word. Just the other day Ruth Lloyd of the little Lloyds was seen on the campus carrying a new doll. After she had been asked by practically every girl on the campus, the name of the doll, she rather wearily suggested, "Oh dear, I wish one of you would put it in the Echo so that everybody would know. Her name is Nancy."

THE STORY OF A GREAT FATHER LOVE

Mother love has always played a great part in drama and literature. But not as frequently is the love of a father for his own to be found in fiction or upon the screen.

A heart gripping example of such love is magnificently portrayed in the all-talking "Ten Nights In a Bar Room", starring William Farnum, and which opens at the Palace Theatre Monday and Tuesday. This modern screen version of the immortal stage favorite tells the dramatic story of Joe Morgan. Following the "curse of the Morgans" down to the last bitter fulfillment, he sinks into the abysmal depths of drunken degradation— losing all sense and humiliation. Betraying those nearest and dearest to him, he is deaf to every appeal save one—that of his little daughter, Mary, who very nearly gives her life that her father might be awakened to manhood again.

William Farnum's performance as Joe Morgan is a triumphant characterization of heart-stirring father love. His scenes with six year old Patty Lynd are gems of exquisite sympathy and tenderness.

N. C. State College students of forestry planted a total of 45,000 pine tree seedlings during the last week of February. The purpose of this reforestation activity is to instruct students in the handling of nursery stock and in putting in plantations in the field.

It's a great life at the University of Mexico if you're quick on the draw. Several sophomores were shaving the head of a rather unruly freshman when he decided that the matter had gone too far. So he broke loose and started on a dead run—then one of the sophs drew a revolver, shot him in the leg, and they continued the shaving process.

Sheepskins Will Be Presented To Seniors, June 4

President Princeton Seminary Will Make Annual Address

JUNIOR DAISY CHAIN

Dr. Lloyd Speaks To Graduates Of Baccalaureate Sunday May 31

June 1—On Thursday, June 4, at 10 a. m. the one hundred and twelfth annual commencement will take place in Voorhees Chapel. About ninety seniors will receive their sheepskins, several receiving Cum Laude honors.

Dr. J. Ross Stevenson, president of the Princeton Theological Seminary, will address the graduating class. The choir will lead the procession followed by the Directors of the College, next the Faculty, and then the graduates.

Special music will be supplied by selected members of the Vesper Choir under the direction of Miss Henry. A change has been made in the usual custom of having the daisy chain on Bacculaureate Sunday to Thursday, Commencement Day. Junior girls who will hold the chain are: Laura Jean Workizer, Marjorie Gould, Lois Cupler, Margaret Auld, Ruth Hannah, Mignonne Goyne, Iva Babcock, Georga Burk, Helen Burdette, and Kitty Hodges. Further changes with regard to the daisy chain are being planned but are not formulated as yet.

Dr. Lloyd will make a few remarks to the class and the Board of Directors will be represented.

The service will not be so long as it has been formerly and promises to be a very impressive one.

Sunday, May 31 the Baccalaureate sermon was given by Dr. Lloyd to the members of the graduating class and friends. Dr. Lloyd's sermon was centered about the theme of "College Gateways", the gateways being "The Way of Honor", "The Light of Truth" and "The Will to Serve." The sermon was well received and is indicative of President Lloyd's ability as a speaker. Music by the choir and the processional and recessional marches by the choir, faculty, and graduates completed the service.

Dr. Lloyd Returns From Church Meeting

Busy College Executive Faces Heavy Schedule

May 30—Dr. Lloyd returned today from Pittsburgh where he attended the opening sessions of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A. He left Monday for the meeting.

On Wednesday morning he spoke concerning the best types of religious emphasis in a college program. On Thursday evening he gave the annual address in behalf of the young people at a meeting attended by the fifteen hundred commissioners and visitors who came from all parts of the country and an equal number of Pittsburgh people. His subject was "Should the Churches work with Young People?" The speaker on this occasion two years ago was Dr. Daniel A. Poling of New York and last year it was Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo of Washington, D. C.

Dr. Lloyd's schedule for the past few weeks has been rather full, since he has given the Commencement Address at Cleveland, Tenn., High School; Alcoa High School; Maryville High School; the Baccalaureate sermon at Farragut, Tenn., High School and at Knoxville College; and has spoken at the Knoxville City Association of Women's Clubs.

On Saturday following commencement at Maryville College Dr. Lloyd will speak at the annual banquet of Phi Kappa Phi, the scholarship honor fraternity of the University of Tennessee.

Alumni In New York Contribute To M. C. Rotating Loan Fund

Graduates In Other Cities Also Remember Their Alma Mater

A few weeks ago the New York group of Maryville Alumni contributed to the College in small sums of five dollars or less, a fifty-six dollar rotating fund. This fund, to be used through the Self-Help office, provides for the loan of the principal to such students as avail themselves of the opportunity.

Dr. Andrew Richards, secretary of the New York group, said in the letter accompanying the check:

"This is but a start. I hope that in other years we may be able to do more. Perhaps other local groups of Alumni and former students will take up this plan to help make possible for others the benefits we ourselves received at Maryville."

Jimmie Rule, as James Catherine Rule '27 was known on the Hill, entertained three ex-Maryville students at her apartment in New Orleans on May 18. Rev. Merlin Usner '27, and Mrs. Usner, who was formerly Ruby Brewer of Maryville, and Dr. Dwight Arnold were the guests.

Mr. Usner is now pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Aberdeen, Idaho. Dr. Arnold attended Maryville in 1925, but did not finish here. He now occupies the position of House Doctor at the Baptist Hospital in New Orleans. Conversation at dinner centered around old Maryville, and memories of "old lady" and other Pearsons "characters" caused hearty laughter. So far as anyone knows, this was the first Maryville College reunion ever held in New Orleans.

Two Maryville men have recently won special honors at Presbyterian Theological Seminary, Chicago. Some time ago the Echo reported that Edward G. Conrad, Maryville College '28, had been awarded the Bernardine Orme Smith Fellowship for high scholastic standing and general excellence during his three years course. Report has come to the effect that Paul M. Meikle, Maryville College '27, has been awarded the $50 prize for the best seminary hymn submitted by students, faculty or alumni. His hymn is entitled, "Men of McCormick" and has been widely distributed.

Honors Awarded In Chapel Saturday

May 30—The annual awarding of prizes, medals and trophies was held this morning in chapel. The following awards were made:

T. T. Alexander prize of $100.00 in gold, Mildred Crawford.

The Rush Strong Medal, Margaret Parnell.

Alexander English Prize of $25.00 in gold, Hessie Keeton.

Elizabeth Hillman Chemistry Prizes, $50.00 in gold, Dollie Putnam; $50.00 in gold, Mary Elinor Himmelright.

William H. Bates Oratorical Prize of $45.00 in gold, Roy Taylor.

Pi Kappa Delta Medals—Oratory, Lucy Lee Silcox, Roy Taylor.

Extemporaneous Speech, Hope Snider and Stuart James.

Theta Alpha Phi Cup, Athenian Literary Society.

The Coughlin Cup, Freshman Class

Sigma Delta Psi Keys, Donald Benn, Elbert Lippard, Jean McMurray.

Y. M. C. A. Cross-country Trophy, Roy Taylor.

Y. M. C. A. Pentathlon Trophy, Charles Richardson.

Y. M. C. A. Circus Cup, Bainonian Literary Society.

French Oratorical Medal, Marshall Bertram.

Tommy Hatmaker in Poetry class: "Edgar Allen Poe was like Chopin. He was born in the same year and died in the same year."

Jonah (inside the whale)—I wish I'd brought my camera along, nobody'll believe this.

Sixteen Graduates Attain Cum Laude

The following seniors have attained the honor of Cum Laude degree. To earn such a degree a student must have an average of "B" throughout his college course, plus one "A". This means a constant attention to academic work and it is indicative of worthy scholarship. The list follows in order of excellence:

Virginia Rose Carter
Donald George Benn
Hessie Eleanor Keeton
Calvin Edgar Shepard
Mabel Dickerson
Bertha Mae Lawson
Flavia Sophia Tweed
Edith Lillian Olson
Alice Elizabeth Renegar
Edna Lee Broyles
Lillian Virginia Polk
Edward Thomas Raney

Impressive Ceremony Given By Class Of '31 In Chapel Thursday

Seniors Relinquish Seats to The Juniors; Speches By Class Presidents

A very impressive ceremony was presented by the Class of '31 in chapel Thursday morning. The program was built about the theme of relinquishing of the seats occupied by the graduating class to the incoming seniors, symbolizing one step forward of the present junior class.

The program was presided over by the class president, Donald Benn. A piano solo was given by the class mascot, Nancy Jane Poage, a paper was read by Mabel Dickerson, and the class quartet sang.

The seniors, attired in caps and gowns, surrendered their front seats of dignity to the juniors and took places along the side aisles. A threefold charge was given the new seniors. In the words of Donald Benn, "As you assume these seats of dignity, do not do so lightly, but with reverence and awe, take care of them, defend them." As individuals, the seniors were charged to practice Christian service, to subordinate self interest to the welfare of Maryville College, and to ever bear in mind its principles. As a whole the class was urged to keep united to the class and to the College by a spirit of loyalty and cooperation.

George Osborne, president of the new senior class, addressed the graduating seniors comparing the class to a ship setting sail flying its three flags—the one of the owner, "of the inner-man, of God our Creator and Master" on the highest mast; the flag of destination, of the port in which you can do most service for humanity" in the front; the flag of the homeland, "the flag of Maryville College", in the back.

Robert Anderson, who takes the part of Trigaud in the coming Senior play, has appeared before Maryville audiences frequently.

Esther Horton, talented graduate of expression, plays the leading feminine role, Diana, in "The Black Flamingo".

Art Exhibit Given By Dept. Saturday

Oils, Pastels And Tapestries Feature of Show

The annual exhibit of the art department was held Saturday afternoon in room four of Anderson Hall. The exhibit was not so large as those of previous years, but there were a number of very good pieces, and the general standard was high in all fields.

The exhibit consisted of silhouettes, charcoals, pastels, oils and paintings on cloth. One of the best pieces was a tapestry painted by Willamara Minton.

Some very good cartoon sketches were done by Edwin Buchanan. Ruth Peery's copies of The Old Mill ond The Deer received much favorable comment.

There were a number of originals painted in the College Woods. One of the best was a scene which Mary Kate Clifton painted.

Harold Myers had several good pictures in the collection. His best one was The White Bird.

Katherine Reed's copy of The Grand Canyon was hung at the coveted eye-level position.

A large number of visitors called during the afternoon and all of them were enthusiastic in their praise of the students' work.

Alumni Will Honor Seniors Wednesday

Annual Banquet To Be Held In Pearsons Dining Hall

Approximately three hundred alumni, seniors, directors, faculty members, and friends of Maryville College will be served at the annual alumni dinner in Pearsons dining-room on Wednesday evening at 6:30.

Prof. Verton Queener, president of the Alumni Association will act as toastmaster and will preside at the business meeting.

Members of the senior class will present the program of the evening. It will inciude a piano duet by Miss Edna Broyles and Miss Grace Caulton, a reading by Miss Mildred Crawford, a violin duet by Miss Flavia Tweed and Edgar Sheppard, and a vocal solo by Yervant Topalian.

The violin ensemble will furnish the dinner music.

Two class reunions are being held this year, and greetings will be brought by representatives of both classes.

Mr. W. F. Buchanan, an attorney of Atlanta, will speak for the class of '11, and Miss Jessie Johnson, who is in the Engish department at Tennessee Wesleyan will bring greetings from the ten-year class, '21.

During the business session the officers for the ensuing year will be elected. The nominating committee consists of V. F. Goddard, Harold H. Gauding, and Mrs. George Howell. It is customary for the presidents of the outgoing senior class to be elected vice president of the association.

Osborne Elected To Head Class Of '32

May 22— George Osborne was elected president of the class of '32 for the coming year at a called meeting of the class held in Anderson Hall today.

Mr. Osborn is one of the most popular men of the college and has held many responsible positions on the campus in the past. The juniors, in electing him to head their class for the coming year, have expressed their confidence in his ability to guide them through the most important year of their college career.

The other officers elected at the same meeting were: Virginia Crider, vice-president; Iva Babcock, secretary, and Hadley Webb, treasurer.

Hitch-Hikers—by beale

Tomorrow and the days following will see a horde of thumb-tourists departing from the ole Alma Mater. Most of them will leave Maryville from the same out-going highway, but will scatter hither, thither, and yon in Knoxville to place themselves on points of vantage on practically every trunkline that leads out—to homes in the four corners of the counry. A handbill prominently displayed on the campus states that the only safe and sane way to travel is in connection with the North American Association of Certified Hitch-Hikers.

We heartily agree with this hand bill, but we also have the opinion that the federation in question is not what it should be if it is to furnish ease and safety to the college boys of the country. Why not go into the thing upon a larger scale? The only thing in the way of paraphanalia proffered by the present association is a card to be carried on one's person which tells the cock-eyed world that the bearer is honest, tho', for all the N. A. A. C. H. knows, he may commit such sins as carrying extra apples from his dining hall. We should suggest that the corporation consist of a shipping committee, a committee on references, a publicity committee, a stenographer, and an office boy.

The shipping committee should see that every member's trunk reaches that member's home before its owner. The committee on reference would concern itself with preparing affidavits stating that he bearer is a competent rider and that he is especially proficient in the repair of punctures, etc. The publicity committee shall post ads in local papers, giving the destination and time of departure of all homeward bound collegians; and the stenographer and office boy shall play checkers while not busy forgetting to answer letters.

Talented Seniors To Present "The Black Flamingo"

Evil Spirits, Ghosts, Skeletons, Storms, Feature Weird Play

HIDDEN VIOLIN

Can You Solve The Mystery of The Black Flamingo And The Lost Diamonds?

"There is a moment's lull in the storm, and suddenly, from far up the chimney is heard the weird and ghostlike sound of a violin, a spectral and tuneless strain.

"'I crossed myself and it stopped, so it must be an evil spirit!'"

Thus in the first scene of "The Black Flamingo", chosen as the senior production for the year, is encountered mystery, and some strange, supernatural being. Later when one has moved to investigate the chimney for the source of this unearthly violin, there is heard, a cry from the abrupt darkness.

"Hands—hands, like a skeleton at my throat!"

And then, "a stone comes rattling down the steps of the tower in the chimney. The sound of the note increases. At last, a horrible, inhuman object emerges from the opening—"

You'll find every minute of "The Black Flamingo", by Sam Janny, tense, dramatic, absorbing. You'll wonder with the actors the portent of this gruesome song. You'll never guess the meaning of it all until you come to Voorhees Chapel tomorrow night where Esther Horton Bob Anderson and Russell Gilmore will make you forget everything but this weird mystery!

Varied Vacations In Store For Faculty

Mrs. Veech Will Tour Europe; Some To Study

May 30—Faculty vacation plans range from buffeting ocean waves to dabbling in dish-water, from European tours to arm-chair excursions, and from teaching to studying, it was revealed today by an Echo investigation.

To the question, "Are you going abroad this summer?" all but one replied, "I wish I were, but I'm not." Mrs. Veech is the one who is going. She and Mr. Veech plan to sail June 6 on the Britannic for an extensive tour of Europe.

Two of the young professors on the Hill have chosen to launch out on the rough voyage to a Ph. D. degree, rather than to launch out on pleasure voyages in canoes or yachts or ocean liners. Professors Griffitts and Queener will spend twelve weeks at the University of North Carolina studying chemistry and history respectively.

Maryville will be well represented at Lake Junaluska, N. C., where the summer school of Duke University will be held. Dr. Hunter will teach a course in English there and Prof. Kiger will go there to pursue some of his studies. Prof. Lagerstedt will not attend his Alma Mater, Duke, as was rumored, but will attend the Middlebury School of Languages for part of the summer.

Most of the faculty, however, are going to rest at home—except for a few auto trips apiece—and follow their own whims in the search of greater knowledge.

The New Helmsmen

With the present issue of the Highland Echo the newly elected staff begins to function. It is almost with a spirit of awe that we assume control of this important part of Maryville College life. It comes to us in a well organized and efficient condition; it has earned and retained the respect of the student body; it has built for itself through efficient and thoughtful management in the past an almost indespensible place on the Hill and has discharged its self-imposed duties with highest merit. The burden of "carrying-on" now rests squarely upon us. Our first duty is to retain that position passed on to us and then to increase this heritage of value and prestige to pass on next year.

In accomplishing this it is expected that there will be changes, for by changes do we advance, but it seems to us that no basic or radical changes are necessary or desirable. We hope to build upon the secure foundation already laid, thereby making our efforts the more effective by not wasting energy beginning over again.

The function of the college newspaper, as we see, it is threefold; to entertain, to reflect and to create. The Highland Echo shall attempt to fulfill these obligations and duties throughout the coming year. For entertainment features, interesting news stories and novel campus scenes will be presented; to reflect the Maryville spirit a complete tabloid of college activities and trends of thought will be included, and to create and direct proper spirit timely discussions in the editorial columns will be made.

This last aim is by far the most important function of the college organ. Much damage can be done to an institution by thoughtless and unstudied agitation and, conversely, much good can be accomplished by carefully deliberated plans and honestly directed energies. In every college, whether or not we wish to recognize it, two factions are present, the administration and the students, and the success of any scholastic year stands in direct proportion to the amount of cooperation obtained between the two groups. We believe that if a reform is necessary and desirable the students of Maryville College will cooperate with the faculty to obtain it. It needs only to be brought before them on common ground. We do not wish to set ourselves up as arbitrary judges of what is necessary and practical, but only to take our place as the "common ground" of contact; the thread that binds the suture of student to administration. To do this we shall at all times seek the opinion of both parties and beg their confidence in our sincerity throughout the coming year.

Fifteen Girls To Spend Summer Here

Twelve To Work At College, Three at Montvale

Fifteen girl students of Maryville College plan to spend a part of their vacation, if not all of it, working either here or at Montvale.

Julia Terry, Merle Beebe, Viola Lightfoot, and Geraldine Smith will work in the Registrar's office. Edith Olson will be here at least part of the summer in the college printing office. Cora Hank, secretary to Mrs. McMurray, Adelaide Waddell, Helen Enloe, Jessie Mae Ramsey, Elva Hicks, Georgia Queen and Evelyn Roberts will have employment in the College Maid Shop.

At the Montvale summer hotel three Maryville girls will be employed in the dining room. They are Anna King, Marie Shoerluke, and Dorothy Casseres.

Merle Beebe says, "Maryville is a lovely place to spend the summer. The townspeople are all quite friendly and the college girls will have a good time."

Most of us who are working on the Hill will room and board at the hospital, although three of the crowd plan to take an apartment and do their own housekeeping. Anyway, we expect to enjoy our work."

Initiation Victims Wear Freak Costumes

Clubs Vie With Each Other In Humbling Neophytes

The hectic days for the neophytes have come. . . . Every conceivable and inconceivable costume has been seen upon the campus. . . . In fact the average student has become so inured to the sight of the unsightly that the most freakish and original costume fails to get even a grunt of recognition from him.

Pi Kappa Delta had its fling at torturing the poor pledges to a state of moral irresponsibility. Then Theta Alpha Phi, with its "flit" guns turned three apparently sane individuals into militant sharpshooters. The Writers Workshop produced some entirely original color schemes on the faces and persons of its unfortunate victims and now the Hi-Trailers (or at least that is what we suppose they are. They could be members of the Society for the Perpetuation of Cruelty to Dumb Animals for all they'll tell us) has liberated a quantity of grotesque and freak attire for the education of the would-be victims.

Onlookers sit back in amazement at the many ideas formulated by the "powers that be" in the various organizaions who plan thtse initiations. As a result of their conciensious efforts all new members have every right to feel themselves thoroughly initiated.

Husky bass voices blend with those of the higher tenor as songs of every possible nature float out over the sea of billowing whiteness. Moisture streams down dark faces and, as the heat on nude arms and shoulders becomes unusually torrid, the songs cease and the stillness is disturbed only by a continuous patter, as that caused by the wind rustling dry cotton stalks in the hot August sun. This reluctance to sing is persists for some while, until with the diminishing of the heat, some trusty soul breaks out with the initial strains of Swing Low Sweet Chariot. Peace, but not quietness, reigns. A bell is heard tolling in the distance.

Animated by the sound of the bell, the singers gather up their soap and towels and scurry to their rooms. Carnegie inhabitants have just completed their Wednesday night bath.

Hamrick Chooses Nu Gamma Sigma Leaders

Nez Hamrick, Nu Gamma chairman for the Y. W. C. A., has selected the following girls to serve as Nu Gamma leaders for next year: Elizabeth Thomson, Ruth Farlee, Elinor Winn, Margaret Smith, Bernice McNutt, Lila Barr, Marie Schroerluke, Elizabeth Ayres, Elizabeth Gillis, Blanche Wilson, Virginia Ross, Geraldine Smith, Alma Allis, Dorothy Hassall, Frances Massey, Jeanne Martin, Mildred Purviance, and Dorothy Casseres.

Each of these leaders will be assigned about ten freshman girls who will constitute her group. During the summer the leaders will correspond with their group members and somewhat generally acquaint them with Maryville. Then for about the first six weeks beginning next fall, meetings will be held each week for the purpose of further acquainting the new girls with Maryville customs, for the purpose of discussing college problems of orienation and other questions that might arise, and most of all, for the purpose of making the new girls feel at home and find their places in the life at Maryville.

This division of the Y. W. C. A. has been invaluable in aiding the new girls and it will continue to do so under the capable directorship of Nez Hamrick and her well-chosen leaders.

A new organization on the campus of U. S. C. is petitioning recognition by the faculty. Its name is the Epicurean Club and its purpose is to seek the greatest pleasures in life by the united efforts of its members.

Graduation Takes Total Of Thirteen Athletes From Maryville

Tennis Team Ends Season With Win

Defeat Middle Tennessee Teachers To Close Fine Year

Maryville College's tennis team closed one of the most successful seasons in its history last Saturday afternoon by turning back the Middle Tennessee State Teachers by a score of 4 to 2. The Maryville team played the Teachers earlier in the season at Murfreesboro and won rather easily, but the Teachers have improved immensely since this match and the Maryville boys had plenty of trouble disposing of them.

Maryville piled up a comfortable lead in the singles matches but lost the only doubles match played. Strain was given a setback in his last college performance by Jacobs, the Teachers' first ranking man, 6-2, 6-8, 6-2. Dick had previously defeated Jacobs in straight sets in the meet at Murfreesboro.

The rest of the singles matches went as was expected. Talmadge came back after losing the first set 6-8 and disposed of the Teachers' third ranking player 6-3, 6-1. Talmadge's playing in the last two sets was pleasing to watch.

The victory over the Teachers leaves Maryville's record at six wins and only one defeat for the season. They won four out of five on a lengthy tour through the South, being defeated only by the powerful Alabama University team.

I ran into a piece of bad news this morning while talking to Jack Coughlin, Maryville College's swimming director. (The bad news was not Jack, now mind you.) Jack has been informed recently that the College Swimming Pool will not be available this summer, with the exception of for three weeks, when the Kiwanis Club will sponsor swimming lessons. The Pool has, in the past few years, been very popular with the town students and the announcement that it will not be open will surely be a great disappointment to them.

SPORT SLANTS

By BOB RULE

Some time back, just before the last baseball game of the season, Ray Russell, Maryville's Record Breaker, came along by the player's bench and asked me to go with him and throw the 'painted stick' back to him while he took some practice throws. Fully appreciating the compliment of being asked to "throw it back to him", gladly I followed him.

When we arrived at the scene of his many triumphs, he started warming up by slinging the stick out something like 165 feet. He was very careful not to injure his precious arm in practice throws, but after a little while he could hold back no longer and insisted on really cutting loose.

I got way back, almost out of sight, and then with ease and grace of Wesley Ferrell throwing a base ball, he lazily slung the stick in the general direction of the place that I was standing. I heard a sizzling like sound over my head and turned around to see the stick fall, point first, way out next to that big oak tree, out there where John Stone used to hit home runs.

When I arrived at its landing place, I grabbed it with both hands and with all of my strength pulled it out of the ground and started back with the prized implement to its rightful owner. I ran about a hundred yards, so it seemed, and then, gathering my remaining strength, threw it as far as I could. The Record Breaker, coming out to meet me, took the stick and nonchantly strolled into the dressing room.

Coach Thrower, gleefully looking on, sent after the tape and with the aid of an extra piece, measured the throw, which had exceeded the college record. After moping the sweat off my brow, I returned to the baseball field, where Russell was taking batting practice, and informed him that he had thrown it farther than the old record and all that that bird said was "Did I".

Varsity Teams Suffer Heavily But Prospects For Ensuing Year Still Look Exceedingly Bright

K. Davis, Strain, Taylor And Buchanan End Careers

Thirteen athletes, representing every branch in Maryville College's athletic program, will be lost to future teams when the graduation exercises come to a close. In this year's graduating class are some of the most brilliant athletes that have ever carried the orange and garnet colors of the college.

First of all from the football goes Captain Carl Storey, who has made Maryville one of the best leaders that has ever been elected to this honor. Story served four years on the varsity team at guard, and after one of the finest seasons of his career in 1929, his mates showed their confidence in him by selecting him for this year's leader. We hate to see you go, Carl.

Another defensive demon is in Lowell McDonald. He was honored by his teammates by being elected Captain of the team that year when he was only a Junior. He entered Maryville College as a Freshman four years ago and startled everyone by not only making the varsity but by being chosen on the all-conference team.

Imagine Maryville College without Farmer Watkins. But we are facing the stark reality of carrying on without him from now on because his name is listed among the high and mighty (?) and I understand that he is to coach next year. Farmer played four years on the varsity football team, four seasons on the baseball outfit and was coach of the wrestling team all four years. (Notice to Freshmen: he has not been here twelve years but he is one of these guys that has a part in just about everything.)

Along with these other three linemen goes old Tom Cash. Tom came here from Duke, North Carolina, Tennessee Wesleyan or some where and stepped into the limelight by making the varsity football team two years. He was also one of the best wrestlers that has ever twisted arms and necks for Maryville serving both years on Farmer's grappling team.

Wilfred Smith surrendered his quarterbacking duties to Gordie Benn and he too will go where all good seniors go. Smitty was the regular quarterback in his last two years and he handled this responsible position in good style. He was perhaps most outstanding, however, on the baseball field. He made the varsity all four years and brother, any man that makes Maryville's baseball team four years is nothing short of a marvel. He played side by side by the great John Stone, who is now the idol of the Detroit fans.

Perhaps the most fortunate of all the sports is basketball, that is in one sense of the word. Only Captain Kemp Davis is lost to the hardwood team and one of the best teams in history seems to be in store for Maryville next year. However, it really is unfortunate for any branch of athletics to lose a man of Kemp's calibre and it is a certainty that his shoes will not be easily filled. Kemp was a varsity performer for four years, manager of the team in his Junior and Senior years and Captain of the team this year.

Besides Watkins and Smith, the baseball team will lose Emmett Stidham, who for the past two years has won quite a number of ball games for Maryville. Stidham was one of the best hurlers on the Maryville staff for the past two seasons and his loss will be greatly felt next year.

From the track team goes another Captain, Roy Tayor. Roy has been stepping the two mile for Coach Thrower for the past two years and the races that he has lost have been very few. One of his most appreciated victories of the year was the one over the University of Tennessee's two miler, whom he beat by nearly half a lap. The majority of the track men this year were sophomores and you can wager your last shilling that next year's team will not be duck soup for anyone.

This year's brilliant tennis team loses Dick Strain, who has served as Captain of the teams for the past two years. Dick has won the majority of his college matches and his loss will be difficult to repair. Ed Buchanan, who has won a place on the tennis team for the past three seasons, will also be lost through graduation. Ed has been a steady performer in this sport and has also won places on the tumbling, wrestling and swimming teams.

Felknor Elected Track Captain

Dip Has Been Outstanding Man In Hurdles and Pole Vault

Dip Felknor, Coach Thrower's high point man for the 1931 season, was elected by his teammates to captain the 1932 track aggregation at a meeting of the lettermen last week. Dip will be a junior next year, which leaves him two more years on the varsity, and it is a safe wager that he will set some wonderful examples for his team to follow next year.

Felknor is one of the best track men that has ever been under the tutelage of Coach Thrower in his reign at Maryville. He startled everyone last year by running the high and low hurdles and doing the pole vaulting as a freshman and his performance this year has been even more outstanding.

Dip hails from Morristown, Tennessee, the home of bigger and better track teams. When he was in high school, he went to the Georgia Tech Relays and took first place in the pole vault, clearing the bar at a mere eleven feet five inches.

Smith Shows Way To Scot Batters

Has Mark of .354 To Beat Tom West For Lead

Averages show that Coach Honaker's baseball team won a great number of their games by their defensive play, good pitching and timely hitting. The batting averages of all the players are considerably lower this year than in previous years but, while the team failed to clout the cover off the ball, they hit at opportune times and made their hits count for runs.

The Maryville team showed its best batting form of the year in the last game of the season against the East Tennessee State Teachers. They clubbed out fourteen hits off the Teachers' pitchers and counted thirteen runs and played a brand of defensive ball that brands them as real state champions.

Wilfred Smith, veteran outfielder led the batters with a mark of .354, Tom West, short stop, was second with .339 and Joe Woodard followed with .308. The rest of the team hit under the .300 mark and the average for the first ten men is .239.

Joe Woodard, hard hitting third baseman, hung up the most brilliant batting record of the year by hitting safely in the first thirteen games, his streak being broken in the game with Bethel, in which he went hitless in four trips to the platter. He also led the club in batting in runs and his playing at third base was of the hihgest type.

Seniors Conquer LeConte, Chimneys

On last Friday the seniors exercised their freedom from examinations by taking their class mountain hike.

The members of the graduating class were given the choice of going with one group to Mt. LeConte or with the other to Chimney Tops. The LeConte hikers left the Hill at five o'clock. Those going to Chimney Tops, however, were favored with a delicious Pearsons breakfast before leaving.

Nothing startling happened during the day except an amazing exhibition of inexhaustible energy by some of the Le Conte hikers. These ambitious seniors, not content with reaching the lofty summit, tramped to Alum Cave after lunch. The two groups of near graduates met at Gatlinburg Hotel for dinner.

From the large number of vacant senior chairs at breakfast Saturday morning, it is surmised that their highness finally got tired.

"Y." RETREAT

Plans are being made now for the annual "Y" Retreat to be held early next fall. This year the joint conference of the two "Ys" will meet at Tallassee, about twenty-five miles from Maryville on the Calderwood road, instead of at Sunshine, which has been selected in previous years.

The accommodations at Tallassee do not include cabins, like those at Sunshine, and all representatives will be cared for at the hotel.

The conference opens Saturday, September 5, and lasts until Monday morning. The programs include the opening program Saturday night, sunrise service Sunday morning, and the meetings of various committees and cabinets Sunday afternoon. In general the conference will be the same as it was last year, and the "Y's" are looking forward especially to this newly selected location.

ALUMNI VISITORS

During the last few days many many alumni and former students have revisited the Hill. One of the first of this commencement rush of visitors was Merlin Usner, of Idaho. Margaret Haynie, Edith Nash, Vera Boyd and Louise Carson were all here by the early part of last week.

Among the more recent arrivals are Jesse Pierce, Virginia Pearson, and Ed Driscoll and wife, who returned to Maryville together. Both Jesse and Ed were head cheerleaders in their day, besides being prominent in other fields of student activity. Lucy Horton was here to help in the program of the graduation exercises of the Music Deparment Saturday evening. Other alumnae were Happy Farnum, Alvira Alexander, Mary Clopton and Faith Taylor.

Thomas Dixon, who for two years was one of the best known campus characters in Maryville, has also returned to see his brother George and former classmates.

BAINONIAN INSTALLATION

The new officers of Bainonian underwent most torturous treatment before they were officially installed last week. The clattering, grinding political machine behind the scenes was to blame for it all, although this marvelous piece of machinery is due much credit for its transforming powers.

The first victim was Billy Crawford, the retiring president. After terrific rattling and crunching noises, out came Irish Terry, the new president at the other end of the machine. The powers of the monster were not limited to making much out of little, for out of one program secretary it made two; and out of one treasurer, a critic, a poster chairman and another treasurer. When all bruises were taken care of, the officers were duly installed by the repetition of the pledge.

ATHENIAN ELECTION

May 23—At their regular weekly meeting tonight the Athenian Literary Society elected officers for the first term of next year. George Osborne, newly elected president of the Class of '32, was chosen president of the society. The other officers are:

Vice President—Clarence Bratschie
Recording Secretary—Robt. Wallace
Treasurer—Harry Wood
Program Secretaries—William Hannah and Hubert Duncan
Critics—Junius Allison and Richard Orr
Editor—Reeder Carson
Sergeant-at-Arms—Thos. Cooper

Expression Recital In Chapel Tonight

Twelve diplomas will be presented tonight to the graduates in expression at the graduation exercises in Voorhees Chapel. An unusually attractive prgram of music and readings will be presented at eight o'clock, to which everyone is cordially invited.

The program will be opened by the String Ensemble. Mrs. Nellie Caldwell Morton will read a modern play, "Let Us Be Gay" by Rachel Crothers. Jane Duke, representing the graduating class, will read a cutting from "The Vagabond King" and Ann Smartt and Norma Spilatore will sing two duets taken from the same operetta. Mrs. Nita Eckles West, Head of the Expression Department will present the diplomas.

Those graduating are the following: Esther Horton, Louise Marley, Mildred Crawford, Alice Renegar, Jane Duke, Mary Lovette, Elizabeth Wilbar, Dorothy Marshall, Kathryn Kizer, Mildred MacKenzie, Louise Avery and Lavinia Jones.

BIOLOGY CLASS FOLLOWS BLIND STUDENT'S TYPING

Yale University Professor Discovers New Escape From Honor Code

(From "The Gamecock")

Adding to the long list of methods used by students to pass examinations by other than their own knowledge, a Yale professor in biology reveals that his class had been gaining unheard-of high averages by following the tapping of the portable typewriter of a blind student in the class.

The blind student used his typewriter to answer the true and false questions in the weekly oral quiz. The less studious members of the class began to rely upon the ability and work of their sightless colleague listening for his answers. Two taps signified a "no" while three indicated "yes."

For three weeks the general average of the class in these particular quizzes was phenomenal. The professor demonstrated the basis of the inflated average by asking his blind student to reverse his answers, tapping "no" when he meant "yes." Possessing a sense of humor, he based the final marks for the term on the average between the extremely high marks prior to the discovery, and the low average following it.

PI KAPPA DELTA FROLIC

May 22—Mud, crevices, skinned elbows, hamburgers, marshmallows and songs were the main features of Pi Kappa Delta's trip through Sheep Pen Cave and the camp-fire supper which followed.

Under the chaperonage of Coach Queener the college debaters traveled to and from the cave in a straw lined truck in true mountain-hike fashion. Under the direction of Ella Shields and Harry Mathias—the freshman debaters went along,—the crowd serenaded the countryside from Maryville to the cave and did choral homage to the moon. Under the experienced guidance of the agile Don Buchanan, everybody managed to squeeze through the cave.

SPANISH CLUB

The members of the Club Espanol elected the following persons to form the "junta directiva" during the next year:

President—Bob Overly
Vice President—Edith Kitts
Secretary-Treasurer—Louise Cline
Program Secretaries— Bill Renegar and Majorie Gould
Editor—Dorothy Casseres

Beginning next year the club is going to put into effect the rule admitting second year B students as probation members during the first semester. The club expects to have a larger membership and a better club in all respects next year.

ROOM RESERVATIONS

To assist girls in making room reservations for next year the College announces the following plan as to the occupancy of the three girls' dormitories:

PEARSONS HALL—All of the Senior and Junior girls and as many as necessary or possible of the Sophomore girls.

BALDWIN HALL— All Sophomore girls who are not in Pearsons and all Freshman girls who are not in Memorial.

MEMORIAL HALL— Freshman girls only.

Freshmen-Juniors Tie In Swim Meet

The Freshman swimming team came out on top in the interclass meet which was concluded Saturday night, May 23 by scoring on an even basis with the Junior team. The Frosh had previously tied with the Seniors, who had beaten the Juniors in the preceding meet. The Freshmen were declared winners. At the end of the first meet the Freshmen and Juniors had scored 21 points each to 20 1-2 for the Seniors and 8 1-2 for the Sophs.

The Freshman team was counted out of the final meet until the very last event. The Juniors and Seniors had everything breaking their way but the Frosh came through in the relay and took first place to gain a deadlock with the Juniors and nose out the Seniors. Paul Young was the individual star for the Frosh, coming through as anchor man in the relay to overtake his opponents and splashing home ahead for the necessary points.

One of the best marks of the meets was made on the final night when Doug Shields, Junior star, plunged 47 1-2 feet.

FACULTY CHANGES NUMBER THREE FOR COMING YEAR

DEAN OF MEN RESIGNS

Miss Brown, Miss Holland Miss Howard Added To Faculty

Three new teachers have been added to the college faculty for the year 1931-32. They are serving in the departments of Home Economics, Music and Expression.

(1) Miss Clara Jane Brown, of Cushing, Oklahoma, becomes Professor of Home Economics and head of the Department. Her special training has been in the field of textiles, clothing, and related arts.

Miss Brown receved her Bachelor of Science degree from Oklahoma A. and M. College and her Master of Science degree from Iowa State College at Ames. She has had experience teaching hom economics in both high school and college. Last year she was head of the Home Economics Department at Oklahoma Panhandle A. and M. College, Godwell, Oklahoma.

Miss Brown and Miss Gerturde E. Meiselwitz will be the teacher in the Department. Miss Meiselwitz, served with great acceptability as head last year but it became necessary to have a head who possesses a Master's degree. Mrs. Smith rendered a timely and much appreciated service as teacher in the Department last year.

(2) Miss Susan Logan Howard, of Paris, Kentucky, is the new teacher of Piano in the position made vacant by the resignation of Mrs. McCall.

She has an academic diploma and a Bachelor of Music degree from the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music. She has had college teaching experience on the faculty of William Woods (Junior) College, Fulton, Missouri.

(3) Miss Wilhelmina Holland, of Seale, Ala., will teach Expression in the position made vacant by the resignation of Mrs. Veech, and will also be Assistant Matron of Memorial Hall.

This is a home coming for Miss Holland for she held a similar position at Maryville for three years between 1921 and 1924. She comes back to us from Martha Washington Junior College at Abingdon, Virginia, where she has been teaching since

Women Of College Organize "M" Club

An "M" Club for women proficient in athletics is in the process of organization. The first meeting of the proposed club was called for Wednesday night by Mildred Purviance, assistant in the department of physical training.

Membership is to consist of those women who have earned a letter or a letter and a sweater in the point system of women's athletics. Although the membership may seem somewhat restricted, it is deemed best in order that club membership may stand as a goal for those interested in athletics. It is hoped that this "M" Club will encourage outside interest and additional participation in women's athletics on the campus.

A committee consisting of Edith Kitts, Mary Gamble, Blanche Wilson, and Mildred Purviance has been appointed to draw up plans for formal organization of the club.

At present the charter members are, Edith Kitts, Iva Babcock, Julia Terry, seniors; Inez Hamrick, Mary Gamble, Mildred Purviance, juniors, Blanche Wilson, Mollie Little and Kathryn Wayland, Sophomores.

Sept .18.—The sophomore class held two mtetings last week. The first, held Wednesday, was to elect a president and the second meeting was to elect Student Council members. David McArthur was chosen for the new president. The student council members are Geraldine Smith, Carrie Lou Tweed, Walter Pippert, and Richard Orr. Don Buchanan and Bob Rule were elected for Athletic Director and Editor, respectively.

FOOTBALL SCHEDULE

With the scalp of the L. M. U. Rail Splitters tucked safely under their belts, the Highlanders turn their attention to the remainder of the schedule and one wee squint at the rough and rocky path ahead convinces everyone that the Maryville boys have a nice little job on their hands. Here 'tis:

Sept. 26—Tennessee—There.
Oct. 3—Kentucky—There.
Oct. 9—Union—Here.
Oct. 16—Tenn. Wesleyan—Here.
Oct. 23—Howard—Here.
Oct. 31—Milligan—There.

Nov. 13—Lenoir Rhyne—There.
Nov. 21—Carson-Newman — Due Here.

Y.W.C.A. Plans Under Way For 1931-1932

From the moment the first new girl stepped on the college campus, the Y. W. C. A. dates its active work for this year, and the beginning of its plans extend even before that.

During the first week of school the Y. W. activities were carried forward by the work of "big sisters" and Gamma Leaders, and the consequently newly formed friendships all culminated in the 'Y' Hobo party last Saturday night in the Gym. On this occasion both new and old girls were brought into closer contact through the friendly atmosphere from a combination of stunts, songs, watermelon, and a campfire.

The following Monday all the new girls were formally introduced to the College Woods on their Nu Gomma breakfast hike. It has been further learned that everyone present renewed old acquaintances with the outdoor flavor of bacon and eggs cooked in a frying pan in the woods on an early morning.

The first reguar meeting of the Y. W. C. A. was held last Sunday afternoon, at which time a number of plans for the year were explained to a large group. It is hoped that this attendance is indicative of a broad interest in "Y" programs for the year, for the success of the meeting depends entirely upon the members reception and reaction.

Girls, this is your Y. M. C. A. we are talking about. Come and get acquainted with her. She has a plan and a purpose you'll heartily agree with, and she will do you good.

Dan Cupid Invades Collegiate Ranks

Maryville College is again "Marryville" as the season's cry of weding invitations and announcements is harvested and garnered.

Music from the golden wedding bells first reached our ears from Middletown, Ohio, where Miss Willie Nell Harrold, '30, and Hayden Lasater, '30, were married on June 3 They are now at home in Joyland, Pennsylvania, where Hayden is pastor of the Presbyterian Church.

The next June wedding was on June 4, when Miss Hope Snyder was married to George Ross at pretty wedding in the College Woods. Hope was a member of the class of '31, and her many friends will be interested in learning that Mr. and Mrs. Ross are students in the University of Oklahoma Medical School.

New Providence Presbyterian Church was the scene of a lovely wedding on September 5, when Miss Virginia Pearson, '30, became the bride of Jesse Pierce, '30. After the reception the couple left for San Anselmo, California, where Mr. Pierce will be a student in the theological seminary.

Members of the falucty will remember Miss Virginia Paulsell, of the class of '26, who was on September 12 married to T. H. Stallinger.

Miss Frances Davis, of Chicago, was married to Dr. Wilson McTeer, of the M. C. Class of '25, on July 3. Dr. McTeer and his bride were in Maryville during their bridal tour. They are now at home in Detroit.

Members of the faculty and alumi will be interested in hearing of the marriage of Miss Elizabeth Brookes,

COLLEGE SPENDS UNSPARINGLY FOR NEW IMPROVEMENTS

CHANGES GALORE SEEN

Pearsons, Anderson Daze Old Students On Return

Under the supervision of Treasurer Proffitt and Engineer "Brownie," repairs and remodeling have made the cmpus a busy place during the past two months. Some of the notable improvements are as follows:

The Treasurer's office has been completely remodeled and decorated, the office formerly occupied by Miss Clemmie Henry torn out, a private conference room for the Treasurer built in part of its space, and a modern steel counter installed across the front of the main office. The woodwork has been painted ivory, and the floor covered with heavy linoleum.

The front and back halls of Anderson have been replastered and painted; the old green woodwork is now gray; new light fixtures are being installed.

The large room on the first floor of Anderson has been cut up into office and conference rooms with a rather stately hall down the center. The Student-Help Secretary will occupy two of these rooms and the printing shop one. The largest will be a Directors' and Faculty Conference room. For the present there will be one vacant office. There is still some work to be done in these offices. The room now occupied by the printing offcie will be used as a classroom.

One of the most important additions is the large steel and concrete fireproof vault which has been built in the dark end of this old Anderson Hall room. The vault door opens

College Maids Have Prosperous Summer Receive New Orders

Mrs. Herbert Hoover, Jr., bought this summer one of the hand made quilts which the College Maid Shop sells. The quilts are of authorized early American design and are made for the Shop by the women of the Meadow Presbyterian Church ,near Knoxville.

Among the patterns which the College Maids have added to their line during this summer are attractive new spring designs, whih double-cross in front in the approved manner, and children's hostess pajamas. Misses Ruth Lloyd, Kitty Stidham, and Peggy Howell have appeared on the campus wearing them.

New one - piece pajamas with appliques in harmonizing or contrasting colors are to be had in sizes fitting college girls.

White broadcloth pajamas for men are to be featured next summer by the Shop. One Knoxville customer

Literary Society Welcome

WELCOME TO THETA

Hello Everybody! This is station T-H-E-T-A broadcasting greetings to the new girls. We are on the air every Saturday night at 6:45 with a snappy, peppy program. Be sure to visit our studio on second floor Pearsons and get our program direct over our Blue and White loudspeaker.

This is Naomi Willingham announcing and bidding the new girls welcome to the "Happy Sisters" on College Hill.

ATHENIAN

To every new student Athenian Literary Society extends a most hearty welcome. Of course the old students are welcome, too, but after having been in Athenian Hall once, one knows he is welcome without being told.

There is a warm fellowship that exists between the members of Athenian and every new student is invited to share it. Come out and get acquainted.

GEORGE OSBORNE, Pres.

WELCOME TO BAINONIAN:

To all new girls, both young and old
Bainonian offers a wealth untold
Of friendships strong and hearts most true
Come see what we will do for your.
We'll travel far, we'll travel wide
Bainonian sisters side by side.
We welcome you, dear new girls to
To spend your days in Bainonian Hall.

JULIA TERRY, Pres.

ALPHA SIGMA

All new students are most cordially invited to Alpha Sigma Hall, Saturday, Sept. 19, for Alpha Sigma's opening night.

A snappy program has been arranged by the program secretary featuring a special two-act play. Every new student is urged to be present. An added attraction will be the refreshments following the program.

Don't forget to be at Alpha Sigma Saturday night. The meeting starts at 7:15 o'clock and an evening of fun and fellowship is promised all those who attend.

Dr. J. C. Barnes Dies Sunday Enroute From Toronto To Maryville

DEAN EMERITUS MARYVILLE COLLEGE ATTENDING PSYCHOLOGICAL CONVENTION AT TIME OF DEATH; LOSS DEEPLY FELT IN COMMUNITY

DR. J. C. BARNES

In Service At Maryville Thirty-Nine Years—Head Psychology Department Ten Years. Dean Of College Seventeen Years. Wrote Many Articles And Pamphlets. Students Pay Tribute. Funeral Held In Chapel Wednesday. Interment At Grand View Cemetery.

The death of Dr. Jasper Converse Barnes, Dean Emeritus of Maryville Colllege, came as a shock to the members of the college group and to his many friends outside the college. He died en route from Toronto, Canada, where he had been attending a meeting of psychologists, to Maryville, on the train just outside Cincinnati on Sunday, September 13.

Dr. Barnes was a few days over seventy years of age at the time of his death, having given thirty-nine years of his very active and productive life in service at Maryville College. His service at Maryville College is as follows: From 1892 until 1901 he was principal of the preparatory department and professor of education; in 1901 he became acting professor and in 1903, professor of phychology and political science; since 1920 he has been professor of psychology and education, and from 1914 until forced to lay down the active duties of the office at the beginning of 1931, he was dean of the College. At his death he was in point of service the senior member of the faculty.

Dr. Barnes was born at Meigsville, Ohio, August 28, 1861 in which state he received the greater part of his education. In addition to his elementary schooling, he attended Muckinguln Valley Normal School, and in 1886 graduated from Marietta (Ohio) Academy. Marietta College awarded him the A. B. degree in 1890 and the A. M. degree three years later. Post graduate work was done at Cornell University, the University of Wooster, and the University of Chicago; he received the Ph. D. degree From the University of Chicago and from Wooster. In 1918 Maryville College conferred upon him the honorary degree of LL.D.

Many Vacancies On Echo Staff To Be Filled Next Week

Staff Editor, Assoiate, Cub Fail To Report This Year

There are several vacancies on the staff of The Highland Echo because of the inability of former staff members to return to Maryville this year.

The failure of Winn Barr to return to college makes a vacancy in a staff editorship position which is to be filled by a student of junior or senior classification. This position will probably be filled by one of the junior associates, Roberta Robinson or Bob Stevenson, thus leaving one junior associate position to be filled. A place on the staff as sophomore cub is also available because of the absence of Mary Eloise Harmon who was elected to that position last May.

Any students desiring to compete for such vacancies as those named must submit an application to any staff member before noon in Tuesday, September 22. In this application the student must state his qualifications for membership, such as, experience on high school or college paper, particular line of interest and type of writing in which he is most proficient. Any student of proper classification, whether a former staff member or not, may present an application.

The Committee on Selection will meet on Tuesday or Wednesday for the purpose of electing students to fill the vacancies.

Y.M.C.A. Begins Year With Annual Pow-Wow

The Y. M. C. A. started its year's activities last Saturday night with the annual Pow-wow in the college woods. With the aid of the moonlight and a few scattered flash lights fellows marched down into the woods where a roaring fire awaited them. After short talks by President Teffeteller, Jimmy Brown, and Coach Honaker, the group was entertained by a varied program of music and comic skits. The evening was brought to a highly successful close with a "sumptuous" watermelon repast.

The Y. M. C. A. wishes to announce to all new men that the Fellowship Club will be organized during the coming week for the purpose of getting the new men bettar acquainted with each other. Further announcements will be made later. All fellows are invited to visit the "Y" reading and recreation room during their spare time and get acquainted with the rest of the boys, as well as to enjoy the privileges of recreation and entertainment offered.

The first meeting of the Knoxville Club was held in Pearsons Parlor, Tuesday night, September 15. The following officers were elected for the year.

President—Renny Tubbs.
Vice President—Hazel Garner.
Sec. and Treas.—Elizabeth Peterson.

Bainoian And Theta Stage Rush Weeks

"Did you go Bainonian or Theta" "What made you join that one!" "How did you decide?"

These are some of the remarks that in just three weeks will be made to every new girl. The two societies have extended all their efforts toward these two "rush weeks" that everyone is hearing so much about, and the results have been surprising.

Theta's week, full of Cinderellas and Fairy Godmothers and Magic wands, and even a Calendar Tea, will have its grand finale Monday night in the Happy Sisters' "Fairy Garden," which is located in the gym, and is open to the public at 8 o'clock. Everyone is invited to this formal opening, and is promised, on attendance, the sight of weird gnomes, the sound of fairy music, the sense of a mysterious atmosphere lurking round an old enchanted well; and, finally an introduction to the Queen of the Fairies herself. But Fairies won't let you write about them; so come and see for yourself!

The very next day, Tuesday, Bainonian rush week begins, with its final program promised for the following Saturday. Plans are shrouded in secrecy, but we are told to expect a bigger and better program. Peanuts! "Did someone say peanuts?" You know, that's Bainonian's watch word. Well, perhaps it won't be peanuts this year. Wait and see!

On the Saturday night following Bainonian's opening night, all new girls will have the opportunity of joining one of these two societies. That is an exciting and unprophetable time. New girls, you are making history! Which will it be?

WELCOME

September is the time of year when college "welcomes" seem to be in order. Welcomes have been issued from the offices of the president and the dean, from the dean of women and the dean of men, from the president of the Y. W. C. A. and the Y. M. C. A.

There are the more personal welcomes of old students to the new, and handshakes, a familiar howdy, and hail fellow well met. The business stores in town have done their share of welcoming back the old students and welcoming to the town of Maryville the new students. All of these various means of welcome help to exemplify the spirit that is carried throughout the year on the Maryville campus. A verification of this statement could be made from any upperclassman.

And so, we, tht members of The Highland Echo staff, wish to extend our welcome to all students, both old and new, and wish for everyone a most happy and successful college year.

JASPER CONVERSE BARNES

With the passing of Dean Emeritus Jasper Converse Barnes the world, as well as Maryville College, has lost a powerful foundation stone in its edifice of education.

The name of Dean Barnes was known not only to Maryville College and the State of Tennessee but was common property of the world at large. His words were eargerly heard alike by the average man and the great. His opinions were sought by those men directing the future of our educational system and his frequent papers, written for technical societies and publications, always enjoyed the widest comment. The many memberships in societies, aesociations and technical organizations speak amply of the esteem in which he was held by his co-workers.

A thorough student to the end, Dr. Barnes never fell prey to that lethargic state of unprogressiveness which ensnares so many who attain the mature age reached by the Dean.

He leaves a place in the scheme of things that will be truly hard to fill and likewise leaves behind a life well filled with service, sacrifice to principle and consecration to duty that we may well attempt to emulate.

OUR POLICY

We have a policy, in fact several policies with regard to the publication of the College Paper. It is the endeavor of the staff to make the paper primarily of, by, and for the student body. There are, of course, several reservations to this rather general statement as there are exceptions to every good rule.

Student opinion is desired and solicited in very department of the paper, although at times modifications of current opinions are expressed because of the wide distribution of the College weekly, and the consequential misrepresentation on the part of misinterpretation on the part of some of the readers.

Suggestions for improvement are welcome at all times for the consideration of the staff. For the most part a trial and error method is followed regarding various changes that are suggested from time to time. Perfection is indeed too high an aim for any college staff to aspire to, and there would be nothing for which to work if such an ideal state were reached.

We shall make mistakes this year, of course. No one is perfect, and ameteur journalists err frequently.

However, let us say at the start, that we, as staff members of The Highland Echo, are earnestly trying to make this a representative publication of Maryville College.

HIGHLAND FLINGS

1st Student: "Where do you sit at the games?"

2nd Student: My seat is right on the 50 yard line."

1st Student: "Goodness, doesn't the whitewash ruin your trousers."

"Lady: "Are you a doctor?"

Drug Clerk: "No ma'am, I'm a fizzician."

"If Minnie in Indian means water, what does Minnesota mean?"

"Aw, don't be dumb all your life, it means sota water."

Wicks in the dead of night in memorial:

"Wake up, quick, wake up!"

"Can't."

"Why not?"

"Ain't sleeping."

College is largely a matter of give and take—give money and take examinations.

MARRIAGES

'28, and Edward Conrad, '28, which was an event of September 4. They are making their home in Baltimore.

Of wide interest to students, faculty, and alumi was the marriage of Miss Jane Duke and Jack Cotton. Mrs. Cotton was a popular member of the class of '32, and had won wide recognition on he stage of Maryville College. The groom, who graduated in '29, was at one time editor of the Echo and has many friends in Maryville. The couple are at home in Columbus, Ohio, where both are attending Ohio State University.

CHANGES IN FACULTY

leaving Maryville.

Miss Holland received her Bachelor of Arts degree from Dalton Female College and her Bachelor of Oratory degree from Leland Powers School, Boston. She has also taken work several different summers at Harvard University and has traveled abroad.

Professor Howell, who for more than a year has carried the burden of being Dean of Men in addition to that of being head of the Chemistry Department, has given up the dean's work that he may devote his time more fully to his department. He very generously agreed to serve as dean of men in an emergency created by the failure in health of Dean of Men Souder during the year of 1929-30. He deserves and has the sincere gratitude of the College.

OPEN FORUM

Unnecessary Noise in the Dining Hall.

A student is reported as saying concerning our recent dining hall problem (which isn't whether the boys should or shouldn't wear golf hose with knickers that he respected the rights of others enough that he felt it his duty to keep absolute silence during the period devoted to grace.

This student is not alone. Last year the epidemic began among the studetns of making noise during the saying of Grace, and for the last two months of school the "amen" could not be heard because half of the students were preparng to be seated when it was being said.

We could suggest to the perpetrators of this unpleasant act that they consider the influence they have on the new class. It can well be remembered that the only example set for freshmen is the example set by the upperclassmen.

It appears that if the "hurry up" students are allowed to make noise during this period—a supposedly sacred institution—they will continue to do so. It is not known whether or not this sort of thing can be stopped. However, in respect to those who want silence because they really are thankful, it is suggested that the management of the dining hall deal with this problem which deserves immediate attention.

Y. W. C. A. STORE SHOWS PROFIT

Under the capable management of Georga Burke the "Y" Store in Pearsons cleared $338 last year. George also collected $11 from notes which were lent to students attending the Blue Ridge Conference. This enabled her to place $453 on savings account. Two new additions to the store last year were a frigidaire and a glass show case.

Georga, with Ruth Hurlee as assistant, has opened the store this year with many varieties of toilet articles, candy, cakes, crackers, ice cream and cold drinks.

The profits of the store go to the Building Fund and to send students to the Blue Ridge Conference.

Paul Edris, at pep meeting: "I once met a U. T. girl down in Florida who said that Maryville had the best supporters she ever saw."

Highlanders Display Unexpected Form In Opening Season With Decisive Victory Over Conference Foe

L.M.U. Succumbs To Brilliant Running Attack And Loses 25—0

Superiority of Maryville College football teams over those from Lincoln Memorial University is undisputed after the Highlanders 25 to 0 victory over the Rail Splitters Friday night. Never in the history of athletic relations between the two schools has the team from the Cumberland Mountains at Harrogate, Tenn., been able to take the measure of the Highlanders.

Maryville supporters have ever reason to feel encouraged over the outlook for the 1931 football season. Early in the season the loss of lettermen was so heavy that many of the home town fans feared that the Scots might even be inferior to college teams of their own size but those who saw them perform last night have no doubt in their minds that this years' team is no different from teams of the past. True they will not be able to stack up against Tennessee and Kentucky but so far as Carson-Newman and a few others are concerned, that's a different story entirely.

The Maryville team lost no time in getting the jump on Coach Alexander's men and shortly after the game started, Capt. Lea Calloway tucked the ball under his strong left wing and smashed off tackle, cut back, and behind a screen of wonderful interference, galloped 40 yards across the goal line for the first touchdown of the season and one of the first in Southern college football. It is quite fitting that the Maryville leader should score the first one of the year.

The Maryvillians scored another one in the second canto. Capt. Lea passed 25 yards to Easy White to place the ball on the fifteen yard line. After a series of short line plays, Woodard crashed thru the center of the line to put the L. M. U. boys twelve points in arrears. "Even Stephen" Boretsky scored the third one when he sneaked through the center of comparatively small L. M. U. line and across after Joe Woodard had come through with a miraculous 65 yard kick. An unknown freshmen by the name of Guinn, from Lebanon, Tenn., pounced on the ball behind the goal line for the final score after the entire Maryville line had swarmed all over the L. M. U. kicker and blocked his punt.

The game saw something like 35 men clad in the oronge of our Maryville take part. Coach Honaker kept substitutes going in the game so fast during the late periods that Coach Alexander thought that he was turning the entire student body loose on his Rail Splitters. Every single man that took part in the fracas did his own individual duty and the result is that the Maryville coaches have quit singing the blues and can now be heard whisting "I'm sittin' on top of the world."

Statistics show that the Maryville team was vastly superior to the game little L. M. U. outfit in just about every department that you would care to mention. Game as they were, the boys from Harrogate could make only three first downs while the men of Honaker and Thrower registered nine. They made good six aerial heaves out of an unlucky 13 while Maryville succeeded in three, failed in one and had three grabbed by enemy players. The combined kicking efforts of Woodard and Calloway were good for an average of 40 yards per boot while Liebrock's averaged only 30 yards each. Maryville gained 75 yards on her two forward passes, L. M. U. only 50.

Here are a few things that are foremost in my mind which happened during the game: Calloway's forty yard run for the first score with Easy White taking out the safety man with a beautiful open field block—a savage tackle by Blundon Ferguson when the safety man attempted to return one of Woodard's kicks straight down the field—Boretsky's forty yard return of a punt on which Goose Allen, from Michigan, took out two would be tacklers with one smashing block—Maryville's miserable showing on making points after touchdown—Teffeteller refusing water during the middle of the second quarter, saying "we haven't done anything yet—Joe Woodard asking one of the reserves on the L. M. U. bench if the next play were going to be a pass—the freshmen boys being "suckers" to the old foot race "gag"—the infernal line which that freshman cheer leader handed the students in the lower end of the cheering action and th singing of the Alma Mater by the entire ssudent body as the team left the field, victorious in their first conference game.

SPORT SLANTS

By BOB RULE

Every year there is a flock of freshmen who come out for the football team, but it seems that there is a bigger and better looking bunch this year than I have ever seen before. And almost every year there is at least a couple of those supposedly green ones who make a really serious bid for a berth on the varsity team and this year, in that respect is no different to the rest.

This year there is a tough looking young hombre, who's paternal cognomen is Allen, who, it seems has his heart set on knocking one of the old men out of their jobs. Just what he has against these lettermen, I have not yet been able to learn, but for the life of Oscar and me, I can't figure out why he has so much against these veterans, for they are all pretty fair little football players.

But some how or other I am pulling for this Freshman bunch. I just sorta have a feelin' that some of them are destined to make good, and here's hoping they do. Freshmen, you are welcome to Maryville ,the town of schools, churches and filling stations.

We will have to hand it to Mr. F. L. Proffitt, the college treasurer, for the way he co-operates in athletics. As you all probably know, Maryville College positively does not grant scholarships for athletic ability and this fact no doubt keeps several good athletes out of Maryville. As you all remember, Obie Wilson, fleet footed little half back, was forced to leave school last week for pecuniary reasons but Mr. Proffitt, an ardent football fan himself, made it his business to see that Wilson was not permanently lost and so he is now back with us and Maryville's opponents will probably send Mr. Profitt a quart jar full of iodine diluted with carbolic acid in token of their appreciation of his efforts.

If a brass rimmed cuspidor were being given for the world's best ""nick-namer," I would push my way to the front and nominate Mr. Robert C. Thrower, Maryville's football coach, Spanish teacher and moonshiner de luxe. Just to mention a few, it was Mr. Thrower who put the "Smile" to Richardson, the "Nine" to Byar, the "Legs" to Merrick and a number of others. I can picture Mr. Thrower blushingly accepting the nomination and smiling broadly in winning the victory.

Hooray! Only ten more weeks 'till we play Carson-Newman.

CHANGES IN THE DINING HALL

The plan for the boarding club this year is to have a rotating of all of the tables. Every week, or every two weeks, everyone will move to an adjoining table. This will continue, if the plan works successfully, so that each group will sit at every table in the course of a year.

The new system is being introduced in the hope of breaking the monotony for the waitresses who have to wait at the same table all season. It is being used also as an aid in balancing the work of the waitresses. Each girl will have had an equal amount of work to do by the time the school year has ended.

At the present time the management of the hall is having difficulty in finding enough places for all of the boarders at the hall. There have been a few more students in search of food than the club could supply making it necessary often to set extra tables.

This year the plan of eating will be slightly different from that of former years. The dinner will be served at night with a lunch at the noon hour. Because of the large number of students working in the kitchen this plan will not involve a very drastic change.

The regular Wednesday dinner with the accompanying program will be reestablished as soon as everyone has been assigned to a table.

DEATH OF DR. BARNES

His scholarship was widely recognized. He was a member of Phi Beta Kappa, of Phi Delta Kappa honor fraternity in education, the American Psychological Association, the National Educational Association, the American Eugenics Society, and the International Congress of Psychology; he was a Fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science; from 1913 to 1919 he was a member of the Rhodes Scholarship Committee for Tennessee; he was president of the Southern Society for Philosophy and Psychology in 1915, and of the Association of East Tennessee Colleges in 1917-1918.

Dean Barnes gave expression to his scholarship first of all in his teaching, but also in address, papers before learned societies, and in published articles.

Dr. Barnes united with the New Providence Presbyterian Church of Maryville in 1892 and was a Deacon in the church for twenty-three years. He was a member of the fraternal orders of Masons and Odd Fellows, and for many years he has been a director of the Bank of Maryville. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Alice Mary Hopkins Barnes, to whom he was married in 1890; his son, Mark Hopkins Barnes, who is completing his medical training at New Haven, Connecticut; three brothers, and one sister.

The funeral was held Wednesday, the service being at two o'clock in the afternoon. In order that the student body might pay tribute to Dr. Barnes, classes were adjourned at 11:40 and the students formed in two lines extending from Dr. Barnes' residence on Indiana Avenue to Vorhees Chapel, between which the procession passed. The procession was headed by Dr. Lloyd and Dr. Wilson, followed by six honorary pall bearers, six faculty pall bearers, and a special guard consisting of twenty-two students chosen discriminatingly from the four college classes, which walked on each side of the hearse.

From twelve o'clock until two o'clock the body lay in state in the Chapel, with members of the special guard in attendance. The platform was banked with many beautiful flowers given by various college and town organizations.

The order of service which began at two o'clock was as follows:

Invocation—Dr. Ralph W. Lloyd.

The Scripture—Dr. Samuel Tyndale Wilson.

Prayer—Dr. W. H. Crothers.

Music—"Lead Kindly Light,"
(Octette of students)

Biographical Sketch—Dr. W. P. Stevenson.

Address—Dr. R. W. Lloyd.

Music—"Abide With Me."
(The Octette)

Benediction—Dr. S. T. Wilson.

Interment was made at Grand View Cemetery where a short service was conduced by Dr. Crothers and Dr. Lloyd.

As yet no one has selected to assume Dr. Barnes duties as head of the psychology department.

CAMPUS IMPROVEMENTS

into the main hall opposite the dean's office. Some days still will be required for the concrete walls to dry fully.

Carnegie Hall has received a lion's share of attention. All outside woodwork has been painted; all halls and bathrooms and about thirty individual rooms have been painted.

Memorial Hall has been given two coats of outside paint, new back door and steps and other burnishings. Two partitions have been removed to enlarge the reception room space.

The halls and some other interior parts of Science Hall were painted.

In Pearsons th dormitory halls, the bathrooms, and some of the rooms have been painted.

The dining room and kitchen have been completely redecorated. Electric refrigeration of the most modern and in two large units. The largest unit is on the back screened porch, and the other is Miss Coulter's office.

A new concrete walk, one foot wider and considerably higher than the old one, has been laid from Pearsons to the book store. Also several new sections were put into the walk running from the back door of Baldwin.

Due to lack of time, several repairs projected were not reached; some of them will be made during the fall. In addition to the things named above minor repairs were made in all buildings, the heating plant overhauled, and men kept busy all summer on the campus grass and hedges.

OBSERVATIONS

On Freshmen
Concerning "Tiny"
About Don And Wes

After this I behold and, lo, a great multitude which no man could number, from good states, and cities, and Pennsylvania stood before the college, anxious to enter therein. It was our freshman class coming in to learn, to work, to play and to live. This they found out after having been here for some time.

It is a pleasure to have the new students in our midst. Especially is this true for the first two weeks, during which time they get accustomed to a number of things and get broken in for the school year. (We take this means of reminding the freshman boys that the "broken in" part of the orientation program does not end until the last Kangaroo court has closed its doors.)

Some new students, because of some one outstanding act they might perform, stand head and shoulders above their fellow-freshmen. Their methods of attaining this distinction proves most interesting. The most enviable achievement, of course is to "rate with the faculty. Only one girl has this distinction as yet and that she won through an error—we hope. Dr. McMurray did intend his "Hello Kidd' greeting for a man by that name, but through a failure to time his shot well the remark was forthwith received by a girl following closely behind Kidd. She thinks our faculty members to be fresh, which gives the faculty and the frosh that much in common.

Becoming accustomed to one's new school is a bit disconcerting, and sometimes it has a tendency to frustrate even the most patient of our elders. One of Professor Ellis' early season responsibility is to instruct each new student that "silence must reign in the library." He has had an unusually heavy season of instruction this fall.

Tiny Waters, our frosh instructor, carried the name of "Hodunk" for a few days, but through the kindness of upperclassmen he has had his right name restored. Tiny performed his good act for the day at the first of the year by telling one of our yearlings to "Hey Buddy, check your hat" just before entering Pearson's filling station.

On one of the registering days a freshman tried to stop an aged upperclassman from preceding him through the door of Thaw. Upon learning that this person had gone through that door for "the last twenty years" the student let the upperclassman pass without any more words. It is wonderful, the effect a bald head or a few gray hairs will get you, even if it works on freshman classes only.

Lack of writing space stops us short here. It is necessary that we stay out of detail about the new boy who carried his freshman bible around for two weeks. They must have their freshman bible—so the catalogue says.

Perhaps some of the old students have noticed that spell of meekness that has come over both Wesley Culver and Don Briggs. It is a decidedly new thing and it is thought seriously that some freshmen must have contributed to the condition of these two young men.

Our frosh are of the upper two thirds. We can feel confident of their intelligence. We hope they will work, play, learn and live and have many visit in Carnegie kangaroo courts. Work or play, learn or live, or both, or all four, we wish our fellow students a bon voyage.

Still Feels

There are two kinds of men: Those who shudder to think what fools they once were, and those who haven't changed.—San Francisco Chronicle.

THE TRIUMVIRATE

It seems like old times to see and hear the entertaining trio on the chapel platform. Should we call them the golfers, the three musketeers, or the triangle, not of eternal denomination, however. We suggest that they give an exhibition on "How to Play Golf" on the proposed college golf course. Doubtless, by means of the admission each spectator would pay, the course would soon be a reality.

New Staff Members Selected For Echo Last Wednesday

Stevenson Advanced To Staff Editorship — Smith Elected Cub

The Committte on Selection for The Highland Echo met last Wednesday and made appointments to fill the vacancies created on the Echo staff by the failure on three members to return to school. Robert Stevenson was promoted from Junior Associate Editor to the position of Staff Editor, and Geraldine Smith was chosen as Sophomore Cub.

These appointments satisfactorily brought the Staff Editors to the required number of three, and the Sophomore Cubs to their full strength of six, but left two Junior Associate Editorships to be filled. It is planned to conduct tryouts during the next two weeks or so, at the end of which time two of the competitors will be formally appointed.

Those juniors who wish to enter the competition for the two positions on the staff should see Julia Terry, Managing Editor, at once, so that she may give them assignments over a period of two weeks. No other class members need apply, as these positions are solely for juniors.

No previous experience is necessary. Candidates will be judged on their general reportorial ability, which embraces fluency of style, ability to punctuate, etc., as well as their general ability to determine what is news and what is not.

Valuable Prizes Awards Offered During This Year

Students Are Urged To Enter As Many Contests As Possible

A member of valuable prizes were awarded last June to the winners of various contests carried on at Maryville annually. It is not too early to make announcement of these contests, which should claim the attention of a large number of students even this early in the year. Notice, new students and freshmen!

The Bates Oratorical Contest is open to the men of the Junior and Senior classes one year, and to the women of the same classes the next year. In 1932 the contest is open to women. In 1931 the prize was won by Roy Taylor, '31.

The T. T. Alexander Oratorical Prize Fund provides a prize of one hundred dollars in gold, annually, to be awarded to the winner of an oratorical contest conducted under the supervision of the department of Bible and Religious Education. The contest is open to men in 1932, and the subjects are the following: The Deity of Jesus Christ; Christ's Atonement for Sin; The Resurrection; and Salvation Through Faith. The winner of the contest in 1931 was Mildred Crawferd, '31.

The Bible and Religious Education Prize Foundation provides the Bates Bible Prize which is awarded annually for proficiency in Bible study.

The Alexander English Prize of about twenty five dollars is awarded annually to the member of the Senior class who makes the best four year record in English. In 1931 the winner was Hessie Keaton

Through A Mental Microscope

By One Who Can't Come Back

The town of Maryville is waking up, after a long, hot summer of deserted streets and stores. The students are coming back—by bus, by train, on foot, and in cars. They pour into the little station, the bus terminal; the streets are filled with them, all carrying baggage and laughing and greeting old friends and making the slightly bewildered, lonesome freshmen feel more at home by kindly questions and directions.

Up on the Hill the halls and rooms that have lain empty for three months are echoing to the many modulations and tones of several hundred boys and girls. Bump, bump, bump. Bang! Crash!—"Outta my way there!"—"Help me get this trunk up, will ya?" "—"Hello, there, old man. Where are you rooming?"—"Who's your old lady this year?—Carnegie.

Colorful, dainty rooms, some filled with a half-dozen chattering, laughing girls; others housing a lone- lonesome, red-eyed freshman.—Pennants, tennis racquets, open dresser and bureau drawers. — Color-schemes — Cans of paint, sometimes spotting the floor.—Curtain rods. Books. Clothes scattered about. —"Come in! Isn't this place a mess!"—Oh, isn't this cute! Look, Sally, we'll have to fix ours like this!"—Gossip of summer dates, clothes, schedules, room fixtures, that cute freshman.—Pearson, Baldwin, Memorial.

Twilight creeps over the Hill; lights flash on in the halls. The supper bell, the boys flocking over and the Memorial girls innocently going the boy's way. Some of the fellows have already sneaked past the bookroom before the bell rang. What a rush into the dining room, and for the long tables! The business of making up tables. So many boys—so many girls. Such and such a wairess. Reserved. "Sorry, but this is reserved." Clatter of knives and forks. Babble of five hundred voices. —Pearsons.

Now the football season begins. The first game on the lighted field at night. Chilly. A sea of faces above you as you search vainly for a little cleared space in the bleachers. Sudden quiet, then a yell growing into a roar as our boys trot out. Orange and Garnet! Quick, sudden yells, the cheerleaders leaping back and forth—all over the field it seems. Good old cheer leaders! Good old team! Good old game! Good old Maryville spirit! Crisp, fall weather now. All the Library Buys Many New Books During Summer Vacations

Chemistry Department Aided By Purchases; Many Novels Bought

The management of the Lamar Library went on a buying campaign during the summer months and added three hundred new and valuable books to its already rich supply of thirty thousand volumes. This is the largest number of books the library has purchased at one time for a number of years.

The newly added chemistry course, 111 and 112, necessitatted the purchase of a large number of reference books for library use. This course involves a great deal of outside reading, having much to do with the history of chemistry.

Twenty-four volumes of the American Statesman series were added for use in the history department. This number nearly completes the Statesman series, some of which were previously in stock. The latest edition of The Century Dictionary was purchased, and in addition the library added one volume each to the Dictionary of American Biographers and The Encyclopedia of Social Science. Several bound volumes of The Forecast and The Journal of Home Economics were purchased for use in the home economics department.

The number of books purchased for the other departments of the college was about the same as in former years. The English and Bible departments had the usual large number of books placed in stock.

Fiction, also, had its share in the new books. Eighteen or twenty volumes of good fiction were placed on the shelves through the liberality of the librarian.

Prof. C. D. Curtis Added To Staff Of Education Dept.

Well-Known Educator Comes To Fill Vacancy Left By Dr. Barnes

Maryville welcomes to her teaching force Professor Claude Davis Curtis, who for the time being will fill the place made vacant by the recent leath of Dr. Barnes. Professor Curtis comes to the Hill from Abingdon, Virginia, where he was for seven years president of Martha Washington College. He is at present associate president of Sullins College, with which Martha Washington College was recently merged.

Professor Curtis is not a stranger to Maryville and the vicinity. Born just outside of Maryville, he attended Hiwassee College at Madisonville, and was graduated in 1907 with the degree of Bachelor of Science. He took his graduate work at the University of Tennessee. He served as principal of the public schools of Friendsville for a year, and in 1908 was appointed head of the science department of the Maryville Polytechnic School. From 1914 until 1923 when he accepted the presidency of Martha Washington College, he acted as superintendent of the Maryville city shools.

Professor Curtis will teach three courses here. They are: Education 3d, A History of Education; course 33c, Methods of Teaching in High School; and Education 39x, a new course begun this year in the Psychology of Adolescence.

Miss Helen Gamble will give up certain courses in education and teach other courses in psychology which were to have been handled by Dr. Barnes.

Heat Waves—Terry

It seems only fair and just that a certain part of the Highland Echo be given to a discussion of the weather. We have no prophet on the Hill, merely eight hundred martyrs subject to the whims of the weather.

The weather is really a most important factor of the day. It must be either endured or enjoyed, and all kinds of blame are placed on this factor of nature to which the insignificant human being must adapt himself.

There are several evidences of heat on the campus which it might be well to mention. First of all, Pearsons Hall has an abundance of hot water. Never before, in the writer's experience, has hot water been permanently available. Even the depression has not affected the supply.

Another evidence of heat, or perhaps, an evidence of sympathy on the part of the senior class for its professor of theism, is Dr. Lloyd's removal of his coat, thus reducing the teaching load that rests on his presidential shoulders. He really looks fairly comfortable now, and at times increases this comfort by rolling his sleeves.

A screen door has been placed between Miss Molly's room and the second floor hall to relieve the heat problem and to keep a stray cat from getting her canary. By the way, have you heard of Pearsons' Menagerie which consists at present of one cat, one dog, two canaries, and one hundred thirty-five coeds? (But that would make another story.)

A further evidence of heat is the absence of our Wednesday evening

Maryville College Goes To Knoxville Today For Annual Tilt With U. T.

YEARLY FRAY GIVES PROMISE OF MANY SURPRISES AS TWO RELATIVELY UNMEASURED TEAMS CLASH AT 2:30 P. M.

Scotties Will Work Against Great Odds At Shields-Watkins Field

CALLOWAY CONFIDENT

A Special Train Will Carry Students; Many Go By Automobile

Today on Sields-Watkins Field in Knoxville the game which is in many ways the most important game of the football season is being played with the University of Tennessee.

Tennessee is one of the three S. I. A. A. teams on the Highlanders' schedule this year, and a lively scrap is anticipated. As the ECHO goes to press it is estimated that 250 people from Maryville will witness the thrilling spectacle. A large number left on the Southern train at 1 o'clock today, and were scheduled to arrive a little before two. Others went over in cars or hitch-hiked. The game was called at 2:30.

Maryville has one of the best teams she has ever produced, and the fellows went over with a do-or-die determination which spells havoc for the Volunteers.

Rivalry between Maryville and Tennessee is ancient and famous. Ever since 1905, except in the years of the World War, the two teams have been pitted against each other. Since 1911 the games have been played in Knoxville.

Each year sees an increased number of students from the Hill going over to see the game and back the team.

The three Southern Conference teams on Maryville's schedule this year are Tennessee, Kentucky, and Howard College. The Kentucky game will be played next week at Lexington. On Friday night, October 23, Howard willcom e here. The Highlanders have been playing Kentucky for a number of years, but last season was their first time to encounter Howard, and they lost a score of 6-16. The prospects for victory are much brighter this year.

At the time that the paper went to press it was too early to announce the score of this afternoon's game.

"Rush Week" Of Girls Societies Great Success

Theta Epsilon - Bainonian Make Heated Bid For New Members

Theta Epsilon and Bainonian "Rush Weeks" have caused new girls to ponder deeply. Theta or Bainonian.

Theta opened her program with a Calendar Tea. Tables were decorated to represent each month of the year and while tea was served the newest fall fashions were shown by Theta models. A fairy Godmother for each girl used her magic for Theta during the week by leaving notes and surprises for her little Cinderella. Her influence culminated in a Cinderella party for the new girls. Opening night for Theta meant a journey to Fairie Land with all its magic, where one encountered gnomes, princesses, and a Fairy Queen.

Bainonian "Rush Week followed. Almost everything Irish and green prevailed. A Shamrock Tea was arranged in order that the new girls might have the opportunity of meeting Patricia. An Irish program was given in honor of Patricia. Some of the new girls as "Irish potatoes" worried about their "eyes." The old Bainonians, as "eyes," managed to keep their identity unknown, yet called upon their "potatoes" with little gifts and surprise notes. The "potatoes" met their "eyes" at a party held for them. Opening night will mean Irish influence everywhere. Irish dances and songs will be used, and Bainonian "Rush Week" will be over.

Lyceum Program For Coming Year Brings Well Known Talent

Sister Of Prof. Lagerstedt Will Appear During Course

Under the direction of Prof. George D. Howell, the lyceum course planned for this year will bring three outstanding performances to Maryville College.

The De Luxe Artists-Singers will appear on November 19. They will present "Catehdral Memories," gems of sacred composition; "American Memories," ballads and heart songs of to-day and days gone by; "Concert Memories," grand opera, light opera, and modern melodies. The members of the group are Mary Krakowski, Alma King, Magdalene Massmen, Kenneth Morrow, Dan Leiner and Luigi Pupillo.

The Barere Little Symphony will appear on January 22, 1932. George Barrere, world-known flutist, will be soloist. A wood-wind quartet will also play. This orchestra has world-wide fame and according to Prof. Howell is the finest presentation that the Lyceum has yet offered.

The third part of the course will bring Miss Nan Lagerstedt to Maryville about February or March 1932. Miss Lagerstedt is a sister of Prof. Kenneth R. Lagerstedt of Maryville College. Her presentation will include impersonations and readings. Recently she appeared at Fishburne Military School, of Waynesboro, Va., and Virginia Polytechnic Institute, of Blacksburg, Va.

Through the fourth part of the course has not as yet been selected, Prof. Howell is trying to get the noted writer and philosopher Will Durant. It is hoped by many of the students that he will be successful in obtaining the services of this well-known man.

First Known Mint

The first mint is said to have been established by Syges in Lydia toward the end of the Eighth century B. C.

Miss Molly Talks To Echo Reporter Concerning Youth

Dean Of Women Expresses Interesting Views Regarding Young People

"The standards of the young people of today are sane," believes Miss Mary Ellen Caldwell, Dean of Women of Maryville College. "The highest and best is being sought, while the emphasis on physical well-being is such as was never before."

Concerning the spiritual side of "this younger generation", Miss Caldwell feels that, while more attention than ever is being given to the religious training of young people, there are many who will realize the meaning of religion only through experience.

In the placing of young persons in church life, the Dean of Women sees the Christian Endeavor Society as the means by which young people have been able to do work long before the customs of fifty years ago would have permitted.

With particular reference to Maryville College, Miss Molly added that although the college has remained conservative even during transitional periods, it has also tried to prove that God is truly important. The conservatism was needed to carry out that impression more fully, she explained.

Margaret Froneberger in education class, during a discussion of crime:

"'Well, Miss Gamble, what do you do about the criminal tendencies in your head?"

Miss Gamble (aghast): "Well, I hope I haven't any."

TO NEW STUDENTS

At some time in everyone's life there comes a period when adapation to conditions and conformity to existing standards becomes of paramount importance. Such a time has come to you who are the new members of the college family. It is fitting that you should recognize early in your college career the standards, customs, and traditions which you will be expected to meet and uphold while at this institution.

Maryville College does not seek to stifle individualism on the part of her students. In fact there are very few places where personal ability will receive the immediate and complete attention that it will here on the Hill, but only by conformity of the masses to discipline can individual freedom be obtained.

Because of this fact the college has formulated certain rules by which all must be guided in order to permit the exercise of personal freedom. These rules cannot be kept by just the "other fellow". A majority is not enough. You personally are charged with the observance of these regulations. Popular opinion demands that you observe the rules. You are now considered, and you actually are, men and women, in age. As you show your right to this name in actions, also, other privileges will be offered to you.

Again, Maryville College is proud of its record of the harmonious living of its students. Petty prejudices and minor disputes are considered too shallow. Greater differences are settled in a gentlemanly way, and no unfavorable aftermath results. You are expected to be a gentleman and to recognize the "other fellow" as a gentleman.

LET'S GO

For the first time in the four years that we have been here, Maryville is whipped before the game is called. There is is no denying the fact. We're Licked. One small questionable peek at that "unconquerable unbeatable, uncontrollable aggregation of beef, brawn, brains and unfettered lightning" that Coach Neyland has amassed has effectually removed the last vertebrae from our backs; the last vestige of a prop to hold our chins in a more nearly horizontal position.

From every quarter we hear the eternal and pessimistic remarks concerning the game with U. T. "Oh. They ought not to beat us over 60 points." "I hate to see the boys get butchered up that way." "Why do we have to play them anyway?" And so on ad infinitum. Our slumber is beginning to be deep and peaceful. It's actually pleasant to give in without a struggle now. Our actions and even our faces are beginning to show our comfortable resignation. From our chapel platform even comes those animated and pep-stirring words "Let's hope we make a few points and that the University doesn't pile up too big a score."

WAKE UP, Maryville. That spirit didn't paint those weather-beaten signs about the campus of 6-0; 0-0. They are NOT unbeatable. Is it possible that faster men go to the University? Is it true that larger men gravitate to the larger schools? Absurd. Any team that can make such a positive showing as the Scotties did against L. M. U. has unlimited possibilities. They aren't whipped so long as we aren't. Come on. Let's Go. Let's get something under our belts besides jelly; lets put that something back between our shoulders that this school has always had; let's sharpen our teeth—let's timber up our snarl—COME ON!!!

MEDICAL CLINICS

Free medical clinics were resumed at the college hospital last Friday afternoon. As for a number of years past Dr. A. M. Gamble, Dr. E. L. Ellis and Dr. McCulloch will be at the hospital at the appointed time. Any college person may go at these times for medical examination or consultation without cost.

The schedule is as follows:

Mondays at 3:00 P. M., Dr. Gamble.

Wednesdays at 3:00 P. M., Dr. Ellis.

Fridays at 3:00 P. M., Dr. McCulloch.

Miss Colvin Speaks To Volunteers

ROBISON-STUDENT VOLUNTEER

"I want you to talk Buffalo, eat Buffalo, and sleep Buffalo from now till Christmas," said Miss Thelma Colwin Sunday evening in a talk before the Student Volunteer Board of Maryville College.

Miss Colvin is state president of the Student Volunteer Movement in Tennessee. She was on the Maryville Campus last wek-end working and holding conferences with members of the organization.

On Sunday evening in her address she presented plans for the eleventh quadrenial convention of Student Volunteers and Christian Students, which will be held in Buffalo, N. Y., December 30, 1931 through January 3, 1932.

Miss Colvin further stated that the Maryville band is one of the largest in Tennessee, and on the uota basis for distribution of delegates would be entitled to send several students to the convention.

In discussing plans for the meeting she mentioned the names of such eminent leaders as Kirby Page, John R. Bott, and Robert E. Spear. She dwelt at some length on the inspirational value of the event and spoke enthustiastically of plans for world fellowship discussions.

"Maryville should be well represented at the convention," she said. "I hope to see all of you at Buffalo."

STUDENT COUNCIL

The Student Council has effected a temporary organization with Mildred MacKenkie as president pro tempore. The three upper classes have elected their representatives on the Council, and the regular organization will take place early next month when the freshmen class has elected its members. No definite plans have yet been formulated.

IMPRESSIONS OF A FRESHMAN

The old students of Maryville doubtless have discovered by this time that it is a great event for any person to come to College Hill, but when a student arrives for the very first time, this is really something to talk about. That is exactly what has happened. In addition to all the timely remarks made by the Freshman, "wise and otherwise," we have been keeping our eyes open. Since that all-important day of registration almost two weeks ago, we have noticed many things of more than ordinary interest. We herewith give you some of these "gems" absolutely gratis.

The frequency of "lines" around the College. This includes football lines. In fact almost every kind of line imaginable except the "bread line."

The friendliness of everyone, especially the upperclassmen. This helps to drive away those tender memories of home.

The fine appreciation of music demonstrated by Mr. McCurry. (Mr. "Mac" likes his music between the hours of 7 and 10 P. M.

The strange (sadness) of Tiny Waters and Reno Smith. Can't something be done about this.

The sweet strains of the College Glee Club and the band floating out to some poor Freshman trying his best to concentrate on Latin.

The evidence of most of the students taking an interest in "Moonshining." We should be glad to find out if this is an elective or required subject, and if one should major or minor in it to receive a B. A. degree

The eagerness of Carnegie Hall boys to jump out of bed when the six o'clock morning bell rings.

EDRIS ELECTED CHEER LEADER

From a field of eight contestants, Paul Edris led by several lengths to win the annual race for the position of head cheer leader. John Nee, newly-promoted sophomore, finished second, and Angelo Narcisso ran a close third. "Tiny" Waters, in spite of the fact that his voice carries from Dan to Beersheba, was relegated to fourth place, and first place in the consolation flight. No figures are being divulged by the poll-keepers, but it is understood that the race was close, if not breath-taking.

Vacancies In Musical Organizations

During the past week Miss Frances Henry has been conducting try-outs for both the Glee Singers and the Women's Glee Club. There are several places open this year and Miss Henry urges anyone who can sing at all to see her and arrange for a trial. Neither organization has made any definite plans for this year's work as yet.

Miss Henry also urges anyone who may be interested to come to her studio and try for a place in the Vesper Choir. The full choir consists of forty voices and there are about fifteen vacancies this year. Anyone interested in any of these organizations should see Miss Henry at once.

Kentucky Wildcats Loom Next In Path Of Highland Machine

Maryville's Chances For Victory Loom Slim

Maryville College Highlanders and the Tennessee Volunteers will renew their ancient rivalry this afternoon on Shields-Watkins Field at Knoxville. This will be the twentieth meetting of the two schools since 1895, and the Highlanders have not won a victory over the Vols since 1906, when they defeated them by an 11 to 0 score.

Southern critis are calling this year's Tennessee team the most powerful in Tennessee history, and one of the best in the Southland. Blinky Horn, writing a series of articles on the teams in the Southern Conference, said that this year's edition of the Vols would stand very high in the conference rating.

Maryville College Highlanders will tackle their second mammouth task in as many weeks when they go to Lexington, Ky., next week to take on the KeKntucky Wildcats. This will be the Highlanders' second straight game with Southern Conference tteams.

The Wildcats have one of the greatest backs in Southern football in Shipwreck Kelly. Kelly last year was chosen on the All-Southern team and he should have an even better year this season. Kelly is a tall, gaant sort of a fellow and runs with his knees high and his hips shaking. He is exceptionally fast, running the century in ten flat, and once he is in the open, he is unstoppable.

The Kentucky team, coached by Harry Gamage, one of the craftiest mentors in the South, will undougtedly present one of the smoothest teams in the Conference this year. They have a heavy bunch of linemen and a speedy set of backs bolstered with an abundance of reserve material.

These next two games will more than likely make or break the Highlanders. If they can come through these two games free from serious injuries, they will be all set to take on all comers int he college class. They will meet Union College the week following the Kentucky battle and then encounter Tennessee Wesleyan, who is becoming one of our biggest rivals, on the next Friday night.

The Highlanders have one of the best starting teams this year that they have boasted in several years. The backfield is stronger both in the starting group and in the reserve ranks and the line is just as good but reserve material is perhaps a bit short.

'Nez Hamrick Is Lost To Athletics

Industry To Brilliant Woman Athlete Curbs Career

"Nez Hamrick, the most outstanding woman athlete on the campus, will be unable to participate in athletics this year due to an injury received while playing tennis this summer. The announcement of Miss Hamrick's inability to participate is a great shock to her college friends and she will certainly be missed this year.

For the past two years, she has been high scorer in women's athletics and winner of all the college tennis tournaments for women. She has won the Toledo city title and is also champion of her home town.

"I won't be able to go in for any athletics this year," she says, "but I am going to try to take care of myself so that I can continue my tennis in a couple of years." She is a member of the womens tumbling team, tennis, and swimming teams, to say nothing of class athletics of all kinds. She is greatly admired, not only for her skill, but also for her sportsmanship and genuine interest. She asserts that she will never lose her enthusiasm for athletics, and that she will help in every way possible in the furtherance of womens athletics on the Maryville campus.

VALUABLE PRIZES OFFERED THIS YEAR

The Elizabeth Hillman Chemistry Prize Fund provides "a prize or prizes to be awarded to women students for excellence attained in the Department of Chemistry." The first prize, of twenty five dollars and the second of ten dollars are awarded for the best essays written by students of advanced Chemistry. A twenty five dollars," is granted annually to best essay in freshman chemistry.

The Ruish Strong Medal, a gold medal valued at "not less than fifteen dollars and not more than twenty five dollars", is vranted annually to the member of the Freshman class "who shall compose the best essay upon the subject, "The Value of Truth". in 1931 the medal was won by Margaret Parnell, '34.

Freshmen, new students, and everybody, there is nothing like trying. Now is the time to find out more about each one of these contests.

SPORT SLANTS

By BOB RULE

IN A SPORT TALK column conducted by the Sports Editor of the Knoxville News-Sentinel, I noted a few lines concerning students and town people of Maryville that certainly speaks well for all of us. The lines were few, indeed, but the value of the contents more than made up for the lack of space.

The Knoxville man was sounding an advance warning to the Tennessee cheering section that they would have to do some plain and fancy yelling to drown out the Maryville College section. He said in part: "A special train bearing about 500 Maryville College students and town people will accompany the Highlanders to Knoxville Saturday. And can they yell? You just watch them."

Yes, Maryville has always been admired by Knoxville people for the way that they support their football team when they are bowing to a crushing defeat at the hands of the Volunteers but I am inclined to believe that the Maryville students support the team better in defeat than they do in victory. I have often noticed that when the Highlanders come on the field for the home games, the students give them very little ovation. They greet them, not on their feet and cheering loudly but generally sitting down and weakly announcing their arrival.

It is the duty of the cheer leaders to get the students to their feet when hey take the field and make the boys feel like they have the whole hearted support of th student body. It may be that the absence of the band affected the yelling of the students during the game with L. M. U. last week but the band will be there with their works when we play our next home game and let's show those Highlanders that we believe in them.

Approaching Captain Calloway last week, I asked hif what he thought about the game, and the feeling expressed in the Maryville leader's statement gives one the feeling that score in a football game is not the supreme objective. "Of course Tennessee has a better team than we have—two or three better ones for that matter," said Captain Lea, "but as long as there are eleven of us on the fiald, we are all going to be in there scrapping, and when the game is over we shall all be well satisfied because we shall all know that we have done our best."

Point System For Women Starts Soon

Coach Qeener Announces Plans For Season

According to Coach Queener, the Point Sytem of Women's Athletics will get under way by the first of October. Heretofore, there have been only three class teams as the junior and senior teams were combined, but it is hoped that this year there will be enough interest to justify teams from all of the classes.

Honors shall be awarded as follow: 300 points, Maryville monogram "M. C."; 400 points, Maryville "M"; 500 points Maryville "M" and sweater. Points shall be awarded for basketball, soccor, volley ball, indoor baseball, tennis, swimming, stunts, archery, areial dart, track and field sports, hiking, scholarship and health rules. Points shall also be given for sportsmanship, interest and enthusiasm, which it is hoped, will promote better spirit.

Students wishing to try out for class teams must signify their intentions at the beginning of the team in which the sport is given and must attend regularly the necessary practices and match games.

Try outs will be announced on the bulletin board in the Alumi Gymnasium. All students participating in the Point System of Athletics Awards are held responsible for a knowledge of all notices on the bulletin board. In the future, women athletes will be known as "Highland Lasses."

CAPTAIN LEA CALLOWAY RECEIVED a very encouraging letter from Farmer Watkins, center on last year's varsity team. Farmer is coaching at High Point, N. C., and he stated in the letter to the Maryville leader that as the Tennessee game drew nigh, his thoughts turned more and more toward Maryville. Farmer admitted Tennessee's supremecy over Maryville but he was also endowed with the feeling that they could really "win'" from Tennessee by giving the best that was in them.

Maryville Coaches Have Had Success

Coach Honaker Is Starting His Eleventh Term; Thrower's Eighth

This will be Coach Hnaker's ninth year as head coach at Maryville. He came to the Highlanders' camp in 1922 from Lincoln, Ill., where he was coach of Lincoln College. He formerly held coaching positions at Southern College, at Gearetown, Texas, Baldwin-Wallace College at Berea, Ohio, and the Industrial and Training School for boys at Huntingdon, Tenn. The job at Huntingdon was his first coaching assignment after he graduated at Roanoke, Va.

Under the tutelage of Coach Honaker, Maryvile teams have always been highly respected in Southern athletics. His football teams have always stacked up creditably with Southern Conference schools and his baseball outfits have always been a general pain in the stomach to everyone concerned. His basketball teams have always been among the best in he Smoky Conference and several times they have defeated Southern Conference teams.

Maryville College's prowess on the diamond has always especially been highly respected. They have twice won the undisputed State Championship over college and universities alike and a number of Maryville players have made good in the major leagues. The most successful of these are Johnathan T. Stone of Mulberry Bend, Tenn., and Arthur "Speedy" Ruble, of little ole Maryville. Stone is now the most popular outfielder on the Detroit club in the American League and Ruble is playing with Indianapolis in the American Association.

Thrower is a home town product, although his home is in old Mexico, or theerabouts. Thrower is a former tackle on many Maryville teams and people will tell you that Senior Bob was one of the greatest tackles that ever played on a Maryville team. He was captain of the famous team of 1923 tht played the University of Tennessee off their feet only to be tied at 14-14.

On one of her nightly promenades through Pearsons, Mrs. Butcher was followed by erstwhile companion, Patsy. For the edification of those who are unacquainted with Patsy, may I say that Patsy is a dog. Patsy owes allegiance to three masters, or mistresses as the case happens to be, namely, Mrs. Butcher, Miss Butcher, and Helen Crowder.

Patsy's affections seems to be cually distributed among her owners; perhaps she realizes the danger of partiality.

Although this fox terrier is unable to speak forth the words, "Lets have the house quiet, girls, she does put her O. K. to this command by means of an occasional bark.

trees turning. Gold. Brown. Yellow. Russett. The beautiful little maple at the side of Baldwin front porch. The regular routine of school. Rising bell at six, and breakfast at seven. Over to Pearsons for cereal, toast, Coffee, biscuit, preserves. Maybe eggs! Back to your room to make your bed or study for your "a" class; or to the library; or to the chapel to practice. The chapel bell. Always someone who is late galloping down the stairs as the second bell rings and up the walk, managing somehow to slip in the door. Morning classes over and you dash to your dorm and crowd around the front hall for mail. "Three! Whee! A bill."—"Aw, nothing for me"—"Oh, that's my check." Letters from home.

Halls filled with well dressed young men. Cards sent up. "I don't seem to have one with me—just tell her—" Couples going out, down the steps, to the Chapel. Dormitories at last deserted, except for a few earnest-minded students studying for the morrow. Quiet.

A burst of music from the Chapel through the moonlight. Sounds of voices—program over. Couples slowly, slowly coming down the walk, lingering on the porch, passing inside and up the steps. Again confustion in the halls. "Only ten more minutes, girls." A final flurry down the hall. Giggles. Darkness settles down over the Hill. The moonlight peeps in through the windows to find a few still up and whispering, eating the goodies bought that afternoon, perhaps. Finally silence, absolute quiet. The Smokies out behind the College Woods look down on the campus for the hundred and eleventh year.

formal dinners. Miss Darby explains this by saying that so long as the boys refuse to wear coats the Wednesday dinners will not exist; to which the boys reply that so long as the hot weather reigns (or doesn't rain) they refuse to coat themselves.

Even the old students are wondering if it ever rains—and this statement after they have experienced several springs at Maryville when water falls and flows most abundantly!

However, in order to dismiss the heat why not think now in terms of next February and next February think of last September,

Letters Of A Freshman To His Mother

September 23.

Dear Ma:

Gee, it feels funny to be away from home. As you know, this is the first time I've been so far from East Trumpet and I sure am going to miss the old town. I'm not exactly homesick, Ma, don't think that but I'm not far from it. There is something at the bottom of my stomach that kind of hurts when I think of you and everybody else back in East Trumpet. Anyway, I'm here and I'll have to stay here till Christmas if I don't flunk out so I might as well make the best of it.

The lunch you packed for me to eat on the train was good, especially those doughnuts you make, but the conductor looked at me kind of funny while I was eating it. So did the other people in the car. He said what do you think this is, a diner? I said no and kept right on eating. He couldn't scare me because I was hungry and the lunch was good. Nothing else happened all the way down. I just sat there and wondered what my college would be like and thought of the great name I was going to make for myself.

Pretty soon the conductor hollered all out for Barton, Kentucky, and right away I knew that's where Barton College was. So I grabbed my suitcase and got off the train. The funny part of it was that there wasn't any station there at all and there weren't any people around. I looked to see if I could see the college anywhere, but I couldn't. There were just about a dozen houses in the whole town. Then I saw a little boy coming towards me. I said hey and he said what. Is this Barton I said. Sure, he said, this is it. So I said where and he said there and pointed in back of me. Just then the train pulled out and didn't hide the station anymore. Just like a flash I knew I must have gotten out the wrong side of the train. So I walked over to the station where there were a lot of people who were mostly ones who looked like they might be going to Barton College the same as I was. I started to ask someone where the college was and how I could get to it because I didn't want to stay in the station all day. But I felt a little bashful because they all looked like old students who didn't care much for freshmen.

While I was standing there looking around a fellow came running up to me and said why hello Mr. Smith, I'm so glad to see you here. I said my name is not Smith it is Sneed. Oh, yes, he says, Mr. Sneed, not Smith, Mr. Sam Sneed, of course. I said no my name is not Sam Sneed, it is Sidney Sneed. Certainly, certainly, he says, I knew you all the time. Something just told me you were the Sidney Sneed from Vermont. Oh, yes, I said, I do live in Vermont but how did you know? That's a simple matter, We knew you were coming and I was sent down here to see that you get out to the college all right, all right. Well, naturally, I was pretty pleased to think they sent someone to meet me. Maybe they knew I was full-back for East Trumpet High for three years. Anyway, he smiles and says now Mr. Sneed just step over here to the bus which will take you to the college which is pretty far from town. I said thank-you and went over to the bus with him. Then he says give me two dollars and I will get the ticket for you. He looked like a nice honest chap so I gave him the two dollars. He said I'll be right back and went into the station. I waited for him a long time but he didn't come back. Then I knew he had been fooling and I realized that the reason he knew my name was because my initials are on my suitcase. I'm sorry about the two dollars, Ma, but I'll be more carefull next time.

I finally found out that the college was up on a little hill just outside of town and as I didn't want to take anymore chances with busses I walked up the hill. Now, Ma, anyone would think that finding a place as big as a dormitory would be easy, but you never saw so many big buildings on one campus as there are here. I was pretty tired from lugging my suitcase all the way from town so when I saw a fellow leaning against a tree who looked like he knew where he was at least more than I did I went up to him. Say, I said, can you direct me to Mortimer Dormitory. Sure, he said do you see that big brown building over there. I said yes and he said that's it. I said thanks and went over to see about my room. When I walked up the steps I saw a lot of girls sitting out on the porch so I thought it was funny and someone was playing a joke on me because I am a freshman.

Well, Ma, you've always told me to take off my hat while I was around girls so I did. Is this Mortimer Dormitory? I asked. And then I saw the prettiest girl yet, but don't tell Kate I said so. When she started to talk you can bet I listened. Why certainly she said, just step inside. These girls here are only waiting for some boys. Anyway, I took her word for it because she did not look like one of these girls who would lie to a fellow. I thought I heard someone giggle as I went in the door but I didn't pay any attention to it because girls are most generally bashful and foolish. But pretty soon I wished I'd never gone in there, for I almost bumped into a fat old lady who ran out of a room to head me off. Young man, she says, what do you want here, and with that she looks fierce as an old hen. I said I want a room, I am Sidney Sneed. Then I thought she was going to jump on me but she didn't. Young man, I don't care if you are Sidney Sneed or George Washington this is a girls' dormitory. When she said that you can bet I left in a hurry.

As I was going down the steps the girls were all laughing pretty hard and saying look at his pretty pink cheeks, but I didn't care. Then that beautiful girl, I think she has prettier hair than Kate but don't tell I said so, stopped me and said I'll tell you where to go, sonny. Now I didn't like to be called sonny by her but I only said all right. Do you see that big brick buiding over there she says. I said yes and she said that's it and I took off my hat again. Go in the first door on your left and you'll find a lot more just like you. Maybe they can tell you something.

So I went over to the big brick building and went in the first door on my left which was a gymnasium. I looked all around but I couldn't see anyone. Then I knew that even the girl with the pretty hair had told me wrong. So I didn't ask anyone else where to go. I just walked around to each building and read the names of them out in front until pretty soon I found the dormitory which the boys call the dorm.

Well, Ma, the first thing I did after getting to my room was to write this letter to you. I sure do miss you a lot. I would like to be home right now. Remember me to everyone including Dad and give my love to Kate. Tell her I will write to her soon.

Gee, Ma, I'd like to be home right now.

Your loving Son,
Sidney.

P. S.—I don't think I'll unpack today. My trunk hasn't come.

September 25.

Dear Ma:

Today I got a letter from Kate and that made me think of the girl with the pretty hair. I don't know which of them I like the best now, although I told Kate I liked her pretty well before I left home. I see this girl around the campus quite often but she won't speak to me. She just walks along as if she didn't see me. I don't care though.

Say, Ma, will you send me some of those doughnuts you make or something? They would taste pretty good right now. There isn't any hurry, you know; I just wanted to tell you how much I would enjoy them. I have gotten a pretty good start in all my classes except chemistry which is hardest. I like it better here now that I know some more fellows. I learn something new every day. It was last night that I learned my latest new thing.

About twelve o'clock somebody pulled me out of bed and hollered freshmen out. Now I was pretty sleepy and didn't like it much, but I was jerked out into the hall where there were a lot of other freshmen in their pyjamas. Then a lot of boys all dressed in black with black masks on their faces made us go out and sit in a circle around a flag pole. I didn't know what it was all about and I didn't like it much, but after a while a fellow gets up and says line up. We did. Then he says on hands and knees march and we marched. Anyway we had to crawl about four miles which wasn't very comfortable. My knees didn't have any skin on them at all by the time we reached a large house somewhere in town that was all dark. Then someone opened a big cellar door and we all crawled down the steps into a big room that looked just like the court room back in East Trumpet.

Up front on a platform was a big desk and a high chair. On each side of the chair were two little chairs. In front of the platform was a railing, and along side was another platform with twelve chairs lined up. The rest of the room was filled up with arm chairs, barber chairs, movie seats and church pews. It kind of looked like some of the boys must have been out in town stealing them, but then, maybe they had gotten them as gifts. I'm not sure. Down in front they put the freshmen and lined them up in two rows. Then the boys with the masks filled up the room in back, and, honest, Ma, you couldn't hear a sound anywhere. I was too scared to talk much and I figure that the rest of the freshmen felt the same way about it as I did. In about five minutes a door opened and about twelve boys with masks walked in and sat in the twelve chairs I told you about. Even then there wasn't any noise. After five more minutes the door opened again and a big fellow with a big red robe on came out and sat in the big chair. After him were two others who sat on each side of him. Then he stands up behind the desk and says spokesman strut your stuff. The spokesman comes to the front and says your most highly decorated and anointed majesty, your humble servant wishes to instruct the innocents. Then the big fellow says your wish is granted, Sir Pain-in-the-neck. So the spokesman turns around and says freshmen, you are gathered here tonight in the royal court of the sophomores who will make you account for your many sins. Yea, verily, so shall ye be judged. All this time there wasn't a freshman who moved. We didn't know what to expect.

And, Ma, you're the one to blame that I learned more than the rest of the freshmen. You made me bring those red striped pyjamas to college where they don't wear such things. Those red striped pyjamas were the reason for my greater suffering, because the judge said the first case will be the tow-head in the red stripes. That was me and I didn't like it much. Come forward he said and I did. Take the oath he said and I didn't argue with him. Prosecuting attorney, question this man. Young up steps the attourney. Young man, how old are you? Eighteen I says thinking it would be better if I told the truth. What! he says, Eighteen! Then he turns to the judge and says your honor the accused is eighteen years old! What! says the judge Eighteen! Serious, serious, very serious in fact. Your honor, I demand the extreme penalty, because the accused admits that he is eighteen. Granted says his honor, give him thirty-nine strokes.

Now, Ma, the reason I said you were to blame on account of my red pyjamas was because it seemed they took the loudest pyjamas first when the boys with the paddles were fresh. After mine pink, green, yellow, blue, and then the white ones. When the white ones got there the boys with the paddles were tired and couldn't hit so hard.

Well, pretty soon they let us go. I didn't sleep so well the rest of the night and I haven't sat down much today. Somehow, it is more comfortable to stand. College does not seem so good right now. I hope I don't have anything else to learn. I'd rather remain ignorant. This letter has been pretty long so I'll stop. When you write tell me how my airdale is and also Dad. Tell him I need some more money soon. Don't forget the doughnuts.

Your Loving Son,
Sidney.

About Board Payment
Andy—"Pop Snatcher"
On The Chevrolet
Regarding Ruby's Ring

"Fourteen" will be the popular number around Maryville at Christmas time. Too many students—or their parents—did not read the catalogue. At least they didn't read the part that concerns itself with the paying of board. It reads: "A deposit to the amount of two months' board bill is required in advance of each student eating at the club, and settlements thereafter are made at the end of every fourth week."

Dr. Anderson, last Tuesday's speaker, didn't finish his statement about California having the biggest liars in the United States. Perhaps he should have let that statement go through—and then—we wonder deep down in our hearts if Dr. Anderson might have sometime listened to Maryville's head coach giving a speech.

Andrew Newcomer and his new job at the Sandwich Shoppe created the incentive for a practical joke to be played on our newly manufactured soda jerker. Someone placed his picture on the bulletin board of Carnegie with "$10,000 reward, dead or alive." Andy was taken alive, but during the time of the search four freshmen were caught carrying pistols.

At last it has happened. Ruby has a diamond. Evidently one good stone deserves another. The members of the senior class, the faculty members, as well as Ruby and her donor, have been looking forward to this momentous event for three years and now everybody seems to be happy. Those who have seen the ring agree that Hiero is a most excellent judge of stones from two standpoints at least.

The back hall on second floor Pearsons has been the welcome recipient of a private telephone, although the users must pay for their privacy. The best advice the writer can give is that the girls make arrangements to receive calls instead of being forced to do the calling. Hence the charges of time, money, and carrying anything else undesirable can be placed on the other end of the line. In this way the Y. store will not lost the nickel that the telephone might receive.

—o—

The local fire department was almost fortunate enough to have the privilege of putting out a fire last Saturday when a collegiate campus car belonging to Reno Smith had drastic intentions of going up in smoke. One of the heretofore unused fire extinguishers in Pearsons was put into action, and proved itself worthy so that service of the volunteers was unnecessary.

According to an announcement made in Chapel this week the Chevrolet is a good car. The president and the dean sanction its use through varied experiences and give the noteworthy motor an O. K. that counts.

!! THANX !!

The girls had a great time on the snake dance last week. Even though shoulders ached and arms were sore the girls enjoyed their unpremeditated trip to the business district of the Blount County metropolis. They, and their friends, wish to thank the authorities for this privilege and pleasure.

Another message of thanks is to the manager of the Palace Theatre for allowing the annual—or semiannual—rush to take the place, thereby allowing all members of the student body who are not girls to attend the show free of charge.

The members of the senior class are also grateful for the privilege of having their first class party held in the College Woods. It is an ideal place for a party on a moonlight night, with a campfire, entertainment food, fun, etc.

Chilhowean Staff Advances Work On 1931-32 Yearbook

Representative From Each Class Appointed To Aid Photographer

Work on the 1932 Chilowean has begun and theme mbers of the staff are looking forward to the production of the annual.

In order to avoid the confusion and the last minute rush which usually accompanies the photography connected with the class pictures, representatives for each class have been appointed to arrange appointments for their classmates with the photographer.

The class representatives are, for the seniors, Francis Collins; for the juniors, James Lewis; for the sophomores, Bob Rule; and for the freshmen, Eleanor Johnson. The representatives will notify their class members as to the time of each one's appointment. Of course the appointments are tentative. If any one cannot fill his appointment, he is asked to notify his class representative and make the necessary adjustments.

Pictures of seniors will be made in October. Those of juniors will be made in November, and sophomores and freshmen will be photographed in December. Everyone is asked to co-operate inca rrying out this schedule.

Officers Elected For Pi Kappa Delta Chapter Tuesday

Much Interest Manifested In Debates For The Coming Year

At a meeting, Tuesday evening, of Pi Kappa Delta members and other students interested in debating, the following officers were elected:

President—Elizabeth Duncan.
Vice-Pres.—Mary Lovette.
Sec.-Treas.—Benjamin Groves.
Editor—Mary John Metcalf.

Prospects are most promising, despite the false rumors in circulation that debating will be discontinued on the Hill this year. Thirty men and women are out for varsity teams and all are enthusiastic about the plans.

There will be no varsity class this year, but there will be the usual class for freshmen and new students who are out for debating. Lectures on the question by different members of the faculty are being arranged for the varsity debaters, and of course, Professor Queener will supervise student discussion.

The question for the season will be decided within the next few weeks. It will probably be concerned with capitalism. Varsity preliminaries will be held the later part of November.

Already letters are pouring in asking for debates. This year a much more extensive program is planned, including trips to a greater number of colleges. In April the National Pi Kappa Delta Convention will be held in Tulsa, Oklahoma. Varsity debaters from Maryville will attend.

Freak Costumes Of Cheer Leaders Wins Applause Of Fans

Attire Of Scotties' Directors Cause Much Comment At Vol Game

Amusement, chagrin, rancor, and other adjectives mingled in Shields-Watkins field last Saturday afternoon as three high-landish Highlanders appeared on the sidelines clad, not in their usual pants, but in gaudy skirts. We understand that, besides the customary Scot regalia, the cheerleaders were equipped with rather nifty undies, also furnished by the College Maid Shop. Chief Edris tells, confidentially of course, some very amusing tales of difficulties encountered in securing the outfits, such as how Angel Narisso squirmed as he was being measured, etc. (squirmed etc., not measured etc.) Edris also stated that at the next home game, the rah-rah boys would be robed in a manner as to kill (Sir Harry Lauder).

Seniors Have First Party Of Year In College Woods

Songs, Music And "Hot Dogs" Mark Initial Gathering Of Class '31

Wednesday night the College Woods were given the high honor of having in their depths the first senior party of 1931-1932. The heretofore dignified seniors cast aside any amount of dignity which they might have had and donned the clothes of informality.

A huge campfire greeted the seniors as they came down the hill at the right of the House in the Woods. Bob Wallace led the group in songs, and after the vocal ability of the crowd had been demonstrated to the satisfaction (?) of honored guests and others, Lucy Ann Voorhees gave an entertaining reading. Reno Smith played various selections on his harmonica, and was forced to play a number of encores.

Hot dogs, angels on horeback (pigs in the blanket—yes, pigs in the blankets and angels on horseback are the same species of food) marshmallows, and coffee next had their respective, respectable places on the program.

Several voluntary numbers on the program were given. Even Dr. Stevenson proved himself to be a grand opera star, a fact which was a revelation indeed to the multitude ossembled.

The party was planned by Virginia Crider, vice-president of the class; the refreshments were charged and discharged by George Burk; the fire was built by George Osborne, class president, and several others; the party was enjoyed by Dr. and Mrs. Stevenson, Prof. and Mrs. Queener, Prof. and Mrs. Smith, and incidentally the members of the senior class.

Theta Or Bainonian; Girls Must Decide Question Tonight

Both Societies Expecting Large Increase In Membership

To night the new girls have a thrilling experience awaiting them. Tonight the new girl climbs the long flight of steps to the second floor Pearson's. She climbs slowly, for the time for decision is growing shorter. In the hallway she is confronted with two boxes and two presidents. She sees them vaguely, still pondering the question—Theta or Bainonian. There half-formedh rdlu hrdlu hrdlu uuu is still time to revise the half-formed decision. There is yet time to weigh once more the value of membership in each society. She is given a piece ofp aper and a pencil. She hesitates a moment—not yet sure that she is doing something that she will not regret later. From the society rooms comes a confused murmur of excited voices. Occasionally the voices are raised in excited welcome. She swiftly writes her name and the name of the chosen society on the slip of paper. She is immediately seized by the girls of that society, and before she can catch her breath she is in the center of the room and in the society forever. Tonight belongs to the new girls and the new girls belong to tonight.

MARYVILLE COLLEGE BULLETIN

The Maryville College Bulletin for the third quarter has just been received from the printer, and is now ready for distribution. The bulletin contains, in concise form, the answer to every question a person unfamiliar with the college might ask about it. A copy of the bulletin is sent out with every catalog.

MARYVILLE SEES RED

We have been trying to find some plausible excuse for Maryville's seeing red. Could it have been the football game that has caused this revolt? Perhaps some of the Freshmen are trying to conceal that inevitable greenness by flaunting such sophistication. It could possibly be explained by the fact that all Maryville students try to get the most for their money. Perhaps there has been a wish expressed by some executive, that conservatism be observed. But, not wishing to judge Maryville students too harshly, we could credit this attitude to a desire to help in the alleviation of the present economic depression by a policy of liberalism and generosity. About the only group of students not afflicted with this startling application of brilliancy is that group commonly termed redheads. We can perhaps blame it on theweather. For the last week practically every student on the hill has worn a more or less vivid shade of that vital color—red. Sweaters, skirts, caps, tams, jackets, and whole outfits of red came pouring from each building and scattered in bright dashes over the campus.

Sixth President Of Maryville College To Be Inaugurated By Impressive Ceremony On October 22 And 23

MANY NOTABLES WILL BE PRESENT TO AID AS NEW EXECUTIVE OFFICIALLY ASSUMES DUTIES OF PRESIDENT

Dr. Hugh T. Kerr, Moderator Of General Assembly, Will Be Present

TWO DAY PROGRAM

Dr. William C. Covert Will Preside At Inaugural Exercises

Two days of this month, October 22 and 23, will be devoted to one of the most monentous events to take place in Maryville College in a number of years, when Dr. Ralph Waldo Lloyd will be officially inaugurated as the sixth president of the college. Work on the inauguration has been in progress for several months, and as a result of tireless effort to secure the best speakers to be had, a program of exceptional quality has been arranged. The themes for the inauguration are: on Thursday, "The Story of World Progress During the Lifetime of Maryville College," and on Friday, "The Christian Liberal Arts College in Present Day Thought and Life."

The program will begin at 8:00 a. m., Thursday, when the Reverend George William Brown, general secretary of the American Bible Society, speaks. His subject will be, "Is the Bible Adequate for 1931." There will be a continuous program through Thursday and Friday, concluding with the inauguration exercises on Friday afternoon, when Dr. Lloyd will close with his inaugural address, "The College and Character."

In the course of the time between Thursday morning and Friday night, a large number of prominent religious, economic, and educational leaders of America will preside or speak. Among the speakers is Dr. William J. Hutchins, D. D., LL. D., president of Berea College. Dr. Hutchins is the father of President Robert Maynard Hutchins of the University of Chicago, who is the youngest college president in the United States. Guy Everett Snavely, Ph. D., LL. D., Litt. Fall Concert To Be First Presentation Of Musical Year

Many Afternoon And Evening Entertainments To Be Given

During the last week of October or the first week of November the music department will present a Fall Concert. The program will include several piano concertos by advanced students, as well as numbers from other divisions of the department. This concert will be the opening number of what promises to be a very successful musical year. It replaces the Fall Festival of Music, which is not to be presenttd this fall. A most detailed announcement concerning the concert will be made later.

Music plays an important part in Maryville's social life and the department furnishes many pleasant afternoons and evenings of high class entertainment.

The orchestra, an important unit in the department, is being organized by Miss Butcher and much promising material has answerel the call of her baton. Miss Laura B. Hale, head of the Music Department, said she considers the material just as promising as that of last year, when Maryville had perhaps the best orchestra yet produced by the department. Later in the season the orchestra will probably present its annual concert.

Miss Hale, Miss Henry, and Miss Butcher spent the summer studying at the Conservatory of Music in Cincinnati. A new member of the department is Miss Susan Howard, Bachelor of Music from the Conservatory of Cincinnati. Miss Howard is assistant teacher in piano.

The band, that important factor in creating spirit and pep on the field, has been organized, and the prospects of a successful season for it are decidedly hopeful.

Dr. Chas. A. Nelson Addresses Student Volunteers Friday

Raps "Pessimistic Christians" In Interesting Talk Before Society

October 2.—Rev. Charles A. Nelson, who has for many years been connected with the Syria Mission, and who is a great friend of Dr. Wilson and of Maryville College, conducted the devotions and delivered an address in the Chapel service this morning. He told a number of interesting stories about his work and life as a missionary.

At 6:30 tonight Dr. Nelson spoke to a group of students in the Y. W. C. A. reading room. In his address he told the steps involved in becoming a full-fledged missionary on the foreign field. He says that he life of a missionary is a difficult one, but that it is infinitely worth the living.

"There is no place in the thinking of the modern Christian for pessimism," says Dr. Nelson. "To some people the world looks as it does from the top of Mount Hermon at sunset. As the sun goes down the west, the shadow in the east of the mountain lengthens until it meets the horizon, then as the great ball of fire sinks into the Mediterranean, the shadow mounts the sky, and all the world is in darkness. Thus looks many a Christian on life today.

"But wait until morning, and see the sunrise. The long dark shadow comes creeping down from the sea, then shortens; as it slips slowly to the very foot of the mountain, the whole world is flooded with light. This symbolizes the hope of the modern Christian."

Students Believed "Not Materialistic" By College Pastor

Sense Of Values Attributed To Maryville Students By Dr. Stevenson

"Maryville College students have never in any large numbers followed the materialistic trend because most of us here are poor, and poverty has saved many a man from illusive vagaries and illicit vices." For this reason Dr. William P. Stevenson, college pastor, feels that the student body has been lucky.

Two other reasons for Maryville students' not following "the materialistic trend," continues Dr. Stevenson, are the possession of "conservatism and home training; the spirit that pervades and the ideals that prevail in Maryville College."

The pastor thinks that while some young people are seeking for selfish gain, as others are looking to help, "all are eager to feel themselves alive—alive at all points, alive in the most effective and enjoyable ways."

The question of whether the search of young people for something in life was changing elicited the fact from Dr. Stevenson that modern youth feels that the things most desirable in life are to be found "most satisfactorily and successfully" in temporal affairs. "Opposed to that trend, however," said the pastor, "is an increasing number of young men and women who feel that quantity of material possessions does not denote attainment of success."

"This change is growing out of personal observations and experiences, reinforced by the experience and teaching of others, and emphasized by present world conditions."

The fact that school has hardly started and is as yet not running with the smoothness that it will in the coming months has not deterred in the least some few organizations from making themselves felt and known about the campus. The leaders of these clubs and societies have shown that spirit of aggressiveness that is essential to the successful promoter.

Who has not heard over and over of the Theta or the Bainonian Literary Society? Their placards have decorated the campus for the past several weeks. The conversations of the members of these societies is colored by the activities of the clubs; they have advertised themselves and bid fair to become active parts of the campus life.

The Student Council is waking from its period of inactivity. Thanks to Miss McKenzie and the members. Mr. Teffeteller has planned and is working on a program for the Y. M. C. A. that will put that organization back in its rightful place on the campus. Miss Beebe has already made the Y. W. C. A. felt and has won the appreciation of the girls of Maryville making the Reading Room a place for them to be proud of. The Student Volunteers are even more active than heretofore. Women's athletics has received an impetus that will make for a better Maryville and also make for a better womanhood.

All in all these organizations are to be congratulated upon their aggressiveness and progressiveness. It all makes a better place of the college and gives individuality, a sense of duty well done, which is in itself a rather priceless thing in the years to come.

DITCH DIGGERS

Working one's way through college may be all right from the point of view of a father "who worked from five o'clock in the morning till ten at night and got thirty-two cents for it when he was Ned's age," but attempting to do outside and university work at the same time is psychologically wrong unless it is absolutely necessary, according to Roger du Bearn in an article, "Our College Bred Ditch Diggers," published in the November College Humor.

Parental egotism is blamed for the insidious American habit of the worthy sons of worthy middle class fathers attempting to do two jobs at once when it isn't necessary—and not being successful at either.

Collegiate attitude is also at fault, the Author believes. "There is no doubt," he writes, "that the drones in college, be that institution large or small, fashionable or not generally worship the worker.

"Mingled envy special consideration seem to be the reward of these numerous toiling heroes, theiro ut-of-the-way campuses, or equally obscure soda-fountains, boiler-factories, luxurious newspaper offices and elevator snafts, wherever they may happen to earn a mean living gloriously."

There are real jobs for collegians who have to work their way through school, du Bearn believes. But too many men work only to "tickle their sense of duty or pay the bootlegger." This ever increasing class are the ones that offer the problem.

With every college man using a job as a means to get some kind of special dispensation, the situation of theworking collegian is offeringa problem to the educators.

The condition of affairs is coming to the point where college professors "are not so much instructors as arbiters or moral worth," according to du Bearn. "Whoever tries, means well, and is therefore a scholar. But then, is swabbing floors worthier than tending furnaces? Does selling Fuller Brushes rank with tuning pionos? It is no longer a question of appendictis being offered as a substitute for mathematics; it is a queston of Jack-of-All-Trades being translated Baccalaureus in Arbitus, and giving Hercules a PhD."—Adapted from College Humor.

AND BRICKS

But the mere fact that one or two organizations are up and going does not give the rest the privilege of emulating "Old Rip." It is often charged that Maryville is afflicted with an acute case of "clubitits." It is true that the number is almost staggering for a school of this size. Every person on the campus is eligible for membership in some club or society. This is as it should be, but why not do your bit to activate the club? In the ordinary course of things enough parasites and "hangers-on" will be admitted.

Foremose among the inactive clubs are the State Clubs. This is not true of all, but only the greater part of them. Last year the Triangle Club did several very nice pieces of work but up to the present they have not been head from this year. What about the "Red Heads"? They should be in evidence. The B. G's The Lawyers? The Chemists? The Preachers? And of course the Doctors. Your main objective may be social, instructive or entertaining, but whatever it is, let's hear from you. "Look at the other clubs and do the best you can." . . . .

REPORT OF COMMITTE ON SCHEDULE OF STUDENT PROGRAMS

The committee recommends that:

1. Monday night be continued as the time for public proyrams in so far as that is possible.

2. With the view to restricting the number of public programs in the interest of the study program of the colltge and with the view to protecting from too many counter attractions ohe organizations entitled to public programs the following restrictions are recommended:

a. Not more than four Lyceum programs are to be arranged for.

b. Not more than eight plays are to be given during the year. This is distributed: one each to each Literary Society, two to the Maryville Players, one to Theta Alpha Phi, and one to the Senior Class.

c. The Theta Alpha Phi play and one of the Maryville Players' plays must, if given, be arranged as benefit entertainments for two of the organizations annually permitted to present a benefit program each, the Senior Class, the Y. W. C. A., and the Y. M.C.A.

d. The Glee Singers and the Girls' Glee Club are permitted one local public program each in the course of a year.

e. If the Y. M. C. A.—Y. W. C. A. Circus is held, it is to be held on Thanksgiving night.

f. The Music and Expression Departments are to be requested to arrange for as few graduation recital programs as possible.

g. The Athletic Authorities are to be askedt to schedule a minimum number of "double-header" basketball games.

MARY E. CALDWELL,
GEO. D. HOWELL,
LAURA B. HALE,
Committee.

Editor The Highland Echo

For two weeks i n succession the regular meetings of a permanent student organization on College Hill have been interfered with by the meetings of more or less temporary organizations. The permanent organization concerned has existed for nearly a third of a century and has held regular weekly meetings during that period. But now it appears that there are no seniority rights among the college associations. It appears that the association which acts the most like the "cocky" freshman among a group of upperclassmen is the one to walk off with the meeting night. When this discourteous practice occurs, of invading the regular meeting nights of organizations whose members belong to more groups than one, considerable confusion results; and the organization which is inclined to act courteously as the lamb before her shearers rather than selfishly as the camel in the Arab's tent, is generally the one which suffers. Why is there not more consideration shown on the part of the temporary association on College Hill?

May I be permitted to suggest that there ought to be an organizatich council on the Hill, composed of one member from each student organization, formed for the purpose of arranging refular meeting nights for all permanent organizations and enforcing a proper recognition of these nights? It seems to me that the setting up of such a council would do much to smooth out the present difficulties.

Senior definitions (brought to light during a Pearsons meeting for the purpose of studying for the senior English test):

A constable is a little man with a beard who marries people.

A brigand is an officer in the army.

George Osborne (describing a mule in a French story): The mule wore a bon-bon on his head.

A freshman using a carboy in a chemistry experiment dashed frantically to the professor, saying, "Oh, Mr. Griffitts, I've got this bell-boy tarted and he wont go."

DR. LLOYD'S ACCIDENT

Dr. Lloyd unsuccessfully attempted to demolish his Chevrolet while on his way home from the U. T. game ast Friday afternoon. No one was njured, however, and neither car was seriously damaged. Dr. Lloyd was traveling through the outskirts of Knoxville accompanied by Mrs. Lloyd, their two sons, and some friends, when another car suddenly came out of a cross road. Dr. Lloyd swerved to the left in an effort to avoid the oncoming machine and ran into a ditch, but the other car failed to stop in time and ran into the President's motor. The Chevrolet received a bent fender and a cracked hub cap. It is not known what damage the other machine suffered.

Scribe From Blue Grass Says Wildcats Will Not Be Champs

Sports Editor Of Kentucky Kernel Sends Tale Of Woe From Wildcat Camp; Pays Fine Tribute To Maryville Highlanders

CATS HAVE HEAVY TEAM

Great Shipwreck Kelly To Lead Attack Against Highlanders Six Veterans On Hand

Special To The Echo.

Lexington, Ky.—In the "Heart of the Blue Grass" there is a stir over the coming of the Highlanders, from Maryville College, who will bring with them the inaugural football game of the '31 season for the Kentucky Wildcats. Maryville comes with the press reputation of having one of the best teams in years—a fighting organization, who dares to take on stronger rivals in the South.

The loss they suffered at the hands of a powerful Tennessee team does not indicate their strength in comparison with the Kentucky squad. There are no championship hopes within the confines of the Wildcat's camp. The squad is the smallest in numbers in years. Several valuable men were lost to the team early in the season due to operations, sickness, injuries, and scholastic standings. But with all the hard luck, there is a spirit here that points towards hard fought games, win or lose.

A new system, the double wing back, will be tried out by a Kentucky squad for the first time Saturday and Kentucky will initiate it. In the workouts against a powerful freshman aggregation the system worked at times and at other times it didn't. Saturday crowds will probably witness many of these bungles.

Six of the eleven probable starters are veterans of last year, while four others were sub of previous years. One, Davidson, a 200 pound guard, is a sophomore. The average weight of the teams 185 pounds.

Seale, the heaviest man on the squad, weighs 220 pounds and is matched against Ferguson who, according to the scribes, "has 170 pounds of fight." The guards don't balance, for Davidson tips the beam at 200, while "Hoot" Gison only reaches 175. The tackles, Captain "Babe" Wright and Andrews, come within 13 pounds of each other's weights, being 201 and 188 respectively.

On the ends Cavana, 175, and Yates, 180, will hold berths. Both boys are fast and versatile. Cavana does the drop kicks and Yates can, if necessary, play a half back position as he did last year.

Kelly and Urbaniak will probably start at the halfback positions. Richards will play full back, and Johnson will call signals. The entire back field staff will probably see service before the games terminates as Gamage, head coach, is attempting to develop some reserve material for his backfield. Urbaniak, Kelly, and Richards are seniors in the backfield, and Cavana, Yates, Andrews, and Wright are the senior linemen.

SPORT SLANTS

By BOB RULE

Maryville College football players, coaches, and students alike won the admiration of the Knoxville football fandom last week when one of the best teams that Coach Honaker has ever produced won a moral victory over the University of 8Tennessee.

True, the Highlanders were defeated by 33 to 0, but Coach Boy Neyland and Gene McEver, of Tennessee, both admitted that "that" touchdown was not supposed to count, and so the Vols. margin of viitory really should have been about 24 points. With all due credit to the officials, however, it must be said that their work in the game was very satisfactory. The best of them miss one every once in awhile.

Knoxville sports writers were loud in their praise of the Maryville coaches and players. Commenting on Maryville's showing, the Sports Editor of the News-Sentinel said: "Leave it to Coach L. S. Honaker to always come up with a good football team. I visited Coach Honaker's camp about two weeks ago and he paraded his men out on the field. It didn't look like he had much material to me, and the way he talked I felt sorry for him. He told me that it looked like he wouldn't have much of a team, but Saturday he had a darn tough eleven. He can get more out of his material than any coach I ever knew."

Coming from a man who is a real authority on football and has seen coaches of every type, this is indeed a great tribute to Coach Honaker. I heartily agree with the Knoxville siribe. I believe that Coach Honaker and his worthy assistant, Bob Thrower, are two of the best conditioners of men in Southern football today. I don't bar anyone.

Mr. L. A. Richardson, one of the officials in the game Saturday, praised the sportsmanship of the Maryville players. "I heard the Maryville players cautioning one another about being careful in tackling McEver so that they wouldn't hurt his knee over," said Richardson. "And I believe they were sincere, for I watched once or twice just to see. While they tackled hard, they were careful not to be unduly rough."

The cheer leaders and the cheering section also came in for their part of the praise. One of the Knoxville papers ran a cut of the three cheer leaders, Edris, Nee and Narcisso, and they termed the cheering section as "colorful." The band certainly sounded good, and unless you were looking, it was difficult to tell from the press box which one was playing.

If reports in "The Lenior Rhynean," student paper at Lenoir Rhyne College, are true, the Appalachian Teachers from Boone, N. C., have one of the largest college teams in the state. A story in the Lenoir Rhynean sports section stated that the Appalachian line would average 198 pounds and the backs 185. The Highlanders play Appalachian there Nov. 7, and according to these notices, the Maryville team will be outweighed 28 pounds in the line and 25 pounds in the backfield. Gosh! They grow em big up in those Carolina Mountains!

CAPTAIN LEE IN ACTION AGAINST VOLS.

Captain Lea Calloway was caught in action in the Tennessee game by the News-Sentinel Photographer. Lea is starting on one of his many brilliant runs that he reeled off during the game.

Maryville Team Is In Lexington Today

Coach L. S. Honaker and 24 Maryville College Highlanders left here yesterday for Lexington, Kentucky, where they will play the Kentucky State Wildcats this afternoon on Stoll Field. The Highlanders will be playing their second successive Southern Conference game, and they will be up against almost unsurpassable odds, but the Maryville boys, encouraged by their showing against Tennessee last week, have their hearts et to give the Wildcats a run for their money.

This will be the first game of the season for the Kentucky team, and they will more than likely be off their stride, so the Maryville team is prepared to play heads-up football and make the breaks come their way. Last week the Vols were in a fumbling mood, and Maryville pounced on loose balls on more than one occasion and staved off many a rally by their alertness.

Though it seems that the Tennessee backs had almost as much speed as men in football uniforms could possibly have, the Highlanders will be up against an even faster man when they meet the Wildcats this afternoon. Shipwreck Kelly, the class of the Kentucky backfield, and one of the fastest ball carriers in the country, will be in the opening lineup for the Cats. He is a track man, doing the century in 10 flat.

With the exception of Tope, the Maryville team is in first class shape and it is more than likely that Coach Honaker will have full force on the field. The starting line-up has so far been able to dodge old man injury, and if they can only come through today's game unhurt, Maryville followers will breathe a sigh of relief.

Coach Honaker plans to give his varsity team plenty of work in the scrap with the Cats. He will White and Richardson at ends; Carper and Overley at tackles; Tolliver and Teffeteller or Chandler at guards; Ferguson at center; Payne at quarter; Calloway and Martin Gillispie at halves, and either Woodard or Wilson at full.

Union College Plays Scots Next Friday

Scots Won By 103 to 0 In Last Game Played

After two weeks rambling over Southern Conference sod, the Maryville College Highlanders will return to their home field net Friday night and take on a member of the Smoky Mountain Conference in the second after-sundown affair of the season. Union College, from Barbourville, Ky., will furnish the opposition.

Although Union is still on the "waiting list" to be enrolled in the Conference, they are almost sure to be accepted, and they will undoubtedly be a full fledged member of the class before the first semester is over. Very little is known of this year's Union team, but the last time the Highlanders played them the Scotties came through with a victory by the narrow margin of 103 to 0.

But you can wager that Union has improved a great deal since the Highlanders ran wild over them, for only last week they held the L. M. U. Railsplitters to a 13 to 12 victory, and the Highlanders defeated the L. M. U. team by only 25 to 0. It was also the first game of the season for Union, and they will be an improved team by next Friday night.

This will be the fourth game on the Maryville schedule, and if the Highlanders are beaten by Kentucky, they will have a chance to raise their percentage to the .500 mark by defeating Union. The week following, they will play Tennessee Wesleyan, also here, and this will be another tough assignment for the Scotties. Wesleyan showed good form last week by defeating the University of Chattanooga freshmen 7 to 0.

A Maryville boy, who is now a student at Wesleyan, and a member of the varsity football team, stated last week that there is only one game on their schedule that they are pointing for, and that is the game with Maryville. They would rather beat us than any other team they play. But I can't see why; we beat them only 19 to 6 last year, and 26 to 0 the year before. They needn't feel so bad about it.

Facts Show That Highlanders Gave Tennessee Great Battle

Carper And Ferguson Blocked Punt-Calloway Steps With Best Of Them—Call Coach Honaker Gloomy Gus Of Conference

CALLOWAY PRAISED

Says Lea Would Make Any Team In South; Overley Also Draws Comment

Maryvill College Highlanders' 33 to 0 defeat at the hands of the Tennessee Volunteers is now history, but the story of the Scots' fine performances never grows old. There are several things, which no doubt, everyone did not see, that will be of interest to the students.

The Highlanders blocked a punt for the Vols in the very first game that the Vols played this year—they had only one blocked all season—Lea Calloway gained 47 yards from scrimmage right through that big Tennessee line—Gene McEver gained only 58 on all of his runs from scrimmage—Woodard and Calloway outdistanced all of the Tennessee kickers combined—Carper and Ferguson were the gents who were responsible for the blocked punt—Calloway went 14 yards late in the game right over Capt. Skeet Mayer, of Tennessee—Ferguson and Tolliver took Herman Hickman, the Vols potential all-American guard, on their shoulders and carried him back ten yards to make room for Lea to run—when they came back into the line Tolliver asked Hickman to pay him for the ride—Knoxville sport writers call Coach Honaker "The Gloomy Gus of the Smoky Conference"—but Coach hasn't been so gloomy after the Tennessee game—he has a right to smile—Coach Bob Neyland said that Capt. Lea Calloway would make any backfield in the Southern Conference—also said that Cliff Overley could play on his team—the Knoxville Journal called this year's Maryville team one of the greatest that Coach Honaker has ever sent against the Vols—I agree with them—so does everyone else—Maryville's offense has never given the Vols any worry until this year—now there are some of them almost bald headed — Maryville's team outplayed Tennessee during the first quarter and outfought them during the whole game—they are calling Tennessee's forward wall the best that they have ever had—Maryville must have a super-human line then—we blocked one of their punts—they didn't block any of ours—that's sompin'—BEAT KENTUCKY—That's all—There ain't no more.

Womens' Class Teams Start Practice Soon

Mrs. Queener Urges More Girls To Report Monday

The point system of women's athletics will be put in operation Monday, October 5, with the first junior and senior soccer practice at 3:00 o'clock in the afternoon. The sophomores will practice on Wednesday at 3:00, and the freshmen on Friday afternoon.

All tournament games will be played at night this year. The system has been changed so that it will be easier in the future to earn points.

"We hope to see more sweaters this year," Coach Queener said. "We want girls to wear sweaters that don't belong to football men. Girls, you owe it to yourself to come out one afternoon a week," she continued, "you need the exercise. Have you ever been on a team and had that 'feeling of winning'?—or lost and known how to be a good sport You don't have to be a 'star' or an athlete to make the teams. Come on out. We want interest and enthusiasm. There is a good chance for everyone. We need you!"

Little Tope Breaks Ankle In Practice

Reserve Guard Will Be Lost For Season

John "Little' Tope, junior reserve guard, was the first member of the 1931 football squad to receive a serious injury, when he sustained a broken bone in his ankle in Tuesday afternoon's practice. He will be lost to the squad for the remainder of the season. Tope was a valuable man, and his loss will hurt the Maryville squad considerably.

Last year Topie came to Maryville as a sophomore and despite his weight handicap, reported for football as a fullback. He saw quite a bit of service at the fullback last season, but this year there was plenty of backfield material on hand, and linemen were very scarce, so Coach Bob Thrower made Tope into a guard. He was just getting into the swing of line play when his injury struck him down.

The Highlanders were going through a stiff practice session in preparation for the game with the Kentucky Wildcats when Tope was injured. Coach Honaker will take

College Maid Shop Having Busy Season Despite Depression

"Capacity Production" Is Vogue At Busy Shop

The Colleye Maid Shop is a busy whir of machines and a noisy clatter all day long. Every machine is running to capacity, and the girls are rushing through several large orders. The Avondale Mills of Birmingham, Alabama, recently sent in a large reorder for uniforms. The last shipment of an order to the Jarman Shoe Company, of Nashville, for five hundred uniforms, has just been made. All the uniforms used by this company are made by the girls in the College Maid Shop. The Friendsville Academy has outfitted the girls in "Rainbow" uniforms, using six colors of Indian Head cloth. This order was completed during the past week.

Mrs. McMurray has just returned from a short business trip to Nashville and Huntsville, where she sold uniforms to one mill, and already has prospects for spring orders. She also made a short trip to Chattanooga last Thursday in the interest of the Shop.

Several new ideas are on trial in the shop. Indian Head gym suits are being made for the gym classes of Ruth March, a former student of Maryville now teaching at Hillsboro, Ohio. If they prove successful and profitable for the girls to make, the suits will be accepted as a standard product for the Shop.

Another new project is the making of children's pajamas, in sizes from two to twelve years. Here is your chance to get little sister that unusual Christmas gift.

The College Maids have decided that nothing is too hard for them to try. Consequently, orders for choir vestments are being solicited. Letters are being sent to churches all over the country concerning choir robes. Churches in some of the northern cities are very well pleased with the vestments made for them by the girls in the College Maid Shop.

DR. LLOYD'S TRIP

Dr. Ralph Lloyd left Maryville last Tuesday night for Atlantic City, where he will attend a conference on the general religious situation in America and particularly concerning the Presbyterian church in the U. S. A. The conference will be held the first and second of October at the Chalfonte Hotel.

There will be seventy delegates present from all parts of the United States, including ministers, laymen, professional and business men, educators, and representatives of various other fields. Dr. Lloyd was singularly honored in being one of the few college men to be invited to the conference.

President Lloyd will return to Maryville the fifth of the month, stopping enroute ot Philadelphia and Washington on short business trips.

"M" CLUB

At a meeting of the newly-organized Women's "M" Club a constitution was adopted and the following officers were elected: Iva Babcock, president; Irish Terry, secretary; and Mildred Purviance, activities secretary.

The club will meet once a month, this meeting to take the form of a hike or a regular organized meeting with a planned program.

Only girls who have earned a letter "M" or a letter and sweater under the Maryville point system are eligible for membership.

It is the desire of the club to put a greater emphasis on women's athletics on the campus and to aid in all the ways possible to increase participation in the various sports and activities that are carried on throughout the year.

Dr. Anderson Speaks In Chapel Tuesday

"The Spirit of America" was the theme of the address in Chapel last Tuesday by Dr. Harry O. Anderson of California. America is the rich nation it is today, said the speaker, because of the pioneer spirit of its early settlers, because of its spirit of democracy, and because of the prevailing spirit of God and Jesus Christ. The humorous though earnest presentation of the message strongly appealed to the students.

Dr. Anderson is the student pastor of the University of California, and has had much experience in work with foreign students in this country. He was introduced by Dr. Deal, of the First Baptist Church of Maryville, where Dr. Anderson is leading revival services.

Y.W. Reading Room Not Open During Recitation Hours

Disturbance Caused By Radio Given As Reason For Regulation

The Y. W. C. A. reading room will not be open during class hours, as has been the practice up to the present time.

This decision has been made by the girls themselves because of the disturbance arising when girls walk by classrooms in going to the reading room. It is also thought that the radio further disturbs recitations in the nearby classrooms.

With these reasons in mind the Y. W. C. A. cabinet has decided that the reading room shall be open only during the noon hour and after three o'clock. It is hoped that the new schedule will meet with the approval and cooperation of all concerned.

THE INAUGURATION

of the principal speakers on Thursday morning. On Thursday afternoon Charles Abram Ellwood, Ph. D., LL. D., professor of sociology at Duke University and author of a number of books on sociology, will talk on the subject, "Progress in the Sciences." Later on Thursday John Huston Finley, A. M., LL. D., L. H. D., J. U. D., will speak on "Progress in Human Relationships." Dr. Finley has been associate editor of The New Times since 1921.

Leaders on the program Friday morning will be Charles Joseph Turek, A. M., LL. B., LL. D., president of Center College, James Everett Clarke, D. D. LL. D., editor of The Presbyterian Advance, William Chalmers Coert, M. A., D. D., LL. D., general secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Christian Education, Robert Lincoln Kelly, Ph. M., LL. D., executive secretary of the Association of American Colleges, and Cleland Boyd McAfee, Ph. D. D., LL. D., secretary of the Presbyterian Board Foreign Mission. At 12:45 college leaders and leading church Friday a fellowship luncheon will be served in the college dining hall. Frederick Emerson Stockwell, A. M., D. D., secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Christian Education, will preside. Addresses of greeting will be delivered by a number of southern collegelea ders and leading church men of America.

At 2:00 P. M. Friday the academic procession will form in front of Thaw Hall. The order of procession will be as follows. The Maryville College Choir, the Marshall, the Chairman of the Directors, the President of Maryville College, President Emeritus of Maryville College, Reverend Hugh Thomson Kerr, D. D., LL. D., Reverend William Patton Stevenson, D. D., LL. D., the Directors of Maryville College, delegates of Universities, colleges, and professional schools, delegates of learned societies, and educational association, and the faculty of Maryville College. The senior class of Maryville College will act as Guard of Honor.

The inauguration exercises, with Dr. William Chamlers Covert presiding, will occupy the rest of the afternoon. The charges to the president will be delivered by Hugh Thomson Kerr. D. D., LL. D., president of the Board of Christian Education of the Presbyterian Church in the United States.

Dr. Lloyd has chosen to have the inauguration in the fall of the year in order to avoid congestion in the spring, when much attention will be turned to the graduating class.

The arrangement of the program has been under the supervision of Dr. Lloyd, chairman; Dean Hunter, Miss Green, Dr. McMurray, Mr. Proffitt, and Miss Clemmie Henry.

WOMEN'S TENNIS TOURNEY

The women's tennis tournament will open Monday, October 5, with 43 entries. The first round must be played off by Saturday, October 10.

Although some of last year's team, including Carol Cushman, winner of the spring tournament, aren't back, Babcock, Hodges, Swafford, and Cooley will offer keen competition.

FIRST ROUND OF BOYS' MEET PLAYED OFF

The fall tennis tournament for men is under way, and all of the first round matches are expected to be played off this afternoon. There are about 45 men entered in the tournament, and competition this year will be very keen.

Although the winner of this meet will not be presented a magnificent prize, nor will his name be advertised throughout the land, it will throw some light on the material that Coach Smith will have for his team this year. Several of last year's team have not returned, but it is expected that the college will be represented by a fine racquet team this year.

Captain Dick Strain, Ed Buchanan, Talmadge, and Heflin are the men who have been lost to the team, but there are several good men left, and they will be able to hold their own against the majority of teams. Foremost among this year's contenders are Fishback, Phay, and Don Buchanan.

EDITH BURNS ILL

On Friday, September 25, Edith Burns, a graduate of Maryville College, was operated on for appendicitis. She is recoving rapidly. Edith is employed as cutter in the College Maid Shop, and she had worked until the middle of Friday afternoon. Saying that she did not feel well, she went home. At 9:00 Friday evening she was taken to the Carson Hospital, where an immediate operation was performed. Her friends wish for her as speedy a recovery as possible.

MISSISSIPPI CLUB

The Mississippi Club held its first meeting Wednesday night, September 30, and the following officers were elected for the coming year:

President: John McQueen.
Vice Pres: Dorothy Parr.
Sec.-Treas.: Lynette Johnson.
Editor: Irma Kate Vance.

OBSERVATIONS

Hikers' Theme Song
Girls Must Pay
Snap—Mature or Senile?
Patsy's Rival

Theme song for the mountain-hike —"Ninety nine out of a hundred." To put the theme into the words of his excellency, the college pastor, we might suggest this phrasing used last Sunday night, "Association Begets Assimilation." Theme or no theme, we know that everyone looks forward to the mountain hike with an eagerness of some sort. There seems to be some difficulty in getting someone to take the truck load of boys who do not have dates.

There's lots in a name. After three years we have found a high sounding reason for Marjory Jones' joining the Bainonian Literary Society. Bainonian means to travel, and from our observations, all dating recently, we assume that friend Marjory is bent on taking a Tripp. This reminds us of the girl Bob Stevenson has Tweed.

When we think of mountain hikes we think of scenic loops and that draws us to think of the "scenic skytown of Maryville College," the fourth floor of Carnegie Hall. Whenever there is a pretty sunset, and that's often, the west side of Carnegie is lined with would-be artists. Maryville is reputed to have very beautiful sunsets. It has just that, and it seems that to get the most benefit from them they must be seen from the scenic skytown.

If the students on the west side of Carnegie are more supplied with ambition than those fellows on the east side, the cause can be attributed to the inspiration they gain whenever they look out on the neighboring residence of Dr. Hussey. It seems that Dr. Hussey is always working in or about his yard. As a result he has one of the most beautiful residences in Maryville, even though it is "down by the railroad tracks." After seeing some of the handiwork of Dr. Hussey it would seem advisable to let him start a course in exterior decorating in the school.

Many were inclined to believe that our Student Council president was thinking that "one dirty dig deserves another" when she gave the mountain-hike announcement in Chapel. At least there was no doubt left in the mind of anyone as to who would pay the bills on the escapade. Perhaps our girls are in more or less of a financial depression as a result of Dr. Loyd's Self-help Department for the boys of the college.

The snap last Saturday night still appeared to be decidedly in the age of adolescence or thereabouts, instead of being grown up, as the announcement from the chapel would have led one to believe. Nevertheless, everyone seemed to enjoy himself, a fact which impresses us again with the thought that snap is good so long as it doesn't lose too much of its snap. In other words, if we have something to take the place of snap after school has set in well we might still be apt to tolerate the old game.

Men from Pearson were decidedly incensed at the scene on Baldwin porch last Saturday night several minutes after the lights had driven in the fold at Pearsons. Couples were leisurly moonshing around Baldwin as though they had the night at their disposal. This account might take the form of a warning to the girls in Pearson's to safeguard their popularity by seeing that the "younguns" at Baldwin are put to bed in the earlier hours of the evening.

No more must the girls in Pearsons trip down three flights of stairs, run through rain, snow, and other natural and unnatural elements for the purpose of ironing a dress which, on the homeward trip, often loses its appearance of neatness. An iron is to be placed in the dormitory

JUNIOR ASSOCIATE EDITORS TO BE CHOSEN TUESDAY

Two vacancies on the Highland Echo staff will be filled when the Committee on Selection meets October 13 to elect two Junior Associate Editors. The vacancies were caused by the failure of two former staff members to return to school.

Candidates for the positions have been working on assignments for the past two weeks, and the selections will be based on the writing ability and the qualities of a news-hound which each candidate has exhibited. Those trying out for the places are: Bob Overly, Arthur Lazell, Conrad Quenelle, Dorothy Krupitzer, and Leslie Webb.

Freshman Try-Outs For Highland Echo Staff Announced

Special Meeting Of Students Interested To Be Held Tuesday

On Thursday night, October 15, at 7:00 o'clock in the Y. W. C. A. auditorium in Thaw Hall, a meeting will be held for all freshmen interested in newspaper work.

Before the actual competition starts, one of the senior members of the Echo staff will briefly give to the assembled freshmen some of the cardinal principles of journalism. The respective grades will be awarded as much on the degree in which each candidate makes use of these good methods, as by the natural ability that he demonstrates.

A number of subjects embracing news and special feature articles of various types will be ready beforehand, and will be given out to the competing freshmen. The final selection of the twelve apprentices will be made in the regular way by the Committee on Selection for The Highland Echo.

All freshmen who are in any degree interested in newspaper work are urged to enter the competition. Previous experience in journalism is not a requisite. Some who have never before taken particular interest in it may, through these tryouts, discover themselves to be budding reporters.

Many Students Aided To Stay In School By Self-Help Dept.

Boarding Club, Laboratories, College Maid Shop, Offices Furnish Employment

The Maryville student-help fund, with Miss Clemmie Henry at its head as self-help secretary, is helping more than fifty per cent of Maryville students to attend school this year. Most Maryville students are familiar with the opportunities for self-help offered by the college, through the three mediums of employment, loans, and scholarships.

Every year about 500 students are given employment in the college. These jobs include work on the campus, in the offices, in the College Maid Shop, in the boarding club, and assistantships in laboratories, the library, and the bookstore. A record of each students work, wages, and grade is filed in Miss Henry's office. Not all students working in the college are paid from the student-help fund, since it is composed only of the interest from endowments. Since, however, the boarding club, the bookstore, the College Maid Shop, and the farm are self supporting, a great many students are helped by them.

Students may also take advantage of the college loan plan. A record of these loans, when made, and when paid, is kept in Miss Henry's office.

The third means of self-help offered by the College is scholarships. Two scholarships are offered, one of $24 and one of $18. The first of these is given to the freshman who made the highest scholastic record in his high school class, and is given to the student regardless of need. The other scholarship of $18 is offered to ministers' children who are in need of this additional help. Both scholarships are given during the student's first year only.

New Students Are Advised Of Correct Hiking Etiquette

Do's, Don't's And May's Clearly Outlined In Official Guide

Special to the freshmen and new students. Upperclassmen disregard

Every year there comes a time when a certain amount of advice must be given to the inexperienced and the ignorant. This advice may be absorbed or it may be ignored, but is is in reality a part of the extensive orientation program to which all new students are being subjected. Since wisdom is the principal thing, and since we are admonished to "therefore, get wisdom," it is hoped that the few following helpful hints will be wisely received and just as cautiously carried out.

The first requirements for correct mountain hike procedure is that each participant must hike. The minimum distance is ten miles, although this distance is inversely proportionate to the degree of perpendicular hiking; that is, the steeper the climb the less distance the hiker is obligated to cover.

On the Tuesday following the mountain hike an honor report will be taken from each group as a whole. Thus, if there are twenty members in a group the distance turned in by the group leader must not be less than two hundred miles. Of course, if two or three mountains are climbed the distance will probably be less than ten miles per person, but an allowance will be made in proportion to the climb, as stated before. The group leader should, therefore, be a mathematics major so that careful calculations of the climbs of calisthentic collegians may be submitted to the president of the Student Council for her consideration, perusal, and condemnation or congratulation.

JOINT MEETING OF "Y'S" TOMORROW

Oct. 10.—Tomorrow afternoon at 1:15 the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A. will hold a joint meeting in the Y. W. C. A. auditorium in Thaw Hall. Dr. Lloyd will address the groups and lead in a sort of round table discussion. His subject wil be, "Interpretation of Regulations." This meeting will be the first of several joint meetings which will be held during the year.

Government statistics recently published reveal that Soviet Russia's compulsory education campaign is running 110 per cent ahead of schedule. During the czarist regime the most ever in school was 7,235,000. Last year there were 17,612,000 in Russian schools.

New Men Organize Fellowship Club Monday Evening

Reporter Gives News Of Y. M. Boys' Mountain Hike. Cross-Country Run

The new men have organized the Fellowship Club and have elected the following leaders for the year: James Smith, President; James Laig, vice-president; and James Crothers, secretary-treasurer. The club will meet in Bartlett Hall Monday night after supper for a varied program; all new men are invited. It is the purpose of the present administration of the Y. M. C. A. to form from this group freshman cabinet which will work into the senior cabinet next year.

The annual fall cross-country run, sponsored by the Y. M. C. A. will be held this year in the early part of November. A silver loving cup is awarded the winner, and a prize is also given the man who takes second place. Anyone who thinks he can run five miles is urged to come out and start training immediately, since no one should compete in this race without first getting into condition for it.

The Y. M. C. A. sponsors a mountain hike for the men every fall. This year the event is planned for the last of October. The men will leave the Hill on Saturday afternoon and return the following Sunday afternoon.

Sometime in the near future work will be started on the Y. M. C. A. auditorium, which is to be cleaned up, repaired, and redecorated. New seats may be put in, and the stage will be enlarged so that the college debates can be held there. The reading and recreation rooms are now open every afternoon after three o'clock for the use of the fellows. They will find there a pool table, chess and checker sets, many current periodicals, and two daily papers.

FIRST FORMAL DINNER WEDNESDAY

On Wednesday evening, October 14, the first formal dinner of the year will be held. It is not to be formal in the sense that formal evening dress is in order, but formal to the extent that everyone should dress in his "Sunday best." John Phay and his cornet will provide the dinner music. It has been suggested that instead of waiting for the faculty to leave the table as has been done formerly, as soon as the music is over everyone rise and leave the dining room.

On the Wednesday evening preceding Thanksgiving a real formal dinner will be given in which everyoen may dress in true formal style.

One of a group of five famous American portraits on exhibition at the Metropolitan Museum is one by Samuell Morse, inventor of the telegraph, who was an artist before he took up invention.

Naming No Names, But—ByBeale

Although the upper two-thirds of various and sundry high school classes put preceding frosh to shame with their erudition in the customary psych test, nevertheless wise cracks, intentional and otherwise, were resplendently displayed. Miss Gamble states that two assistant laughers were required on some papers, while marvelers were needed on others.

Some, yea most, of the frosh knew the difference between a Mongolian mousetrap and a Siberian stork, but a few were as uniformed on such subjects as Hawaiian Hottentots. One member of the initial order tried to cover his agrarian descent by decaring that a young goose is a gander; another was sure that it is a duckling (we who know, of course, would have named it as monstrosity).

We have an idea that Prof. Griffitts had a hand in the construction of the papers (Miss Gamble says not), since simple chemicall truths were supposed to be forthcoming. One enterprising stude proclaimed for the enlightenment of certain well-known advertisers that the sum of the chemical changes going on in the body is known, to him at least, as halitosis. Another proved his ignorance of small quantities by gravely stating that one fourth of a pint is correctly called a dram.

Miss Preen will be shocked to learn that one of her students, whether potential or actual in answer to a question asking the name of the highest class of vertebrates, named monkeys as the natural solution to that problem. She will also be intersted to know that a person of eighty years is commonly known to new studetns as an octagon; to one, at least, such a person is called an invalid, and to another, "Grandpa."

Some of our potential ministers will be greatly amused to learn that a seminary is not a place where one learn the art of the clergy and joy, but it is a house of religious retirement for persons under religious vows. As a final blow to what we are wont to call our pride in our education, we have learned from a prominent freshman's paper that our old definition of a decade is as incorrect as our attempts to explain relativity. In spite of the fact that Dr. Stevenson claims to have been with us several decades, this paper states that one lasts for a thousand years.

MILDRED MacKENZIE ELECTED HEAD OF STUDENT COUNCIL

Oct. 7.—In a called meeting held tonight in Pearsons parlor, Mildred MacKenzie was elected president of the Student Council for this year by acclamation. By a like vote Lea Calloway was chosen vice-president of the organization. Hubert L. Duncan was elected secretary-treasurer.

After having some trouble in determining a time, the group decided to meet every other Tuesday after supper in the Y. W. C. A. reading room in Thaw Hall. The next scheduled meeting of the Council will be on October 20.

Seniors Will Have Theatre Party Next Monday Evening

Hobo Party; Tacky Attire; Unusual Debates In Store

Oct. 10.—On Monday night, the seniors will exercise their senior privileges by going to the Palace Theatre and witnessing the antics of Laurel and Harry in "Pardon Us." Some of these dignfied upperclassmen are already bemoaning the fact that they have seen the picture and will thereby gain nothing from the privilege except an opportunity, if it could be called such, of re-seeing the show. However, their burden is lightened by the fact that they will be rewarded afterwards at Walker's Drug Store. Thus the anti-ciptation of the dessert will successfully carry them through the burden of the main course.

For the past two meetings of the senior class the main element in the meetings has been argumentation. Professor Queener would doubtless find excellent material for a varsity debate squad among the participants in senior class meeting discussions. Premature adjournment is usually carried out in order that no fatalities may occur. It is indeed a pitiable state for the upperclassmen to be in, especially at the beginning of the school year. Perhaps the situation may improve. At any rate, some of the seniors are hoping for more amicable peace-meetings in the future.

Mahatma Ghandi Is Doomed To Failure Dr. Lloyd Thinks

Hindu Leader Must Be Judged By Standards Of India, President Says

Dr. Ralph W. Lloyd, president of Maryville College, believes that Mahatma Gandhi's plea to allow India to return to the simple, pastoral life will be unsuccessful. The president feels that great industrialism is in India to stay.

Of the man Gandhi, himself, he says:

"Through actual leadership, personality, and the idealism built around him, Gandhi has become a leader. Some Indians respect him as a god.

"He makes his appeal to the imagination of people. His spinning wheel, loin-cloth, shawl, and pots and pans are not for publicity's sake, either. They are merely symbolical of Gandhi's request that India be allowed to develop its simplicity.

Continuing, the president added:

"The charge that can be placed against Great Britain is that, while she has been in India for a long time, comparatively little has been accomplished.

Great Britain needs to increase her wisdom with respect to India, but she must also bear the responsibility of protecting the country for a long time. Though Britain must keep India for altruistic motives, she may want it for other purposes.'

Questioned as to what he thought the present condition of England might have on the Round Table Conference, in London, Dr. Lloyd replied that, in all probabilities, some placating settlement—which may appease the Indians for a few years—might be reached.

He does not think that any other

Committee On Hike Reports Plans Are Nearing Completion

Indian Gap Is Most Popular; Few Groups Go To Cade's Cove

Plans for the Fall Mountain Hike been practically compelted. Friday evening according to an announcement of the committee from the Studet Council in charge of arrangements.

The plan followed this year is similar to the one used last spring. Groups of 20 students are furnished a truck and given the choice of three places to go. This year the places chosen were: Indian Gap, Cade's Cove or Rymers Ferry in North Carolina.

IndianGap has proven to be the most popular as a greater part of the groups have signed for this trip. It is a beautiful mountain spot high up in the Smokies and located on the Tennessee-North Carolina line. To reach this place a ride of about 45 miles is made through some of the finest scenery in the Smoky Mountains.

From the number already signed up for trucks the hike wil probably be a success so far as attendance is concerned. As many, if not more, students are availing themselves of this opportunity this year than did so last year. This may be due to the reduced cost of transportation promised this year. While the price has not definitely been fixed, it is assured that a reasonable sum will be asked.

Breakfast on the morning of the hike will be at the regular time but trucks will load and depart immediately after so that all groups will be well on the way to the chosen "paradise" by 7:30 o'clock.

Literary Societies Promise Interesting Programs Tonight

Eats At Walker's Will Follow Trip To Movies

Bainonian Literary Society travellers have felt the effects of the recent (?) economic depression to such an extent that they are asking the new Bainonians to come to the meeting tonight dressed as hobos. Don't look prosperous, please. This unfortunate circumstance will not affect the quality of the program however. Come and hear the readings and the selections by the Bainonian Vocal Ensemble. The planned program proves that once Bainonians were accustomed to more comfortable and luxurious mode of traveling.

Tonight Theta's mysterious past will be lceared up. Not only is this of interest for the new girls but for the old ones as well. Even the old members have not yet heard all there is to know about Theta's past. The program for tonight is shrouded in mystery and secrecy. New Thetas and old ones, come to hear about Theta's past.

Every new girl must come to the meeting dressed backwards and wearing one white stocking and one black one. Any new Theta appearing not attired in this manner will be refused admittance.

The "Willis Murder Trial' will begin, to-night, at the Alpha Sigma meeting. During the evening, Jack Nee will furnish results of outstanding football games held during the day.

Chilton Bolles, singing; and Harold Myers, Frank Thornhill, and Reno Smith, in a harmonical presentation, conclude the program.

"Resolved: That all Freshmen should be barred from participation in mountain hikes."

Richard Orr will take the affirmative, and Robert Stevenson and Al Duff, the negative, to-night, at the Athenian meeting.

Others taking part in the program are: Harry Wood, invocation; George Brown, "When the Train Comes In"; Byar and Kipp; and Burton Toms, on the piano.

Thirty Issues Per School Year by the Student Body of Maryville College

Subscription Rates, $1.25 per annum

Entered at the Post Office, Maryville Tenn., as Second Class Matter, November 11, 1915.

SATURDAY, OCT. 10, 1931

APPRECIATION

Consistent with the policy of the nation and industry of furnishing jobs to as many men as possible in this period of economic depression, the administration of Maryville College is completing a program of construction and repair that has helped many students to matriculate who could not do so without this opportunity to earn the needed capital.

Coupled with this altrusic motive was the desire to make Maryville a better place to look upon and to live within. The painting and redecorating of rooms in the various dormitories has materially aided the removal of that feeling of "bearable domesticity" and replaced it with one of "enjoyable living" in rooms which are not perpetually an eyesore.

The student body, prone as we are to take these expressions of kindness as a matter of course, nevertheless feels grateful to the administration for its timely and its thoughtful consideration of our living conditions. We no longer stare at nail-scarred and dirty walls while unravaling a knotty problem; we no longer grope with outstretched hands through the dim passages of Anderson Hall; we do not need to wear hipboots to Pearsons Hall on rainy nights; nor need we be ashamed to show our football stands to student-friends from other institutions.

Of course there are many things yet to be done to make conditions ideal, and this must always be the case, since the ideal can never be attained, but as we have enjoyed improvements our alumi were not privileged to enjoy, so we hope that those who follow us may have things more convenient and more helpful than we have had.

A complete paving of campus streets; an auditorium with a large seating capacity and stage facilities, and the removal of our efficient smoke screen generator between Anderson and Memorial Halls are among the things fondly desired, but they must come in their time. Just now we wish to stay "Thanks" for the things which have been done, and we hope to show our appreciation by increased loyalty to our Alma Mater.

OUR NEW PRESIDENT

For the first time in the history of the Student Council of Maryville College, a woman is guiding its destiny. Just what the outcome of this will be is, of course, only conjecture; just what plans will be originated and realized under this new order of things, remains to be seen and discussed later. However, it is only reasonable to expect that, had this step been taken a few years back, the story of our Council might have been different.

Besides the generally accepted fact that "when women do things, they do them right," Miss MacKenzie, the new president, has always been one to attempt, and carry to a successful conclusion, original ideas and programs in any work that she undertakes. The fact that she has always been found present to aid in any forward-moving enterprise undertaken by the students, speaks well for her progressiveness.

Such a person is sorely needed at the head of the student body this year. Although the president is not empowered to legislate of himself, he is in a position to greatly influence legislation and, more important yet, to make the Student Council a working and valuable unit of the college activities. For several years students have been seeking justification for the Council; have been searching for something really constructive that has been done by that body, but all to no avail. From the files of the ECHO,—news clippings, editorial comments and even jokes concerning the inefficiency and uselessness of the Council have been gleaned. Of course, after much coercion on the part of the students, the Council has, semi-annually, aroused frm its stupor long enough and sufficiently enough to plan a mountain hike, but, immediately after this business is completed, sinks again into blissful slumber. Just why this Morphian urge strikes each body immediately after organization is not known, but it is a fact that, year by year, the president plans grandly, dreams beauifully, and then forgets to wake up.

For the coming year, to offset this somnolent urge, we place our faith in womankind. The student body thinks the choice has been wise; the Council members are ready and eager to work with her; there are many things that are crying for attention. Its up to you, Mildred, and we're all behind you.

Madison, Wis.—(IP)—Plans for the creating of a "university city" have been developed by the regents of the University of Winconsin here, as a means of relieving the meagre housing facilities for the several thousand students of the university.

Discovering that the present dormitory system cares for only 500 men and 365 women, that fraternity and sorority houses take care of only 1,500 men and 600 women, and that the rest of the 6,000 students stay in rooming houses, poorly ventilated and lighted and without proper toilet facilities, the regents have worked out a plan whereby the university would purchase land on the ridge overlooking Lake Mendota, and offer rent-free sites to all fraternities and sororities that wish to build thereon.

There would also be college dormitories on the ridge, and each unit would be carefully plotted and landscaped in accord with the whole group. Because of a "lobby" of rooming house owners in the city, permission to go ahead with such a plan was turned down by the last legislature, so that the regents must wait until 1932 before they can obtain the necessary legislation.

MOUNTAIN HIKE

Maps of Blount County and the Great Smoky Mountain National Park will be provided each group leader, who will distribute this means of guidance to his group members. All freshmen or any students taking freshman English are required to write an expository, descriptive, narrative theme on the experience encountered on the mountain hike. Those who fail to make below F will be required to go on another hike.

Uniforms are not required, but it is deemed wise by those who know, that each hiker wear a standard uniform. Gym suits are probably the best kind of uniform because a special purchase of paraphernalia will thus be avoided. This suggested uniform is for the protection of the hikers in order that they may be distinguished from the rest of the mountaineers.

Each group leader must see that at least four rolls of films are taken and representative group and individual pictures made. All pictures must be developed at Webb's Studio after which the best pictures will be put on exhibition in all the down town stores and on all bulletin boards on the campus. These pictures should set forth pictorially the advantages of the mountain hike.

As a final suggestion each group leader should carry a gun so that protection from the wild life in the mountains may be assured. Group leaders who are not experienced gunmen will practice marksmanship in the Alumni Gymnasium during the week of October 12 to 17 under the direction of students from Chicago and vicinity.

If these suggestions and bits of advice are carried out the mountain hike will undoubtedly be a success.

THE ECHO FORUM

Communications to this department are welcomed and will be published verbatim in so far as possible. However the ECHO reserves the right to cut copy where it can be done without altering the attitude of the text and to remove remarks characterized to cause personal injury. Anonymous communications will receive no consideration.

The following letter was put into the hands of the managing editor, but she, not knowing how to accurately answer the puzzling problem submits it to the perusal of HIGHLAND ECHO readers.

DATES—WHERE ARE THEY?

The old students have noticed a decided decrease in the number of dates had on the Hill this fall and consequently an increase in the number of Old Maid Societies and Batchelors Conventions.

Most any time you can hear young men and young women singing with great feeling. "I ain't got no-body and no-body cares for me."

On studying the cause the following questions are to be considered:

Are the new girls bashful?
Are the new boys bashful?
Are the new girls unattractive?
Are the new boys not handsome?
Are the new boys broke?

Careful research on the above questions has resulted in the following conclusios:

The new girls are not bashful.
The new boys are not very bashful.
The new girls are attractive.
Some of the new boys are good looking.
The boys may be broke but that shouldn't affect noon dates and pep-meetings and ball-games and church and vespers.

What, then, can be the reason?

That's what I'd like to know!

On all sides we hear girls say: 'Look at all those boys without dates and I didn't have an offer."

And on all sides we hear boys say: 'Look at all those girls and I couldn't get a date."

Why can't we have a little cooperation?

SUPERIOR SCOTTIES

With the coming of a new series of seniors, a new series of dissertations is to be expected, said treatises to be the discussions of he merits and accomplishments of some of the most noteworthy members of the august body. But, to use the phraseology of our worthy president, a few words should be devoted for the enlightenment of the new students.

This column, sometimes voluminous and at other times brief, is dedicated to the men and women who have been assiduously and diligently pursuing their course of study for the last few (as a rule, four) years. In the allotted space we attempt a brief summary of the discussed senior's past. If it is bright, great is the glory thereof; if shady—well—even Lover's Lane is shady in spots. As a word of advice to the seniors who, perchance, willl read this column, we wish to admonish you that you be not dismayed if all your honors, etcetera, are not set forth. Rest in peace. Some things are designated to be merely known, not broadcast.

As food for what we are pleased to all thought, let us recall our wandering neurons and focus them upon the person—attractive person—of Mildred MacKenzie, who, as newly-elected president of the student body, has the signal honor of being the first female head of that concern. And not only does Mac occupy the office of chief Scot of the whole bunch of us Highlanders, but she is also a graduate in piano and expression. We wanted to say at first that Mac lives in Chattanoga, but failure to spell it correctly made us wait until the old brain was inspired. Anyhow, they do say that she entertains ideas of returning there to teach when, as, and if she safely negotiates the cap and gown route next June. But whether she teaches in Chattanooga or Paducah, whether she marries or does some other kind of work, we'll say, "Rabbit feet and horse shoes."

STUDENT'S FORGET KNOWLEDGE EASILY

New York—(IP)—The college senior fared rather more badly than the college freshmen in a report issued his past summer by the Carngie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching.

According to the report, based on tests given more than 10,000 college students in Pennsylvania colleges and universities, the "ravages of forgetting" caused the senior to lose, even before getting his sheepskin, much of the knowledge he had acquired during four years at school.

"The college senior recognizes only 61 out of 100 words in familiar use by educated persons," the report said. "The effect of college on the word supply of the ordinary student appears to be almost negligible and in some cases positively injurious."

"The school and college curriculum," the report added, "consists of little else but isolated packages of specific ideas, segregated for the time being in self-contained courses, elected semester-wise and cut off by examinations and credits from any other living conditions. The sacredness of such systems of credit coinage dominates both teacher and pupil.

"The raw information which the courses had presented and which, with proper treatment, might have contributed to a fine body of intellectual equipment, was dumped outright at the close of the successive terms, and when the student came out of college his effective knowledge amounted to little more than when as a freshman he entered the school.

Oct. 7.—The Junior class held a meeting today in the Y. W. C. A. auditorium. A plan was made by the treasurer of the class for the students to pay class dues.

Special mention was given the Chilhowean by Margaret Melody editor of the year book. Al Duff, athletic director for the juniors, asked all the men to come out for the class football practice next week in preparation for the inter-class tag football contest.

In remarks of this type in other college periodicals, the column is invariably headed "EXCHANGES." We hope that your pardon is with us if we turn dialectical and head ours thusly as seen above.

It is the purpose of this column to give students here an idea of the happenings at other schools——.

On the first day of August Dr. D. M. Douglas, chief executive of the University of South Carolina, succumbed to a stroke of apoplexy. Dr. Douglas was a man not only admired by those with whom he worked, but loved and respected by them. In a eulogistic editorial, the editor of the Gamecock stated that "a great preacher had deid—an educator has passed away—a splendid teacher is no more."

Maryvilles moonshing has been surpassed! Twenty-one couples of alumni-ae from Augustana College took the vow this summer in spite of the current depression of which the tabloids make so much talk. And they give medals for bravery in the wars!!

Lenoir-Rhyne has also elected a pair of new cheer-leaders. We can't see for the life of us what they intend to do with them, as they are all ready in possession of a pair as good as new. Perhaps they are using Ga. Tech's dual-team system.

Every school in each of the forty-eight states has just completed rush-week. More news.

Wesleyan Students Will Follow Team To Maryville Next Friday

SPORTS EDITOR OF WESLEYAN PAPER SAYS TEAMS BIGGEST GAME IS ONE WITH SCOTS; MARYVILLE WILL BE PUSHED

THEY'LL GIVE TROUBLE

And Capt. McDaniels Specializes In Breaking Peoples Hearts; We Remember Wilson

The Wesleyan Bull Dogs are confronted this season by the strongest opposition in their gnid history. Maryville College contributes the hardest and strongest team booked against Wesleyan. There exists between the two teams a spirit that pushes both to their utmost in their zeal to conquer he other. Maryville has always had the edge over Wesleyan in some way. This may be accepted for at least to an extent, by the two different types of schools, Wesleyan being only a Junior College. Nevertheless, the game is always looked forward to with the keenest anticipation by the Wesleyan rooters.

The Bull Dogs have ffaced two foes in the past three weeks. Without much trouble they were able to defeat the University of Chattanooga Frosh 13-0. The following game was not sofavorable for the Bull Dogs. They lost to Milligan 19-6. This game is an instance where it is conceded by a large group that the score does not speak adequately within itself. Due to injuries sustained by Gregory and Wilson, two MMaryville men will remember from last year, a great driving impetus was taken from the team.

Captain (Q. B.) McDaniels is playing very much "heads up ball," this season. His running in practice —and the last two games has been superb. Re is commanding a team that is believed superior to anything Wesleyan has ever produced. Coach McCray has drilled his boys on the technique of blocking and running so well that it is a privilege to watch them perform.

Wesleyan wil invade the Highlander's territory, battling them on their own plateaus, Friday night, Oct. 15. Bradually there has grown up around the Wesleyan Campus a school spirit that is remarkagie. This backing has materialized into a thing that has caused the team to take on an extra amount of courage and daring. With this equivment Wesleyan looks forward to the fray with keen delight. A large crowd is expected to attend the game, and give Wesleyan their support.

SPORT SLANTS

By BOB RULE

Week by week the Highlanders, as a football team, seem to improve. In the opening game of the season they showed unexpected strength in defeating L. M. U. and the week following they held Tennessee to a 33 to 0 score and Maryville followers became quite enthused. But if they were enthused over seeing the favorite sons hold the Vols to 33 points, they just ought to have seen those guys in Lexington last Saturday.

The Wildcats scored their first touchdown shortly after the game started but the Maryville team started immediately after the marker had been made against them and from then on until the half was over, it was Maryville's ball game in every sense of the word. Old Shipwreck Kelly, God bless him and his chauffeur, played on Maryville's side during the first half. Of course Shipwreck didn't really don an orange and garnet uniform but you see, everything that he did seemed to profit Maryville more than it did the Cats.

A good football player though he is, Kelly smply could not get going without a little assistance from his team mates. He took the ball time and agin and almost single handed fought his way for several nice gains but the majority of his efforts went for naught. He tried his forward passes, he couldn't complete forward passes. He tried plunging through the Maryville forward wall but Overley, Tolliver, Ferguson and the rest said "no." He tried the ends and Easy and Smilie said "they shall not pass" and all in all it just wasn't old Shipwreck's day to run.

I have heard that when Jim Thorpe was playing football for Haskell Institute, he was playing against Knute Rockne, of Notre Dame. On the first play, Rockne stopped Thorpe for no gain and Big Jim got up and said, "Knute, why don't you let old Jim run. These people came out here to see him run, so let old Jim run." There were about six thousand people inthe stands at Kentucky and no doubt the majority of them came just to see old Shipwreck run. Maybe if he had pleaded with the Maryville boys a little they would have let him run.

Capt. Lea Calloway brought the Maryville cheering section to their feet in the third quarter. (The rooters numbered about 15 but you should have heard us let out a squak.) Shipwreck Kelly dropped back for a forward pass and he threw one for about 40 yards, 20 yards up and 20 more coming down, and Lea came charging in and snagged the ball and lit out for the promised land. He stiff armed a few tacklers, dodged some more, and just naturally walked over some of the other ones but Touchdowns Common As Scots Beat Powerless Team From Ky.

Union Little Better Than High School Team; Highlanders Grew Tired Of Scoring

WESLEYAN NEXT

Visitors Offense Ineffective While Maryville Runs Plays As They Want 'Em Run

Maryville College Highlanders continued their brilliant performance last night and defeated a powerless Union College team from Barbourville, Ky., by an overwhelming score of 51 to 0. The Maryville team scored in the first, third and fourth quarters, the reserve team failing to score in the second period.

The Maryville team received and they never lost possession of the ball until they had crossed the goal line. They marched straight down the field making first down after first down and the drive ended only when Capt. Lea Calloway sprinted 25 yards across the goal line. The try for the additional unit was good when Capt. Lea sent a perfect placement between the bars.

Calloway also scored the nex marker when Union got off a bad kick and Maryville received the ball on the 20 yard line. Woodard got the third one after Boretsky had returned a punt to the 40 yard line and added a 20 yard run. Woodard crashed straight through the line for his score. The try for extra point failed and a complete new team replaced the varsity and finished the half.

It was in the second quarter that he visitors had their only chance to score. With the reserves in the game, Union engineered a lateral pass that was good for 12 yards and first down. Then a forward pass caught the secondary defense off guard and went for a 40 yard gain to place the ball deep in Maryville territory. They took the ball to the two yard line but the reserve line showed that they were made of he same stuff that the varsitymen are and held for downs and kicked out.

The team fumbled a little later to give the ball to Union on the 25 yard line and again they were in position to score. This time they took the ball about as close to the goal line as they possibly could without being over but they could not muster the punch to cross the line. All of the time that Union had the ball in Maryville territory, Coach Honaker did not send his varsitymen into the game, choosing rather to make the reserves stand their ground.

The first team started back at the start of the second half and again the fireworks statrted. Boretsky returned a Union kick 35 yards to the 20 yard line but a play or two failed to produce first down and Maryville lost the ball when a pass fell incomplete over the goal line. The Scots were not to be denied however and Boretsky raced back with another punt to the 25 yard line and Captain Lea grabbed the ball from scrimmage and raced the remaining distance for another marker.

Maryville scored a little later when Joe Woodard intercepted a pass and made a beautiful run with it. They carried the ball to the five yard line and Joe smashed center for the score. The Scots blocked a punt a little later and recovered on the two yard line from where Beretsky went over for the sixth score of the battle. The quarter ended a little later and this ended the varsitymen's service. Coach Honaker sent in substitutes as fast as he could call them off the bench.

The Highlanders scored two more in the last quarter with a mixed lineup in the game. Coach Honaker kept just a very few of his varsity men in the game and they put across two touchdowns plays when Boretsky galloped back with a punt and went deep into Union terrtory. After a few plays had taken the ball near the goal line, "Foots" Allen smashed the littleUnionline for the score. The final score of the game came when Maryville blocked a punt and recovered on the two yard line from where Josef Woodard went over. At this stage, Coach Honaker removed every single one of his varsitymen and left the game to the second and third teams.

If you think that Union was even in the ball game, just take a look at the statistics that were compiled by the Higland Echo's statisticians. After an all night investigation, we found that Maryville made 12 first downs and Union moved the chain but three times against reserves. Maryville tried seven forward passes, completed three, had two intercepted and two knocked down. Union made 14 heaves through the ozone, two of wihch fell as directed, one was taken by a Maryville player and exactly 11 fell in uninhabited terra firma, whatever that means.

Maryville Surprises Blue Grass; Shipwreck Kelly Is Shipwrecked

MIGHTY MAN KELLY THROWS PASSES TO MARYVILLE PLAYERS AND SUFFERS HUMILIATION IN VARIOUS OTHER WAYS

SEEN AND HEARD ON 'TUCKY TRIP

Jokes, wise cracks, noises emitting from the oral cavities of a few who got the idea that they could sing, magazines, newspapers, and games of solitaire (?) dominated the action on the trip of the football team to the lair of the Kentucky Wildcat. Here are a few of 'em::

Just as the Bus was ready to leave Bartlett Hall, Pee Wee Overley, fully realizing his importance on this football team, said, "awright you freshmen get out of that back seat and let us have it." Cecil Stone, being one of the rudely addressed ones, answered, "Yes, your Highness."

On the way up, we had to change trains at Winchester, Ky., and every one got out and walked out in the street to stretch his weary limbs. We were standing in the road, playing traffic cop, and a bird in an old grey Essex drove by and waved a gun about as longe as your arm, "Everything's all right, boys" he said, and to make bad matters worse, his lady (?) friend in the back seat waved another gat at us and the ones that could run beat it back to the train. Carper was closest to the car and he couldn't move an inch. Somebody yelled, "where are we, at Harlan."

The initiation of the freshmen and non-letter men, was the event that caused so much comment. The frosh had the lettermen outnumbered considerably and so they rebelled and had plans set to a little "paddling" themselves. But they changed their plans after some of the old men kicked about not ggetting their revenge for being initiated when they were freshmen and so the boys took it like the good sports that they are.

Some of the boys who hitch-hiked up eased in the Pullman, crawled under the "bunks' and slept in peace on the way back. The next morning, the Porter came through and said, "You all bettah see if dey's enny more of dem boys undah theah, they might still be sleepin'."

Here's one more thing that it too good to pass up. When we went down to the station on the night after the game, some remark was made about Shipwreck Kelly. A small Boy Scout, standing nearby had been an usher and seen the game and he said: "I think Calloway's about as good as Shipwreck, if you ask me."

CALLOWAY STEPS OUT

Coach Gamage Expected To Use Lots Of Men Against Scots But Couldn't; Score 19-0

Maryville College's Highlanders won more glory for themselves last week when they held a powerful University of Kentucky team to a close 19 to 0 victory. The Maryville team out-played the Wildcats in every department of the game during the first half and on numerous occasions took the ball to the very shadow of the Kentucky goal posts.

The Cats kicked off to Maryville and on the first play of the game, Wilson fumbled and a wide awake Kentucky man pounced on the ball on Maryville's 19 yard line. A play or two took the ball to the 20 yard line and Ellis Johnson, brilliant Kentucky quarterback took thu ball off tackle and cut into the open field and sprinted the necessary 20 yards for the first score of the game. Captain Babe Wright place kicked the extra point and it looked like a gloomy afternoon for the boys from Tennessee.

The Highlanders took the ball however the next time that they came in possession of it and marched straight down the field on line plays, short forward passes and end runs mixed up confusingly and the attack swept the Cats off their feet and the Scots had the ball on the 13 yard line with first down. Here the line stiffened and the ball went over to Kentucky after a Maryville pass went over the goal line incomplete.

Evidently thinking that the Highlanders had spent their fury in this sustained drive, the Wildcats immediately kicked out to the Highlanders but the Maryville team only started down the field with the ball again and had the Kentucky fans on the edge of their seats. However, it seemed that fate was against them and they again failed to cross the last white line.

The Kentuckians took an indifferent attitude after they had scored their touchdown before the game had hardly started, but when they found that Maryville had an offense of their own, it was a different story. Try as they might, they could not stop the Maryville passing attack and gain after gain was made through the air. Calloway to White seemed to be the working principle and this combination was responsible for plenty of yardage.

Cora Houk, '31, Writes Of Work In New Mexico

The following letter has been received by the editor, who passes it on to readers of The Highland Echo. Cora was a graduate of 1931 and is having an interesting and varied experience in New Mexico.

Embudo School ,
Dixon, New Mexico,
September 5, 1931.

After a week at Dixon, I feel that I am beginning to become acquainted. School does not begin until Tuesday, but there has been and still is plenty to do before that time.

Dixon is a town of about 400, that is, including the inhabitants for about five miles around. The town itself is very small, and not at all like our Eastern ones. It looks more like a country district outside a larger town, but here it is quite a center. The houses are all built of mud and straw, but of course many of them are plastered over so that they look more like stone. The houses themselves are a dark tan, and in many of them you would see a peculiar shade of blue around the doors and windows. That shade of blue, so they tell us, is to keep the devil out. Of course that holds true only of the most superstitious of them. Within a radius of five miles, I would say there are only about three or four American families. Everyone else is Spanish, but fortunately most of them, with the exception of the tiny tots and the very old ones, also speak English. In the town is the Presbyterian Hospital (which is just a little house, only room for two patients at a time), where there are two nurses (one of them is from Reading, Pa.,), our house, which has three large bedrooms, a large living room, dining room, and kitchen. Then attached right to this is our three room school house. There are four very small grocery stores (one of these includes the Post Office), several dwelling houses and a Catholic mission. I believe that the Catholic priest and the Presbyterians do not get along well, and if everything I hear about the priest is true I don't wonder they do not. Oh, yes, we have a church too, with a Spanish pastor. He surely is fine, but he is leaving in a month or so, and they have a new one, an Anglo-Saxon who speaks Spanish. All the church and Sunday School services are in Spanish, except of course the classes taught by the teachers here at the school. I have to teach one tomorrow, so I expect I won't be so bored as I was last Sunday. I sat through two hours of Spanish services, not understanding a word. One of the teachers (there are three of us) speaks Spanish fairly well, but the other one and I don't know anything, so I think we are going to have a teacher to come and teach us one night a week.

The school equipment is very poor—we don't have half enough books to go around, and it will make it all the harder to teach. We spent this morning thinking how to make the little money allotted us by the Board go the farthest. We do not have a furnace but a stove in each room, and they say the weather gets ten below in the winter time, so I see where I meet my Waterloo. We also have to draw water from the well in a bucket, which is hard to work. We do have electric lights—they have a plant at the hospital, and we have to wait at nights until they turn the current on down there, and sometimes they don't seem in a hurry about it. So that means we can't have any electric appliances like irons, etc.

I have been initiated into the mysteries of irrigation. We have a garden and a lot of flowers, which have to be irrigated every week, because we don't have much rain. This week we have canned peaches, pears, beets, and made lots of jelly. So you see it is not only school practice that one gets, but training for housewifery as well. I believe that when school begins we will have a girl come in every day and do the cleaning and some of the cooking. Of course the Board does not allow for that, but labor is cheap here, so it will not be such a financial burden and will relieve us of some of the physical burden.

The other two teachers are both young and jolly and we have awfully good times, and I like it lots. Everyone around here says it looks so funny to have three young girls living here; for the past fifteen years an older women has been in charge, and believe me, from what they say she surely was a slave driver. She believed in keeping everyone stepping, but she has retired now. Someone told me the lure of the West would "get" me, and I believe that is true. In spite of the fairly hard work, etc., I know I am going to like it fine.

We are entirely surrounded by mountains—everywhere we look they loom before us. Of course they do not have so much vegetation as the eastern and southern mountains, nevertheless they are very pretty. Last night the sister of one of the teachers was coming, and so we got all ready for a picnic supper out in the mountains, but she didn't get here until after dark, so we couldn't go. We are five miles from the station, and it would be a great convenience to have a car, so we could get to Sante Fe (about 50 miles away), and Albuquerque (about 150 miles). Perhaps next year or so we can buy one.

Last Sunday the Catholics had a feast day. There are two halls right across from us, and they had dances in both of them, and we surely did see the sights. People came from even as far as Sante Fe. Many of them got drunk and they had one stabbing. That is mild, they tell me, as they usually have someone killed. The Spanish seem to be very quick with the knife.

Well, I guess I have told you about everything I know, and I imagine you are weary reading. Remember, I just long for letters from Maryville.

Sincerely,
CORA HOUK.

some guy had to out across the field and stop Lea and spoil our fun.

The biggest laugh I got out of the trip was reading the newspaper accounts that were published a day or so before the game. They all stated that it would be the Wildcat's last easy game, and that Coach Gamage would have a chance to try out all of his men and a few other such things, but things changed radically before the game was over. First of all the game wasn't easy—Coach Gamage used exactly 12 men, count 'em, the first three quarters and used only 16 during the whole game. Every time the Maryville boys got the ball during the first half, with the exception of the time when they lost it on a fumble, they took it straight to the Kentucky goal line and on more than one occasion it looked as if we would score.

UNION GAME

So far as we could tell, Union gained practically all of their yardage on the forward pass. They gained 25 yards on their two good passes while Maryville could gain but 40 yards through the air. The combined kicking efforts of the Maryville punters averaged exactly 35 yards for three kicks while Union averaged 30 yards on 10 tries. Union drew 45 yards in penalties and 40 yards were subtracted from the Maryville yardage.

Ole Joe Woodard is making Calloway a mighty good running mate these days. Last week at Kentucky, Joe went off tackle for about 15 yards and one of the longest gains from scrimmage that Maryville made during the game and his playing was entirely satisfactory. Last night he must have felt frisky. Every time he got the ball he seemed to try to see how many hula hip motions he could make and the result was that several Union men bit the dust.

Lea payed his same good brand of ball and shared the scoring honors with Woodard. They scored three each. Boretsky made one of the others on a quarterback sneak and Goose Allen crashed the center of the line for the remaining score. The Maryville line was unpenetrable throughout the game. Tolliver, Overley, Chandler, all-american Tefeteller, Ferguson, Smilie and Easy, Carper—the whole kaboodle, played a fine type of football. TENNESSEE WESLEYAN NEXT.

It has just occurred to the writer that Court Street is unusually well-named. The Sunday promenade exemplifies to the utmost degree the attitudes of courtliness, courtships, and courtesy which are inevitably present—to some extent at least. Perhaps Court Street was the beginning of Mar(r)y-ville.

FRESHMAN OFFICERS

Oct. 7.—The freshman class held a meeting in the chapel today, electing four class officers and the four students to represent the class in the Student Council. The new officers and Student Council members are:

President, Earl Crawford.
Vice-president, Ruth Hershey.
Secretary, Robert Bieri.
Treasurer, Clarence Lopez.
Council, Lorena Dunlap, Lillian Armstrong, James Smith, Ed Hurst.

THE LITTLE CHURCH

Dr. Lloyd substituted for Dr. Stevenson at the chapel service last Wednesday and made an impressive talk on the importance of words in our life. Taking his text from the third chapter of James where the author says "behold how the ships also—are turned about by a very small rudder," Dr. Lloyd said that the words we may say to ourselves are the rudders that steer our lives. People say "Pollyanna," or sugar-coated words to themselves; they say words of failure; they say cheap and compromising words; and they say cynical and sophisticated words. It is through such means as these that people allow their lives to become mediocrities and failure; when, instead, they could be saying strong and vigorous words to themselves, and making their lives worth something. "I can do all things through Christ, who strengneth me."

At the Student Volunteer meeting last Sunday night two papers written by Dr. Wilson were read. The first paper dealt with life at one of the mission schools in Syria, and the second was a short devotional study. Dr. Wilson was unable to attend the meeting.

Student Volunteer meetings are are held in Bainonian Hall every Sunday night immediately after Vespers. Any one interested is cordially invited to come and enjoy the fellowship of the group.

The Ministerial Association admitted six more new members at their meeting last Tuesday night. This makes twenty-four new men who have been received into the association this year. The preachers are starting off with bright hopes for the year, and invite every one, whether he be preacher or not, to their meetings every Tuesday night after supper in Athenian Hall.

for the use of one hundred thirty-five girls who have pressing needs now and then.

Mrs. Butcher's Patsy has a rival. A red-haired dog has been seen and heard on the campus lately and has voiced his approval of general campus life. Especially was he heard in the library Tuesday morning when a stimulus in the form of an empty bookcase (the glass of which acted as a mirror) presented itself before the dog's eyes and forthwith caused him to emit several barks which echoed throughout the library, even surpassing the Highland Echo in a nearby room.

Contrary to former custom Pearsons Hall is to be lighted on Saturday nights until 10:30. This suggestion was made by various girls and was put up for popular vote Monday night. The vote was popular, so lights are in order for succeeding Saturday nights.

Chaperones
"Coach" Heron
Father Larry
More Mysteries

Much interest will be shown tonight when the trucks come rolling back from the mountains. The last truck to come in will, no doubt, attract attention. It is safe to predict that the chaperone who brings the last flock to the fold will be the first one in line for a free ride and meal next year, so far as the students are concerned. In Maryville there are such things as popular chaperones.

Well, it won't do any good to have snap now. The transitional period has passed with the passing of the mountain hike. Maryville's students are married, and we're all set for the traditional year of married life. It must be a good thing for Maryville that we don't have summer school.

We would fain mention of one of Maryville's most ardent interested football fans. Miss Jessie Heron, freshman English instructor, is one of the first "coaches" to arrive on the scene at the first of the year. Her opinion of this year's team is that someone has worked wonders and has made good football team out of the poorest material Maryville has ever had. This faculty member, who has received her potential position as "fullback" (not to be used until you've passed Englis 2 and 3), is a close follower and even an authority on a number of sports. Football, however, is her specialty.

News, and thought, of sports, brings us to think of the little fellow who was asked in a geography lesson the location of St. Louis. He asserted that St. Louis is on top of the world since they'd just won the world's championship in baseball. St. Louis fans probably feel in winning from Philadelphia about like Maryville will have a chance to feel in the coming game with Howard College.

A dish of pickles was unaccounted for in Pearsons one day last week. A determined search was instigated and after tireless efforts to locate the lost member it was found in perfectly good condition, but looking for a home. The faculty table had two dishes of pickles.

One of the adorning features of our chapel platform is the line of books, gym clothes, oversize (we hope) shoes, etc., that line the front of the platform on the girls' side at each chapel service. While the writer is not inclined to complain about petty matters, he does assert that he is in harmony, perfect harmony, with any petition that might provide lockers for the girls in which they could deposit their accessories.

Nearly anyone in Maryville College should be able to run a charge account in the two clothing stores in Maryville. The presidents of three organizations on the Hill are now making part of their bread and butter by passing out the clothes in the downtown stores. Earl Crawford, the president of the freshman class, works at Chandler and Singleton's, while Proffitt's has two honored students (not honor students) working in their store. Milder MacKenzie works in the ladies ready-to-wear department and "Mac" McArthur looks after the needs of the fellows of the college.

By accident a debate in Athenian Literary Society turned out to be a contest between Al Duff and Charles Beale to see who could dig up the mostt and the best Bible verses. Charlie, we think, came out on top when he quoted simply for the freshmen "to beware of false prophets."

A freshman in the band nearly made a reputation for himself at the Union College football game. A lady, stranger in Maryville, thought that there was a family of musicians directing our band. She was under the impression that Larry Somers was

BUSINESS DEPARTMENT VACANCIES

All sophomores interested in obtaining a position with the Business staff of the Highland Echo are requested to submit an application stating any previous experience to Prof. E. R. Walker of the Committee on Selection, Saturday, October 24.

There are two vacant positions now open to men of this classification. Candidates will be judged on their previous experience and on their general business ability.

Student-Faculty Contact Committee Organized Thursday

This Year's Committee Elects Hubert Duncan As President

Thursday, October, 15.—The Student-Faculty Contact Committee had its first meeting of the year in Dr. Lloyd's office today. The meeting was held for the purpose of organizing, and of making plans for the year. Hubert Ducan was elected the new secretary, succeeding Mildred Crawford who was graduated last year.

One of the matters discussed was the time for the holding of the Hallowe'en porties this year. It was agreed that all of the parties would be held on Friday evening with snap or something equivalent to be given the following night. The reason for the adjustment from former plans was to allow both the sophomores and juniors to have theatre parties.

After discussing several minor matters the meeting was dismissed. The group will meet in the future every second Thursday afternoon at three o'clock.

The new Student-Faculty Contact Committee consists of five members of the faculty: Dr. Lloyd, Dean Hunter, Dean Caldwell, Miss Green, and Professor Davis, and seven students representing each of the four classes. The students in the organization are Mildred MacKenzie, Hubert Duncan, Naomi Willingham, Elizabeth Duncan, Harry Wood, Richard Orr, and Lillian Armstrong.

Quenelle, Lazell Selected As New Jr. Asso. Editors

Freshmen Try Out For Echo; Terry And Hina Speak On Journalism

Conrad Quenelle and Arthur Lazell have been elected Junior Associate Editors to fill the two vacancies on the staff of the Highland Echo. The new journalists are to assume their offices at once. The Committee on Selection, which met last Tuesday, is composed of four faculty members, four members of the tSudent Council, and four members of the Highland Echo staff.

A meeting was held Thursday evening in the Y. W. C. A. auditorium for all the freshmen who are interested in journalism and in securing places in the Echo staff.

Weldon Hina, editor-in-chief, made a few introductory remarks, and Julia Terry, managing editor, explained and illustrated the fundamental principles of journalism.

The freshmen will write three articles or more before a selection is made. Assignments will be posted each week on the bulletin boards in the freshmen English classrooms. At the end of three week the apprentices will be chosen.

ESSAY PRIZE

A prize of five dollars is being offered to any member of the student body of Maryville College who writes the best article on "Fire Prevention." There are no rules or specifications. The essay must be in the hands of any teacher in the English department by November 1. The giver desires to remain anonymous. All who are interested are urged to write on the subject and to submit their manuscripts by the first of next month.

Maryville Team Better Than Ky., Says Alumnus

Letter From Tracy Knapp, '20, Reveals Highlanders' Superior Training

WILDCATS HEAVIER TEAM

Passing Of Calloway, White And Woodard Described As Brilliant

The following excerpts are taken from a letter received by one of the faculty members whose son attended the Maryville-Kentucky football game last week. Because of the vivid description and the excellence of the write-up of the game, the letter has been kindly lent to The Highland Echo for partial publicatoin.

"Did Maryville's cedars hold their green fringed frames a bit straighter and higher than usual last night? They should have, for her football team did splendidly yesterday. It was a real football game, tho Kentucky outweighed Maryville some twenty pounds per man.

"It was Kentucky's first game you know. For a month they had been practicing hard behind closed gates, and this was their coming-out party to show the fans what they had learned and could do. Everyone thought that with her greater weight and strength Kentucky would simply romp all over Maryville; that the first team would start, run up a good score and then withdraw to let the second and thrid teams carry on.

"But that was a long way from the true story. Kentucky had the weight and strength; but I doubt if any who saw the game would say she equalled Maryville in speed and skill, or courage and spirit.

"It was a fine, clear warm day, and there was a fair sized crowd of some six thousand. The ninety-piece University band, the best in the South, marched up the field in fine blue and white uniforms, maneuvered a moment and then paraded back past the sands in formation of a huge M' in honor of her guests.

"Then came the University squad, some forty strong. It was their debut of the season and the crowd let out a yell—and about the only real yell of the day. Large, powerful, and mighty trim in new blue sweaters with white numerals, and yellow silk pants that shone like spun gold in the sun, they looked like a million dollars. After they had kicked and passed the ball around a bit Maryville came out to get in their preliminary work. They looked rather somber and lean and very small in comparison, in their dull maroon, jerseys and rusty brown pants. Nor did they seem so flashy as they threw the ball

ENGAGEMENT OF PEGGY MEVIS, '30, ANNOUNCED

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Margaret Mevis, '30, to the Rev. Alden S. Mosshammer of New York.

Peggy has been doing graduate work at Columbia University and is engaged in religious education in New York this winter.

Mr. Mosshammer is a graduate of Amhurst College in the class of '19. At present he is a senior at Union Theological Seminary and is the assistant minister of the Broadway Tabernacle Congregational Church.

The wedding will take place in the spring.

BAINONIAN-THETA HONOR BROTHERS WITH SMALL GIFTS

Not as renumeration, but as a token of their appreciation, the Bainonian and Theta Epsilon Literary Societies have presented their brother societies with a small gift. During the "Rush Weeks" of the respective societies, the brother societies were called upon quite frequently. Bainonian presented Athenian with two pictures for their hall, and Theto Epsilon gave Tipha Sigma a table scarf. These gifts are meant to repay in some measure the willingness and readiness to help which the fellows indicated.

New Faculty Club Organized At Tuesday Evening Meeting

Dinners Will Be Monthly Events With College Faculty, Staff

Members of the faculty and staff of the college met Tuesday evening at a dinner in the home economics dining room in Science Hall and organized a Faculty Club.

The purpose of the club is to sponsor productive scholarship and to encourage investigation and writing as well as to provide fellowship among the members of the faculty. There is as yet no organization except the Committee on Faculty Research, appointed by President Lloyd. This committee acts as a governing board. It is composed of Dr. Orr, Chairman, Miss Greene, Miss Kellar, and Mr. Lagerstedt.

The club is open to all members of the faculty and the college staff. Forty-four members have been enrolled. The members are divided into four groups, Language and Literature, Science, Humanities, and The Fine Arts.

The club will have a dinner each month, at which time some member of one of the groups will present a paper representing study and research on a subject of interest.

In committing on the club Dr. Orr said, "I think it is a fine step in the right direction. The ultimate purpose is a more productive scholarship on the part of the teachers and the staff."

AIRPLANE RIDES HOME?

Rumors have been circulated on the campus to the effect that students from Pittsburgh and vicinity could charter an airplane at Christmas time from Knoxville to Pittsburgh for fourteen dollars per person. Official information from the Curtis-Wright Flying Service of New Rork revealed that the price for such a trip would be $130 apiece, or almost ten times the rumored price.

GOLD CREEK FALLS TO BE SCENE OF Y. M. C. A. HIKE

Members of the Y. M. C. A. will leave next Saturday afternoon at 3:30 on their hike to Gold Creek Falls. The chosen spot is located about ten miles from Maryville on the Blockhouse road. Several group leaders will be appointed and the fellows will be given a chance to sign up in any of the groups. The hikers will return to the Hill on Sunday.

The East Tennessee student Y. M. C. A. officers will hold a conference at Montvale beginning next Sunday night and lasting through Monday night. The Maryville officers are planning to attend his conference.

WATER

The editor of the high school paper tells me that being an editor has its lighter moments, particularly when he gets a small boy's composition to read. For instance, here is a literary effort of a local hardware dealer's son.

"Water is found everywhere, especially when it rains like it did the other day when our cellar was half full and Daddy was as grouchy as a defeated politician because he couldn't get his Scotch. Jane had to get Daddy's rubber boots to go to the store and get the onions for dinner. Onions make your eyes water, and so does horseradish when you eat too much. There are lots of kinds of water in the world, like rain water, soda water, salty water, holy water, and brine, which is really water. Water is used for a great many things. Sailors use it to go to sea on. If there wasn't any water the ships couldn't sail and they would have to stay ashore and the old salt tars couldn't ttell us ony more lies about the South Sea Islands and they couldn't have a girl in every port because there wouldn't be no ports. Water is a good thing to catch fish in and to run under bridges and through

Inauguration Draws Nation Wide Interest

Many Notables Will Be Present At The Installation Of Sixth President

DR. HUGH T. KERR WILL DELIVER CHARGE

PLANS FOR ATTENDANCE OF INTERESTED STUDENTS NOT YET ANNOUNCED BY COLLEGE OFFICES

Much interest is being manifested as the time draws near for the inauguration of Dr. Ralph Waldo Lloyd as the sixth president of Maryville College. Response to invitations sent to all parts of the country indicate that national attention is being given this event.

The program as planned will occupy two days, Thursday and Friday, October 22 and 23. While definite arrangements concerning the privilege of attendance by the students have not been completed, an announcement from the administrative offices late this week states that classes will meet all day Thursday and Friday morning. Special arrangements will probably be made for those students desiring to attend the program.

The theme of Thursday's meeting will be "The Story of World Progress During the Lifetime of Maryville College." Among the speeches will be "Progress in the Sciences," by Charles Abram Ellwood and "Progress in Human Relationships," by John Huston Finley.

On Friday the theme will be "The Christian Liberal Arts College in Present Day Thought and Life," concluding with President Lloyd's inaugural address, "The College and Character."

Guests and speakers will include some of the greatest minds of America. Following is a list which gives some idea of the number of distinguished men who will be present:

Dr. George William Brown is a young man who was formerly a succesful pastor, a writer, and during the War with the army in France. He is a graduate of Washington and Jefferson College.

President Guy E. Snavely is not only president of a strong college, but is prominent in the various college associations of America. He is Secretary of the Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools of the Southern States and formerly was President of the Association of American Colleges.

President William J. Hutchins of Berea College, head of one of the most significant and interesting institutions in America. He has long been prominent in the national Y. M. C. A. organization and as a speaker and leader. Last year he was one of the leaders sent to India to study the educational situation there. One of his sons is the well-known president of the University of Chicago.

Judge Houston is a member of one of the families long connected with the history of Maryville College and he is an outstanding leader in the life of Knox County and in the work of the church.

Mr. Haggard, graduated from Maryville in 1917, and now head of a school enrolling 3,000 students.

Dr. John Huston Finley is one of the best known men in the fields of education, public affairs and letters in America. He is an Associate Editor of the New York Times, which is usually considered the strongest newspaper of the world. During his career he has been president of Knox College, Editor of Harpers Weekly, president of the College of the City of New York, Commissioner of Education for the State of New York and president of the University of the StSate of New York prior to accepting his present position ten years ago. He holds prominent positions in scores of national and international organizations.

President Charles Joseph Turck of Center College is a young man who was formerly Dean of the Law School at the University of Kentucky and is a leader in civic life as well as in education.

Dr. William Chalmers Covert is the General Secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Christian Education, which has supervision over the very extensive educational program of the Presbyterian denomination. He was formerly pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Chicago.

Washington Meet To Have Significance, Says Dr. McMurray

Economist Prefers Income Tax To Increased Estate Taxes

"The Seventy-Second Congress will be conservative," is the opinion of Dr. J. H. McMurray, professor of Politcail and Socal Science at Maryville College.

"The sessions of the past have taught the people a lesson. The present condition of England is largely due to the dole. Most persons of this country now see the wisdom of President Hoover's bonus plan to give only to those who need, and then after careful investigation."

Dr. McMurray believes the coming World Disarmament Conference will be the greatest event in all history. However, he doesn't expect to see action from the conference which is hoped for most.

As to the workings of Congress, the professor feels that, if there is a

Dr. Lloyd Calls Orientation Short Cut For Freshmen

President Says Lectures Are Superior To Trial And-Error Method

As shown by their stand, the officers of the college approve a system of orientation for all freshmen. Interviewed early this week, the chief executive, Dr. Lloyd, stated that, besides being the principal lecturer of the program, he was also one of its strongest advocates. "Frenshmen" says the president, "are never fully aware of all the problems arising in the course of a college education and, therefore, should be given advice intended to relieve them of the necessity of experiencing of some ill effects and to guide them in the path in which they will be likely to derive many benefits."

Although the principal data concerning the program has been brought to the student body via the chapel platform route, many do not yet know that eight of the ten addresses to be made, are to be given by Dr. Lloyd. And since the average intelligence of the freshmen is high, it is a certainty that, when the program is eneded, very few freshmen-like tendencies will be evinced by the new students.

"Of course," Dr. Lloyd, continued, "no wonders are expected of the lectures. They are ot infallible and no surprise will be forthcoming from the faculty if freshmen continue to act as such. The predominant idea is to acquaint the new students with the problems most likely to become perplexing. After that, orientation will be left to the individual."

AN OPPORTUNITY

An opportunity is at hand for the students of Maryville College to hear some of the greatest men of the country when, on October 22 and 23, the inauguration of Dr. Ralph Waldo Lloyd will take place.

It is an opportunity of such magnitude as we will, in all probability, never again be privileged to have. The very greatest men in the fields of education, religion and journalism will be present. These men are not mere students of existing ideas and acceptances, but originators of new thought and creators of modern beliefs.

Perhaps not again in a generation of Maryville College will such a group of famous men be gathered. It is the nation-wide interest that the inauguration of our president has obtained that brings together these noted executives, writers, and speakers. Invitations to the inaugural ceremony have been accepted by hundreds of educators, college heads, and alumni and friends of Maryville College.

The program is so planned that at least some of the elements will appeal to practically everyone. The student who attends these discourses will probably obtain much aid from them, as the men are well worth hearing. It is hoped that as many as possible will avail themselves of this opportunity.

THE BRICK COMES BACK

At another place in this paper the editor is called to account for an editorial published two weeks ago in which various clubs were accused of inactivity and general lifelessness. In this article the Ministerial Association and the Trangle Club were mentioned as being of that class.

The immediate and able defense of these two organizations, coming from one who is a member of both, speaks well for the type of people who make up these clubs, and the aggressive, loyal spirit that prompts this defense.

Thank you, Mr. Moore. Should some of the other clubs have a liberal sprinkling of the same spirit the story would probably be different. We appreciate your prompt denial and, if our hand is called and it is proved that we are wrong by a member of every other organization mentioned or indicated, we would appreciate it, for then our object will have been attained.

TENN. STUDENTS 132 STRONG IN FRESHMAN CLASS

Twenty-six of the forty-eight states of the Unon are represented in the freshman class this year. Three foreign countries, Costa Rica, Korea, and the Philippine Islands also have potential citizens present.

Tennessee leads the list of states with one hundred and thirty-two representatives. This year Pennsylvania is ahead of North Carolina, and takes second place with thirty-six sons and daughters. North Carolina and Ohio tie for third place with fifteen, and Florida and New Jersey share the fourth place with fourteen. The class also boasts ten Kentuckians and nine members from Illinois.

The freshman class leads in number, with 302 members. The sophomores follow with 227; the juniors occupy third place with 145; and the senior class is the smallest, having only 96 members.

WASHINGTON MEET TO HAVE SIGNIFICANCE SAYS DR. McMURRAY

change in taxes, he is not in favor of increased surtaxes, estate and gift taxes to the extent that they form a major source of income. He believes that a graduated income tax is fairer.

Other national issues, such as an increase in public works, anti-injunction legislation, and the gold standard question, will not, says Dr. McMurray, receive much prominence.

"So far as restriting short sales is concerned, I'm inclined to agree with the National Body of Business Leaders, which favors limiting short sales to those who have forty percent of the stocks value in cash and evidence of the remainder of the value.

"When it comes to railroads and bus competition, I think that rail carriers should be permitted to own motor transports which parallel their right-of-way. This applies only to short lines, and not to transcontinental or large inter-state bus lines.

"Much ottention will be paid, continued Dr. McMurray, "to finding a way to stabilize monetary values. If President Hoover will agree to appoint a committee, with dictatorial powers, to take care of the economic situation—as suggested by tht American Legion convention at Detroit—the consequences will be far-reaching.

"It will enlist the aid of both parties. In the closing days of the Hoover administration it would mean a coalition move in government. But the adherence of Democrats to this plan would weaken their own campaign."

Dr. McMurray feels that Herbert Hoover will be the Republican nominte in 1932; and Franklin D. Roostvelt, governor of New York, the leading Democratic contender.

He bases the G. O. P. selection upon Calvin Coolidge's statement to the effect that a retired president should support his successor; the one year moratorium; and the newly suggested Credit System Plan put forth by President Hoover.

Dr. McMurray thinks that, in the event that a wet plank is inserted into the Democratic platform, Democratic followers believe that Governor Roosevelt would be the best man.

THE ECHO FORUM

Communications to this department are welcomed and will be published verbatim in so far as possible. Editor The Highlan Echos

If I may say so, your editorial of October 3 entitled, "And Bricks," misrepresented the condition of two organizations. In can speak with authority here, for I am a member of both.

Your editorial stated thot the Triangle Club had not yet been heard from, being one of the inactive state clubs on the Hill. Such a statement could hardly be accurate in view of the fact that announcements conerning the club were read twice in chapel, and that a general election of officers for this year had taken place with fifty-five members casting ballots—all some days prior to the publication of the statement held in question.

Your editorial also asked, "What about . . . . the Preachers" Again, announcements were read twice in chapel. Moreover, the Ministerial Association ("the Preachers") had held, prior to the publication of your editorial, three regular meetings; it had filled a vacancy in office by election, had taken in seventeen new active members, had cashed in a considerable amount of dues. Still more important, the Ministerial Association had reorganized its four major committees, which for three successive Sundays had served God and man in the McGee Street Chapel, the county jail, the county almshouse, and the country churches of this vicinity. "The Preachers" are very much alive.

Perhaps the editors of these two organizations are at fault for not having submitted news articles for publication, but that fact would not warrant an editorial accusation of inactivity. At any rate, it is not the practice of either organization to give disproportionate publicity to the mere performance of duty or of other normal activity.

Miss Darby was the cause of a very practical joke being pulled in the Boarding Club last week. She made the request that the girls wash the pitchers, taking care not to wash away the numbers on the sides of the pitchers. One of the waitresses assured Miss Darby that the numbers would be left intact since they only rinsed the pitchers.

sieves. No one could be saved from drowning by the Boy Scouts or Texas Rangers if there wasn't any water, and you couldn't drown kittens any more so the earth would be overrun by cats. Water is first rate for putting out fires and it's good to drink, but not near as good as Cocomalt. That's all I can think of about water except wading and the flood."

Women's Tumbling Team Works Hard

The women's tumbling team met for the first time last Tuesday afternoon. About twenty girls were present including five members of last year's team: Captain Henry, Campbell, MaCrae, Stanley, Kellar, and a number of new girls who have been on other tumbling teams.

Clarence Bratchie, who is coaching the girls, worked them hard, but the number out on Thursday afternoon indicated a continued and ever increasing interest in the sport. Practice will be held every Tuesday and Thursday afternoon from 3:30 to 4:30. The team will be selected in about three weeks.

The tumblers are working to obtain greater recognition from the Athletic Association. Last year they had a banquet, and this year they hope to have their pictures in the Chilhowean. It is probable that if enough interest is shown, points will be given toward letters. At any rate, as Captain Henry remarked, "It is training for a vocation. If you don't get married, you can go into the circus."

Invitations to the inauguration of President Ralph W. Lloyd have been sent to the heads of about 1,000 colleges and universities throughout the country.

In addition, 1,400 graduates have been invited. Invitations to ministers, former teachers and students, and friends of Maryville College make a total of 4,000.

S COLLEGIATE S
! W A P !

Every school of which we can find a record has more things of interest happening than Sears Roebuck has vice-presidents. The proverbial rub lies herein: this news is of interest, not only to the world at large, but to the students of the various colleges. However, a few of the most universal interest lie below: . . . . . .

Clemson College was honored last week by a visit from the Governor of S. C. It seems that the governor had a few days vacation and used on them at Clemson. While there, he made an address to the cadets on "The Challenge of the Present Situation." He also inspected the grounds, turning in a report that he found every thing in the best of condition.

The senior class at Carson-Newman, perpetrators of the annual, met last week and decided to dedicate that volume this year to one of the popular members of the faculty. We always understood that an annual was the very essence of secrecy; of course, its all in the way you look at it, but we would personally rather be kept ignorant of the scheme until "all bills are paid."

The University of South Carolina is following in our path. Just after news of our first female head of the student body leaks out, they go us one better and announce that the first issue of the student humor magazine was edited by a woman. We presume that the subsequent issues will be under the same leadership.

The University of Kentucky's annual cross country race will provide plenty of competition for the head men. Ninety-one entrants have signified intention of competing. Insomnia victims are advised to post themeselves at a convenient fence and substitute kids for sheep.

CROSS-COUNTRY RACE

The annual cross country race is to be staged on Nov. 7, as the added feature of the football game with Appalachian Teachers College. This race is conducted under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. and avery attractive trophy is awarded the winner.

Considerable interest is being displayed in the event. On last Tuesday afternoon, Coach Bob Thrower met a number of prospective entrants, and gave them a short talk, in which he stressed some of the essentials of training for a distance race. About fourteen men have thus far indicated their intentions of trying for veitory in the five-mile grind and no doubt there will be further entries.

College-trained engineers revisit the athletic field

Night photograph of Temple Stadium, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, floodlighted with G-E projectors

ON more than a hundred floodlighted fields, football is being played and practiced in the evening hours, before larger audiences than ever before—with fewer injuries and in better conformity with classroom duties.

This constructive revolution in athletics is largely the work of college-trained engineers—young men personally familiar with the needs of college and school. They are dedicating the technical experience gained in the General Electric Test Department to the practical service of undergraduate athletics—designing and installing floodlighting equipment for virtually every sport—football, baseball, hockey, tennis, and track.

Other college men in the General Electric organization have specialized in street-lighting and floodlighting projects, or in the electrical equipment of industries and mines or of immense power stations; some are designing and applying electric apparatus to propel ocean liners and locomotives. All are engaged in the planning, production, or distribution of G-E products and so are performing a work of national betterment and creating for themselves recognized spheres of personal influence.

You will be interested in Bulletin GEA-1206, "The Light that Started Sports at Night." Write for it to the nearest G-E office or to Lighting Division, General Electric Company, Schenectady, New York

GREAT BATTLE EXPECTED WHEN HOWARD OPPOSES SCOTS

Highlanders Given Tough Game By Wesleyan Bulldogs But Win Over Old Foes By 26 To 7 Score

Wilson, McDaniels And Gregory Gave Wesleyan An Offense That Worried Scots

CAPT. CALLOWAY AGAIN

Scotties Go On Scoring Spree In Third Period And Were Never Again Threatened

Maryville Collge Highlanders defeated one of the finest football teams that Tennessee Wesleyan College has sent against the Maryvillians in several years last night by a score of 26 to 7. The Highlanders waited until the third quarter before they really opened up their offensive drive and scored 20 of their points in this period. They led at the half way mark by 6 to 0.

The first quarter was mostly a punters duel and Joe would dard certainly made it a one-sided affair. Joe kicked last night as he has never kicked before and gentlemen, I believe that his booting did as much as any one thing to defeat the Wesleyanites. One of his kicks actually traveled 83 yards, believe it or don't, and crossed the Wesleyan goal line unmolested. It was simply a gorgeous kick, if a plain old punt can be that.

Near the end of the first quarter, one of Joe's kicks was downed by someone on the one yard line and things just looked so-so for Mr. McCray's boys. Gregory, of the Cades Cove Gregorys, attempted to kick out but his toe evidently does not hold the spell over the swinehide that Joe's does and the kick traveled only a few inches, say 30 yards. Lea took the ball on some kind of a play, the name of which I know not, and galloped 28 yards to the two yard line (figure it yourself) and from there ole Lea "snuck" across.

Very little happened of interest during the remainder of the second quarter, that is there were no touchdowns and that's what counts isn't it, and at the end of the half the score was 6 to 0. The band came charging down the field at the half, formed an "M", reversed to field and made a "W", the freshmen and sophomores had a tug 'o war, some guy led a cow around the lot (not a cow lot) with a sign on her north side reading, left to right, "this is no bull, M. C. —6—Wesleyan—0." The sign was for the benefit of the freshmen and guys who have never lived in the country.

After the monkey business, if you could call it that, the teams returned to the field and continued their spreeing, or Maryville did the spreeing rather. Maryville kicked off (don't get me wrong, no one died) and the battle was on once more. Wesleyan failed to produce what it takes to retain possession of the old ball and of course they had to kick. Lea again got happy feet and ran somers nigh 25 yards and then passed to Shady Payne for a touchdown. Shady demonstrated some neat stepping on that run too. Lea sent the ball between the uprights for another point.

They say when it rains it pours and the Scots started reigning and poured two more touchdowns into the score book. Wesleyan had the ball deep in their settlement and tried a forward pass which Obie Wilson adopted for his very own and escorted safely to the 15 yard stripe. A few short plays didn't do Wesleyan any good and finally that same Lea advanced to Touchdowndom. (That may not be a good word but who's writing this thing, anyway). The extra point was added.

Just a few minutes later, Maryville kicked off to Wesleyan and again they had to punt. This guy Ferguson led a contingent of Maryville men thru the line and into the path of the kicker and the punt was blocked. Calloway took the ball on a funny kind of a lateral pass and went places with it. Wilson went over for the touchdown. This was the last score for the Highlanders.

During the last quarter Wesleyan opened up an offensive attack that didn't gain any ground for Maryville and scored their only touchdown of the fray. Wilson, McDaniels and Gregory displayed some of the best running that the Scots have been up against this year and it was wonderful to see them come back with the score 26 to 0 against them. That seemed to be the chief characteristic of the Wesleyanites, they never quit.

SPORT SLANTS

By BOB RULE

The acid test is just ahead for the Highlanders. They have met easy rivals in L. M. U. and Union and have stacked up favorably with teams greatly superior to them, but just what will happen when they encounter a team that is near their equal in many ways will be shown next Friday night.

Howard College, one of the best college teams in Alabama, holding a victory over the Scots last season, and boasting one of their best teams, is coming to Maryville next week to match skill, brains, beef and brawn with one of the est teams that Maryville College has produced in many years. Will Maryville finish the season undefeated? They need your support to do this.

Looking over a recent issue of a Knoxville newspaper, I chanced upon something more or less interesting. In the column "Twenty-Five Years Ago Today" it stated that Maryville College's football team defeated the University of Tennessee team in a game played at the old Baker-Himel Park. This is the last time that the Highlanders have ever defeated the Vols. The issue that contained this bit of information was printed on Wednesday, October 14, so if anyone asks you when the Highlanders last defeated the Vols, you may tell them October 14, 1906, B. O. (Before Overemphasis.)

Sing-Sing Prison has turned collegiate, that is, in some respects. They are going to have a football team. A report stated last week that enough uniforms to outfit two teams had been donated and the team will be coached by college and university men who, for some reason or other, are now residing at Sing-Sing. The report said that the team would not take any road trips, just why I can't imagine. The nice part about this football team, they believe, is the fact that the alumni can't kick about the way the team is being handled. That's not the half of it, though, they won't be bothered by moonshiners in the grand stands.

Teffey Makes Bunk's All-American Team

Southern Boys Rate High On Early Selection

Extra! Extra! Ralph Teffeteller, of the Armona Teffeteller's, Maryville's bone crushing, pile driving right guard, Y. M. C. A. president and holder of other enviable offices, was placed on I. R. Bunk's early season all-American team. Mr. Bunk is one of the leading football critics in North Carolina and he honored a Charlotte newspaper by giving them first copyright on his first selection.

Ellis Simpson, who graduated at Maryville two years ago and who now has a sister here in school, clipped the selection out of the Charlotte paper and mailed it to Coach Bob Thrower. You will probable notice that the majority of the honored players have Irish names and this may have had something to do with the choosing of the players. Before I pass it on to you, let Mr. Bunk tell his own story:

"I placed only Southern boys on the teams this year because the teams of this territory refused to import their athletes and stuck by good old Southern names such as above." He further added (contradicting himself) that Hajek, South Carolina's end, is captain not only of the first team but of both since he is from Al Capone's home town—Cicero, Ill.

Here 'tis:

Birmingham Team Rates As One Of Fastest College Clubs In South But Highlanders Are Out To Win

Boys Need Support Of Entire Student Body To Stop Team From Alabama City

MARYVLLE TEAM O. K.

McClane, A Former Maryville Athlete, Will Seek Second Straight Victory

Howard College Bulldogs, from Birmingham, coached by Eddie McClane, former Maryville College athlete, will invade Highland territory Friday night in an effort to knock the Scots for a row the second year in succession. The boys from 'Bama defeated Maryville last season by a score of 12 to 6.

This will be be first game of the season for the Maryville team with a college team of its own rating. Our games up to the present have been either with superior or inferior opponents and their claim for greatness will either be substantiated or doomed to destruction Friday night.

If the Maryvillians can come thru this game with a victory, they will be established as one of the best college teams in the Southland. Howard was defeated by Alabama Crimson Tide in their first test of the season by a rather large score, and last week they lost to Chattanooga by 14 to 0.

The Highlanders will have full force on the field for the game with Howard. They have escaped the injury jinx so far this year and they have a good chance to make trouble for someone this year if they can stay in tip-top form. Cliff Overley, who has been slightly limping due to a strained muscle in his ankle, is apparently O. K. now, and he will be a thorn in the sides of the Howard ball-carriers Friday night.

Steve Boretsky has improved by leaps and bounds in the last few weeks and he may be able to share the ball-carrying burden with the fast-stepping Calloway. Lea has been the most dependable ball-carrier on the team this season but he has been greatly overworked.

Wells' history is a veritable millstone on the road to learning.

Five Soccer Teams Will Be Organized

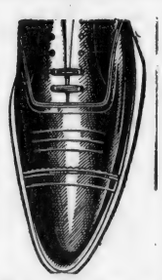
Freshmen Girls Will Have Two Teams This Year

A sufficient number of girls have come out for soccer this year to organize five teams, instead of the usual three. There will be two freshman teams. The seniors practice on Monday afternoons from 3 to 5 o'clock, the freshmen on Wednesday afternoons, and the sophomores on Friday.

At the first practice last week Edith Kitts was elected captain of the senior team, and Iva Babcock was elected manager. The juniors chose Mary Gamble captain and Ellen McRae manager. Katheryn Wayland was elected captain of the sophomore team, and Ruth Farlee is manager.

Although the game is new to most of the freshmen, they are very much interested in it. Coach Queener reports that there are fine prospects for the two first-year teams.

TERRY, HENRY LOSE AS WOMEN'S TENNIS MEET PROGRESSES



The first round of the women's tennis tournament came to a close last Saturday, with nineteen out of the thirty-seven entrees still in the tournament. Only one set was played in the fourth round.

Babcock, Hodges, and Swafford, members of last year's team, won their matches in excellent form, and we have reason to believe that there will be some good games before these players are eliminated.

The most important event of the early rounds was the defeat of Pat Henry and Irish Terry by Cecilia Conover and Mary Cooper, respectively. These new girls will furnish keen competition throughout the tournament.

The second round will be finished this afternoon. The winner is to be judged on the basis of two out of three sets.

LETTER DESCRIBING KENTUCKY GAME

about, kicked, and limbered up, though they did somehow seem to do it with ease and a nonchalance that bespoke confidence and ability. When Calloway met Captain Babe Wright, with his 201 pounds, out in center of the field for tossing of the coin he looked like a lean hound dog beside a big old St. Bernard. But he didn't seem a bit abashed, and I wondered why. Directly I learned.

"Kentucky kicked off and Maryville returned it well enough to her twenty-five yard line. But on the very first play Maryville fumbled and Kentucky recovered and it looked just too bad, with State's line looming larger than ever. And shortly after a number of plays, State made a touchdown and kicked a goal.

"But from then on it was a real game, with Maryville making the University look right foolish at times. They kept Kelly, Kentucky's crack half-back sewed up most of the game. They neatly intercepted three of his forward passes, and one time threw him for a twelve yard loss way back of the line of scrimmage before he could get the ball away. During the second quarter Maryville completely outplayed Kentucky and kept the ball in their territory most of the time, thanks to as fine passing by Calloway and catching by White and Woodard as one could wish for. Everyone of Kentucky's attempts to pass was either intercepted or grounded by Maryville; while they were made to look right futile trying to break up Calloway's passes. It looked like a touchdown for Maryville for a few moments when they got down to State's thirteen-yard line. Many of the fans were yelling for Maryville to make a touchdown and tie the score. But there was simply too much weight and beef for them.

"Coach Gamage evidently told his team that they were far outclassed in throwing and catching passes, for beginning with the third quarter State used nothing but line plays and occasional end runs, depending on their beef and strength alone to carry the ball. . . . . It was simply beef and brawn that beat Maryville. Maryville had it on them in the finer parts of the game. They tackled hard and accurately, and blocked and broke up interference in fine style. And in passing and catching passes they made State look like a bunch of beginners. Kentucky had to keep her first team in the game all the way; not a substitute went in until the last few minutes, and then only three or four. They should have learned a lot about football from Maryville yesterday."

KEYHOLE KOMMENT

We have always entertained a great deal of feeling against gossip. Maybe its a result of being the object of so much when, in childhood, we used to swipe watermelons from the neighbors' patch. But, butting no buts about the source of our prejudice against well-meaning slander, let us continue about the work of the day, that of exposing the respective lights of the Y president and the junior class high mogul. As every upperclassman as well as every freshman knows, these offices are filled by George Osborne and "Teffy" Teffeteller.

Teefy, unlike most of our Y presidents, is a native son. His home address is our fair sister city, Alcoa. They say that when he graduated from high school over there great was the fall thereof, as he was a swell tackle, a proficient catcher, and something of a basketball and track man. He has continued his athletic work on the Hill, confining it, however, to grid and diamond work. Beside being an athlete Teefy is a leader in the Y work on the campus as well as in the entire state. Indeed, at the Blue Ridge convention in N. C., this summer, he was president of a committee of three representing Tennessee on the executive staff. As even a layman can see, this is something of an honor.

George Osborne! Before he acquired the customary senior dignity, what freshman did not admire him? What upperclassman failed to recognize his genius? None. But now that he has become a senior, he has tabooed all such things as rat courts, pokes of water, and other things so dear to he heart of a Carnegie inmate. Nevertheless, we who are informed are not certain that, as the august presiding officer of Athenian, as president of the senior class, he has not gained in austerity what he has lost in the lackadaisical esteem of frosh. Claiming Livingston Noo Joisey as home, George is one of the many Nawthen boys who come south for the Maryville winter. George seems to be pointed to a great year, having Hal Carson as a roommate and a sore foot as a mark of distinction.

KENTUCKY CLUB

The Kentucky Club met in Theta Hall last Tuesday evening. A program featuring Aubrey Bradshaw and his uke was presented.

Owing to a misunderstanding as to the place of meeting a number of members were absent, but there were several visitors present. Guests are always welcome to the Kentucky Club meetings.

The officers of the Kentucky Club or this year are:

President, Al Duff.
Vice-Pres., Williamae Renegar.
Sec.-Treas., Hilda Rankin.
Editor, Tillie Goodwin.
Sergeant-at-Arms, Cooley Combs.

CAROLINA CLUB MEETING

The Carolina Club met a week ago for the purpose of electing officers. It was decided that this year the club will have no picture in the Chilhowan, but that its purpose will be only to help the students from the two states to become acquainted.

Plans for a party were also discussed.

The result of the election was:

President, Inez Hamrick.
Sec.-Treas, Chic West.
Program Secretaries, Hazel Deyton and George Vick.

OBSERVATIONS

the papa and the freshman was Larry's son.

A dispute arose in Carnegie Hall as to whether the joke printed in last week's Echo, the one about the mysteries—love, women, and hash—was considerate to some of the other mysteries of life. Several of the fellows contend that the biggest mystery to confront them is the problem of getting through school this year with their present finances. A mystery greater than any or all of the other three is their problem of getting through school with the deficit they have in school funds. Yankee Lewis could only agree to two thirds of that idea; he contends that love is by far the greatest mystery that will ever confront mankind.

THE LITTLE CHURCH

The Council fall retreat of the Tennessee Studente Voluntee Union was held at Scarritt College, Nashville, during the last week-end. The Maryville group was represented by Frank Neff and Joe Hacker. The Student Volunteer situation on the different college campuses of the state was discussed, and plans were made for the annual spring conference of th Tennessee Union which will be held at Bethel College, McKenzie, Tennessee, during the last week-end in February.

At the Student Volunteer meeting Sunday night the two delegates will present a report and interpretation of the retreat.

Student Volunteers all over the country are looking forward to and planning for the Eleventh Quadrennial Convention of the Student Volunteer Movement at Buffalo, N. Y., from December 30 to January 3. Such men as John R. Mott, Kirby Page and Robert E. Speer, all outstanding leaders in the Christian missionary movement, will be present. Maryville plans to send two or three delegates at the very least.

Ralph Taffetteller and Merle Beebe, the presidents of the local Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. organizations, will speak to the Ministerial Associatoin at its regular meeting next Tuesday night. Eleanor Henry will be the guest artist for the evening.

INAUGURATION

Dr. Robert Lincoln Kelly is now Executive Secretary of the Association of American Colleges and is widely known as an author and lecturer on educational matters. He was formerly president of Earlham College in Indiana.

Dr. Cleveland Boyd McAfee shares with Dr. Robert E. Speer the responsibility for the general oversight of the Presbyterian foreign missionary enterprise. He entered upon his present work a year ago. Prior to that time he was a professor in the Presbiterian Theological Seminary in Chicago, to which he went from the pastorate of one of the largest churches in Brookyn, New York. Two years ago he was Moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian chuch, the highest office in the gift of that church. He has long been known as an author and speaker.

Dr. Hugh T. Kerr, president of the Presbyterian Board of Christian Education, is pastor of the Shadyside Presbyterian Church in Pittsburgh and is one of the outstanding radio preachers of the world. He was the first minister in America to broadcast sermons regularly. He is Moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A.

Dr. James E. Clarke, editor of the Presbyterian Advance at Nashville, has for many years been prominently identified with the cause of Christian education in America and especially in the south and southwest

Dr. Charles Abram Ellenwood is the author of several books on sociology which are enternationally famous. A number of them have been translated into Chinese, Japanese, German and French. Dr. Ellwood has contributed more than 100 articles to the Encyclopaedia Brittannica.

IMPRESSIVE PROGRAM ATTENDS LLOYD INAUGURATION

OBSERVATIONS

Weather
Popeye
Knapping
Housebreakers

The weather changed last week . . . . it got colder . . . . the firemen had to build up a big fire in the heating plant . . . . the campus became very much smoked up . . . . . smoke was everywhere. As a result of all this, observations were very poor. As Dr. Lloyd would say, "We say this by way of apology."

Now that this mountain hike is history, we can look up a theme song for next spring's hike. The most appropriate song, and one in keeping with the last one, is "Kiss Me Again," by Victor Herbert.

One of the most glorious times had by anyone on the mountain hike should have been that enjoyed by the group which was under the chaperonage of Dr. and Mrs. McMurray. Seven baked chickens were the chief attraction, and with them came a large chocolate cake baked by Mrs. McMurray. Through the interested effort of the two chaperones their group of twenty-eight students feel sure that they had the best to be gotten in mountain hike nourishment. At any rate, the popularity of Mr. and Mrs. McMurray as mountain hike chaperones was for once and all assured.

It's a great life, they say, if you don't weaken. It can't be a very great life for Maryvillians wth the present week-end program. Last week with football and a mountain hike, this week with the inauguration and entertainment on Saturday night, and next week with Hallowe'en and its festivities should make the strongest of us want to "settle down and study."

Even in hard times there comes that moment in a man's life when he stands up for his own pride. Often his pride is mingled with prejudice. We are thinking of the styles, colors, etc., of pajamas that have been making themselves present, yes—conspicuous, this year. They're just as flashy and as loud as ever. In fact we think they're the thing that keeps the strongest people from getting down in the mouth about this depression—they're so gay y' know. You can take a man's last penny, you can burn most of his clothes, even, but it isn't well to insult him about his pajamas.

The Echo is thinking of instituting a series of interviews with the faculty members in an effort to determine the most popular comic sheet among Maryville's funny paper readers. This comes about as a result of Dr. Lloyd's revelation of his "comic interests." Now I think we know where he gets so many of his stories and illustrations. At any rate, it seems very obvious that Dr. Lloyd has a decided knack of saying the right thing at the right time.

Merle Bebee got severely called down for sleeping too much in a physics class last week. She was found to have been in a deep sleep,

RUG PRESENTATION

After chapel Tuesday morning Dr. Lloyd received two rugs for use in his offices. One was a large rug for the private office and was presented by Miss Mildred MacKenzie on behalf of the student body. The other was a smaller rug for the outer office and was presented by Dr. Stevenson on behalf of the faculty.

In her presentation Miss MacKenzie explained how the rug will lessen the discomfort of such unfortunate students as are called in to meet the presdential displeasure.

The presentation came as a complete surprise to Dr. Lloyd.

Greetings Brought By Representatives Of Other Colleges

Dr. Lloyd's First President Speaks At Fellowship Luncheon Friday

Dr. Frederick E. Stockedd, Secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Christian Education, was toastmaster at the Fellowship Luncheon teadered by the college to the faculty, alumni, and guests at noon Friday.

Greetings were borne from Tusculum College by Dr. Charles Albert Anderson, who was inaugurated president o f that institution by the Synod of Tennessee in Thursday.

President Harcourt A. Morgan of the University of Tennessee brought greetings from the public institutions of higher learning in the state.

"The distinguished service of President-Emeritus Wilson during more than a quarter of a century made his high ideals of scholarship felt throughout the state," he said. "I am happy to have the privilege of presenting to you, Dr. Lloyd, the congratt. lations of the state university and our good wishes for your success in the future."

Dr. Alexander Guerry, President of the University of Chattanooga and President of the Tennessee College Association, brought greetings and said in part, "We admrie the deals and principles for which Maryville College was founded and we anticipate with confidence the future in the hands of President Lloyd."

Rev. Herbert W. Reherd, D. D., President of Utah Westminster College and President of the Presbyterian College Association, brought greetings from the wstern mountains to the southern mountains. It was in Utah Westminster College that President Lloyd began his career as a teacher, and Maryville rejoices with her new president in the privilege of having him present.

Moderator Ernest L. Stockton was to have brought greetings from the Synod of Tennessee, but he was unable to be present.

In Dr. Stockton's absence the Vice-Moderator, who is familiarly known to a host of Maryville friends as "Scottie" Cowan, spoke of the relations of the College to the Synod, and concluded by saying, "If the college gives to its students a real and lasting hunger for the things of the spirit and the things of the intellect it has fulfilled its task."

SPOOKS, GOBLINS RECEIVE BIDS TO CLASS REVELRIES

Sophomores, Juniors Will Have Theatre Parties, Frosh Remain On Hill

Maryville students will celebrate the Hallowe'en season on Friday night October 30, with parties galore by the different classes. Spooks, goblins, black cats and all the other proverbial Hallowe'en guests will be in attendance.

The Seniors are the only ones who will not give a party of their own. They are privileged to attend any one of the other three parties as the guests of honor.

The juniors will go to the Palace Theater at 7:00 where they will see Joe E. Brown in "Broadminded." After the show they will gather at the Southern Methodist Church for an evening of fellowship with various and sundry ghosts in true Hallowe'en fashion. The program is being kept

MRS. STEVENSON AND MRS. LLOYD ENTERTAIN AT TEA

Reception By Joint Hostesses Given Guests Of College At House In Woods

Mrs. William P. Stevenson and Mrs. Ralph W. Lloyd were joint hostesses at tea on Thursday and Friday afternoon at The House in the Woods.

Mrs. H. D. Lloyd, mother of President Lloyd, and Mrs. John Webb, of Maryville, presided over the tea table. Girls from the college assisted in serving.

On each afternoon when the meetings in Voorhees Chapel had been concluded many of the guests of the college, faculty members, and alumni enjoyed this lovely courtesy.

We regret to hear that Georgia Burk and Elizabeth (Aesop) Gillis are spending a few days at the hospital. Greetings to them, and here's hoping we don't have to do without them for very long.

GREETINGS TO MARYVILLE FROM SECRETARY BOARD OF CHRISTAIN EDUCATION

Nothing could be more inspiring than the contacts we have all had during the past two days on the campus at Maryville. Our meeting with the interesting men and women of the faculty in which Dr. Wilson has been a notable figure for a generation has been greatly appreciated. The spirit of cooperation and good cheer on the part of the student body and their enthusiasm for Dr. Lloyd, the new president ,was felt everywhere by everybody. The unusually distinguished character of the educational leader that came from all parts of the country to share in the inauguration exercises added special significance to an occasion which will be long remembered in the history of Maryville. It was a privilege to be a part of such a program.

Finishing Touches Being Added To New Offices In Anderson

General Engineer Brown and his trusty lieutenants have been carrying so much pipe in and out of the cellar of Anderson of late that comments and questions have been thick and furious. "Brownie" says, however, that nothing more or less questionable is going on than the insertion of steam heat in some of the rooms in place of the old system of hot air (no insinuations or anything like that). The new offices, arrayed in all their glorious hardwood floors and gleaming white walls, will be ready sometime in the near future for their proud occupants.

Two of the officers will be at the disposal of the Student-Help Secretary. Another will be used as conference room for the faculty and directors.

A new printing office and a vault were also provided for in the additions of the summer. Contrary to prevalent opinion, this vault is a room of about fifteen-foot dimensions, all three ways. Its walls are reinforced by steel rods woven into the surrounding cement, and two steel doors equipped with Yale locks will provide more amusement for anyone attempting to force his way in.

Student Council Plans Amphitheatre In College Woods

Oct. 20.—The Student Council had a very important and profitable m eting tonight in Pearsons parlor. Several major projects were discussed, the majority of which were referred to the Student Faculty Contact Committee. The council resolved to keep as active as possible this year, endeavoring to be a distinct asset to the administration of the college.

One of the year's projects if plans can be carried through will be to clear a place in the College Woods where entertainments by the music department and other departments of the college may be held. The college is in need of an amphi theatre and in the woods there are several locations so constructed that they could serve well in that capacity with a little clean up work done.

A number of matters of less consequence were considered at the meeting. President MacKenzie appointed committees to decorate for the inauguration and to investigate about the payments of class dues in the future. Other committees were also appointed by her.

The cuckoo does not lay its own eggs.

BLOW ME DOWN—BEALE

We are justified. Dr. Lloyd also reads Popeye! Since school has been in pjrogress some six weeks and the paper boy collects once a month, we have been perusing our periodicals in the library for the past two weeks. We brazenly sit out in the open to read the front page and even the sports, at times gathering courage to scan the stock returns in the presence of all But when we came to the comics, especially to Popeye, we abashedly have been skulking around beside some of the bookshelves, where we lap up everything Popeye's agitators cause him to say or do Now that the secret is out, hiding with the paper is strictly taboo. In the future, we shall consult Popeye with a chip on our shoulder and a song in our heart, knowing that Dr. Lloyd is probably doing the same thing in his "sanctum sanctorum." We have long been of the opinion that the head of our institution should have a hobby and are appropriately appreciative of the fact that he has, unwittingly or otherwise, provided himself with one. Some of the foremost Hill Hobbies are as follows, to wit, viz., i. e.: Dr. Stevenson, "Amos and Andy;" Miss Heron, pink teas; Prof. Griffitts, collecting precious stones; Miss Hudson, spermato-geneohydricysts (or words to that effect). A natural outcropping of this presidential pastime would be a Hobby Club. Meetings could be held irregularly and a good time would be guaranteed to all.

Colorful Pageant Is Final Service Of Installation

Two Day Exercise Brings Many Well Known Speakers To Maryville

MANY ALUMNI RETURN FOR CEREMONY

The two day program in connection with the installation of Ralph Waldo Lloyd, D. D., as the sixth president of Maryville College, came to a close Friday afternoon with the Inaugural Exercises held in Voorhees Chapel.

During this program many noted men appeared before the Maryville audience, among whom were Dr. Guy Everett Snavely, President of Birmingham-Southern College; Dr. John Huston Finley, associate editor of the New York Times; Dr. William Chalmers Covert, General Secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Christian Education, and Dr. Hugh Thompson Kerr, President of the Board of Christian Education.

The program was designed to furnish one continuous discussion. The theme on the first day was "The Story of World Progress During the Lifetime of Maryville College," and on the second was "The Christian Liberal Arts College in Present Day Thought and Life."

A dinner was given the alumni and visitors Thursday evening in the college dining hall. Speakers for the alumni, the faculty, and the undergraduates were heard. Dr. Samuel Tyndale Wilson, President Emeritus of Maryville College spoke on "The Output of Maryville College." At noon Friday a Fellowship Luncheon was given.

The Rev. George William Brown, general secretary of the American Bible Society, was the first speaker, at chapel service, Thursday morning. His theme was that the Bible, because of its principles of conduct, life-philosophy, and a religon based on God, is adequate for 1931.

"No matter who a person is, where he is, how he is living, or why, the Bible, without moralizing or covering-up the deeds of its characters, has something to say about developing one's abilities and living for God in an unselfish manner."

The second service Thursday morning opened at 10:00, with Dean Hunter presiding. The first speaker was Dr. G. E. Snavely, president of Birmingham-Southern College, who spoke on the subject "Education in the Making of South." The address of the Alabama president pitcured not only the background history of the early South, but the progress of Southern education from its earliest beginning to its present advanced status, the latter typified by the Southern Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges. In concluding Dr. Snavely said that the goal of education should be the placing of "more stress on higher ideals and morality," and he expressed the desire and expectation of seeing Maryville College assist in this enterprise.

The second speaker, president W. J. Hutchins of Berea College, Kentucky, spoke on the subject of "Permanent Factors in Christian Higher Education." The real foundation in such education, said Dr. Hutchins, is the fact that "the Christian college plans to reveal to students the cause of Christ." The speaker described the school situation in India as well as that in America, discussing both curricula. Three factors indicated as desirably permanent in the program of Christian education are: the adoption of the highest standards; the correct practice of the necessary communal life; the presence of teachers who are not only scholars but also great souls."

At the luncheon given at the College Dining Hall Thursday noon Dr. Crothers presided. Judge S. O. Houston of Knoxville spoke of some memories of Maryville teachers he has known. Judge Houston came to Maryville in 1890. At that time there were only five buildings on the campus. The teachers discussed were Dr. Boardman, J. M. Shirell, Mr. Robertson and Mr. Waller. Mr. Waller was

President Emeritus Still Finds Plenty To Keep Him Busy

Wilson Family Reunion Being Planned For Next Christmas

"I still find plenty of work to do," says Dr. S. T. Wilson, President-Emeritus of Maryville College. "I am spending a great deal of my time in writing. My first objectives are to bring my book, "A Country College," up to date, and to write a biography of Issac Anderson. I have already gathered material for these books.

"I trust the students understand that only the condition of my health keeps me from attending the football games, Vespers, and from accepting the many gracious invitations I have had to make addresses. Even though I can no longer be with them in body my spirit is always near dear old Maryville College and her students."

Dr. Wilson is spending much of his spare time overseeing repairs now being made on his home on Indiana Avenue He is very anxious to complete the work by Christmas; his entire family are planning to be home at that time. The last reunion of the entire Wilson family was in 1919, and Dr. Wilson says they are all very much excited over the prospect of once more gathering in the home where all the children were born. The house has fifteen large rooms and for the first time in its history will be comfortably heated throughout from a new hot air furnace.

Dr. and Mrs. Wilson's children will come from different places over the United States and one foreing country to attend this family reunion. Mrs. Howard B. Phillips whose husband is pastor of the Richmond Heights Presbyterian Church will come from St. Louis, Missouri. Mr. Howard Wilson from Johnson City, Tennessee, where he is a druggist and Mr. Lamar Wilson will come from El Paso Texas, where he is a construction engineer with the Robert McKee Company. Mrs. Mary White is working in a Spanish-Mexican mission school in Phoenix, Arizona, while Miss Lois Wilson returns on furlough from Sydon, Syria, where she is principal of the Sydon School for Girls. Mrs. Clyde Murray lives at the family home and her children, Doris and Carl, are the only grandchildren.

At the age of seventy three, with seven years of his life spent in study at Maryville College and forty-six in untiring and unremitting toil for her welfare he says: "I still find much to do for Maryville College My every effort is for her."

EDITORIAL L

A history making event in the life of Maryville College has come and gone. To those students who have attended the lectures of the learned men gathered here for the installation of our president, life has a fuller meaning and a broader scope; the Christian college has a more important place in the scheme of universal education, and Maryville has a clearly outlined duty to perform that will bring honor and reverence to her in proportions as she is successful in discharging that obligation.

Speakng broadly, the program presented here may well have been planned for any other Christian college. The first day was given over to a series of discussions of past and modern aims and attainments of Education. The second day was used in correlating the Christian college with the other institutions of education.

One regretable feature of the program was the evident intent to build a picture of the increasing divergence of the paths taken by science and religion. In the address of Dr. Willam Chalmers Covert this tendency was especially pronounced. Religion does not stray from scientific acceptance nor does science contradict religious truths when an honest endeavor is made to view the logial workings of the "purposive Mind" with an unbiased and non-dogmatic attitude, and to correlate the facts obtained by divine revelation and by mere human investigation into one great all-encompassing and undeviating Plan.

However the program has brought to us ,with force, the fact that we of Maryville College have an integral part of the development of the future and that we of Maryville College have an integral part in the development of the future, and that the Christian college is, and will remain, the leavening agent in the present system of education.

EDITORIAL

"A Diamond in the Routh" is a name which might well have been applied to Maryville's football squad at the beginning of the school year. In four years we have never heard such discouraging remarks made about our team as were made by every person who witnessed one of the daily workouts of the squad. Apparently there was not one redeeming football qualification in the entire machine. A holocaust of murderous defeats was predicted by the most loyal Maryville supporters.

But actuality has a way of disregarding predictions. When the machine began to function it operated smoothly. L. M. U., though a comparatively weak team, felt its irresistable force. The University of Tennessee, crusher of last year's Rose Bowl champions, fought desperately to obtain a victory and the Kentucky squad remembers well that nightmarish game against the Scotties.

What has made this team dangerous? The same things that make any team dangerous: ability coupled with indomnitable spirit, a leader and wholehearted backing by the students.

That the Maryville team has spirit is a traditional and indisputable fact, but spirit without ability does not carry all the way. Our team has ability, proved on the field of contest.

A leader is an indespensible part of the machine, the brain and the hand that controls the throttle. Coach Honaker has shown his masterful planning and his sensitive touch to that throttle for many years. Credit for the 1931 showing goes, in a greater measure than ever before, to our "grey-eyed man of destiny."

Only one thing remains to make Maryville THE football squad of southern colleges — the student spirit.

It is just possible that the tendency for spontaneous expression of loyal spirit died with the outlawing of class clashes several years ago. Suffice to say that, though spirit may be present in large quantities, the spontaniety of expression of that spirit is lacking. We're probably backing our team, but we're telling them by formal letter or stilted, stereotyped practices. The parading bovus at the Wesleyan game was original and novel, but why wasn't every student in the stands fighting to get hold of the lead-rope? Snake-dances, promenades, and noisesome cavorting are not taboo at Maryville—Let's get our of our seats —Let's rush the field, a little pep generates a little more, and that, in turn, brings more until soon we are a fighting, reckless, irresistable side-line team which no college can hope to conquer.

NU GAMMA HIKE

An invitation is extended all new girls to a hike around the loop next Thursday afternoon. The hikers will return in time for entertainment and supper in the College Woods. Those going on the seven-mile loop will leave at three-thirty, those going around the fourmile loop will leave later, and girls who work or who do not wish to go on the hike will come to the woods at five.

This event will be the closing activity of Nu Gamma this year. The last meeting of the individual groups will be held tomorrow. Girls, don't miss your last meeting!

WRITERS' WORKSHOP

On Wednesday the Writers' Workshop held its second meeting of the year at which time plans were made for the annual fall picnic and several new members were elected. The following students were selected: Margaret Melody, Lynette Johnson, Bob Stevenson and Bob Overly.

The picnic will be held on Wednesday, November 4 at some as yet undetermined place at which time the new members will be received into the organization formally and informally.

INAUGURATION

the founder of the Co-operative Boarding Club. The talk was very informal.

Mr. W. W. Haggard, the second speaker talked very favorably of Maryville in comparison with other colleges. He commented on the high standing of Maryville in educational circles, where Maryville credit is readily accepted by graduate schools. Mr. Haggard compared the cost of education at Maryville with that at other colleges. He praised the excellent management and idealism of the college and spoke of the large endowment of Maryvile. The purpose of the men who founded Maryville was "service to the individual student." Mr. Haggard believes that a church-supported school should furnish religious leaders.

Dean Hoskins of the University of Tennessee presided at the Thursday afternoon session at which time Dr. C. A. Ellwood of Duke University spoke on "Progress in the Sciences," and Dr. J. H. Finley, associate editor of the New York Times spoke about "Progress in Human Relationships." Dr. Ellwood in his paper pleaded for a greater and broader conception of the sciences and showed the inadequacy of science as it is today in its many phases to explain everything. He went on further to say that the social sciences should throw emphasis on spiritual values.

Dr. Finley's main thesis of theme was the fact that the world moves on in every activity in which man participates. He showed the progress that has been made in the sciences and called this age a "tele-Victorian age;" and yet in this sciences showed the corresponding progress in human relationship. "We are at the door of new human relationships," said Dr. Finley. "Our youth of today has the greatest opportunity of advancement since the days of Washington. The world moves on, nevertheless."

At the Alumni Dinner Thursday evening, Dr. Orr of Maryville presided. Dr. Vincent T. Shipley gave the greetings of the alumni, guests, and incoming president on behalf of the alumni. He said that the alumni should always have an active interest in higher education with respect to their alma mater as well as to educate everywhere. He then pointed out that the duty of the college toward the alumni consisted in its fundamntal and progressive interest in the faculty of the college, in the revision of the corriculum, in the maintenance of standards, and in keeping abreast of the times as regards the educatio field.

Dean Edwin Ray Hunter gave the greetings from the faculty and spoke of the future of the college as always being progressive, of a co-operating faculty, and of an institution building on firm traditions. To Dr. Lloyd, Dr. Hunter said, "We rejoice with you and because of you."

Miss Mildred MacKenzie spoke as president of the Student Council, representing the student body and pledged the heart and hand of every Maryville student in working with the new president in the carrying out of his program.

Dr. Samuel Tyndale Wilson gave an address on "The Maryville College Product" and spoke of the extensive output of Maryville and of the characteristics of this output.

"The output of Maryville College," said Dr. Wilson, "is characterized by vigor, ambition, industry, scholarship, altruism, world interest, and manly religion." He closed his address by saying, "A etter Maryville College output than ever" should be he slogan of the sixth administration of Maryville College."

Dr. Charles J. Turck, President of Centre College, spoke to the students during the Chapel period Friday morning on "What Will You Take From College."

Dr. Turck considers a college education from two aspects: 1. the present life in college and the necessity of living day by day, not setting a goal too distant, 2. college life is a preparation for the future. Considering first the moral developments of the student in college he gave three points, Tolerance, warning that one must not be too critical, Friendliness, showing how one could be interested in his fellow students, and Loyalty, advising one to be loyal to the college, its ideals, and to friends, yet when a conflict in loyalty occurs, to be always loyal to the best. The same three points were used as qualities for moral development for ones future place in the world; Tolerance necessary to aid in industrial situation; Friendliness to be shown in the relation of nations, and Loyalty chiefly to the ideals of the Kingdom of God.

See where Will Rogers is of the opinon he should have been born a newspaper columnist. He says that he doesn't know enough grammar to be any other kind of writer. Leaving it to public opinion as to whether this is or aint a column, we wish to state that, although we welcome any criticisms, we know how many a's are in exaggerate, we are merely trying to be funny. . . . . .

During their trip to Maryland to play the Ole Liners, the football team of the U. of Ky. had the privilege of visiting the White House, where they met the president and, of course, were photographed with him on his front lawn. Perhaps Maryville should try a stunt like that. Personally, we could think of nothing we should like more than to see Big Joe or Pee-Wee shake hands with Mr. Hoover. Maybe their huskiness would cause hm to declare a moratorium on handshakes.

A cadet was recently dismissed from Clemson because he was found in possession of two quarts of shine. Although the student body made some fuss over it, the editor of the Tiger has a striking ediptorial backing the faculty. That's disregard of opinion for us!!

Intercollegiate basketball is a thing of the past so far as Lenoir-Rhyne is concerned. However, athletic authorities plan to have a basketball program for classes that will include everybody in school who can hold a basketball without a handle attached.

OBSERVATIONS

but merely Knapping. The case was dropped.

Tradition was broken in a student council meeting a few weeks ago when a nominee was given an opponent. Hubert Duncan and Elizabeth Duncan had a little family spat all their own and Duncan won. Later they both ran for office in the Student Faculty Contact Committee. Again Duncan won. It was a great time for the Duncans; they just walked off with things.

Since we've found Dr. Lloyd's favorite comic strip, we might look for his theme song. A suggestion might be Amos and Andy's "Am I Blue" to upport the color scheme of the new ugs.

A case of housebreaking nearly developed in Pearsons Hall one night ast week. Along about 11:30 a man became "uneasy' about lights in girl's room. Threats to ::!!?? f the light weren't put out followed. Anger rose—the girls only giggled. The one last resort had to be taken, and the matron unlocked the door with her own key, rushed in, and ound the moon shining serenly hrough the window.

Harold Lloyd has a rival. Reports rom down town show that Andy s becoming as proficient at jerking odas as one could ask for. Andy Newcomer, Maryville's business man, spends two hours a day keeping the manager of Luke's lunch from becoming too much "depressed."

The Tennessee Wesleyan cheer leading section made us homesick for the good old days of high school at the game last Friday night. It reminded us of the time and place when cheers were cheers, and not so much time was devoted to the proverbial moonshining.

The writer wants to comment on comment columns last week. Only commenting you understand. The columns were Clubby Comment and Keyhole Komment. The former got rather forward and stole some of Charlie Beale's stuff rurring up alongside of Charlie on the back of the paper. Charlie took it good naturedly though. If we were Charlie —maybe we're glad we're not— we'd let the club have the comment and we would go back to the old reliable—Superior Scotties. That has proved the most popular yet and it's appropriateness is not to be excelled. The other column head may not have been given its due chance to make good, however.

Proposals have been made to the effect that Maryville should have an improved amphi-theatre in the college woods. There are a number of locations that, with a little improvement, could be made ideal. Work will probably be begun on this plan, and Maryville soon will be sporting an outside arena for pageants, May Day, etc., that will rival the best of them.

KEYHOLE KOMMENT

We have always been an ardent champion of the under-dog. Not that we have any hankering to be set up as a typical Boy Scout or paragonial Sir Lancelot; we just abhor seeing a well-meaning person hide his light under a bushel. For that reason we wish to send little tremors of sunshine into the life of two of Maryville's Best-known Benedicts. Paul Edris and Lea Calloway. Even though our method of scattering our sunshine may not appeal to some, especially to the victims, we are on friendly encugh terms with ouself to concede the point that said method will find general if not entire favor with the audience as a whole.

After Paul had taken unto himself a wife, he had to divest himself of his job as head cheer leader. This, also, is a direct outcropping of an event or rather, of several events: the Depression, the accepted fact that families must be fed and clothed, and an heir. He (Paul) is now a coworker with Andy Mellon in aluminum and since he is laboring at times on the "graveyard shift," he is forced to be conspiciously absent at most of the pigskin parades.

Although Lea Calloway has not yet been transferred into a " man without an opinion," we are sure that he deserves a place high up in the moonshining Who's Who. Not only for this will Calloway be remembered at his Alma Mater, however. He will go down in history as one of the greatest backs ever handled-by-Honaker, as one of the most inspired and inspiring leaders ever to flip a penny for Maryville, and as one of the very few men to attend this institution for whom no one had an ill word.

A student of systematics was in a bad way to find a leader about whom to talk, but upon taxing his brain he came across Mrs. Mutt of funny paper fame. He expostulated and likewise waxed eloquently on Mrs. Mutt's leadership qualities, and had some students almost stying, "I'm from Missouri." The only objection raised to his talk was by students in adjoining rooms, where they couldn't recite for the laughing which took place in the systematic class.

The freshmen and sophomores both had a "pull" with the rope at the Wesleyan game. It looked for some time as though all donations would have to be given by the rope, since neither of the two kroups of classmen would give. The combinations of brain and brawn was too much for the frosh, whoever, and they had to suffer the consequences—that of losing the pull to their "fellow children."

It's an avaricious bunch of freshmen we have. After noting several errors, one of the librarians kept note of the misspellings of the name of F. J. Moore, author of the "History of Chemistry" which is freshman reference book. Nearly one half the students spelled the name MORE after their breedy impulses to yet the most of everything.

It looks like the women on the Hill are holding their own for the second successive year, so far as holding offices is concerned. Of the five major positions, or offices, on the Hill three are held by women. Margaret Melody, Mildred MacKenzie, and Elizabeth Duncan, head the Chilhowean, student council, and Pi Kappa Delta. The two other principal positions, editorship of the ECHO, and president of the senior class are held down by Weldon Hina and George Osborne.

This morning four large bones belonging to some former animal were seen on the campus to the left of the walk from Thaw to Pearsons. Just who or what the partaker of the feast happened to be is yet unknown, although some believe that Mrs. Butcher's Patsy is beginning to have her fling.

A rooster leaned his head disconsolately against a barn door.

"What's the use of it all?" he said, sadly. "Eggs yesterday; chickens today; feather-dusters tomorrow."

Father: "What did you and Joe talk about last night, dear?"

Daughter: "Oh, we talked about our kith and kin."

Small Brother: "Yeth, pop, I heard em. He seth, "Kin I have a kith?" and she seth, "Yeth you kin.'"

In 1658 the Pilgrims crossed the ocean and this was known as Pilgrims Progress.

CAMPUS SIGNS

"As I walked down the street
A bill board met my eye."

True, how true, is this when one walks down Court Street, or up Court Street, as the case may be and sees emblazoned on a sign board in the famous alfalfa field near Memorial, a blue and white sign indicating to the ignorant that the buildings on the cedar-covered hill constitute Maryville College, founded 1819. There is another sign like it at the corner of Washington and Jones Streets.

Just why the signs are painted in blue and white instead of orange and garnet is still a mystery, the only conjecture being that the painters were in the pay of or under the influence of Theta Epsilon and the Y. W. C. A. Who says the women do not have authority on the Hill?

At any rate Maryville College has finally been located, even though it was founded several years ago.

HIGHLANDERS COME FROM BEHIND TO GAIN 6 TO 6 TIE WITH HOWARD COLLEGE TEAM IN DESPERATE BATTLE

Johnson City Writer Picks Scots To Defeat Milligan Team Easily But Honaker Expects Hard Battle

Milligan Tied Carson-Newman Team Earlier In Season; Buffs In Good Shape

SCOTS WON LAST

Ran Wild Over Buffaloes Last Season But Milligan Will Give Plenty Trouble

Special to the Echo—

Johnson City, Tenn.—Coach "Prof" Cochrane realizes that his Buffaloes will go on Anglin Feld next Saturday, October 31, to meet a football team that is far superior to the Milligan squad. The Buffaloes represent a small college and have only a mediocre team, while Maryville is classed among the higher institutions and has a football team that can hold its own against the best teams in the country.

MARYVILLE WON LAST

According to the dope of last year, Maryville will win this game on October 31st by a large score. Last year Maryville ran away with the Buffaloes for a score of 39-0. Carson-Newman beat Milligan 6-0. This year, Milligan was able to hold the same team to a 0-0 tie. It has been reported that Maryville has a team capable of making two more touchdowns than last year. Therefore, Maryville is about 54 points ahead of the Milligan team.

With all of these facts against them, Millign is not discourged. They know that a team must be a good looser before it can be a good winner.

Coach Cochrane thinks his season will be a success if he loses only one game. He has not lost a game this year, and after the Maryville game he figures on losing no more.

MILLIGAN IN SHAPE

The Milligan team will be in good shape for the Maryville game. Practically the same team will start against Maryville that started against Lenoir-Rhyne last Saturday. The probable starting line-up is: Lane and Stewart, ends; Bible and Brown, tackles; Lollis and Gilley, guards; Solomon, center; Harvey, quarter; Campbell and Baker, halves; and Capt. Lew Taylor, full. The Buffalo line will average about 160 pounds while the backfield will average about 154 pounds.

Fishback, Stanberry Play Tennis Finals

Unknown Freshman Fights Way To Final Round

Bob McCullough, Freshman

The Maryville College fall tennis tournament is now nearing its climax. After some excellent exhibitions of tennis skill the tournament has narrowed down to a struggle between the two survivors, George Fischbach and C. B. Stanbery. Fischbach, a member of the junior class and captain of this year's tennis team, entered the finals by successfully defeating Hurst and Buchanan; Stanbery, a hitherto unheralded freshman, became eligible for the finals by his unforseen victories over Phay and Wilson, two of the tournament favorites.

Probably the biggest upset of the tournament came when Stanbery defeated Phay in two straight sets, 6-2, 7-5. If Stanbery continues his winning streak and emerges victorious, it will be the first time in recent years that a freshman has accomplished this feat. However, because Captain Fischbach was the winner of last year's spring tournament and number one man of the team, he is slightly favored to win. The finals, between Fischbach and Stanbery, will be held early next week.

SPORT SLANTS

By BOB RULE

For some time the students have been wondering just where the Maryville-Carson game is to be played. Since the announcement that the game would be played in Knoxville there have been rumors stating that the game would be played any where from Podunk to the Rose Bowl. However, I have found out from our own Mr. Honaker, and he ought to know, that the game is to be played right here on dear ole Wilson Field.

A piece of startling news reached the office last week. Harmon Peters, who was a student here last year, was in Bristol recently and stayed over long enough to see the Appalachian-Teachers wallop King College 20 to 0. Peters stated that the Teachers reminded him of a herd of elephants on the field, except they move around much faster than elephants. King wasn't it the ball game at all, and he believes that if Maryville takes the giants from Caroline lightly, great will be the fall. The Highlanders and Teachers play here November 7.

Carson-Newman got a tough break recently when they lost their Captain, "Firpo" Smith. Last season, Smith was one of the best defensive fullbacks in the conference and could also pack the old ball with the best of them. He is a fine fellow and a wonderful sport and I really regret to hear of his team's misfortune. His leg is broken, and of course he will be incapacitated for the remainder of the season. I would like very much for the Eagles to have their best team on the field when they play the Highanders here November 21.

I dropped by one of the tennis courts the other afternoon and chanced upon a match between two of Maryville's best feminine tennis players. Miss Majorie Abshear was playing Miss Mary Cooper is a semi-final match in the women's tournament and those girls certainly are efficient in this racket. Using an unorthodox serve Miss Cooper had succeeded in taking the lead when I departed but, that mechanical serve that Miss Abshear was using looked plenty nifty to me. I sure would hate to play against one of them.

Here's just a few words to the freshmen boys who are aspiring sport writers. (They will be perspiring before they give it up.) If you ever wrote sports for dear old Oshkosh or the Hockerville Weekly Washout, try out for the Echo staff. We are in dire need of sport writers. (Which you have probably already decided or yourself.)

Maryville Moves On Milligan Next Week

Highlanders Come Thru Howard Game O. K.

It seems as if the one string of hard football games for the Highlanders will never end. Next week they will be called upon to go to Johnson City to do battle with the Milligan College Buffaloes. This will be the third conference game of the season, and Coach Honaker is very desirous to keep the team's record clean.

Earlier in the season Milligan battled the Carson-Newman Eagles to a tie, which alone is enough to cause the Scots to fear the Buffs. They have the two Harvey boys from Irwin in their backfield and this insures them a fast stepping backfield. Last year one of the Harvey boys played on the team at Tennessee Wesleyan and the other was a member of the famous University of Tennessee freshmen team.

Last year the Highlanders played the Buffaloes off their feet to win by a score of 39 to 0, and the year before that the score was tied at 0-0. They have always been bitter rivals, and the game should be one of the hardest fought of the current season. Maryville will by trying to get an advantage over Carson-Newman when they play against Milligan, for if they can come through with a victory, hey will have a good idea of the relative strength of our team and theirs.

Maryville will have as good a ball carrier as the best that the Milligan team can offer in Captain Lea Calloway. The Maryville leader has been playing football this year as he has never played before and he can be counted on to carry Maryville's colors nobly for the remainder of the season. Lea is by far the greatest ball carrier that Maryvile has had since Shorty McCall graduated, and can that boy throw forward passes? Can a duck swim?

Joe Woodard also should bring us some extra yardage by his kicking. His booting has been one of the features of the Scot's play this year and let's hope that he is socking the old ball far and wide when we stack up against Milligan. White and Richardson have also shown great improvement on the ends, and the playing of the entire line has been pleasing.

Howard Backfield Plays Dashing Brand Of Ball But Scot Line Holds 'Em

One of the greatest Maryville College football teams in history came back strong in the last half last night and gained a 6 to 6 tie with Howard College's Bulldogs from Birmingham, Ala. Howard presented the fastest and most elusive set of backfield men that the Highlanders have played against this year. Captain Calloway of Maryville and Tommy Bondurant of Howard missed place kicks for the extra points.

This Guy Hulsey

There may be faster humans on football fields than this guy Charley Hulsey but I doubt it. About five minutes after the game started, he grabbed the ball on a spinner play and ran 63 yards thru the entire Maryville team for the first touchdown of the game to give Howard a lead that certainly didn't look easy to overcome. However, Howard showed a slight let up on offense after their score but their defense was savage all thru the game.

Both teams received several breaks during the course of the game. Shortly before Howard's score, Maryville fumbled to give them the ball deep in our own territory but a Howard man returned the compliment and let one slip and the Scots recovered. A long kick by Joe Wodard put the ball deep into Howard territory and things looked safe but we soon found out that nothing was safe with this guy Hulsey around.

He broke loose for 15 yards and first down to bring the ball slightly out of his own territory and after a

Johnson And Cooper Will Wage Friendly War

The third round of the women's tennis tournament was finished last Saturday with Swafford, Hodges, members of last year's team, winning their matches in excellent form.

In the beginning of the fourth round Babcock won her match with Carter. Cooley and Abshear were eliminated by Johnson and Cooper, respectively. These new girls, who are room-mates, are scheduled to play each other in the simi-finals.

The fourth round was finished this afternoon, and by next Saturday the tournament will be played off.

INAUGURATION

At 10:00 o'clock Dr. William Chalmers Covert, General Secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Christian Education spoke on The College and Contemporary Thought.

He insisted that America's present college student is profoundly interested in vital problems of the day. He urged students not to be too free in accepting thoughts of the so-called "intellectual" who is brimming over with cynicism. The cynics thought is not creative. Dr. Covert urged an interpretaton of the sciences in terms of and in recognition to, a divine creator, a psychology that sees God in everything, a sociology that sees the Liberal Arts colleges as in institution planting motives for the social program, and a philosophy that shudders at a deliberate, cynical attitude toward life. He insists that the small college is a necessary institution and must continue to do well for a balanced college program to be retained.

Following the address of Dr. Covert, Dr. Robert L. Kelly spoke on "The College and Vocations. Dr. Kelly represented the Association of American Colleges and the Council of Church Board of Education.

We must have a broader view of the meaning of the word culture, for after all, culture means vocation. We have too many vocation-trained men and women. What we need is better ones; personnel men of the right sort. These men come to us from the Liberal Arts colleges, not from technical schools.

The third speaker, Dr. Cleland Boyd McAfee, spoke on "The College and the Christian Enterprise."

The Christian Enterprise, said Dr. McAfee, is the making of Jesus Christ known in such a form that his spirit and principles will be applied everywhere. The Enterprise is not suffering from a lack of leaders, but from a lack of men and women in the ranks to sustain its movement and spirit. Men and women are needed who are naturally world minded. These people must come from the Christian Colleges.

Dr. McAfee also discussed the three problems that affect the Christian Enterprise, namely, Education, Religion, and Morals.

The induction of the president was made by Dr. William R. Dawson, chairman of the Directors of Maryville College, to whom Dr. Lloyd pledged himself to carry out his office.

Dr. Hugh Thomson Kerr, general secretary Board of Christian Education of the Presbyterian Church, charged the newly inaugural president.

He declared that the Christian college, in order to act as a guide to a true philosphy of education, must get rid of its inferiority complex.

As an indicator of some of the problems of the small college, Dr. Kerr pointed out that, out of a list of 400 colleges and universities, ten possessed 43 per cent of the endowments, while educating only ten pr cnt of the students.

"A christian college is one true to its original purpose," said Woodrow Wilson. In addition, the necessity of religous leadership is a faculty problem."

The Maryville College choir then sang. Following this, President Ralph Waldo Eloyd made his inaugural address.

He mentioned two possible levels of education for the future: one for superior students, the other for students of lesser ability. To secure the best characters, rigid and stern scholastic requirements would be needed, he added.

"The future colleges curriculum should contain exact and social sciences; vocational methods; finer arts; and relgion and literature. A balanced curriculum must represent those avenues over which life will be traveled."

Later in his address, Dr. Lloyd presented the problem of co-education. Although he admitted that a strong argument could be built up against it, he also marked himself as believing that co-education helps young people through the years of uncertainty and complexity to companionships that are wholesome and beneficial.

President mentioned altruism as a course which should be required for study in the development of character. Creative teaching, he said, was also very necessary, in order that a student might be given something directive in developing a philosophy.

In the speaker's mind there was no doubt as to the importance of religion in the development of character.

The two-day inaugural exercises wer close with the confirming, upon Dr. Samuel Tyndale Wilson, president emeritus of Maryville College, the degree of Doctor of Letters. This was done by President Lloyd.

HOWARD GAME

play had failed to gain, he started on this phenomenal run. It seemed like Maryville tacklers just fell from his path like tall grass and it was a really perfect play if there has ever been one pulled on Maryville. After the score, the teams exchanged punts for the remainder of the first half and Woodard again had th best of the duel.

Calloway Thrills

It took Captain Lea Calloway to give the real big thrill of th egame. Standing in his half back position on a punt, Lea took a short kick in one hand while racing backward and returned it 20 yards to the Howard 35 yard line. For an instant it looked like Lea was gone for the promised land but one of those infernal speed demons cut across the field and headed the Maryville leader off.

Maryville came back a different football team when the last half started. Stinging under the humility of being behind, the Highlanders started playing football like they are capable of playing. They played heads up football and made the breaks come their way and this fact resulted in the tieing touchdown.

The Break Comes

Shortly after the second half started, Woodard kicked to Moore and Ray Russell, sophomore center, got down under the kick and nailed the safety man in his tracks and the ball was fumbled. Maryville recovered on the 29 yard line and their first real opportunity to score was at hand. The Maryville students woke up and started begging for a touchdown and Capt. Calloway and his men responded valiantly.

With the ball on the 29 yard line, Boretsky pulled a surprise pass that went from Calloway to White and good for a first down and on the 17 yard lin . A line play netted a yard and then old dependable Lea came thru with a marvelous 12 yard run straight thru th Howard line for a first down on the four yard line. Two plays netted as many yards and again Lea came thru and smashed tackle for the remaining two yards and a touchdown. The all important try for extra point was blocked.

Howard Has Chance

Howard had another chance to score in the third quarter but they were unable to muster the necessary punch that it takes to score on Maryville. Moore kicked to Steve Boretsky's hand and it was Howard's ball on the 30 yard line. The Maryville team braced and forced Howard to try a long pass over th goal line which was batted down by Boretsky and Calloway. The ball as brought out to the 20 yard line and after a few plays, Woodard kicked out of danger.

Woodard's Kicking

Ole Joe Woodard kept Howard on the defensive during the greater part of the game just as he has kept the rest of the teams that we have played this year. Joe seems to improve in his kicking as the season gets older. And he's playing a mighty good defensive game these days too, if you ask me.

Bondurant, Brown and Scifres played the best defensive game for the Howard team and Hulsey and Moore were the greatest offensive threats. Overly, Carper, Russel and Tolliver were best on the defensive in the line for the Scots while Martin Gillespie gave the most brilliant demonstraton of defensive play at the full back post that anyi Maryville man has shown in many years. Woodard and Calloway were Maryville's best ball carriers.

The program chairman, William Hannah, is attempting to uncover an old Athenan song for this evening's meeting.

THE LITTLE CHURCH

"THE SACRAMENT"
by H. E. Orr, D. D.
Text: "What Mean Ye by This Services?" Exodus 12:28.

From this passage it is evident that it was recognized as necessary among the Hebrews to make provisions against the time when the meaning of their most important religious ceremonial, the Passover, would have to be explained if the rite was not to become mere meaningless ritual. It is certainly not less necessary that the reason for the sacrement of our faith which grows out of that observance shall, from time to time, be given. Otherwise our observance of the Lord's Supper tends to become mere formality, a ritual experience that leaves us cold and unmoved.

"What mean ye by this service?" We mean, for one thing, that we have in this sacrament a symbol of Christian unity. In this observance we join hands symbolically with a line of Christian people that stretches across the world and spans the centuries back to the beginning where bread and wine were received from the hands of Jesus himself.

Moreover, here is a custom, a ritual, an observance, rich in meaning because it signifies a unity of fellowship in Christ which cuts across divisive creed, color, and nationalit and includes, at the present time, one third of the whole human race. True, there are many creeds and kinds of Christians. They have often hurled at each other charge and counter-charge of heresy, of treason to the faith, of anathema and excommunication. Yet in this rite they possess a bond that binds them all into a unity so inclusive that none can be separated so far by creed or distance or space of time as to be left out of it.

"What mean ye by this service?" We mean, also, that we have here the symbol of a world-wide fellowship whose ideal is sacrifice. It is a most significant thing for the life of the world that one third of the human race stands in some sense committed to a faith that can in no other way be so well set forth as in a symbol of sacrifice for others. It is selfishness and greed that threaten the life of the world. In this sacrament Christians profess supreme allegiance to an ideal of unselfishness and self-giving. As we take our part, therefore, in this sacremental rite the experience should thrill us with the thought of the significance of the Christian fellowship and should lead us to dedicate ourselves anew to the realization of the ideals of our faith.

My God, and is Thy table spread?
And does Thy cup with love o'erflow?
Thither be all Thy children led,
And let them all its sweetness know.

And speaking of signs . . . . did you notice the "Support our Presbyterian Colleges" stickers on the cars of delegates to Synod.

Nez Hamrick is in charge of the party and has the following committee chairman assisting her: entertainment, Dorothy Krupitzer; decoration, Louise Cline; refreshments, Lloyd E. Duncan.

The sophomores will have their entertainment the first art of the evening in the basement of the Presbyterian Church and will then go to the 9:00 o'clock show at the Palace. Alma Allis is supervising the party. John Phay, as head of the entertainment committee, is getting together the best talent of the class for the evening. Elizabeth Ayres is in charge of the refreshments and Howard Kipp is chairman of the decoration committee.

The freshmen are planning for a night of fun and frolic in the Alumni gymnasium amidst the usual cornfields and pumpkins. This is the only party the freshmen hold during the year and they are taking utmost pains to make it a successful one. Ruth Hershey, class vice-president, is in charge of the affair and is being assisted by Mildred Harris, chairman of the program committee, Grace Hast, chairman of the decoration commnittee, and Rossetta Canoll, chairman of the refreshments committee.

Some of the readers of this column might wonder why this has been allowed to continue as a department of THE ECHO. Let us tell you now, frankly, that we've wondered the same thing.

We want you to rest assured that it doesn't exist, in part, to make complimentary remarks about students, faculty members, or departments of the college, in hopes of receiving a like return. On the other hand, we believe in giving credit where credit is due. If you're doing a good deed in the best intreset of the college, beware! We might hint that you can do likewise if you're not doing something so good for the college.

Maryville was represented last Saturday night by two teams: that eleven on the field which showed to great advantage; and the mob of students on the side line, which our editor so fittingly called our "side line team." Notre Dame carries the name of "Fighting Irish," and they deserve it. On the merits shown by the "two teams" Friday night Maryville should feel justified in appropriating a name that speaks truthfully of the spirit that exists here—THE FIGHTING SCOTS—from Marfville.

Our feature editor had better not move to Chicago and seek work on the Tribune—not if he keeps on writing such heads for his column. His last weeks feature read—"BLOW ME DOWN"Beale. He might get his request answered promptly, and it could be done there better than after the fashion of Popeye—we are told.

There are going to be more funny things happening on Maryville's campus now. Robert Stevenson is representing Maryville in "College Humor." This is just some more publicity stuff (we won't say what kind), and that's about what it means to the school, although it means a free subscription to the magazine and a pass to any football game in the country for the Junior Associate Editor. We'll know now where to look for Bob on Saturday afternoons, and it won't be out behind the chapel moonshining. Bob surely knows a good thing when he sees it.

Professor Queener talked to the debate class one night last week, giving one of his characteristic inspirational talks. He had the gang all ready to set the world afire on this capitalism question. The debate squad is expected to resemble an athletic team this year, inasmuch as it will carry a real fight to represent the Highlanders. Debating was saved this year through Coach Queener's efforts, and the team wants to show

A CORRECTION

In the October 24 issue of the Echo, under the head "President Emeritus Still Finds Plenty To Keep Him Busy," the title of Dr. S. T. Wilson's book "A Century of Maryville College" was erroneously given as "A Country College."

The staff regrets deeply the mistake and takes this method of extending its apology to Dr. Wilson.

'PEG O' MY HEART' BENEFIT PLAY OF EXPRESSION DEPT.

Miss Wilhelmina Holland To Coach Production Of Popular Comedy

The opening play of the season will be presented in Voorhees Chapel on Monday, November 23, when members of the expression department appear in "Peg O' My Heart." This performance also has the distinction of being the Y. W. C. A. benefit number.

"Peg O' My Heart," written by Hartley Manners, is very popular among amateur players, as well as professionals. It has been produced almost 6000 times in the United States and Canada, and in Australia holds the record run for comedies. The total number of productions is well over 10,000.

Miss Wilhelmia Holland, as coach of the play, has the happy (we hope) experience of coaching a Maryville play for the first time in four years. Miss Holland is again with the Maryville expression department, after a four-year absence, during which time she was connected with the expression department of Martha Washington College.

English Head Speaks Favorably Of Mid-Winter Selections

Dean Believes Same Problems Face College Player As Professional Actor

The same financial and interest arousing problems which confront professional play producers affect college presentation of plays, says Dr. Edwin R. Hunter, Dean of Maryville College.

"A play of established literary value and one with real cultural approval is "She Stoops to Conquer." The objections to this play, based on the fact that it is too old, do not take into consideration the excellent, rollicking comedy of the play that is perennial. It is one of the masterpieces of dramatic literature.

"Besides being a valuable part of literature, a play should present social problems in a constructive manner. No one of the present mid-winter plays seems to do this.

"'When Knighthood Was In Flower' presents well the customs, attitudes, and costumes of past times."

Of "David Harum" and "Peg O' My Heart" Dr Hunter could only say that he knew both were plays of merit, and not dependent on fun, alone, for their success.

Another trouble in presenting plays in a small college, the Dean believes, is that the actors are too-well known to permit proper reception by the audience. Likewise, one individua may often take part in several plays at close intervals.

"In Maryville, it would be better if one-half the number of plays were given; the brother societies and the sister societies combining with each other so that the girls and boys could put on a play individually as groups.

"If instead of reducing the number of plays, the societies were cut down, then, to secure proper competitive spirit, two mixed societies would be needed. There would be no gain in pitting girls against the boys.

"The college player, if the dramatic field was not so crowded, might stand a good chance of continuing his histrionic work. As it is, the greatest asset is that acting teaches the student how to appreciate and intelligently criticize plays.

VESPER CHOIR IN NEW ROBES

Those who attended the Inauguration services of Dr. Lloyd, remember the startling change in the appearance of the Vesper Choir. It was a complete surprise to see, moving slowly down the center of the chapel, the choir members, robed in fine new white cottas and black cassocks. They wore their new splendor with a proud air of distinction always associated, to some extent, with the Vesper Choir.

The choir gives an increased ceremonious effect to the services and new dignity is justly acquired by the members. Hearty approval for the change is extended to the leader and members of the Vesper Choir.

Class '32 To Hold First Open Party Monday, November 9

"Harvest Moon" Program Will Probably Be Choice Of Committee

The Senior Class will hold its first, open party of the year on Monday, November 9, in Thaw Hall. Plans have not as yet been completed but the tendencies at the present time point to a "Harvest Moon" party with appropriate decorations, program and refreshments. Naomi Willingham is in charge of the plans and she expects to have details formulated by the first of the week.

Students from all clases are permitted to attend the party—if a proper invitation from a senior is received by the eager and honored underclassman.

One open party is given each year by the members of the senior class, so that this scarcity of open parties makes them especially desirable and intensely enjoyable by those present.

EAST TENNESSEE Y.M.C.A. CONFERENCE HELD AT MONTVALE

Sixteen Maryville Men Attend Two-Day Sectional Meeting

The East Tennessee Student Y. M. C. A. Conference met at Montvale last Sunday and Monday with about twenty-five fellows from U. T. and Maryville present. The other colleges of this district were unable to send delegates. Maryville was represented by sixteen men who left the Hill Sunday afternoon early enough for some of them to climb Look Rock before the conference opened.

The first meeting was a devotional period before supper. After supper Dr. Ellwood Zwingle, a recent graduate of U. T., led a discussion on "What Is Christ Like?" Another short devotional period followed, and then Dr. Orr of Maryville conducted a discussion on the things which help and hinder our being Christ-like. This concluded the program for the evening, and all but three of the Maryville contingent returned to the Hill. Messrs. Teffeteller, Duff, and Ramer remained for the rest of the conference.

Monday morning the first discussion concerned the activities which a Y. M. C. A. can promote on and off the campus, and was led by Howard Bubbell, state secretary of the Y. M. C. A., and Ralph Frost, student secretary of U. T. Dr. Polhamus conducted the closing discussion, which dealt with ways in which one may express Christ in his living. He said that our expression of Christ depended on our impression of Him.

The conference closed with luncheon. Al Duff was elected president to guide its activities next year.

As a rule, the only science in which women are interested is Buyology.

ESSAY CONTEST CLOSES MONDAY

All students competing in the prize essay contest on "Fire Prevention" must submit their papers to some member of the English department on or before Monday, November 2.

A prize of five dollars is anonymously offered to the Maryville student of any classification who makes the best contribution regarding fire prevention. There is no specified length for the essay, the only regulation being the time limit as stated.

President Pleased With Results Of Inaugural Program

Personal Contact Of Visitors With College Of Great Value

The inauguration program at Maryville College was a high light in many ways aside from its educational benefits to the students, according to President Lloyd.

The feeling of good will toward the school carried away by the host of visitors was of inestimable value to the institution. Maryville College has never been a school to advertise itself widely and it was necessary for these people to be in actual contact with the students and faculty to obtain a knowledge of the real value of the college in training Youth. Many of these visitors have expressed their appreciation for the opportunity of meeting the administrators of the school and learning, first hand, the principle for which Maryville stands.

Those who were on the Hill during the Inauguration were especially impressed by the quality of the program. The fact that Maryville did present such a high type of program, and such important speakers was noteworthy. The congeniality of the students and the faculty was remarked by many. Still another feature of the college that appealed to the visitors was the unexpectedly complete educational facilities offered the students of this school.

Dr. Lloyd was pleased with the inauguration in every way. His special praises went to Dr. Hunter and his committee, and to the Boarding Club which handled the banquet and dinners with a minimum of trouble.

An unusual feature of the program was the wide representation of colleges and universities. Administrators and professors from some of the largest and best known schools were present; from Harvard, Yale, Columbia, Chicago and many others. Aside from the great number in attendance nearly a thousand letters expressing regret for not being able to attend were received at the president's office from alumni and friends of the college.

MRS. QUEENER WILL RETURN SOON

Mrs. Queener, who has been ill for the past three weeks, expects to resume her coaching soon. She was able to attend each soccer practice this week for short time, and seems pleased with the progress of the teams.

SOCIETIES BEGIN ACTIVE PLANNING FOR MID-WINTERS

Athenian Will Present First Entertainment Of Year December 7

Work has been begun on the preparation of the mid-winters, and reports indicate a varied and interesting program.

Athenian, who won the cup last season with "Shavings," has selected for its presentation the eighteenth century play, "She Stoops to Conquer," by Oliver Goldsmith. Wesley Culver and Lou Repass have the leading roles, and with a strong supporting cast, Athenian will make a bid to retain the cup. This will be the first mid-winter, and will be presented December 7.

Bainonian has selected a play which is even older, "When Knighthood Was in Flower." This story was dramatized by Paul Kester from the sixteenth century novel by Charles Major. George Osborne and Betty Wilbar will have the leads, supported by Bob Leach and Lucy Ann Voorhees in character parts. The play is histoffical and extremely spectacular. It presents such historical characters as Henry VIII, Thomas Wolsey, The Duke of Buckingham, Anne Bolyn, and Mary Tudor. The scenes are laid in England and in Paris.

Theta Epsilon has selected the 1931 Pulitzer prize play "Alison's House," by Susan Glaspell. Mildred MacKenzie has the leading role. The entire action of the play takes place December 31, 1899, and centers about a sybolism connected with the end of the old century and the dawn of the new. The dominant note of the play is the rich tradition which effects the presence of Alison Stanhope, though she herself has been dead eighteen years.

Alpha Sigma will present "David Harum," by E. Noyes Wescott, with Floyd Waters in the title role. David Harum is a genial "horse swapper" of the Scattergood Bains type. Katherine Kiser will have the feminine lead.

Dr. D. A. Poling To Speak In Knoxville

Dr. Daniel A. Poling will appear in Knoxville November 5-7 as one of a number of visiting speakers representing the Allied Forces for Prohibition.

The meeting at which his talks may be heard will be held at 2:30 p. m. and 7:30 p. m. at the First Baptist church. Dr. Poling is not only chairman of the Allied Forces, but is well known as a radio lecturer, as editor of the Christian Herald, and as a preacher and leader of the Christian Endeavor movement throughout the world.

The Allied Forces for Prohibition is a new movement of Allied Women, Allied Youth, and Allied Business Men. Its members are interested in the cause of prohibition, but has no political connections and no official relationship to other organizations. The purpose of their movement is educational.

Biology Department Produces Rare Mold Growth Specimen

The Biology department is rejoicing over a great find this week. In a culture of bread mold prepared by Miss Hudson for her biology classes were found several examples of the zygosporic stage in the life history of bread mold fungus.

This stage is rarely found in nature or in cultures, and except for permanent slides, only large universities have examples of the phenomena. Propagation of the specimens found by Miss Hudson is to be attempted. The biology department of the University of Tennessee was notified, and it is hoped that with the equipment of that school permanent slides may be obtained from the Maryville culture.

All notices concering club activities should be left at the Highland Echo office before Wednesday noon of each week.

This arrangement will permit the publishing of such news the same week that it occurs.

DRAEGER HURT IN ACCIDENT

Carl Drager, popular sophomore, has been hampered for the last few days by the omnipresence of various and sundry swathings. Contrary to prevalent belief, he neither had a chemical miscalculation nor slipped on a banana skin but he was in an altercation of autos on the Knoxville road last Saturday evening and was seriously cut. A passing car rushed him to a Knoxville hospital, thereby averting what might have proved a more dangerous wait for help, as a severed artery caused him to lose an alarming amount of blood. He is now back on the class routine, but his wrappings are still conspicuous.

SERENADE—BEALE

Mystery has always surrounded the origin of the practice of serenading. Some say that Adam started it when he sang "Lonesome' in the Garden of Eden and was punished by the arrival of Eve; others hold that Eve instigated the custom when she warbled to Adam "'Neath the Shade of the Old Apple Tree." We never could understand the exact reason for a serenade. Perhaps our inability to understand them comes from our almost total ignorance of them. Of our ignorance, albeit, there is no perhaps maybe, no however, nor other expressions of probability. We are certain! In the first place, our voice is an unhappy medium. It is neither a bass, tenor, contralto, soprano, nor, in fact, while in struggles made in the name of song, does it even resemble a voice. A radio announcer or crooner, maybe, but never a voice. To be sure, we secretly call our bathroom version of "Asleep in the Deep" a masterpiece in individual harmony, but singing in a shower and under a window have only one point of resemblance: serenaders have been known to get wet while "in the act." Then comes the matter of this Sunday night serenade that is getting to be a habit with some swains with ladies in Memorial. Were it not for that particularly gruesome noise in its midst, we would wish it well; as it stands, however, we cannot but desire for it a sudden ceasing. The would-be singers execute (very aptly used) pacific ditties in a manner hardly calling for adverse criticism. But when a selection calls for a strain on the tonsils, the discord is oh so noticeable. We were among the missing at the serenade at Dr. Lloyd's Saturday night, but we are sincere in our hope that the bovine-bass voice which regularly disturbs our attempt at writing home Sunday nights was indeed conspicuous by its absence.

First Lyceum Of Year To Be Presented Friday Evening

The Lyceum Committee will present the first number of the year at Voorhees Chapel Friday evening, November 6, when the De Luxe Artists-Singers appear in "Musical Memories." The Artists-Singers have received very favorable criticism from former audiences and the committee believes that the number will be popular at Maryville.

The program will be varied, including types of songs which will appeal to everyone. It will consist of three groups. Cathedral Memories, American Memories, and Concert Memories. The first group consists of gems of sacred composition, the second, of ballads and heart songs of today and of days gone by, and the third, grand opera, light opera and modern melodies.

STUDENTS GO TO PRACTICE HOUSE NOV. 23

The Home Economics Practice House is to be opened during the first as well as the second semester this year, on account of the large number of Home Economics majors in the senior class. Helen Burdette and Mabel Hembree are the first to go to the Practice House and they will begin on November twenty-third. The Practice House will be managed by the senior girls under the direction of Miss Meiselwitz until May twenty-first. The Home Economics Department has grown so much in the last three years that there has been an increase of graduates from three in 1930, ten in 1931, to fourteen in 1932.

Ye Olden Times

TEN YEARS AGO

"The party's the thing" from the lowliest Prep to the loftiest Senior. The seniors staged their Hallowe'en party at Mrs. West's. The juniors made Dr. Stevenson's House in the Woods the scene of their festivity. The sophomores had a great time in the basement of the Southern Methodist church and the verdant frosh disported themselves at the New Providence church.

The faculty couldn't wait for Hallowe'en to come and held a witches carnival three days previous at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Dunn. Miss Laura Hale acted as hostess.

The girls of the college went on a week-end hike to Montvale, where they spent the time hiking, kodaking, eating, running, sliding, and every other thing imaginable.

A NATIONAL REFERENDUM

"Let us divore prohibition from religion and morals, and let us make it a business proposition."

So speaks Dr. Daniel A. Poling, editor of the Christian Herald and leader of the Allied Forces For Prohibition.

This statement from one of the greatest religious leaders of the day sounds a new note in the fast losing fight of the Drys against the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. Following on the heels of the vitriolitic and, perhaps, slightly un-Christian remarks of Dr. Clarence True Wilson regarding the action of the American Legion in the Detroit convention in declaring by such majority for referendum, it brings to us a new concept of the grounds upon which we, who are interested in the maintainance and observance of this law, should prepare our defenses.

The action of the veterans, though attacked and denounced by the press and the pulpit of the country, fairly indicates the trend of popular thinking. Too long has the defense of this social advance been the forte of long-faced, nasal intoning, silk-hatted so-called Prohibitionists. A more practical and tangible argument, with the common-touch principle rather than the hazy and somewhat nebulous moral appeal, must be advanced before the "average man" is awakened to the perils of repeal,

"We must get away from the idea that all God's children are on our side, or that those not on our side are not God's children.

"Some of the finest people in the world are on the other side. Many are honestly for temperance."

The Wet organization is growing in strength and popularity daily. A great part of this is due to the evident unfairness of the Drys, or is it their fear that a national referendum will kill the Eighteenth Amendment. Caustic denunciation and blanket condemnation will not open the ears or guide the conclusions of those within the ranks of the Wets—"honestly for temperance"—who have not reacted to that sense of moral "oughtness" claimed by our religiously inclined Prohibitionists.

"Amiable and collective" thought will smooth out this misunderstanding. Give the Wets credit for average intelligence and moral integrity. Lets muster our forces on the field of social and economic well-being, trusting in the foresight and patriotism of those now enlisted in the enemies' ranks to bring about a change of viewpoint. Then ask, yes work in hand with our foes, for a national referendum to determine the justice and rightness of this law. "One hundred and twenty million people can't be wrong."

A feminine member of the U. of South Carolina Gamecock's staff is "on her ear" because girls' basketball is not sanctioned by the authorities. She says that the men, although nominally only equal with the co-eds, are the only ones who really understand such sports as football, basball, etc., and that women are left on the front porch as far as participation in sports is concerned. We venture to suggest that, if all her fellow-feminists desire basketball as much as she does, the authorities cannot remain dominant for a great while longer.

BG's Take Semester Trek To Chilhowees

The B. G. Hiking Club spent last week-end at Miss Gamble's cottage near Walland. The campers left the Hill at 4 o'clock on Saturday afternoon and hiked the eleven miles in about three hours. They spent Saturday night and Sunday in the mountains, and returned to the college on Monday morning.

The most exciting incident of the whole exciting affair was the gruesome murder of a snake by Katheryn Wayland and Ruth Farlee. Since Miss Hudson was in the group, the victim was dissected with due consideration and accompanying observations.

The ritual of this exclusive club provides for one week-end hiked each semester. Only seven of the ten members were able to go this time. They are Miss Helen Gamble, Miss Bonnie Hudson, Mildred Purviance, Kathryn Wayland, Pat Henry, Merle Beebe, and Ruth Farlee. Ellen McCrae was an invited guest. Georga Burke, Irish Terry, and Nez Hamrick were unable to attend.

WHY DEBATE IS WORTH WHILE

This is the first of a series of articles on the value of debate to the college student.

Is debate worth while? What part does debate play in the development of the student's capabilities? How much value has debate for the individual? Is the value equal to the sacrifice of time from regular studies? Is one justified in taking time from studies for debate?

These questions arise in the minds of many students, and perhaps a discussion of or enumeration of values to the student would prove helpful in the search for a solution to them. Debate requires time, study, and thought, but its returns are large.

Do you, who wish these questions answered, remember the enumerated requirements of a scholar as given by a noted psychologist, published in the October 3 issue of the Highland Echo?

Understanding and appreciation of other races and cultures contemporary or remote.

Ability and Disposition to weigh evidence in controversal matters.

Ability and disposition to mentally project an undertaking through its successive steps before undertaking it.

Skill in explanation and prediction.

Ability and disposition to look beneath the surface of things before passing judgment.

Ability to do reflecting thinking.

Disposition toward continued study and intellectual cultivation.

Critical and questioning attitude toward traditional sanctions.

Clarity in definition.

Discrimination in values in reacting to environment, social and physical.

Analytical approach to proposition leading to the detection of fallacies and contradictions.

Ability and disposition to observe accurately and systematically.

Understanding and skill in the use of processes of induction, deduction, and generalizatio.

The ability to see relationships and accuracy in their interpretation.

A freshness of interest with respect to the developments of knowledge.

All the requirements, with the possible exception of the first, eighth, and tenth, are the characteristics of the sincere debater. In the consideration of particular questions of debate, the remaining three points could also be acquired characteristics. If one phase of the intellectual development of college life can give such reward as this, is not debate worth while What do you think of it?

ASSOCIATE EDITOR REFEREES GAME

The newly-elected junior associate editor of the Highland Echo staff, J. Arthur Lazell, has shown another of his talents when on Friday morning he refereed a football game for some aspiring Lea Calloways and Pee Wee Overlys. He was dressed in appropriate plus fours, a suede jacket, and socks, and was, in fact, a living example of what the well-dressed referee should wear. The game progressed well under his direction, suggestion, and orientation. No doubt his extra-curricular activities will be divided from now on between the pressing duties of work on THE HIGHLAND ECHO and amateur football referee, and coach for potential Highlanders.

KEYHOLE KOMMENT

Despite the fact that we are, at times, proud to be numbered as one of the male species, and are loath to admit that women are peers, or superiors, with and to men, we can but break down and confess that the logical contenders for places in this week's limpid limelight are both members of the contrary sex. Let us not be misunderstood. We would be the last in that ever diminishing group which belittles the achievements of anyone, especially those of the fairer creatures.. We are a strong believer in women's rights. And to prove our statements we are presenting, as two of our outstanding seniors, Merle Beebe and Pat Henry.

We have always wondered what Merle says or does to Dr. Lloyd when she goes in and tells him someone awaits without. Whatever it is, surely nothing short of sorcery could ever produce such results. She goes in, and before one can make up his mind as to whteher or not to try to catch what she says, she is back again with permission for him to enter. And besides being Dr. Lloyd's very efficient secretary, she is also commander-in-chief of the local Y. M. C. A., one of the most coveted and honored positions of the Hill. She is a star member of the Vesper choir and holder of about 'steen other offices on the campus whose enumeration we are neither desirous nor capable of attempting.

Pat Henry, christened Eleanor, is one of our distinguished globe-trotters. We are told, by rather competent authorities, that Pat has been more places than Coach Honaker has told jokes—which is some travellin'! We have asked everyone but Pat herself where her present home address is, and have received answers naming everywhere but Timbuctoo and Bagdad. Not that no one knows where she lives, it's merely that all of them are, or have been, right. As information to male students and freshmen, we insert the fact that Pat and Merle are roommates. If you don't think so, surely you can be persuaded by the announcement that both sing in the choir, Pat is vice-president of Y. W. C. A., both are are prominent Bainonians, and both are Superior Scotties.

S COLLEGIATE S ! W A P !

Freshmen eliminated, nobody knows everything. In fact, we might go so far as to say that nobody knows everything about his special field. We are certain that a few dates, important in the historical sphere, are unknown to Prof. Queener; and, prevalent opinion notwithstanding, there must be several words the mealng and use of which Dr. Stevenson knows little, if anything. So it is with us; some things happen on some campuses each week that do not find their way to our sensitive, though elaphantine, ear. Bear with us, then, in our efforts; or, if unable to bear with us, scoff with others at us . . .

See where two writers from Clemson and Lenoir-Rhyne, respectively, got into some heated argument over a remark made by the news-hound from the latter institution. Hope we never encounter anything like that, as we never could think up snappy comebacks.

We are sorry to have to swallow a choice bit of exchange work given out last week. Nevertheless, we notice in the Lenoir-Rhynean that the faculty committee on athletics has reconsidered and rescinded their former rule abolishing intercollegiate basketball. Even now they are attempting to arrange a suitable schedule. Perhaps Coach Honaker would consider a couple of games with them.

Pi Kappa Delta Will Debate Question Of 'Capitalism'

The question that Pi Kappa Delta has chosen for the year is "Capitalism," however the definite statement is not yet known. The men's and women's varsity teams will debate the same question. The try-outs will be held early in December.

The plan for preparation for varsity debate has changed somewhat this year. The debate class will no longer be held, but each week the debaters are asked to meet in the Y. W. C. A. auditorium for a discussion meeting, or to listen to talks on subtopics of Capitalism.

October 2 Prof. Queener spoke to the students interested in debate and gave them a number of requirements to make Pi Kappa Delta. His talk was inspiring and encouraging, and aroused in the would-be debaters enthusiasm. Dr. McMurray spoke to the group on Thursday night, October 29, on the Fundamental Principles of Capitalism. By defining such terms as wealth, property, capital and capitalism, and by outlining the development of industry, and enumerating results of Capitalism, he laid the foundation for the study of the question.

RUTH LLOYD CHOSEN MASCOT BY CLASS '32

The appearance of Ruth Lloyd last week at the football game confirms the rumors that have been prevalent on the campus to the effect ha Miss Lloyd is the mascot of Class '32. She is on friendly terms with the head cheer leader and highly approves of his family. She is a close acquaintance of the president of the senior class and the president of the student council and makes a most acceptable apostrophe for the '32. She is intelligent and dignified—two characters which are possessed by all seniors.

In fact she makes the best mascot the Class of '32 has ever had. She will be seen in her new position next spring during the graduation festivities, but even now her fame is assured.

Dr. McMurray Issues Tests For Athletic Fraternity

Highlanders Make Bid For Smoky Mountain Conference Title Today

MILLIGAN TEAM OFFERS CAPTAIN LEW TAYLOR AND HARVEY BROTHERS AS BEST BETS ON OFFENSE; MARYVILLE HEAVIER

TITLE IS AT STAKE

Scots Can Establish Themselves As Heavy Favorites In Chase By Decisive Victory

Maryville College Highlanders are in Johnson City today doing battle with the Milligan College Buffaloes in a game that will go a long way toward deciding the Championship of the Smoky Mountain Conference. The Buffaloes gained a tie with the Carson-Newman Eagles and if the Highlanders can come thru with a victory today, they will be top favorites to win the crown.

Defeating the Milligan team will be anything but easy. They are reported to have one of the best teams this year that they have had in many seasons. They have a great defensive team and an offense that is dangerous at all times. The Harvey boys and Captain Lew Taylor are three of the best running backs in the conference. The line charges low and fast and is exceptionally hard to take out of plays.

Chandler Gone

The Maryville team will more than likely be in its worst condition of the season. Bob Chandler, varsity tackle, was forced to return to the bedside of his father, who has been ill for some time. Chandler will be lost to the team for the remainder of the season and it is not likely that he will be able to return to school at all. This will leave the line entirely without experienced linemen. Judge Carper, who has been alternating with Chandler at the tackle post, will more than likely get the opening call.

Tolliver Hurt

The condition of Millard Tolliver has slightly worried the Maryville coaches. Tolliver was hurt in the Howard game and was forced to miss practice during the earlier part of the wek. If he is able to play at all today he will be playing without having done any hard work this week. He is one of the most consistent men on the team and if he is not able to play, the team's chaces for a victory will be greatly lessened.

Team In Fair Shape

The rest of the team is in good shape. The backfield is intact and the offense is expected to be the feature of the game Saturday. It will just be one great offense against another and the team that can present the best defense will more than likely come out ahead. Milligan will have to keep Captain Calloway from running, passing and blocking and they will have to rush Woodard on those long beautiful punts of his—or else.

SPORT SLANTS

By BOB RULE

Bob Chandler is lost to the Maryville team but it will be quite a while before we will forget the big boy from 'Bama. His presence in the Maryville line always insured additional strength. He played clean, fought hard, asked no quarter of the enemy nor gave any. His loss will be felt, not only on the football and baseball fields, but in the student body. He is a fine fellow and we certainly admire his spirit in willingly dropping out of school to take care of his father's business during his illness.

There is a slight possibility that Chandler will be able to return to school for the second semester's work and we certainly hope that he will. This would get him back in time to play baseball and basketball and that would help a lot.

The students are now to be congratulated instead of criticised for their yelling at the football games. Last week against Howard the Highlanders recovered a fumble on the 29 yard line and the studes started a howl for a touchdown that I have never heard equaled, not even in a nursery. And just see what happened when you let the team know that you are behind them one hundred per cent. Lets keep that up all season. It helps the boys out.

Here's a baseball yarn that is simply too good to keep. It appeared in a Knoxville newspaper this summer and there are several students, no doubt, who did not see it. Here 'tis. A night baseball game was being played out West and in the last part of the ninth inning, with two strikes and three balls on the batter and the ball game depending on the next pitch, the lights suddenly went dim. In an effort to gut the game over, the umpire ordered the pitcher to throw the final ball. The pitcher called a conference with his catcher out in front of the plate and slipped him the ball. Returning to the box, he cut loose with a fast delivery and the catcher smacked the ball in his mitt. "Strike three, and yer out," bellowed the umpire. To make comedy a farce, the batter turned to the ump and complained, "why you darn fool, that ball was six inches outside."

Millard Tollivers sprained ankle is not in the best of shape. He received this hurt last week against Howard and just whether or not he will be able to carry on against Milligan today is not known. If the big guard is not ready for duty, Coach Honaker may have to draw straws to see whether he starts Mgr. Farr or "Doc" Smerznak.

Big Team From Carolina Next Foe To Block Scotties' Path

Appalachian Teachers College From Boone, N. C., Boast A Powerful Eleven

LINE AVERAGES 198

Maryville Varsity Will Have To Play Entire Game In Order To Win

One of the largest college football teams in the South is coming to Maryville next week out of the Carolina mountains for a game with the Highlanders. Its just another headache for the Maryville team. With a line that averages 198 pounds and a big, fast backfield that will average 185, the visitors will present one ot the most dangerous teams that the Highlanders will face this season.

Defeated King

A week or so ago, they defeated King College in Bristol by a score of 20 to 0 and several Maryville people who saw the game state that the Appalachian team is almost as large as an ordinary University team. This will mean that the varsity line will be forced to stay in the game the full time if the Maryville team is to finish the season without another defeat resigstered against them.

Team Needs Support

This is the first time that Maryville has played the boys from Boone, N. C., in several years and there is not a great deal of rivalry between the two teams but the Scots will need the whole hearted support of the student body in order to win. It was thought at the first of the season that the Appalichian game would be one of the easy games on the schedule but developments have proven that it will be one of the toughest games.

The Highlanders record so far this year follows

M. C.—25	L .M. U.—0
M. C.—0	Tennessee—33
M. C.—0	Kentucky—19
M. C.—51	Union—0
M. C.—26	Wesleyan—7
M. C.—6	Howard—6

BOB CHANDLER IS LOST TO FOOTBALL TEAM FOR SEASON

Varsity Tackle Goes To Bedside Of His Father In Decatur, Ala., Won't Return

Coach Honaker's hopes of finishing the season undefeated in college circles were smote a lusty blow on the chin this week when big Bob Chandler, varsity tackle, was called to the bedside of his father in Decatur, Ala. Chandler's father has been ill for some time and the Maryville tackle will have to take over the duties in his father's store in that city.

Last season Chandler was a promising man and earned his letter as a tackle and was also one of the most dependable baseball pitchers. He returned late this year, due to his elder's illness, but before long he was running on the varsity team. His playing in the games this year has been one of the high-lights of the Highlander defense.

Chandler's departure leaves Coach Thrower entirely without experienced line material. Chandler and Carper have been alternating at the tackle post and one of them has been used as a dependable reserve in the games. This combination left a man on the bench as good as the majority of the one's on the field and a substitution did not weaken the line.

Additional Changes Made In Maryville Carson-Newman Game

Teams Will Meet Here Turkey Day In Season's Classic

Additional interesting information concerning the game between Maryville and Carson-Newman was given out by Dr. McMurray Tuesday morning. The final arrangements for the game were made by the Athletic Association. The game is not to be played on November 21 as was originally scheduled but on Thanksgiving, November 26.

At Knoxville First

Coach Frosty Holt, of Carson Newman, asked Coach Honaker permission early in the season to arrange the game in Knoxville in order to draw a larger crowd and Coach Honaker consented. The game was arranged and all plans for the biggest game of the season seemed to be completed but unexpected complications arose and the game had to be rescheduled to be played in Maryville.

High Schools Play

The City-County game in Knoxville is to be played on the 21st and the officials from both schools decided that the game would be a greater attraction if played on Turkey Day. The game, of course, will be played in the afternoon, as the weather that late in the year will not permit night football. One of the largest crowds ever to follow a Carson-Newman team here is expected.

Four Athletes Gained Membership Last Year; All Men Are Eligible

JOHN TAGGART, JEAN McMURRAY, DONALD BENN, ED BUCHANAN AND CHAS. RICHARDSON GAINED THE DISTINCTION

MEN URGED TO TRY

Members Of Sigma Delta Psi Ranked Among Highest Of Nation's Athletes

Several athletes have asked for an announcement concerning the Sigma Delta Psi, National Honor Athlete Fraternity, so that they may start work on the tests. In issuing these requirements and instructions, Dr. J. H. McMurray, sponsor of the Maryville chapter, urges all boys of athletic ability to try out for the gold key.

Has Five Members

Until last year, only John Taggart of the class of '29, had passed the tests, but at that time interest was aroused in the fraternity, and four of Maryville's athletes were granted memberships. Jean McMurray, Ed Buchanan, Donald Benn, and Charles Richardson were the men who passed the tests.

The society was founded at Indiana University in 1912, and was incorporated in 1930. Membership in the fraternity is considered the highest honor that any college athlete can attain. The purpose of the organization is to promote physical, mental, and moral development of college students. Charters are granted only to accredited four year colleges. This society is open only to men students.

Fifteen Requirements

For full membership, students are required to pass the official test designated by the national officers in the presence of one of the following men: Dr. McMurray, Coach Honaker, Coach Thrower, Prof. Howell, or Prof. Smith. Only three tests may be attempted in a single day. The society is open to all men students and all alumni of Maryville.

The requirements follow:

1—100 yd. dash.....11 3-5 sec.
2—120 yd. low hurdles.....16 sec.
3—Running high jump.....5 ft.
4—Running broad jump.....17 ft.
5—16 pounds shot put.....30 ft.
6—20 ft. rope climp.....12 sec.
7—Baseball throw .....250 ft.
or javelin throw .....130 ft.
8—Football punt .....120 ft.
9—100 yard swim ..... 1 min, 45 sec.
10—1 mile run ..... 6 mi.
11—From hand spring, landing on feet.
12—Hand stand .....10 sec.
13—Fence vault .....shin high.
14—Good posture. Stand B (H.B.M.)
15—Scholarship. Eligible for varsity competition.

There are special requirements and exceptions that are not explained in the list. These points will be explained by the instructor under whom the tests are being passed.

STANBERRY TAKES LEAD OVER CAPT. GEO. FISCHBACH

Freshman From Etowah Has Two Set Lead In Title Go Of Tennis Tourney

Robert (Bob) McCullouch,
Freshman.

Soon the men's fall tennis tournament will be a matter of history—a history of hard-fought battles and surprising upsets. So far, two sets of the final match have been played, and in both of them George Fischback has been defeated by C. B. Stanberry, the dark horse threat of the freshman class. Stanberry won the first two sets decisively by a score of 6-3; 6-2. His serve was speedy, hard to hit, and went straight to the mark. His volleying was less dependable but still excellent.

Fischback on the other hand was somewhat erratic. He had a powerful serve when it worked, but it didn't work often enough. His court play was good and at times his knack of placing the ball seemed incredible. However Stanbery's vicious chop stroke proved a little too hard to handle. Clearly, Fischback was having an off day. There is a good chance that he will recover his form and stage a smashing comeback to emerge victorious. Stanbery on the other hand, has a tremendous advantage and is determined to use it .The final match to be held next week promises to be a do-or-die fight until the last point is scored.

INAUGURATION EXCERPTS

The following pertinent statements were taken from the addresses delivered at the College during the Inauguration of the president.

The world of today may not be a great brotherhood but it is a big neighborhood.

The Bible is adequate for 1931 because it is concerned with subjects and issues.

The Christian college reveals to its students the cause of Christ.

The Christian college must be better than the best.

No real friendship requires anybody to do anything less than the best. Friendship is a security against revolution.

The so-called intellectuals find no reality in spiritual thought.

Contemporary thought is the body of collective, positive thinking that is persuasive enough to color present-day activities.

A Christian college campus is the historical hotbed of American idealism.

There can be no effective leadership unless there is moral earnestness.

We are in a process of transformation caused by what is called science. Science must be wisely used if it is to lead to the betterment and progress of the world.

Our youth of today have the greatest opportunity in advancement since the days of Washington.

A college influences contemporary thought through a correct interpretation and application of the sciences.

The Protestant civilization looks to the Christian colleges for certain unique contributions.

Religion takes more of life than science ever will.

Industries are discovering much latent power among their men who wear overalls.

Success is due to fifteen per cent technical knowledge and eighty-five per cent human knowledge.

Instruction integrates thinking and emotion into action; when thought conspires with the heart's desire in human action man is doing his best.

The duty of a college is to take a more practical view of culture with a broader view of conditions.

OBSERVATIONS

its appreciation for his interest in keeping the school in competition and for keeping Pi Kappa Delta active in the college.

Dr. Lloyd managed to take a longer vacation than did the upper classmen and the children. He's thinking, however, of getting back to "school" work in a short time. He was not running so smoothly for some time, but lately he got back on his feet by drinking red pop to get into the pink of condition.

Well, here's the best one we've heard. Having heard it from a number of sources and we're forced to believe that it's true. A freshman girl, after going through all the inauguration ceremonies, wrote her mother and told her what a glorious time she was having at Dr. Lloyd's orientation. She likely wrote home earlier in the year telling her mother that she had been duly and properly inaugurated in the freshman class.

When you run out of things to worry about, begin to speculate on who will get the biggest piece of white meat when the autopsy is held on the Thanksgiving "toikey." If that isn't satisfactory worry about whether or not James Kendall was including anything about brains in his book "At Home Among The Atoms."

One of the first things that Maryville freshmen have to learn is that "he who is high-hat is thumbs down with the crowd." It's an axiom here, and one that should be recorded early. Often, this year, we have seen the freshman who can't quite console himself to be one of his class. Especially does he feel so when he remembers that it has been but one year since he was an important member of the senior class. A new student at Maryville either submits to the pressure lowered upon him by the upperclassmen, or he goes on thru college with his misinformed conception of himself, for after all, a student body's opinion can rate over that of one person, and becomes distinctly unpopular. There just isn't existing around here any of this stuff they call class distinction.

While we've been blindly wandering to and fro on the north side of Thaw Hall we wouldn't believe that there was so much activity just around the on the other side of the building. There has been some real drama enacted on the roof of the practice house according to the report of the student council president —and she should know. Such presentations as The Dance of the Seven Veils," and others, have been greatly enjoyed by the unseen audience (heavy on the unseen, says the president). Whether there will be a dramatic event staged on the roof of the practice house, whether this spot was chosen for a rehearsal on account of its deserted condition has not been determined. The acting, we are told, was of high quality, fit to be watched by even a larger crowd. This news of newfou nd talent comes as a surprise and we are hoping for great things from Miss MacKenzie in the way of Drama.

The band of Maryville's is going to bear watching if our guessing is not decidely poor. One of the reasons for the success of this years band is the voluntary and willing efforts of Larry Somers to take the responsibility for its direction. At football games and pep meetings the organization has come through in great style. Larry deserves the highest of praise for his giving to Maryville its very best band in the history of a band at Maryville.

Looking at things from too much of an introspective viewpoint not always advisabl . Yet there are times when, by looking into things, a great deal of internal turmoil is avoided. Somebody evidently kicked too hard about the brown bread one day last week for in a piece of bread there shone a bright shiny shoe nail. The cook should be advised to lose the shiny nails in white bread and the rusty one in brown bread. There might be fewer nails found.

Several students were a bit uneasy concerning the whereabouts of the night-watchman when they went seeking ice cream the night of the inauguration dinner. Less concern was felt later, however, even though the students did bump into the watch of the night. When the meeting occurred he was making his way up Pearson's cellar steps with necessary reinforcements for the nights labor. He wasn't so choicy as the students, taking only apples. The unexpected meeting was considered a coincidence, or a "slip that passed in the night," and all was well.

Bill—"Does Tennessee what Arkansas?"

Harry—" I dunno. Alaska."

CLUBBY COMMENT

ALPHA SIGMA

Alpha Sigma literary society will present a program for Theta Epsilon, its sister society, this evening.

"Noiseless Movies' will be produced by Donald Briggs and Robert Overly. A "Duette will be staged" by Willes Cassada, and Overly. A French-Harp trio is, as yet unnamed.

THETA EPSILON

The new girls of Theta presented a program of unusual originality and exceptional talent last Saturday night. Representing world-famous entertainers, they kept all Theta highly amused during the program. A renowned soprano's classical numbers were well received, and the orchestra was highly approved. Tap dancing by the temperamental tappers, and "Faithfully Yours," musically expressed allegiance to Theta, brought the program to a close.

ATHENIAN

"Hypnotism" will be the subject of a talk, tonight, at Athenian literary society, by Whitfield Sloan.

The remainder of the program includes a violin solo by Clark Lathan; a reading by Robert F. Paxton, Jr., and songs on the harmonica by Frank Thornhill.

BAINONIAN

The program this evening calls for spooks, witches, gobblins, and everything else that goes with Hallowe'en. Bainonians will be entertained by the Spirit of Hallowe'en.

Any attempt to organize a Western States club has been postponed until next week because too few students appeared for the first meetings, held this week.

Alabama Club elected the following officers Tuesday in Pearsons parlor: Reeder Carson, president; George Hoglan, vice-president; and Agnes Carson, treasurer and secretary.

Florida Club, meeting Wednesday, planned for a party in the college wood, on November 7.

Kentucky Club postponed its meeting of this week until next week.

The Home Economics Club held its regular meeting Thursday evening in the club room. An impromptu program in which everyone present took part was a great success. After the program, tea was served with Mabel Hembree and Helen Burdette as hostesses.

THE LITTLE CHURCH

At the regular meeting of the Ministerial Association last Tuesday night, Andy Newcomer gave an impressive talk on "Worship," bringing out the significance of worship in a person's private and public life. Following this President Emeritus Samuel T. Wilson, President Ralph W. Lloyd, and College Pastor William P. Stevenson were elected to honorary membership in the Association. Vennor Lowry will speak at the will be furnished by a male quartette. next weeks meeting and special music

Virginia Ross gave a short talk on China and its needs at the Student Volunteer meeting last Sunday night. Plans are still being made for sending a large delegation to the eleventh Quadrennial Convention at Buffalo December 30 to January 3. At the meeting tomorrow night Dr. M. M. Rodgers will speak. The meeting will be held in Theta Hall instead of Bainonian, the usual place.

"Lives of great men all remind us
We can make our lives sublime—"

Dr. Stevenson, in his sermon last Wednesday morning, delivered a brief eulogy of Thomas Hughes, author of "Tom Brown at Oxford." Dr. Stevenson said that Hughes was not successful as a lawyer, business man, or politician, but that there was one thing which he did remarkably well. He drew the portrait of a clean, manly gentleman, as illustrated in Tom Brown. The story of Tom Brown revealed three prominent elements in his character. These elements were courage, courtesy, and cheerfulness; they can be found in every manly man and every womanly woman.

Miss Emma Jackson, who for nine years has been at Haines House, Alaska, addressed the Student Volunteers on Wednesday evening. Haines House is a school for younger children which prepares them for Sheldon Jackson High School at Sitka.

Among a number of interesting facts Mrs. Jackson told about the lives of the Alaskan Indians was her explanation of the famed totempole. The totem-pole, she says, is not an object of worship among the Eskimos, but is a record of the family history of the mother's side of the house. When the clan wins an important battle a new symbol is added to the pole, and so family history is recorded.

The religion of the Eskimos, says Miss Jackson, is very interesting. It is the prevalent belief that they worship the sun and the moon, but the Alaskans themselves, in denying this statement, say they know only that the heavenly bodies were made by a great Creator. Missionaries are telling them more about the Creator and about His Son.

All Classes Enjoy Hallowe'en Parties

When the last lingering couple strolled up Court Street last night and became correctly distributed to their respective homes, another series of Hallowe'en parties was marked to go down in history. The juniors and sophomores who alternated at picture seeing in the city, and the freshman class in the gym, were very well entertained and very well fed, according to their reports.

The juniors, after seeing the movie, went to the Southern Methodist Church where a program, planned by Dorothy Krupitzer, and introduced by thre witches, was very pleasantly received. The juniors even more willingly received the cider and pumpkin pie a la mode which followed.

The sophomores took their Hallowe'en entertainment in reverse order. The program was held in the Presbyterian Church, being featured with a six piece jazz orchestra and a seven girl chorus with Dan Hicks tap dancing. Kipp and Byar, as drunkard and ghost, drew heavily on the sophomore's sense of humor. The refreshments consisted of sandwiches, favors, ice cream and cake.

While the upperclassmen were in the city, the freshman class was holding its annual party in the alumni gym. A number of games were followed by a series of ten proms which came to a close with the refreshments, consisting of cider, doughnuts and apples. A feature of this party was the presentation of three prizes to the wearers of the best costume.

STUDENT VOLUNTEER ACTIVE GROUP

The Maryville College Student Volunteer Group promises to become one of the most active in the Tennesse Union. Attendance at the meetings has shown an almost steady increase with a range of from twenty-six at the first meeting of the year to sixty at the last meeting, the average attendance for the past week was forty-three.

A growing spirit of enthusiasm and consecration has also been evidenced in well prepared programs. After the regular program the group joins informally in Singing a hymn, from which inspiration and fellowship are derived.

The Student Volunteers will meet tomorrow after Vespers, in Theta instead of in Bainonian Hall. Visitors are welcome.

Why "Rabbi"?

Someone suggested that this column, because of the nature of its content, be called "Keyhole Komment" instead of calling the senior column by that name. He didn't know our tactics or he couldn't have said that, for we don't look through the keyhole. We open the door, walk in, and observe.

Dinty Moore, Maryville's cross country ace, has a new way of saving—and a method of saving not only money, but time as well. Dinty has been wearing a black shirt for two weeks (he may have two black shirts, but we doubt it) and the shirt looks as good as it did the first day—at least the collar is no blacker. Dinty recommends the black shirt as a time saving garment and he predicts that with this extensive depression the black shirt will soon become the wearing apparel of practically all male students.

Greetings to Maryville students and best wishes for the further success of the football team comes to us from Mary Harriett Caldwell, student at Maryville last year, who is now taking the Journalism course at the University of Kentucky. Alma Mater loyalty kept Mary Harriett on Kentucky's side of the field during thee Kentucky-Maryville game, but she says that all of her silent support was given for the Highlanders. Her highest commendation was given for the team's excellent showing against the Cats.

Girls are often spoken of in terms of speed. One could see the reasons for such terminology upon watching the girls getting in from the hallowe'en parties last Friday night. This was particularly true with the girls who came all the way from town to the Hill. It appeared with close observation that the slow ones were fast and that those faster ones are generally regarded as being comparatively slow. At any rate there was a long duration of time between the arrival home of the first ones and the last ones. This variety of speed can be in part attributed to the heavier handicap given to some of the girls—the handicap being the

MUSIC DEPT., TO GIVE ANNUAL FALL CONCERT NOV. 16

Program Composed Of Piano, Voice, Instrumental Selections

FIRST OF SEASON

Eight Students of Department Will Appear In Music Festival

The opening attraction of the music department will be presented Monday evening, November 16, when several members of the department will appear in a concert at Voorhees Chapel. The program contains masterpieces of musical composition, and promises to afford a very pleasant evening of entertainment.

Miss Garnet Manges, the outstanding student of the piano department will play Grieg's A Minor Concerto. Miss Margaret Melody will play the second movement from the Concerto in G Minor by the modern French composer Saint Saens. Miss Mildred MacKenzie will play a group of numbers, one of which will be "The Dance of the Gnomes", by Lizt. Miss Ruth Henry will play the Octave Intermezzo, by Lischetezky. She will also play Lizt's "Liebestraume", which was voted the most popular composition of its kind played over the radio.

The voice department will present Miss Ann Smart, Miss Naomi Willingham, and Miss Norma Spilatore in several trio numbers. They will sing "The Flower of Dreams", by Clokey, "Sing O Sing", by Dunn, and "Sweet Miss Mary", by Neidlinger-Marzo.

The violin department will present Miss Elinor Henry as soloist, and an ensemble composed of piano, violins and cello. The ensemble will play several groups.

A great deal of controversy exists now concerning the occupation of the table next to the faculty table in Pearson's. First the table was taken over by the leading bread throwers of the hall, led by Charlie Beale and Tom Duncan. But their honor was short lived. Within a week this bunch was relegated to a table nearer the door and the honored fourteen chairs were taken over by Tiny Waters and his army. Tiny regards the new location as ideal and expects to reside there permanently, if possible.

COLLEGE VISITED BY MANY ALUMNI DURING WEEK END

The meeting of the East Tennessee Educational Association in Knoxville last week-end furnished an occasion for the return to the Hill of many former students and alumni. MODERN SOCIAL PROBLEMS LIKE ANCIENT: DAVIS

Professor of Latin and Greek Compares Moderns With Old Romans

"If someone could see past and present history, as did Charon, he might be inclined to poke his tongue at people in the same manner as do the strange figures, or gorgoyles, perched on the cathedral of Notre Dame de Paris."

Edmund W. Davis, instructor of Latin and Greek at Maryville College, was drawing a connection between the chimeras on top of the cathedral, Lucian—the scholar, lecturer, traveler, and observer of the second century A. D., and history as it has progressed through the ages.

He suggested that the poverty resulting from the Punic Wars, and the unemployed mobs of Rome, were similar to the millions of unemployed of today, the condition of whom was partly due to the last war.

Mr. Davis made reference to the reception given to Monsieur Laval French Premier, in New York. Though the minister and Mayor James J. Walker, of New York, spoke of the peace-seeking of their respective countries, stirring songs, reminiscent of war, were sung.

"The human race seems to be willing to pay so much to be governed. Domitian, the Roman emperor, was forced to resort to all types of taxes in order to raise funds sufficient for the empire. Today, there is talk of placing a tax on matches in this country.

"The castles of the Rhine and Italy reminded me that somebody must pay for their upkeep. The good times of the nobility had, and in some cases must still be, paid for.

"There seems to be a slow working out of a system whereby tax burdens and financial responsibilities are shared equally. Russia is trying to solve the problem; I hope this country doesn't try the same method.

WRITERS HAVE SEMESTER PICNIC

Three Neophytes Undergo Most Strenuous Initiation

Nov. 4—This afternoon at Wildwood Springs the members of the Writer's Workshop and the nefarious (?) neophytes enjoyed their annual fall picnic. About sixteen members and three neophytes were present, the number being slightly smaller than is usually present at the picnic.

After the woodsmanlike abilities of Junius Allison, Weldon Hina, Conrad Quenelle, and Ralph Walker had been successfully displayed, a meal providentially planned and prepared by Miss Heron and Jeannette Eshelman was effectively executed by the hungry horde.

The neophytes, Lynette Johnson, Bob Overly, and Bob Stevenson were subjected to a gruelling intelligent intelligence test under the expert leadership of the psychology specialist, Miss Keller, and her aspiring secretary, Lindy. After these neophytes had satisfactorily displayed their zero minus intelligensia they were fed marshmallows and sulphur water and returned home a la Chevrolet and Essex.

John Stone Ends Successful Season With Detroit Club

HITTING PHENOMENAL

Was One of Most Brilliant And Versatile Athletes Of College

John Stone, '28, one of the most noted sons of Maryville College, did himself proud during the 1931 season while playing in the outfield for the Detroit American League team. Stone led the entire Detroit team in batting with an average of .327, which was two points better than the average of Dale Alexander, slugging first baseman. Stone also ranked eleventh in the final compilation of the season's averages. Only such immortals as Ruth, Gehrig, Cochrane, Fox, Simmons and others ranked above the former Maryvillian.

Besides his high ranking in batting averages, Stone ranks even higher in number of hits made. Stone placed seventh among the regular performers in this department. Figures show that Stone hit when hits meant runs. He batted in 73 runs, clouted 26 two base hits, 10 triples and 10 circuit clouts. He made 320 put outs, 10 assists, 12 errors, pilfered 13 bases and figured in five double plays. Stone played in 147 games.

Stone did not confine his athletic ability to baseball alone when he was at Maryville. He was one of the greatest centers that any Maryville College football team has ever boasted. Playing against the University of Tennessee, who had Elvin Butcher, heralded as the greatest center in the South. Stone so completely out-played Butcher that the Vols used another center against Maryville the year following.

SENIORS WILL DON PARTY FROCKS MON.

Varied Program Planned For Class of '32 And Its Guests

On Monday night at 7:30 in Thaw Hall, the senior class will hold the first open party of the year. The party is called a "Harvest Festival" and an appropriate program has been planned under the direction of Naomi Willingham. Dot Krupitzer and Carrie Lou Tweed will open the program with an attractive song and dance number. Wesley Culver will give one of his inimitable readings; Carrie Pearson will entertain with a vocal solo; Harry Wood and Bill Hannah are scheduled to give a laugh-producing stunt similar to the ones by which they have gained and a large attendance is expected. fame and notoriety on the Hill.

A quartette composed of Don Briggs, Bob Overly, Chilly Bowles, and Bob Wallace will add to the musical features of the evening; Clifford Withers will give an exhibition of toe-dancing; a chorus composed of Dot Krupitzer, Carrie Lou Tweed, Rosalyn Mead, Jane Mitchell, Koleen Collins, and Dorothea Thomsen will complete the varied program. An orchestra will furnish additional music whenever it is deemed necessary.

ARMISTICE DAY TO BE COMMEMORATED IN CHAPEL PROGRAM

The Thursday morning chapel service will be devoted to a program in celebration of Armistice. Dr. Stevenson will be in charge. The theme of the program will be "Loyalty to God and Country."

On the same day the college band will participate in the American Legion's celebration. The Legion is also trying to arrange a football game which, if they succeed, will be played on Wilson Field Wednesday afternoon.

PRESIDENT LEAVES ON SPEAKING TOUR OF SOUTH TONIGHT

Will Give Many Addresses In Interest of Christian Education

At midnight tonight, Dr. Lloyd will leave Maryville for Birmingham, Alabama where he will speak tomorrow. He will give three lectures there, speaking in the morning, afternoon and the evening. This trip will be the first of a series to be taken by the President during next week and a part of the following week. His work, which consists entirely of making speeches, is in connection with a series of conferences sponsored by the Presbyterian Board of Christian Education over cities of the southern states. The general theme of Dr. Lloyd's talks is "Christian Education in the Colleges."

On Tuesday, Dr. Lloyd will be in Maryville. From here he will go to Knoxville to speak in the morning and the afternoon. From Knoxville he will go directly to Chattanooga where he will deliver two lectures on Wednesday. Friday and Saturday he will speak in Atlanta and Nashville, and on Sunday will deliver four addresses in Nashville.

The President hopes to complete his schedule of engagements and be back in Maryville by November 17.

Morehead Teachers College has started a renovation, excavation, inovation, or name-it-yourself. No matter what name is given it, however, we recognize it as an improvement! 'Tis a "Better Food Movement." The cafeteria has been remodelled inside and out, with a roof garden where every good roof garden is to be found, on top. The kitchen has been electrified and improvements are on the rampant. We hope that, with all their getting apparatus, they are not forgetting the main item, FOOD.

ARTISTS SINGERS APPEAR ON LYCEUM PLATFORM FRIDAY

"Musical Memories" Is Theme Of Entertaining and Interesting Program

WELL RECEIVED

Barrere Little Symphony Next Attraction Of Varied Course

Presetning an excellent and diversified program with selections ranging from, "the Quartette from Rigoletto" to Amos 'n Andy's "Am I Blue", the De Luxe Artists Singers highly entertained a chapel full of Maryvillians last night with their presentation of "Musical Memories". The program was presented in Voorhees chapel and was the first lyceum number of this year.

The Artist-singers started their program with "Cathedral Memories", giving a number of old favorites of the sacred compositions. The second part of the program, "Concert Memories", ranged from grand opera to modern melodies; and the last part consisted of "American Memories", the quartette singing songs of today and of the olden days.

The program was well received. The student body is now looking forward to the next program which will be on January 22, 1932. The Barrere Little Symphony, with George Barrere soloist, will appear on Maryville's platform on this date.

Y.W.C.A. ASKS COOPERATION

The main purpose of the Y. W. C. A. Reading Room, evidently, is to collect rubbish and to be disarranged for the comfort of a few who do not know how to appreciate it.

A week or so ago when one of the college organizations met to hold its weekly meeting, the presence of apple cores, paper bags, and a general accumulation of rubbish, to say nothing of the disarranged furniture, overcame the members of this organization to the extent that they felt the need of seeking elsewhere for a desirable meeting place.

It seems a shame that when the Y. W. C. A. sponsors a recreation room for the benefit of all Maryville girls, that a few unappreciative students must find it necessary to litter the room so that no one can enjoy it.

Surely a little forethought and care can be exercised by those who use it, so that this room can be kept attractive and desirable as a place for recreation, reading, and general enjoyment by Maryville girls for whom the room has been equipped, redecorated and made attractive in every way possible by the Y. W. C. A.

OTHER PLANS—BEALE

It's getting now so that, in order to be a member of the Four Hundred, one must have presented one or more plans involving periods of time. We've had plans to get rid of surpluses, plans to get rid of deficiencies, plans to get rid of planners, in fact a plan for almost anything worthy of one, and for quite a few unworthy of thought, or whatever it takes to prepare a plan. In conscientious labor, many of the plans thus presented have been entertainingly intricate, to say the least. In fact, we have come to the conclusion that, in order to have a plan, one must be a combination of a map-maker, a sea captain, a civil engineer, and sixteen lawyers. In spite of the sorrow it brings us to confess it, we have none of our self-imposed requisites. But we have one thing which most planners are devoid of. We have a yen for plainness, clarity, or whatever-you-might call-it. Using this as our sole asset, then, we plunge into our plan thusly:

The first clause in our plan calls for a change in the method of summoning the consumers to the arena. Instead of the present ponderous bell with its unharmonious clapper, we shall be notified of the readiness of meals by Chinese gongs placed at convenient places in the several halls. No set time would be constituted to ring for mealtimes, but the repasts would come more as a surprise than a method of subsistance.

Another thing would be the improvement in the matters of menus. We would import natives of Madagascar as dieticians on their sole merit of being ignorant of the existence of beans.

And the matter of seating must have its due consideration. Instead of the existing plan of rotating the tables, we would inaugurate the practice of place-cards, to be placed in a new place each meal. We are sure that the slight bustle accompanying this search for places would promote good will no end.

According to our plan, one would be socially taboo if he did not inquire each morning as to the health of the faculty, as he passed that table, and of his trencher-mates when he reached his destination.

Throwing bread would not only be frowned on; it would be impossible, as even the most rude of us know that one simply doesn't throw the quaint old English crumpets that would be the order of the day.

Probably by the time all these sections of the plan have been executed, no patrons of Pearsons will be left to execute them. Therefore, our plan ends here abruptly, without even the good form of promising to bring the so-called depression to a finis.

MARYVILLE NIGHT LIFE—TERRY

Night life at Maryville occurs during the night between sunset and sunrise and is experienced by the indulgent indulgers who sit up after lights are out and attend night school in the night-lighted halls of Pearsons.

Ah yes, fond readers, night school is an important extra-curricular activity indulged in by English majors and others who are occupied with multifarious assignments for pondering and propounding.

Night clothes are especially adaptable to night school although a regular uniform has not yet been adopted by the participants.

For recreation the night school night owls listen to the sociable snorings from nearby rooms, and thus, they retain their sense of humor. Cock Robin or some College Rooster provides an agreeable accompaniment to these hibernatory hiccoughs. The time element enters into the night school when the night-watchman drives away in his knightly vehicle about eleven o'clock for it adds to and subtracts from the assembly of night noises which crowd the campus.

The bark of a dog—in fact, the barks of several dogs—adds a bit of comfort to these academic aspirants for every dog must have his day or night, as the case may be, even in the wee small hours of the morning or the great big hours of the night.

A black bat keeps company with the night owls, for birds of a feather flock together—the owls flock, and the bat flies. The night wind pierces the solitudes of the solemn silence of the scholastic solarium so that the night owls draw closer their figurative feathers about them and hie themselves to their double-decker nests and spend the rest of the night in uninterrupted quietude.

The night light lights to success, promotion, and advancement many a conscientious coed who feels it her duty to keep a nightly tryst with this incandescent son.

Thus, by night are these great deeds accomplished. B. A. degrees earned, while in the daytime professors listen with awe and reverence to the words of wisdom uttered by these wise women who learned all through their nocturnal revels.

HOW FAR HAVE WE COME?

As the thirteenth anniversary of the ending of the "war to end war" approaches we pause in our headlong pursuit of a cure for the great economic depression that is gripping the world to spend a few minutes in retrospective study of the advancement made in this noble plan to bring to a close forever the inhuman institution of mass murder.

That great strides have been made in this direction is admitted by all men. As to the ultimate success of the venture opinions are varied and dogmatic. In our materialistic-minded world to hope for a complete change of human nature is almost too big a jump for the average man to conceive. "Wars have always existed, therefore must continue to do so; man is a creature of aggression and will, when the opportunity presents itself, resort to forceful means to gain an advantage for his state. Because of this nature wars are inevitable." Logic of such type is almost universal.

The idea of force carries even into the creation of a world peace pact. Its indelible imprint on human nature is seen clearly in the teeth that are put into these documents to insure conformity of the signer nations to the clauses of the agreement. Universal brotherhood and international good-will have not yet reached the exalted position of power that they may be expected to exercise sway over the governments.

May we ever expect to attain that utopia so long as force holds the spotlight of our international relations? It has been the cardinal principle in the policies of all nations for six thousand years and has never obtained that state of universal peace. Undoubtedly our approach is at fault. Let us add, in a practical manner, a little of that Christian spirit of brotherhood of nations to our brewing potion. Perhaps it is the very ingredient needed to emulsify the whole of the now immiscable mixture. Let us pour a bit of the oil of international goodwill upon the snarling sea of political disputes. Perhaps it will work. At least the very fact that it is as yet untried commends itself to us.

RE-CHURCHING
OUR CHURCH

Voorhees is purged. All signs of commercialism and secular occupations have been removed. Somewhere back in the dim and distant past (1916 to be exact) some bright soul conceived the idea that a billboard placed on either side of the main entrance of the chapel would not only aid the Chilhowean in its advertising campaign, but would also help the beauty and general ecclesiastical air of our chapel. Consequently the billboards were very decoratively hung, or draped, on the sides of the portico. In due season the glass doors became broken in the delightfully artistic patterns that glass doors have a habit of being broken into. All in all the general effect as presented by these uncouth antiques was anything but desirable.

We do not know whom to thank for this bit of campus clean-up but they are to be congratulated when and if discovered. Maryville hasn't commercialized to the extent that every square inch of unused space must be utilized to erect thereon a bill board that blatantly shouts to the world the calorific value of "Black Diamond" coal or the breath taking qualities of "Gargle-Me-Daily" antiseptic solution. Our chapel, of all places, should remain free from the encroachment of profaning commercialism.

COEDS TO "DUTCH"

The true spirit of American democracy is invading our American campus in a new, unusual way. Women have long demanded equal rights with men and now they must pay for them—on the campus of the University of Arizona, a Bachelor's Club has been formed in this institution for the purpose of conducting a drive to make its co-eds share the expenses of their all-necessary dates in order to bear through the depression together. It was estimated that the average college girl had more money to spend than the male. It seems that there is a danger that the "great American date" may lose much of its color unless this plan is adopted.

Arizona is not alone in this attempt to liquidate the "frozen date asset", for the divided payment plan is in operation at present at Annapolis, West Point, University of Pittsburgh, and several other large institutions.

DISARM—OR ELSE

The slogan "Disarm" has been much heralded of late. The importance of this appeal cannot be overestimated, for the failure of the Disarmament Conference would bring nothing less than disaster to peace organizations all over the world. The problem of war and peace cannot be toyed with; it must be the problem of everyone who desires the healthy preservation of the world. The success of the Disarmament Conference is of most concern to the college generation which will have to bear the greatest burden in the future. We must take peace out of the clouds to make it a reality.

What can we do about it? An attempt on the part of American students in Geneva to answer this question resulted in the formation of the Intercollegiate Disarmament CCouncil. Believing that an intelligent student opinion, through its effect on public opinion, can influece the American delegation to the Conference, this Committee proposes to stimulate and vocalize active student support.

On every campus there are a number of organizations interested in disarmament, many of which are now planning vigorous campaigns. Cooperation among them is essential. The Intercollegiate Disarmament Council, working with fifteen national organizations, urges the immediate formation of local collegiate disarmament councils made up of student leaders and the editors of college publications.

It urges that local councils use all available means for awakening the interest of the entire student body—speakers, pamphlets, debates, study groups, editorials and mass meetings. This crystallized opinion will find expression in simultaneous demonstrations throughout the college of the country on Armistice Day and on the opening day of the Conference. A uniform ballot will be distributed by the Council for a national poll of students on disarmament. Prepare for this now!

ALLIED YOUTH.

Figuratively flying a banner inscribed "Allied Youth", representative students in the University of Southern California, University of California at Los Angeles, California Institute of Technology, and Occidental College, joined together in a local law enforcement demonstration in Los Angeles recently, which is declared to be the greatest undertaking of its kind ever staged in Southern California.

Representatives of several student bodies, in conjunction with officers of various young people's organizations, constitute a local branch of an organization known as Allied Forces for Prohibition, having branches in 261 cities of the United States. The movement is non-partisan and non-sectarian, and its slogan is "Whenever a politician or an executive officer or a political party prefers the lijuor traffic above public morals, such must be set aside and such parties abandoned."

KEYHOLE KOMMENT

Habit is one of the strongest influences ever placed among us. Association is recognized as one of the most nefarious of human afflictions. All this had been discovered ere we made our debut into the philosophic world, but we claim a distinction. We have acquired a habit of association! Since we became the proud possessor of this novel habit, we could no more dissociate Dr. Lloyd and major points than we could Pearsons and beans. So it is with Cooley Combs and Frances Collins. Just as surely as Absorbine Jr. goes with athlete's foot, just as surely as red ants go with picnics, just so surely does Collins enter one's mind with Combs.

We are not our usual authoritative self when the matter of Cooley's home town arises. We know that it is Jeff, Ky. That's all. Just Jeff. Not Jeff-er-son nor Jeff-ville, but Jeff, as in Fisher. Since reaching Maryville Cooley has bidden fair to take off more than his share of chemists' honors. He is assistant in organic chemistry, whatever that is. You see, we are a member of the frosh cultural course. He has been known to hold his share of extra-curricular honors, having various and sundry honors in Athenian and other clubs; indeed he has a major role opposite Bill West in the expression department's version of "Peg O' My Heart". In short, Cooley's some shakes.

Collins, writing to Spring City for cash, is another of our illustrious hopefuls who intend to tread the black-robed way to graduation next June. He is one of Dr. McMurray's right-handedest men in the department of social sciences. Like Combs, his cell-mate, he has been treasurer of his class. He has also held divers offices of importance, and is famed far and wide as a moonshiner par excellence. He is known to be the man who changed moonshing from a pastime first to a science and then to an art.

Penelope was the last hardship that Ulysses endured on his journey

After all these many years we're going to have to improve on the moonshining pace. All dormitory girls must be in their respective halls fifteen minutes after leaving any event on the Hill. Because of rank adjustments that must be made, and since it is rather sudden, there was the suggestion that fifteen minutes on seven evenings of each week be devoted to practise until the new pace has been perfected. The idea sounds like it should receive unanimous approval from almost everyone.

S COLLEGIATE S W A P !

There is no particular reason why students in one college should know what other students are doing. But since we are not particular either, perhaps it is just as well we continue our rovings. Indeed, this discourse on the happenings at other places might well take the shape of the gangster who met his friend outside the movie-house and asked him if he learned any new tricks inside. But, since that is neither here nor there, we must seek a happy medium ond dissertate thusly. . . .

Listen, cheerleaders! The yelling at Clemson wasn't exactly what the bell-wethers thought it should be. An enforced chapel meeting was held, at which everyone indulged in some good ole pre-war hollerin'. At the S. C. game the pandemonium was a marvel, even to the old grads, who never concede anything to be as good as in '98.

The Dopester, a gentleman on the Kentucky Kernels sport sheet, makes a practice of picking winners in each week's games. He also has a habit of picking the Cats to triumph. Since he couldn't very well pick another team to win over the home boys, he might give modesty as an excuse for failing to mention the Cats' opponents. A mere suggestion of one scribe to another.

Notice the U. of Omaha has started a drive for a Student Loan Fund. Their slogan is: "five cents a week for twenty weeks". Funny how nickels will amount up! We are surprised to figure up that we have spent almost sixty cents this year, not counting what we owe the paper boy.

A Kansas statistician has revealed that one out of every five marriages among non-college grads end in divorce, while only one out of each hundred alumni-ae weddings have to back-track. Maybe that's the ninety-nine out of a hundred our observer was speaking of.

A professor in N. Y. U., Dr. Chas. G. Shaw, states among other strange things, that "pants are a sign of patriotism; therefore knickers are sending Democracy to the canines." We'll bet thirty-six sheets of notebook paper against anything else that the Doc has skinny shanks.

Someone made the grave mistake of mixing the wrong chemicals in an advanced chemistry course last week. You should have heard the professor Howell . . . Eloise got lost in the garrett and couldn't find her way out. Someone showed her the Call-way and she came down in good style.

Foreign Teams Will Debate In This Country

The 1931 international collegiate debating season opened on October 21 when the English Universities team, one of three brought to this country this year by the National Student Federation, debated a Hamilton College team at Clinton, New York, on whether or not "the dole provides a better method of solving the unemployment problem than does the charity system", with the English team taking the affirmative.

The NSFA has been handling all of the international debating in the United States for the past three years. Four teams, representing Germany, Scotland, the English National Union of Students and Cambridge University, were brought over last fall, and the experiment of sponsoring an English-speaking continental team (the German one) was so successful that it was decided to repeat it this year. The Turkish team has been brought over in cooperation with the American Friends of Turkey, the Turkish Embassy in Washington, and Robert College in Constantinople. A Dutch team was arranged for as well, but was obliged to cancel its tour at the last moment.

The Turkish team will debate first on Monday, October 26th, at the State University of Iowa, Iowa City on the resolution that "compulsory unemployment insurance should be adopted by the sovereign states as public protection against the vicissitudes of the Machine Age," with the Turks in the affirmative.

The third team brought over this year, which represents Oxford University, will have as opening broadside a tentative engagement with Pembroke College, Brown University, at Providence. On November 2, they debated the University of Indiana's debaters on "the press is Democracy's greatest danger."

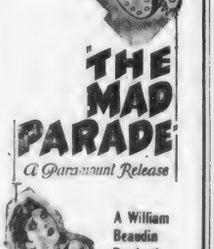
Five questions have been submitted for debate by each group, the American colleges in each case being permitted to name their preference. Almost all of the topics bear on international issues, and many of them on international relations. Both the Turkish and the English Universities teams submit for debate "That the world has more to fear from Fascism than from Bolshevism", the Turkish team taking the affirmative, and the English team splitting on it, requiring the Americans to split as well.

Of the five questions submitted by the Turks, the majority of American universities have selected the foregoing one, and the fourth; namely, "That the United States should recognize the government of the U. S. S. R.,", on which Turkey takes the affirmative.

The Oxford team's topics are the pepperiest of the three, nearly all of them being in the nature of a small red rag to be waved sternly at Uncle Sam. We quote: "1. That the Statue of Liberty is not a signpost, but a gravestone:" (Oxford takes affirmative). "2. That immediate independence should be granted to India." (Oxford takes negative.) "3. That the press is Democracy's greatest danger." (Oxford takes affirmative., "4. That the nations of the world should take a twenty year tariff holiday." (Oxford team splits on this motion.) "5. That American civilization is a greater danger to the world than that of Russia."

APPRENTICES TO BE SELECTED

On Wednesday, November 11, the Highland Echo Committee on Selection will meet to elect freshman competitors to the position of freshman apprenticeship on the college paper. Each contestant has handed in three articles over a period of four weeks, and these papers will be read carefully, and the qualifications of the writer be considered before the final selection is made.



In all probability the total membership will not be filled, so that freshmen who do not make the staff in the first election will have a chance to try out later in the year. It has been deemed best that only a partial selection be made during the first semester, thus assuring a wise selection and a greater show of ability and interest on the part of the freshmen who are selected and those who desire to compete for the second choosing.

Dr. Lloyd has another ability which we have never mentioned. Next week he is making several trips, some of them to be long ones, and he will be in Maryville only a short time. However, due to his art in arranging schedules, he will be in Maryville on the mornings of Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday to meet his theism classes. His students will doubtless be relieved in learning this since there was much concern about the meeting of these classes on those three days.

Highlanders-Buffaloes Play To Scoreless Tie In One Of Most Important Grid Games Of Year

Neither Team Is Able To Cross Goal Line Tho Chances Were Presented

TITLE RACE TIED

Capt. Taylor and Gles Harvey Best for Buffs; Calloway And Woodard For Scots

Maryville College's chances of taking the undisputed lead in the Smoky Mountain Conference title chase were knocked into oblivion by a stampeding horde of Milligan College Buffaloes last week when the two teams fought throughout the entire game without a score. Both teams had numerous opportunities to cross the last white line but they could never muster the punch to shove the ball across.

Milligan opened up a dangerous offensive attack in the early part of the game and carried the ball to the very neighborhood of touchdownland only to flounder with the prize in sight and allow the Highlanders to take the ball from them on downs. The Maryville team had touchdown ideas of their own but they were never able to develop their ideas into reality.

On numerous occasions, they took the ball in a great offensive drive that absolutely looked unstoppable but those Buffaloes were as tough as the meat that the boys had for dinner and they always stopped the Scots before they did any damage in the scoring department. The Maryville team had more scoring chances than did the Buffaloes but "close" counts only in horseshoes and the boys weren't tossing quoits last Saturday.

The Highlanders easily had the edge over their opponents in every department of the game. They gained more ground from scrimmage, made more yardage on forward passes, on first downs, more everything, except touchdowns and they were as scarce as guys who think that the depression is over. The Highlanders made nine first downs to six for the Buffalo herd, completed seven forward passes, had three intercepted, and 11 went for naught. Milligan tried 14, made good six of them, had one adopted by the Scots and seven went for nothing at all.

Maryville gained 99 yards on their forward passes and the Buffs gained only 76. Joe Woodard still reigns supreme as a kicker, averaging 43 yards to 33 for Capt. Lew Taylor of Milligan. Woodard's booting was as good against Milligan as it has been this year and he certinly pulled the team out of several bad holes.

Women Tumblers Get Posts On First Team

The women's tumbling team was chosen last Thursday afternoon. The girls, under the direction of Clarence Bratchie and Bob Byerly have been practicing for the last three weeks.

TOURNAMENT NEXT ON SOCCER SLATE FOR CLASS TEAMS

The seniors defeated the "A" freshmen in a practice soccer game Monday afternoon with a score of 4-0. Captain Kitts, forward for senior team, was responsible for all four of the points.

The juniors played the "B" frosh in the same afternoon with a 2-2 tie. The game was fast and interesting. The two junior scores were due to the combined efforts of the three forwards. Mary Gillingham, captain of the freshman team, scored for the "frosh".

On Wednesday afternoon the frosh "A" met the sophomore team, with a 7-2 count in favor of the sophs. The seniors played the "B's" with another tie 2-2. The juniors played the sophomores on Friday. The sophs have a hard half-back line which will offer keen competition to anyone trying to take the ball across the goal line.

The tournament will be played off this week. Night soccor games will be played on Saturday, November 7, Thursday, November 12 and Saturday, November 14. Captains of the teams will draw to determine who will play on these times. The finals will be played on Saturday night.

By BOB RULE

I was walking down the main section of our fair metropolis the other day when a red headed guy leaped out on the sidewalk and waved a gallon bucket at me. I stopped. I always stop when red headed guys wave gallon buckets at me. "Listen" he started, "your best friend won't tell you but I will. I don't see how you got Joe Woodard's kicking average up to 43 yards in the Milligan game."

"Well", I explained conceitedly, "it's done with a pencil and piece of paper and there's really nothing to it once you get the hang of it." "Aw, you dumb mugg", he admonished, "I mean that Woodard didn't average 43 yards, and what I can't figure out is how you raised his average so high. I kept a record myself and his average was only 29 yards". My countenance fell. "Oh, so it has come to that, has it?", I stammered to myself, "so they are double checking me are they? So they don't trust me, do they? Oh, that this too, too solid flesh would melt, thaw and dampen my shirt collar so that it would look like honest perspiration."

I was down hearted. "What's the use?", I asked myself; but as usual, I didn't know the answer. Collecting the remaining small amount of my self-respect, I sought the consolation of Coach Bob Thrower. "What did you think of Woodard's kicking yesterday, Coach?" I dared to ask. A smile enlightened the great man's face. "Woodard kicked better yesterday than he has kicked all year", he said. "He must have out-distanced Taylor by at least 15 yards to the kick."

I felt considerably better. As I walked out among the overcoat-clad collegians life for me suddenly took on a new aspect. The sun shone brightly everywhere, even on Jail Street. Birds sang from the cornices of buildings. A warm breeze whistled softly and sweetly through the trees on Main Street. A gentle mildew started to fall. "Hello, old man," someone bellowed. "Boy, do this Woodard kick that old pigskin yesterday? That boy can do the kicking for my football team."

This is a queer old world ain't it?

Ambiguity means telling the truth when you don't mean to.

BOYS FROM NORTH CAROLINA OPPOSE SCOTS HERE TODAY

Appalachian Teachers Have A Good Team That Will Be Hard To Whip

Maryville College's Highlanders are doing battle this afternoon with one of the largest and most powerful football teams in the South, the Appalachian Teachers, from Boone, North Carolina. It has been reported through exchange papers that the Carolinians have a line that will average 198 pounds and a backfield that tips the beams at 185. If these figures are right, the Highlanders will be out-weighed by 26 pounds in the line and 20 pounds in the rear works.

Though the Teachers are not in the Smoky Mountain Conference, Coach Honaker is very anxious to get his men back in the winning mood before the all-important game with the Carson-Newman Eagles rolls around. The Scots have played tie games in their last two engagements and they should strike the victory trail once more this afternoon. The starting line-up is in the best of shape for the game, but the varsity line will probably have to play the entire game, as reserve material is scarce.

Early in the season, the Teachers defeated King College, one of the stronger members of the Smoky Conference, by a score of 20 to 0 and they certainly will be an improved ball club by this time. They also defeated Lenoir Rhyne, Maryville's opponent next week, so the outcome of today's game will throw a light on the oncoming battle in Hickory, N. C. The Lenoir Rhyne game will be the last foreign affair of the season for the Scots. Their last one, as everyone knows, is with Carson-Newman on Turkey Day.

C. B. Stanberry Wins Men's Singles Title

Captain George Fischbach Goes Down In Final Match

The men's fall tennis tournament reached a thrilling climax Wednesday when C. B. Stanbery defeated George Fischback in the final round of the tournament. Stanbery, a hitherto obscure member of the freshman class, rose to fame when he was victorious over Fischback in one of the hardest fought tennis matches in the history of Maryville College.

Stanbery gained an early lead in the tournament when he won the first two sets 6-3, 6-2. Things looked dark for Fischback, but the renowned captain of the tennis team was not to be downed so easily. He uncorked a vicious comeback to win the next two sets, 6-2, 6-1. Everything now depended on the last set and both boys were prepared to give all that they had to win it. The game proceeded in deadly earnest, with both boys playing inspired tennis, until the advantage rested with Stanbery who had won 5 games to Fischback's 2. Fischback saw the match slipping away and made a final desperate rally which tied the score at 5 all.

Stanbery was now beginning to show the effects of the struggle while Fischback looked almost as fresh as ever. It was now or never for Stanbery and the Pride of Etowah rose to the occasion valiantly. With a final supreme effort, he broke through Fischback's service and won his own to emerge victorious. This is the first time in recent years that a freshman has succeeded in winning a tennis tournament. There was an abundance of good material brought out by the tournament and it looks as if Maryville is going to have a banner year in tennis.

Game In Carolina City Will Be Last One Before THAT Game With Eagles

LENOIR RHYNE STRONG

Team Has Crossed Goal First On Maryville In Last Two Games; Team Is O. K.

Our Highlanders will take off for foreign territory next week and invade the stronghold of the Lenoir Rhyne Bears, way up in the mountains of North Carolina. This will be the last game of the season on strange territory as they will return to their own stamping ground and end a successful season with Carson-Newman.

Lenoir Rhyne will not be easy for the Highlanders to defeat by any means. In the games for the last two years, they have scored first on Maryville, forcing them to come from behind to win the victory. Last year, the Maryville boys defeated Lenoir-Rhyne by a score of 13 to 6 and the Bears will be out for blood when we invade their lair. The game will be played in Hickory, North Carolina.

Barring accidents in the game today with Appalachian Teachers, the Highlanders will be in first class shape for the Lenoir Rhyne game. They have shaken off the injury jinx all this season and have been very fortunate in having the team in good shape since reserve material is more scarce this year than ever before. Coach Honaker hopes to be able to let some of his men take a much needed rest in this game next week if the score permits.

Captain Calloway, White, Overly, Tolliver, and some of the others have not had a rest since the Union game, and a short layoff would put them into first class shape for the game with the Fighting Eagles of Carson-Newman. The team will leave here Friday, possibly by train. Coach Honaker is expected to take about 22 men with him.

Carnegie resident who accompanied.

Someone should get up a petition asking that all Carnegie doors be supplied with glass panels. Too many times has the writer met with embarrassment in calling out to a knock on the door "Come in if your nose is clean," or "Spit on the floor and slide under" only to find a faculty member or the proctor of the hall step in. Generally when this occurs, the visitor finds the inmate of the room on the lower deck of his bed with his feet on the mattress above, with the bed unmade, and with the room in a condition that would shame a tramp. A better suggestion even than this would be to have a five minute warning bell which would be rung by any celebrity wishing to visit one's room.

Mary Katherine Mize, after her resigning nature, went to sleep in the lirary during a long period of study. Then, after her ambitious nature, she woke up—but not completely. She must have dreamed that she was in her dormitory and that it was time for the last chapel bell, for in her efforts to make up time she nearly threw the library into turmoil. She became decidedly meek upon noting her error, and ignored all disposition to become sleepy the rest of the afternoon.

—o—

The Writer's Workshop, one would be led to think, is a secret organization on College Hill. It is very exclusive in its choice of writers, but its choice bits of work can be shared and enjoyed by outsiders as well as the memers. The writings of the work shop covering a number of years of writing are kept on file in the library and may be taken out at any time.

There are probably a number of college presidents who would prefer not to be called by their nicknames. However, one like Dr. Lloyd is almost in a position where he must submit to the pressure since he returned to his alma mater where everyone knows him as "Rabbi". Dr. Lloyd acquired this nickname back in early college days. A class of twenty students, all men, in the Sunday School class at the Presbyterian church were asked to write a paper on a character of the Bible. Nineteen of them failed to remember the paper and only Dr. Lloyd carried out the directions, coming the next Sunday with an excellent paper which showed the result of much labor. Because of his ambitious way of serving his Sunday School teacher—or rather, because he was willing to sacrifice time for his Sunday work he was labeled "Rabbi". This name was his official nickname in school and still serves that purpose with the alumni who were in school in Dr. Lloyd's time.

—o—

A freshman, thinking he was following the example of upperclassmen and probably he was went seeking for trouble in Carnegie Hall one evening. The time was nigh on to midnight, a time when all good freshmen are in bed, but this wasn't a good freshman. His fellow Carnegians were long since in the land of nod and refused to cooperate with him in his destructive tour, so he dejectedly returned to his room. There he found what he was looking for. It was trouble in the first degree; his room had had one of the most beautiful stacking jobs to be seen since the last Junior-Senior party.

—o—

Some students come to school and spend frog skins in a large way. Others come to make frog skins—if they didn't they couldn't come. Still others come and spend their time playing around with the pigskin. However, we find that the predominant reason for practically everyone's going to college is to get the sheepskin that comes at the end of four years . . . at least it should come, and if it doesn't the student feels like he has been taken to a "skinning" by the faculty.

—o—

Speak to the freshman and he speaks back. The writer has been forced to have a profund belief in that statement. The observation concerning presumptuous freshmen brought more results than would a call for fellows to take a leading part in a play opposite the most beautiful girl in college. Several of those new men, who must have felt a guilty conscience, came around to correct that misconception and to assure the writer that they were not really cocky—they were just brought up that way.

It is the last thought of anyone writing in this column to purposely impose on the good-will of any individual connected in any way with the college. In the October 31 issue of the Echo an observantion appeared on the subject of Maryville's band. In giving credit for the success of the band all credit was given to Larry Somers and there was nothing said concerning the invaluable efforts of Miss Butcher who has, not only this year, but in former years, given Maryville something to be proud of in the way of a band. We profoundly regret that this error occurred and we offer to Miss Butcher our deepest apology.

The most popular freshman for the week, Bob McCullouch has had quite a week of it, starting with his being called out of bed at 10:30 by the Knoxville Journal Correspondent, continuing with his going to Knoxville the next day with the write up of the Appalachian Teachers game, and coming to a close with his publication of the article on Carnegie's bulletin board. Bob was in a good position to stop several times, and his error had nearly been forgotten, when he came out showing his colors and displaying the article that had been written in the Knoxville Journal. From a non-partisan view point, we should suppose that Bob had had enough of this publicity without asking for more, by taking the initiative as he did in advertising his mistake.

Among our accomplished freshmen (this column should be written in green ink) is Whitfield Sloan, a newly discovered hypnotist. He had been discovered before, but we did not know that he was a hypnotist. Sloan showed his superiority over upperclassmen last Saturday night in Athenian Hall when he gave little Paxton a ride into dreamland. All the boys, even Paxton, enjoyed the experience, but Sloan as a hypnotist doesn't go over so big with the girls in the hall. Several of them were nearly hypnotized waiting for their escorts to come and accompany them to "As You Like It."

ATHENIAN

The Athenian literary society program for this Saturday is as follows: Edgar Storey and Frank Mease, clarinet duet; "Doc" Smerznak, football scores; and Harry Walrond, reading. According to William Hanna, additions may be made to the program.

ALPHA SIGMA

Dean Edwin R. Hunter will present excerpts from the works of Paul Bunyan to Alpha Sigma literary society, Saturday night. Donald Briggs and Robert Overly will give their "Movieless Movies".

THETA EPSILON

The Theta program planned for tonight is guaranteed to appeal to the esthetic sense of all members since it is a presentation of classical music. Thetas, come and get cultured.

Fellowship Club will celebrate Tennessee night, Monday. The program will be given by men from Tennessee, headed by Earl Crawford.

Arthur "Red" Courtney was unanimously elected advisor and sponsor of the club, at the meeting held last Monday.

Carolina Club has decided to hold its meeting during the first week of each month. A committee to visit other clubs has been formed.

These members entertained at the meeting held Wednesday: Maria Wynn, reading; Carrie Lou Tweed, tap dance; Elizabeth Bacon and Ruth Henry, musical selection; and Robert Wallace, solo.

The Florida Club picnic scheduled for today, was called off because of the football game.

F. G. Vickers, agricultural agent of Blount County, addressed the Chemistry Club, Tuesday night on Chemistry in agriculture.

The next meeting will be held November 17. An attempt will be made to secure the head chemist of the Knoxville Fertilizer Company as a speaker.

THE LITTLE CHURCH

"WORSHIP"

By ANDRREW NEWCOMER

There are two types of worship. We find the type of personal worship which allows us contact with God when no one else is around to disturb us. We also have public worship when we unite with others to do reverence to God.

First, let us take the personal type of worship. We find the Bible full of incidents of personal worship. Cain and Abel both were offering gifts to God in worshipping Him when Cain found that He was not acceptable in God's sight. Abraham's faith met its supreme test when he was worshipping God by offering his own son. Even the New Testament gives us examples in the worship of Peter, Paul and other apostles. Perhaps the greatest examples of personal worship comes in this part of the Bible; it is that of Christ's hours in Gethsemane before his trial and death.

We can also carry on in our personal worship the idea of tarrying with God and thinking in His presence of our lifework and our duties to humanity. As Joseph tarried in the land of Egypt, as Paul in Rome, and as the disciples after the ascension of Christ, all thinking that they were wasting precious time, we find that greater power is given us and new fields of service opened to us.

All those things, while they do not cover the entire field of worship, would be of little avail if it were not that we can come into direct communion with God in prayer. This privilege gives us contact with a great reservoir of power and understanding and inspiration that cannot be overestimated in human terms. But we must use prayer before we expect the results of this vast force.

Second, let us consider public worship. Here we come to a different type of worship, and one that offers more problems than personal worship. However, in our small way we can do much to add to the effectiveness of public worship, even if we are limited in the knowledge concerning the right method to use.

We want to give careful attention to the reading of the Bible. We do not want to run over it rapidly stumbling over words, mixing thoughts, and leaving confusion in the listeners' minds. Even the prayer in public worship should be planned to lead the audience upward in thought.

There is, of course, much to be known about worship both personal and public. More knowledge in the subject would, without doubt, reveal many flaws in these thoughts and ideas on worship. But regardless of that worship still holds its importance in the life of men. It is he only means man has to come into contact with God. It is our only means of knowing the greatness of God when worshipping Him in public. It is the only means God has of giving us aid. If we do not turn our hearts and minds toward Him He cannot release His powers to help us.

Since so much in our lives depends on God, and so much of our living comes from God would it not be to our benefit to place a little more care as to what spirit we come into His presence and with what manner we do Him reverence and worship Him?

And for want of what I should erm some necessary expenditure, he Fighting Highlanders cannot win the Smoky Mountain Conference title with an unblemished record. Those same Highlanders should be congratulated for being able to gain a tie last Saturday.

At the beginning of the present school year Maryville's chances for a good football season were as scarce as the proverbial hen's teeth. The coach himself said that chances were the worst they had been since e came to Maryville. However, eemingly not discouraged, coaches nd players got down to work and turned out what I believe to be the hardest bunch of fighters Maryville as ever produced. Tennessee earned but 1 of their 33-0 score, and Kentucky was pressed to the limit to win 19-0. They came from behind to tie as good a college team as there is in the South 6-6. And then with an important conference game on, these same fighting Highlanders are required to take a one hundred and thirty mile trip in the morning and play the game in the afternoon. It seems almost appropriate to ask the question, "From what high school?", as this is usually considered a practice of high schools, and very small ones at that.

Many men who play football here could get money for playing it at other schools. Since they are not paid for playing here it seems to me that the least that we can do for them is to give them a fair chance to have a good season. Everyone knew that the Milligan game would be a hard one. I hardly see where the bill for a night's stay in Johnson City would have been terribly high, and I know one player who would have been willing to pay for his share of the expense in order to have felt that much better for the game. I don't think I'm wrong in saying that traveling by bus is more tiring than any other common method of traveling today.

If we're not going to spend money for the necessities of athletics then let us join the very small minority of schools who have dropped football. In such a case I would suggest as an epitaph, "Maryville College, sixteen miles South of the University of Tennessee's football team, of Knoxville, Tennessee." Let's give our Fighting Highlanders a Fighting Chance.

Aubrey S. Bradshaw.

Low Barometric Reading

The weather bureau says that the lowest pressure of which it has record is 7.4 millimeters, or .291 inch. This pressure was recorded in a sounding balloon ascent at Avalon, Calif., on July 30, 1935, at a height of 32,643 meters, or 107,095 feet, or approximately 20.3 miles.

MODERN SOCIAL PROBLEMS LIKE ANCIENT: DAVIS

"Even the war profiteer was not absent during the struggles of antiquity. There were many examples of them during the last war.

The desire of Charon to know what it was that made the dead reluctant to leave the living world, and his disappointment when showed around by Hermes, seemed to Mr. Davis, to lend weight to the satire of Lucian, the writer, on his contemporary life. The gargoyles atop Notre Dame de Paris caused him to remark that Lucian might laugh heartier than before if he could see present civilization.

It tries an oserver to have a colleague express his principle of always saving the best things until last, and then in almost the same breath to have him say with a complimentary note that he always reads the "Observation" column first. You can visualize our position as well as the feeling in the innermost parts of our hearts. Some people even have the nerve to say, though, that we don't have a heart. We have heart, all right, but like all things about the campus, it doesn't function so very well. . . it leaks.

—o—

Speaking of saving the best thing until last reminds us—ah, yes—of Larry Somers' date to the senior party. Larry now believes that's the way it should always be done.

—o—

Weve just learned why they quit night football at Maryville. Mr. Proffitt liked it at first because his hens would occasionally get up and lay an extra egg, but it had to be stopped because a couple of roosters got "cocky" and crowed themselves to death one night. There were plans to stop the night pastime before because the crowing interfered with the lusty cheers of the Scotties.

—o—

The last three days of this week have been wide-awake days for little Eloise Garrett. On the chapel platform she has had her eyes open nearly full time, while as a rule she makes it a practice to open and close them at timely intervals. First it seemed that she had eye trouble, but when Callaway contracted the same ailment our theory went for naught. It looks something like a stage of second childhood has come upon the Callaways.

—o—

Old pals might be the pest pals after all, all good looking girls might come from the South (then again, they might not), and several other things might be true. We want to go one step farther and say, feeling sure that we're right, that the really ambitious people are relheaded people. By ambitious people we mean those who do what they have to do, like it, and eagerly go after more. For proof of our contention, we need but cite examples, taken from each class, and if you know the students like we think we do, you'll be forced to agree. We begin with the high moguls and go down, finding such people as Julia Terry, Ralph Teffeteller (not sure

ET TU BRUTE?

One of the recent "finds" in the registrar's office concerns a decided faux passe on the part of one of the most illustrous seniors, if not the "illustrioustous."

Her co-partner, contemporary, and friend was looking through the file, the other day, in which all the registration cards are kept. As you will recall, on the back of the card is personal information concerning the student, his name, address, parent's name, and above all in this particular case, the day, month, and year of birth. On this card in question was found April 18, 1931 for date of birth.

This senior having in her time poked fun at a great many underclassmen for having written in the current year instead of the birth year, received her just reward when this incriminating evidence was found on her dignified senorific card. She hastily made the necessary change but the memory of that event cannot be erased so easily.

Her name— oh, yes—Elgie Kathryn Hodges, who will graduate at the remarkable age of thirteen months, and seventeen days. Henceforth she shall be called "Elgie the Prodigy".

TO INVITE SPEAKERS

Straw Vote of Students On Question Planned For Future

As part of a nation-wide movement the Maryville Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. are sponsoring an educational campaign for disarmament. The approaching disarmament conference at Geneva is one of the most significant happenings in the world today, and colleges throughout the country are endeavoring to put before the students some idea of its importance and urgency. Disarmament conferences are under way at many large universities; a special National Student Committee on Disarmament has been created by the Council of Christian Associations to furnish materials and leadership in the colleges; and the Intercollegiate Disarmament Council has been organized to give publicity to student activities for disarmament, and to conduct a student poll on the question.

The local Christian Associations are organizing an all-campus campaign on disarmament, and are endeavoring through meetings, discussion groups, and bulletins to keep the campus informed on international affairs. The first definite step in this direction was taken at the joint meeting last Sunday afternoon at which Floyd Waters and Eleanor Henry gave talks on disarmament and Dr. McMurray led in a discussion. Plans are being made to have some outside speakers at various meetings and at a later date to take a straw vote.

COLLEGE LIBRARY GETS NEW BOOKS

Many Novels Added to Shelves; Books On Coaching

A number of new books have been received by the library and are now catalogued and ready for use. The majority of these books are fiction, though there are twelve or fourteen for the religious education department and the physical education department.

Some of the books of fiction which are proving the most popular are: "The White Fawn", by Prouty, "The Good Companions", by Priestly, "Thursday April", by Hannum, "Shadows On The Rock", by Cather, "My Story", by Rinehart, "The Road Back", by Remarque, and "John Henry", by Bradford.

The new books to be used in the philosophy department are: "Making of Christian Mind", by Atkins, "Why I Believe in Religion", by Brown, "Where Evolution and Religion Meet", by Coulter, "Fundamental Christianity", by Patton, "Christian Conviction", by McAfee, and "Assurance of Immortality", "Meaning of Faith", "Meaning of Prayer", and "Meaning of Service", all by Fosdick.

The debaters have ordered books on imperialism, modern capitalism, and political economy. Besides the ones mentioned there are a number of interesting books on art, physical training, coaching and tumblig.

LLOYD'S TO ENTERTAIN

Mrs. Lloyd will be at home to the girls of the freshman class on Friday, November the twentieth from 3:30 to 5:30 p. m. This will be the first of a series of teas that Mrs. Lloyd plans to give for the girls of the college during the winter. The sophomore girls will be entertained in January, the juniors in March, and the seniors will attend the customary Senior Breakfast in June.

Some of the girls on the campus are especiolly privileged in knowing Mrs. Lloyd as their Sunday School teacher, but she is admired and held in highest esteem by all the girls.

For some weeks The Executive Council of the Faculty has been investigating the problems involved in connection with the regulation against the parking of cars belonging to students overnight on the campus, and has decided to withdraw the regulation. It seems best for the present that young men having cars keep them in the area between Carnegie and Memorial, to the left of the walk leading to the front entrance of Carnegie.

MEDICAL APTITUDE EXAMINATION TO BE GIVEN DEC. 11

Tests Proved Successful To Medical Schools Last Year

On Saturday, December 11, the Medical Aptitude Tests as issued by the Association of American Medical Colleges will be given for any Maryville students who desire to further their education in medicine with a view of entering a medical school at some future date.

According to a report received from the Association, the tests last year proved very satisfactory in discovering aptitude for medicine; ninety medical colleges used these tests as a factor in the selection of their students. The test consists of six parts: (1) scientific vocualary, (2) visual memory for anatomical drawings, (3) memory for descriptive materials, (4) premedical information, (5) learning and retention of material, and (6) understanding of difficult printed material. Further announcement will be made as to exact time and place of the test.

SPECIAL ARMISTICE PROGRAM GIVEN

The regular chapel program was somewhat diversified on Armistice Day, November 11.

The Armistice Day prayers were offered by four students: Lila Barr, Mary Branche, Bill Hannah and James Howell. Lois Wallace very effectively presented Rudyard Kipling's "Lest We Forget."

Dr. Stevenson, in his short address, summed up the futility of war; the horrors, the desolation, and the destructiveness of war. He spoke of two banners which hung for several years on the walls of the chapel, but which are now removed. The larger, a blue one with 600 white stars, represented the students from Maryville College who enlisted in the World War; the smaller, a blue one with 21 gold stars, represented those boys who gave their lives in that War.

The beautiful dahlias presented by Karl Walston, a former student, together with the plants on the platform, greatly added to the setting.

HOOVER TO SPEAK IN INTEREST OF COLLEGES TONIGHT

Liberal Arts College Movement Will Present National Broadcast

DR. FINLEY TO SPEAK

Other Noted Persons Appear On Country-Wide Hook-Up

Tonight from 7:30 to 8:00 o'clock the National Broadcast of the Liberal Arts College Movement will be given. This broadcast will come through the cooperation of the National Broadcasting Company and its associated stations. The local reception will probably come through station WSM at Nashville.

President Hoover will be the principle speaker of the evening. Other noted persons who will deliver addresses on this program are Dr. John H. Finley, Associate Editor of the New York Times; Dr. Robert L. Kelly, Executive Secretary of the Association of American Colleges and of the Councils of Church Boards of Education; Mrs. Thomas J. Preston, Jr.; and Dr. A. N. Ward, President of Western Maryland College and Chairman of the Liberal Arts College Movement.

The Liberal Arts College Movement is a movement instituted by the liberal arts colleges of the country in an attempt to focus publicity upon the importance of this type of institution in the present day educational system. Several hundred colleges are members of this movement, and a concerted and unified effort is being made to reinstate the Liberal Arts College in its place of educational importance.

Dr. Julius Klein To Speak In Knoxville Wednesday, Nov. 18

Maryville Faculty, Students Invited To Attend Lecture

On Wednesday, November 18, at 8:00 p. m., in Jefferson Hall at the University of Tennessee, Dr. Julius Klein, the Assistant Secretary of Commerce in Washington, D. C. will speak on "The Business Outlook". An invitation has been extended to the faculty and students of Maryville College who are able to and would care to, to attend this lecture. Dr. Klein is a graduate of Harvard, University of Berlin, and the Sorbonne at Paris. He taught economics and history at Harvard until 1923 when he joined the Department of Commerce. He has been chief of the Latin American Division of the Department of Commerce, Commercial Attache at Buenos Aires, Director of the United States Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, American delegate to the General International Economic Conference in 1927, and Assistant Secretary of Commerce since 1929.

PATTY, '35, WINNER OF ESSAY CONTEST

Carl Patty, '35, was given a unanimous decision by the three judges for his essay on "Fire Prevention".

Of the four papers submitted in this contest, conducted and judged by the English department, Mr. Patty's essay was much superior to any of the others. The prize of five dollars, given by an unnamed person, has been presented to the winner.

CELEBRATION FOR MARYVILLE ALUMNI IN CINCINNATI

Banquet In Honor Marriages Of Mates of Class 1926

Special to the Echo

The banquet hall of the new Y. M. C. A. building of the University of Cincinnati was the scene of a double celebration for Maryville alumni and former students on the evening of November 1. The occasion was a dinner given by James M. "Shimmie" Brown and Robert W. "Bob" Bishop in honor of the recent marriages of two classmates, L. E. Milling and Joe E. Gamble. Both ceremonies had taken place the week previous, when Mr. Milling was married to Miss Ruth Kimball, of Manson, N. C., and Mr. Gamble to Miss Frances Leisenring, of Ann Arbor, Michigan.

After the banquet the reunion was adjourned to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bishop, where Maryville days were lived again. The Maryville alumni and former students present were James M. Brown, '26, Robert W. Bishop, '26, Ed Martin, '24, L. E. Milling, '26, and Lamar Milling, 29, of Cincinnati, Ohio; Albert Cook, '27, and Mrs. Albert Cook, nee Phoebe Draeger, of Columbus, Ohio, Miss Emma Sneidiker '27, and Mr. and Mrs. Gamble.

PI KAPPA DELTA RECEIVES QUESTION

Dr. G. W. Finley, national secretary of Pi Kappa Delta, recently, issued the definite statement of the question to be used this year in the debates of the fraternity chapters. This question is: Resolved, that Congress should enact legislation providing for the centralized control of industry.

At a meeting of the varsity debaters Thursday night, November 12, Professor Queener analyzed the question and gave a general outline of its possibilities.

The freshman debate class has been organized about a month and are working under the supervision of Professor Queener. The group is larger this year than the past as fifty-five students are enrolled in this work as against forty last year.

Some people may never be authors, but a great number have done considerable book writing. This is oftentimes known as cribbing. The writing, like that done by well known writers, is written in translation. Some of the language books from the bookroom are written in both in the original language, and in translation, so that it becomes easy to get almost any kind of a lesson.

DR. GAHAGAN SPEAKS

Dr. Clair B. Gahagan, who spoke in chapel Tuesday morning, came to us from Birmingham and Knoxville, where he had been speaking on the same program as had Dr. Lloyd.

Dr. Gahagan who comes from Chicago, is one of the secretaries of the staff of the Presbyterian Board of Christian Education. He has general charge of men's work in the churches throughout the central part of the United States, and spends a great deal of his time going to churches in various cities addressing young men. He was formerly pastor of a church in Toledo, Ohio.

BALDWIN DWELLERS—SMITH

Sojourner at Baldwin speaking. Usually a feminine member of the Echo staff is permitted to occupy a room in Pearson's Hall before she has gained the confidence and assurance of literary ability necessary to give expression to her ideas of dormitory life and activity—of its assiduousness and procrastination. In other words, she is an upperclassman. Hoping that she will not be considered opinionated, and with all the respect and approbation due the Pearson's inhabitants, a Baldwin dweller wishes humbly to inform the readers and hearers of the Highland Echo that the activities of Baldwin Hall are worthy of a moment's attention also.

We wish you to know first that Baldwin girls are industrious. It is a well known fact that many Pearsons girls are awakened in the morning by the breakfast bell, yet they manage to go to breakfast. The location of the Dining Hall demands that Baldwin girls rise earlier, thus is their industry accounted for.

Baldwin Hall is situated in close proximity to the Chapel, which makes it extremely difficult to manage a pace as correspondingly slow as the Pearson pace. In this manner Baldwin girls are forced to use their ingenuity and are given a reputation of capability in solving almost any problem that might arise.

Baldwin girls are economical. They have no Y.W.C.A. store to visit late at night. Baldwin girls are, as a general rule, younger and naturally optimistic, they have an enthusiasm for living and a whole-hearted interest in all events; they are filled with courage and hope and only in this way are they able to keep up their spirits about disappointments that are bound to come to them. Occasionally this characteristic is misunderstood by others and is called frivolity.

Baldwin dwellers have no night life. They are sensible and sane minded girls who believe in the old adage "Early to bed and early to rise, causes a co-ed to utter no sighs." Besides, the matrons do not

Home Ec Girls Have Great Opportunities In Life; McMurray

Head of College Maid Shop Sees Benefits In Training

There are more business opportunities for home economic women, after being graduated from college, than for any other woman. This is the opinion of Mrs. Kathryn R. McMurray, manager of Maryville College Maid Shop.

"Not only does the home economic field offer more openings, but the breadth, vision, and background secured in the training is extremely valuable in most any business.

"Housekeeping in large hotels, requiring women with executive and housekeeping ability, and culture that will permit them to associate with the guests of the hotel, is one type of position available.

"Then there are hostesses at summer resorts, large hotels, and restaurants who are better qualified by home economic training to hold such positions. Department and chain store cafeterias managers are home economic graduates.

"Furthermore, managers of the kitchens of large hostelries, and the demonstration departments of food, utility, and retail firms are women with home economic training.'

Practically all of these positions pay well, says Mrs. McMurray. The Home Demonstration agents employed in many states receive as much as $3,000 per year plus the money for operating a car, paid by the county, state, and federal governments combined.

The work of these agents, as described by Mrs. McMurray, includes organization of girls' clubs, and sewing, cooking, and canning clubs for adults. According to her, most of the states in this country have Home Demonstration agents.

LIBERAL ARTS COLLEGE MOVEMENT

Tonight President Hoover, together with several other nationally known men, is to speak over the radio in the interest of the Liberal Arts College Movement.

This movement is instituted by the liberal arts colleges of the country to bring before the public the important position in the modern day educational system held by the college of this type. So much attention has been given the technical schools and the schools of specialized training in the last few decades that the liberal arts college, teaching a classical and well-rounded course has been relegated in the public mind to an undeserved corner of insignificancy.

In the past years such a trend toward the attitude that specialization and still further specialization was the answer to the ever present economic problems attendant to "making a living" has prevailed that we, as a nation, are about to lose sight of the pleasures to be enjoyed in the future by the person having the full, complete and wide knowledge given by the liberal arts course in contrast to the narrow and limited field of familiarity consequent to the specialized curriculum.

That a liberal arts education is not the answer to every case of higher learning is obvious. If, for instance a would-be student has only a limited time to spend in school and has as his objective one of the technical fields he would of course be foolish to spend that precious time in a liberal arts course which, when finished, would place him very little nearer the desired object, but it is equally obvious that an education of the broader type would be much to the advantage of the technician.

In the approaching period of international contact and universal dovetailing of the branches of knowledge, the possession of at least a speaking acquaintance with varied fields of thought and education will prove of inestimable value, and this all-embracing information must come from the liberal arts college.

AL
"DOC" DUFF

Occasionally it becomes the privilege of this paper to pay tribute to some member of the student body who has, perhaps contrarily to general custom, sacrificed personal comfort and well-being for the interests of his fellow students. Such a one is Al "Doc" Duff.

For three years Doc has shown himself worthy of the name and an observer of the altruistic ethics of the profession that the name connotes. In his official capacity of masseur to the Maryville athletes he has been a consciencious and industrious worker, but in his unofficial position of physician, osteopath and medical counselor to the student body he stands supreme.

Remuneration for sevices rendered is secondary to his desire to be of aid to a fellow. When, two years ago, the Shylockian urge of the "powers that be" in the athletic circle acted to cut the salary of his position in half, Doc cheerfully accepted the slice and continued giving the same class "A" brand of "charley-horse" eradication as formerly. When a co-worker was supplied who bucked at receiving only half of the ridiculously low salary apportioned this position, Doc graciously stepped aside in order that this gentleman might receive a sufficient amount for his labors to appease his conscience.

The painful muscle never materializes too late at night to receive the most considerate attention from Doc. Midnights without number have found him laboring over some stubborn strain to relieve the pain. And all without even the thought of payment.

It is with a sense of pride that we can point to such a character as being a classmate and hold him up to the public as a prototype of the best spirit of Maryville.

WHAT DEBATE MEANT TO ME IN COLLEGE

The following letter from a member of last year's Varsity debating team is the second article in a series regarding the value of debating to the college student.

Debate meant more to me than any other single course or activity in college—bar none. The first thing debate taught me was how to conduct a systematic and exhaustive research of a subject. If a person once learns this, there is no field of learning under the sun into which he cannot go.

As a result of this research, I was enabled to acquire valuable information about current events and economics. Not only did I study the immediate subject, but also I investigated allied subjects in the same general field. This season's topic, Capitalism, offers an excellent opporunity to study an issue that is facing the world.

After information has been found through research, it is necessary to analize and weigh the evidence. Therefore, debate taught me how to think more clearly and quickly. It will bring out the reasoning qualities of any one who tries out for the squad.

Then, I was trained in telling others about what I had learned and concluded. Debate gives skill in talking, one of the most important acquisitions that a man can have. Learn all the grammer you can, widen your vocabulary as far as possible, become a master of rhetoric, yet if you do not practice talking, you will never learn to express yourself. It is not enough to know how to pronounce and define words and to arrange them in the proper and most effective order. Not until you can gracefully speak the words before others, and put your soul behind the words, and make them express your convictions, and thus make your convictions the convictions of your listeners, not until then have you learned how to talk. And the only way to learn to talk is to talk.

In my estimation, the training received in debate is indispensable to a good secular education and immeasurably helpful towards an adequate sacred education. It takes time, but so does football or track. It takes work, but if a person is not willing to work he would do well to stay out of college. Most of us want to be educated, and thirty years from now our education will be judged by how well we can express ourselves and by how much we know of what is going on around us.

Least of all, I earned a key. Pi Kappa Delta has a key for anyone who will fulfill its conditions. A key is generally preferred before a football letter. Even as the pen is mightier than the sword, so the tongue is mightier than the foot.

Go out for debate!

MRS. HALL INJURED

Mrs. Elizabeth Hall, matron of the Ralph Max Lamar Memorial Hospital, is recovering slowly from a recent fall. While visiting friends in Morristown a few weeks ago Mrs. Hall fell down a flight of steps, breaking both her wrists, and receiving minor injuries. She was taken to the Knoxville General Hospital immediately end in a few days was removed to her home, the College Hospital. She is improving from the shock suffered, but she will be unable to act in her usual capacity for many weeks. Her friends and former patients sincerely wish for a recovery as speedy as possible.

KEYHOLE KOMMENT

Since we have been on the job this year we have had numerous epithets hurled at us by members of a certain gang with which our nocturnal hours are occasionally spent. To name some, any, or all of these uncomplimentary jabs would be to endanger our standing as one of the elite who never swear (in public). The reason for most of these decidedly painful occurences lies herein: we are supposed to be a mob of female-scorners, and our friends resent the fact that most of the seniors flaunted in this would-be column have been, to the present, of the feminine gender. Nevertheless, in spite of our tough cronies, here we go again.

We have regretted for some time that we could not afford ourselves the pleasurable privilege of expounding at length on the merits of our ranking staff-member, Irish, sometimes called Julia Terry. We gave as a reason that the copy, no matter how complimentary, could never reach the printer without being altered, or perhaps even abolished, by our frined with the rubricant hair. However, with the brightness so consistent in our family, we have evolved what we call an excellent idea. We shall see to it that the copy never passes into the hands of Terry until the damage shall have been done by publication.

Terry, as everyone knows, is probably best known for her ability to arrange words. Being an English major (not in the army—in the department), she is in a position to be on familiar terms with a host of words of all kinds: big words, little words, technical words, in fact, words of all denominations. And does she make 'em do things! When as lowly, if not humble, frosh, we used

We sometimes wonder whether or not our meandering meditations in this column are ever read by those at other schools about whom we are wont to dissertate. While wondering this aloud the other day, a friend of ours, whose name we shall not mention, dropped the discouraging hint that they might not be read even on this campus, by the people for whom they are primarily intended. Of course, we don't believe a word of it. We are sure that our musings receive first attention from at least one person, and that maybe everybody glances through them—after the rest of the columns have been perused to be sure. Never minding who reads them, however, we think that:

Clemson's cry for a holiday on the day after Thanksgiving is well-founded. All our lives we are taught to believe that Thanksgiving is second in importance as a holiday only to Christmas. And now we have come to college and are given one day for Thanksgiving and two weeks for the Yule season. Seems as though a more equal distribution might be made.

We have just noticed a rather unusual column conducted in the Orange and Blue, Carson-Newman's weekly. So far as our small experience permits us to opine, we detect a distinct tenor of advice to the ove-lorn—not making suggstions nor advertising; just commenting.

The University of Kentucky has on its campus an organization known as the Paducah club, consisting of the members of the student

The HIGHLAND ECHO is making a survey of the Expenditures of Maryville College students regarding both amount and distribution among the stores of Maryville of money spent.

On next Wednesday morning at the chapel meeting the card, illustrated below, will be passed to the students who are asked to place the amount, estimated as nearly as possible correctly, opposite the type of store wherein this money was spent.

This information is for the business department and will serve as a basis for a comingadvertising campaign. Signatures are not requested. The students are urged to cooperate in this survey and furnish as nearly accruate figures as possible. Thank you.

Seniors Make "Whoopee" At Open Party Last Monday Nite

The senior party was a decided success and the next open party which will not take place until the spring, already is being anticipated by those who attended the party last Monday night.

Leaves scattered over the floor gave a decided rustic effect and provided much enjoyable labor for the clean-up committee. A voluntary clean-up committee for refreshments was headed by Naomi Willingham who had general charge of the party.

The program was highly entertaining and showed much thought and preparation. The decorations were contributed by the College Woods, the use of which was directed by Kitty Hodges. Louise Avery had charge of the refreshments, and the "Harvest Festival" was indeed productive. In fact, there was a surplus which was taken care of properly and easily. Much credit should be given to Virginia Crider, the class vice-president, to whom all the committees were ultimately responsible.

About two hundred students were in attendance and probably the rest of the college was there in spirit. All in all, it was a good party, if we must say so ourselves.

MRS. McMURRAY

"Dieticians in hospitals and women who speak over the radio on home problems are, for the most part, home economic students. Girls who have just been graduated from college do well in this type of work.

"The argument in favor of a college education in this field is that most companies will not take women who do not have a degree.

"The problem of whether a woman can hold any of the positions that I have mentioned and, at the same time, raise a family, is simplified by the fact that the woman who receives her education, enters family life of her own, and then enters business has more valuable experience to back up her work.

"This is not to say, however, that a woman should neglect her family. As long as her children are not big enough to be out of the home, she should be with them. No child should ever be home without its mother.

Many home economic graduates, now mothers, says Mrs. McMurray, have found ready markets for the foods they have cooked. This is one way, she added of earning money without leaving the home.

"Part-time work, especially that for local industries, suggested Mrs. McMurray, permits the mother whose children attend school to demonstrate part of the day. She pointed out that there is more part-time work for home economic graduates than in any other business; work that can't be done by anyone else.

Highlanders Come From Behind In Second Half Of Game To Trounce Bears By Score Of 14-6

Scots Play Third Consecutive Tie Game; C-N Team Comes Next

APPALACHIAN TEACHERS SCORE IN FINAL PERIOD TO EARN DEADLOCK WITH MARYVILLE IN RAGGED EXHIBITION

OVERLY LOOKS GOOD

Passing Attack Almost Spells Disaster For Highlanders; Line Play Good.

Tie games seem to be the greatest weakness of our Highlanders for they played their third successive deadlock last Saturday afternoon when a big team of Appalachian Teachers came storming down out of the mountains of North Carolina to take part in what turned out to be the most miserable exhibition of football that has been put on here this season.

Everything went wrong, it seemed, and the players on both teams played football in a manner that certainly wasn't anything to scribble to the home folks about. The first half wasn't so bad but during the third quarter everything went bughouse and everyone from the referee to the water boy became completely befuddled it seemed. The officials failed to agree on their decisions and when they did agree, the coaches and players didn't agree with them.

However the Teachers saw fit to emerge from the fog and put over their touchdown that tied the score, and the game after that took an entirely new complexion. The Highlanders suddenly came to life and started one of their best offensive drives of the afternoon, but try as they might, they could not shove the ball across the final white line for the touchdown that would have been sufficient to win the game.

Callaway started the rally by intercepting a pass on his own 40 yard marker and on the very next play took the ball and reeled off the most sensational run of the game. He went off tackle, evaded the full back and shook off the secondary defense but he was brought down by

FIGHTING EAGLES OF CARSON-NEWMAN PLAY SCOTS NEXT

Championship of Smoky Mountain Conference Will Be Settled On Turkey Day

The Highlanders will return home tonight but they can rest easy for a day or so for they will not have another game for almost two weeks. Their next contest will be with the Carson-Newman Eagles on our own football field and incidentally, it will be the last game of the season for the Scotties.

The Maryville boys have been looking forward to this game with Carson-Newman ever since the season started. It is clearly THE game in their minds and they would rather win it than any other one on the schedule. This year's game with Carson-Newman promises to be one of the most bitter battles that the two teams have played in many years. Both schools are boasting the best teams that they have had in a long time and the comparative scores, if that means anything, show that they are about evenly matched.

Tied Milligan

The Eagles tied with the Milligan College Buffaloes early in the season, as did the Highlanders, and it really seems like one team will have as good a chance for victory as the other. The Eagles have a fast set of backs that can really go places with that old ball but they will have to go several places if they keep up with Capt. Lea Callaway. They have a stiff defense but their line will have to be starched if it is to be stiffer than ours.

Students Coming

The Carson-Newman student body will turn out entirely for the game and don't you think for one minute that they won't be backing that football team. They have a much smaller group of students than we have but they can make up for their lack of numbers in pep and school spirit.

SPORT SLANTS

By BOB RULE

Get out your choicest raspberries for the basketball referee, get your night dates early, and get set for the thrills that a basketball game alone can give, for it won't be long now. The announcement in Chapel Tuesday morning that those interested in varsity basketball would meet for the first workout brings thoughts of those one point victories, those defeats by the same score, and those overwhelming Maryville victories. And these thoughts are plenty sweet.

Of course the announcement that basketball season is just around the corner reminds us of something besides the coming thrills that always accompany the basketball season. Personally, it reminds me of the fact that the 1931 football season is just about completed. And while we are reminiscing, let's think of a few things that are even more serious than the closing of the football season.

What about the senior members of the football squad? Think of Maryville without the one and only Captain Lea Callaway, the bull-like Cliff Overly, the never-quitting Tolliver, the pass-snagging White, the big, awkward, but dependable Carper, the punt-blocking Ferguson, and last but not baldest, the vociferous but scrapping Teffeteller. When I think of watching these men walk solemnly down the aisle and take that sheepskin, I feel like the King of Nazilia must have felt when his army deserted him.

There may have been years when the Highlanders have been harder hit by graduation, but fellow sufferers, I doubt it.

Just give Lea Callaway two of three boy scouts for companions and you have a good backfield. Put any one of these line men with a high school line and you have a good defensive unit. But there's one consolation that comes out of the cloud, and that is this: just give Coach Honaker a handful of willing young men and you have a football team. He can take a squad that looks hopeless, and give the greatest team in the Southern Conference the battle of its life. He can make the rest of the Smoky Mountain Conference members wish that there were a law against guys like him.

At the end of each football season, there is a certain bunch of pessimists who will shake their heads with all earnestness and predict one-sided defeats for the Scots the next year. But somehow or other Coach Honaker can get something out of his men that other coaches never discover, and Coach Bob Thrower can just naturally produce a line that is impenetrable. Maryville is never a set up for any man's football team. And brother, this holds just as true for Coach Honaker's basketball and baseball team. And this same Senor Robert Thrower also has his hand in the moulding of teams in these sports.

SPEC MOORE WINS CROSS COUNTRY IN NEW RECORD TIME

Leaves Classy Field Far Behind In Beating Speedy Mann's Old Mark; Hitch Second

Dinty Moore, bespectacled distance runner, sprinted home ahead of the field in the annual Cross Country five mile race last Saturday and brought with him a new college record of 27 minutes, 25 seconds. Moore blasted the old record, held by Roy Taylor, Captain of last years track team, by over a minute. Taylor's time was 28:35.

Moore promises to develop into one of the best distance runners that Coach Bob Thrower has ever produced. Last year, he ran a beautiful race in the mile run to defeat the University of Tennessee runner but he was never the same after the race. He was slower all season due to an injured ankle and he was beaten several times.

In winning this year's race, Moore out-distanced one of the classiest fields that any Maryville winner has ever had to face. Shortly after him came Jim Hitch and Speedy Mann in a dead heat. Hitch had more left than did Mann and he managed to sprint across the finish line the second place winner.

Hitch was also a member of last year's track team. He came out without any runninng experience whatever and ran the half mile, one of the most murderous races in track. He won a number of first places last year and he should be one of the most valuable cogs in Coach Thrower's machine this season.

Mann is a seasoned veteran but he has been out of school for some time and he has done no running since he quit school. He was not in the best of condition but made a very good showing considering the fact that he has been working out for a few weeks. Willocks, a freshman, placed fourth in the race.

Fighting Scots Break Tie Jinx When Mountaineers Are Swamped

SENIORS DEFEAT JUNIORS IN CLOSE SOCCOR BATTLE

Underclassmen Force Superiors To Fight Desperately Entire Game

The senior class soccer team defeated the juniors by a score of 3-2 last Saturday night in the opening game of the tournament. Captain Kitts scored for the seniors and Sue Prince won the juniors' points.

At the end of the first half the score for the evenly matched teams was 1-1, but in the second half the seniors pushed forward with a determination that frustrated even Mary Swacick, junior goal-keeper. Irish Terry played a good fullback position for the seniors, and Virginia Ross was outstanding in the unior defense.

SOPHOMORES HAND FROSH DECISIVE DEFEAT IN SOCCOR

Freshmen Overwhlemed In First Frame But Stage Come Back

In the second game of the soccer tournament, held Thursday night, the sophomores defeated the freshmen by a score of 8-3.

In the first half of the game the frosh were not able to score once, but the sophomores ran to a 5-0 lead. But in the latter part the freshmen woke up, found what it was all about, and led the sophs a merry chase. The third quarter ended without another point for either team.

In the fourth quarter both teams redoubled their efforts in "ye ole fight" manner, and fight they did. Each team scored 3 points, and the game ended 8-3.

Mitchell and Yennie were the foremost forwards for the sophomore team, while Captain Gillingham and Webb played a good game for the freshmen.

The seniors will play the sophomores for the championship tonight in the final game of the tournament.

Boretsky Trots 64 Yards For Most Sesnational Play Of Game

J. OVERLY TALLIES Callaway To White Pass For First Extra Point Clicks.

Maryville's fighting Highlanders broke a standing record of three tie games last night as they came from behind to defeat the Lenoir-Rhyne Bears by the score of 14-6. Trailing at the half 6-0, the Scots apparently received some of the ole Maryville spirit from Coach Honaker, for they came back in the third quarter and, led as usual by Capt. Callaway, proceeded to carry the ball over for a touchdown. Callaway tallied and Jack Overly, Pee-Wee's little brother, made the game an assured thing by gaining another point with a placement kick.

Boretsky Scores

For the remainder of the third quarter, see-saw effect was in evidence, as neither team could muster up power to push across, although both made several valiant attempts. As the fourth quarter became a reality, however, little Stevie Boretsky made himself the sure iceman of the game by dancing sixty-four yards for the final counter of the contest. Callaway and White then made themselves even more conspicuous by becoming the tosser and receiver of the pass for extra point, respectively.

Maryville Punts Excell

Maryville's punters again out-distanced the foes, averaging up for a mean of 38 yards. The boys from back home must have felt a bit cagy after their trip to the city, as they amassed a total of 35 negative yards, due to penalties.

New Staff Members Of Echo Chosen

Freshman Apprentices; Two Business Assistants Selected

The selection of freshman apprentices for The Highland Echo editorial staff was made Tuesday. Those chosen were:

Alys Scroggy, Beatrice Thorson, Grace Proffitt, Dorothy Nethery, C. B. Stanbery, Frank Thornhill, and Robert McCullough.

Further selections will be made in order that the usual twelve apprentices will have been picked. The selections are based on a three-week period, during which the candidates submit three articles, upon which the appointing committee bases its decisions.

Sophomore assistant business managers, for the business staff of The Highland Echo, were chosen this week. Ernestine Smith and Kenneth Kidd were selected.

Hodges Wins Girls' Tennis Tournament In Speedy Finale

Johnson Played Brilliantly But Swift Serves Were Nemesis

In a hard-fought game yesterday, Kitty Hodges, senior, won the women's tennis tournament by defeating Eleanor Johnson, freshman, by the score of 6-1, 6-2. Competition in the game was closer than the score might seem to indicate, although Kitty held the advantage over her opponent practically all the time.

Eleanor played a hard game and played it well, but Kitty's swift serve, well-placed returns, and speedy back-hand made her the victor of the day. Kitty has been on the tennis team during her three years at Maryville and will, of course, head the team this year as the best woman player on the Hill.

Another tournament will be held in the spring at which time the team will be chosen for the 1931-1932 season. Kitty Hodges, Eleanor Johnson, and Iva Babcock will be the seeded victors, and it remains to be seen whether or not Kitty will retain her position as woman tennis champion.

Christmas is coming, coming, coming,—and that isn't all There is to be a full moon on Christmas eve, and the almanac promisss a big snow for that night too. Feature that. Can you help thinking of that Christmas, or the evening before, when you. . . when you. . . well, when you get to see a full moon. You might be like your humble scribe, too poor to even hitch-hike home, but even then, that doesn't keep you from thinking about it.

to pounce upon the Echo each Monday night and read the features invariably provided by her, telling ourselves that perhaps some day, if we worked hard, we should approach her ease and seeming carelessness in handling monstrosities of seven or more syllables. We haven't arrived there yet, but we keep telling ourselves to be patient and to remember that it must have taken more than three semesters for the construction of Rome.

Despite the fact that we have always thought of Irish as being a distinct southerner, she resides in the hamlet of Dayton, Ohio. We are not so well versed in our geography, but we are under the impression that Dayton is nigh onto the shores of the Great Lakes. If this is true, we must say we can't blame her for coming south for the winter.

Attempting to enumerate Irish's campus honors is more of a task than one might suppose at first blush. As one wag puts it, she has as many as Rockefeller has dimes, especially since the depression. She is president of Bainonian, a signal honor in itself. she is a member of the Writer's Workshop, and to top all these, she is Miss Heron's English assistant. is staff editor of this very periodical. She has held offices without end during her sojourn here, and is in possession of several at this time besides those aforementioned. In fact, we have heard rumors that, if she has the customary list of honors placed below her name in the annual, the roll will have to be continued in the space formerly reserved for autographs.

CLUBBY COMMENT

Margaret Ann Kelly and Harvey Lowry were elected program secretaries, of Kentucky Club, at the meeting held Tuesday. An open party will be held November 21, though the place and date has not been decided upon.

Students and faculty members from Massachusetts have organized a club for that state. Dr. Susan A. Green, of the Biology department, and Prof. Kenneth R. Lagerstadt, of the Language department, are members. Reno Smith is the president.

The intention of the members is to have a get-to-gether, in Massachusetts, sometime during the coming summer.

Alpha Sigma literary society will elect new officers this Saturday night. The entertainment will consist of "The True Story of the Prodigal Son", by "Chic" West; and a "duetto" by Jese Willis and Carl Cassada.

George Fishbach is chairman of a committee which will draw up a constitution for the new German Club.

Western States Club elected its first staff of officers, Tuesday. They are: Allen Amsbery, president; Jean Martin, vice-president; Virginia Ross, secretary and treasurer; Kenneth Blades, editor; and Colleen Collins, program secretary.

Theta Epsilon literary society will have a reading and a movie "review", Saturday evening.

"New Girl" night will be held Saturday at Bainonian literary society. Ruth Hershey, freshman, is in charge of the program.

allow candles, lamps, or other methods of illumination. Indeed Baldwin's Knight life is considerably restricted.

But that is because Baldwin is Baldwin and Pearsons is Pearsons. Some of the statements made by the Pearsons members of the staff include both dormitories because women wish to be feminine. Some of us remember the discussion of Pearssons transformations, when the "fair young damsel became the ugly duckling at night and reversed the order the following morning." Some of us surely remember the lines, clothes and otherwise discoursed upon by the Pearsons inmate. Memorial? Oh, Memorial is a freshman dormitory!

Please be reminded that it is the purpose of this miniature publicity campaign to give Baldwinites' individuality some well-deserved attention.

APPALACHIAN GAME

the safety man after a neat gain of 25 yards. The Maryille leader then passed to "Easy" White for a ten yard gain and the ball was on the 25 yard line. The offense then went wild and the rally was ended when a forward pass went incomplete.

There were several things brought to light in this game however that players, coaches and students were very glad to see. Cliff Overly snapped out of the slump that he has been in for some time and played one of the greatest games of the year. He smashed holes in the Teacher line that were large enough for the entire backfield to go through and smeared offensive plays all afternoon. Floyd Wilson, one of the finest little ball carriers on the team, has also been off his stride for some time and his playing Saturday certainly made folks sit up and take notice.

Martin Gillespie proved that he can do something besides get two thirds of the tackles in every game. They slipped the ball to him on several occasions and he showed that he can hit a line like so many tons of brick. And does that boy run low? He was so low he looked like a Scotchman looking for a lost dime.

Kolman and Peters, two freshmen performers, were given their chances in the game and they certainly showed the stuff that it takes to make varsity material. They both started the game and played heads up football while they were in there.

THE LITTLE CHURCH

The most significant student religious gathering of the present academic year will be the eleventh Quadrennial Convention of the Student Volunteer Movement. The Conference will be held in Buffalo, New York, from December 30 through January 3.

Four thousand delegates from college and university campuses of the United States and Canada will meet to work toward the accomplishment of these four main objectives:

First. a comprehensive view of the present day world, with its tremendous social, spiritual, intellectual, and economic forces which everywhere color and condition human life.

Second, a consideration of the extent to which Jesus is attracting to Himself the attention and admiration of the world and is demonstrating His unique power to bring abundant life to individuals and to society.

Third, an estimate of the degree to which that power is finding effective expression in the world-wide enterprise of Christian missions.

Fourth, an attempt to discover what this enterprise must become in the immediate future, and what the delegates as individuals must do to deepen its spirit and direct its progress.

This conference is the eleventh quadrennial convention of an organization established almost half a century ago for stimulating students to an intelligent attitude toward world Christianity, and for seeking recruits for service abroad. The conference will not, however, be limited to prospective missionaries. It is planned for all students who propose to take the message of Christ seriously.

Maryville is entitled, according to quota recommendations, to 6 delegates.

Dr. Hunter gave a practical talk on reading to the Ministerial Association at their regular meeting last Tuesday night. He discussed briefly how to read, why to read, and what to read, relating all this particularly to the career of a minister. A short talk by Paul Edris concluded the program for the evening. At the meeting next week Dr. H. E. Orr will speak concerning the necessity and importance of thinking out one's religion. A special meeting in the college woods is being planned for an early date.

The Student Volunteer Group elected Elizabeth Gillis as their new president at the meeting last Sunday night. This election was necessary on account of the resignation of Harry Wood, who had served as president very acceptably so far this year. Mr. Wood was unable to continue in office due to conflicting activities. After the election Warren Warman gave a talk on Arabia and her needs.

If this new Maryville quartette continues to warble in the manner they've been warbling lately, we're going to quit observing and devote all of our time to listening. They really can give us that which we can truthfully call "music to our ears." They've come out with four good men, each gifted with a strong individual voice, and a fifth man on the piano who would give anyone dancing feet, and they promise to give Maryville the best in the way of a quartette to ever be on the Hill. . . and that is an assignment.

The editor's defensive editorial is worth reading, even if there isn't much of it.

NEW PEP SONGS

The Pep Committee asks that all students know the following songs by the next pep meeting. The music of the first song is taken from the Vagabond King, entitled, "The Song of the Vagabonds." The second tune is original, and was written by Joe Truxton, '35, assisted by Larry Somers.

PEP SONG

Mighty sons of Maryville,
All the brawn that's on the Hill,
FIGHT, FIGHT, FIGHT for victory.

Sons of fame and knowledge,
Fight on for your college,
And for what it stands to be.

Onward, onward rip that foe apart,
Forward, Forward crush them from the start (Don't spare them)

Tear your foes asunder
Make them feel your thunder,
FIGHT, FIGHT, FIGHT for victory.

FIGHT, FIGHT, FIGHT and win the victory,
Fight for our college true,
Fight men fight and never weary
Fight till the game is through.

Forever o'er our Hill,
Fight and win another victory
For dear Old Maryville.

YOU AREN'T A REAL HIGHLANDER UNLESS YOU HAVE A PAIR OF BOOTS

Buy yourself a pair of Star Brand Boots. Say, but they're wonderful—16 inches high; the uppers are cut from the best of nice, soft, oily leather; the smooth grain leather gussets extend all the way to the top; they have stud hooks that won't bend. They're the best boots that this price can buy, and if they don't take you wherever you want to go all winter long, I miss my guess. You'd better take a tip and get yourself a pair today.

Price $4.95

OBSERVATIONS

Our Tendency
Versatile Queener
Echo Wits
Attention Girls

We've been told that a tendency of ours in this column is to mention only those people in our own little clan, so to speak. Firstly, we don't know it if we do have a clan, and secondly, we would ask that the complaintant be more explicit. We've written about everything from the dark secrets of the night watchman to Dr. Lloyd's nickname.

There might be one or two people on the hill who still don't know that Professor Queener was once the editor of the Echo. He was editor the same year that Bob Thrower and his mates made the most enviable record in football ever to go on the books for Maryville College. Our curiosity led us to delve into some of Mr. Queener's editorials. They were of so much interest that we thought it a good plan to pass them on to you for what they're worth. . . . and that's plenty.

First, he wrote as the student:—

"With a strong footall team and all the good looking females around, we feel sure of a great year of college life."

Then, as a teacher:

"Anybody who doesn't open his books looks as ridiculous as a blind man at a picture show."

Then, as an optimist:

"We believe better things are coming for two reasons: First, because they could not get worse. . . etc.

Then Mr. Queener speaks as a man after our own heart when he says:

"Before the next issue of the Echo, Christmas will have come and gone and most of our readers will have had that long looked for visit to the best place in the world."

The two joke writers on the paper laid down on the job last week and the editor, it seemed, had lost all of his wits. Later one one of them returned and the editor returned to normalcy.

Some of the girls who want to be first at something can still grasp an opportunity at this late stage of the game. Bob Paxton doesn't have a steady, and he says he's in the market. Then, there's Tim (Madison) Byar, who is boasting that he has the first time to be refused a date on the hill. If you can get fixed up with little Bob, or if you can break this precedent concerning Byar, you'll be at least original.

STUDENT COUNCIL PLANS NEW SOCIAL MEET FOR TONIGHT

"Much Ado About Nothing" Is Name Given Unusual Social Function

IN LAMAR LIBRARY

Will Furnish Amusement When No Entertainment Scheduled

The Student Council announced after its last meeting, held on Tuesday, November 17, that a social entertainment will be provided the students tonight after society meetings.

This entertainment will be of the type that "As You Like Its" have been, yet in some respects it will be different. The main purpose of this plan is to provide entertainment on the nights when nothing else is scheduled. Games of cards, pingpong and other forms of amusement will be placed in the Lamar Library for the entertainent of students desiring to avail themselves of them. No directive program is planned for these functions. There will be no effort made to make anyone have a good time other than to provide the means—the good time will be there, but the students will have to find it for themselves. It will be a place for moonshining, to play games or to amuse oneself in any way he sees fit.

Y. M. C. A. REGIONAL SECRETARY SPEAKS

Mr. Claude Nelson Addresses Students In Chapel

Mr. Claude Nelson, who spoke in chapel Thursday morning on "Reading the Signs of the Times", has charge of the Southern Region of the Y.M.C.A. This Region, composed of ten southern states, has headquarters in Atlanta, Georgia and supports as travelling secretaries Mr. Nelson and Mr. James Hardwick.

At the present time Mr. Nelson is working on an inter-racial plan, which may prove to be a step toward tearing down race prejudice in the South.

Wednesday night Mr. Nelson talked to a group of interested Y. M. C. A. members about the annual Blue Ridge Conference which is to begin June 5.

STUDENT COUNCIL PROMISED AID OF FELLOWSHIP CLUB

Nov. 17— The Student Council meeting was held in Pearsons parlor at 6:30 this evening, with Mildred MacKenzie presiding. Several matters of importance were considered and discussed at length.

James Smith, freshman member, spoke of the desire of the Fellowship Club to cooperate with the council in its various activities and projects. It is hoped that these two organizations, through their coperation, will be of distinct aid to each other this year.

WRITER'S PLAN TO PUBLISH ARTICLES IN PERMANENT FORM

Will Ask Other Colleges To Cooperate In New Project

Nov. 18. At the meeting of the Writers' Wornshop a plan was inaugurated regarding the publication of the most meritorious papers that are submitted during the year.

For some time the members of this organization have desired some form of book in which recognition can be given to the outstanding writers and a permanent record kept of the best manuscripts. Realizing that a publication of this kind would be too expensive for Maryville College, the problem has remained as such for several years.

However, the suggestion has been made and adopted by the members of the Workshop, that other colleges in Tennessee be notified of the desires of the local organization and inquiries be made as to the reception by these colleges of this idea of a state literary publication which would include work done by college students in all parts of the state.

A disinterested board of selection composed, perhaps, of men and women from other states, would read the proposed papers and make the proper selection, basing their selections on the merits of the papers only. The publication would be yearly and the expense would be borne by the colleges who signified their desires of joining whether or not each college that had joined would be represented in the publication each year.

Any literary manuscript would be eligible for consideration, essays, poetry, short stories, drama. The book would be limited to student papers only, although, of course, faculty members are active in all college organizations of this kind. The faculty members would probably cull out the best from their schools and send them to this committee on selection for the final choice.

Although this plan is being inaugurated and put into active use by the local organization, it is hoped through correspondence and exchange of ideas with various Tennessee colleges that a publication of this kind will be possible.

At the Fellowship Club next Monday night, Dr. McMurry will finish the talk on Parliamentary law which he began last Monday.

The French Club met Wednesday evening and drew up a constitution.

'PEG O' MY HEART' Y. W. BENEFIT NEXT MONDAY NIGHT

Martin, Bowles, Smith Have Stellar Roles In Popular Comedy

MISS HOLLAND DIRECTS

Revived Comedy, Popular In Past Generation Comes Back

The curtains will rise on the first play of the season next Monday at 8 o'clock in Voorhees Chapel when the Maryville College Players appear before the footlights in J. H. Manners' "Peg O' My Heart."

"Peg O' My Heart" is an old play which has been recently revived. It is an amusing comedy, with mirth and pathos intermingled in a theme of Irish-English love.

Jean Martin will appear in the title role of Peg, and the male lead will be played by Chilton Bowles. The supporting cast includes Cooley Combs, who is the smooth villian; and Reno Smith, who will furnish a major part of the comedy with his portrayal of a great English fop.

The play, directed by Miss Holland, is the Y. W. C. A. benefit number.

PI KAPPA DELTA ORGANIZES TEAMS

Chooses Sides For Regular Try-Out Elimination

The affirmative and negative sides have been chosen for the varsity debate try-outs which are to be held Saturday, December 5th. With the exception of Elizabeth Duncan, Benjamin Groves, and Mary Lovette the students have had no previous experience with varsity debate. The women's affirmative debaters are Erceelle Hunter, Mildred MacKenzie, Margaret Mozingo, and Edith McDuffie; negative: Elizabeth Duncan, Lucille Swagord, Carrie Lou Tweed, Margaret Parnell. The men debaters for the affirmative are: Charles Beale, Benjamin Groves, Harry Mathias, John Phay, Walter Pippert, Robert Tripp, Kenneth Kidd, Al Duff, Robert Beyer, Arthur Lazell; negative: Thomas Duncan, Fred Kirchner, James Lewis, Andrew Newcomer, Richard Orr, Robert Stevenson, George Vick, Leslie Webb.

ALPHA SIG ELECTS

Last Saturday night Reno Smith was elected president of Alpha Sigma literary society, for the second term. The officers elected with him are:

John Tope, vice-president; Charles West, recording secretary; William Gillingham, assistant recording secretary; Robert Overly, program secretary; Daniel Hicks, assistant program secretary; Jesse Willis, editor; Paul Ramsey, sergeant-at-arms; Lincoln Hurst, janitor; and John Eyster, Michael Testa, and John McQueen, censors.

MUSIC TRAINS IN MUSCULAR CONTROL SAYS MISS HALE

Music Department Head Sees Much Benefit In Training

Among the benefits to be derived from the study of music are accuracy and muscular control, says Miss Laura B. Hale, head of the Music Department of Maryville College. "People are becoming increasingly aware of the actual mental drill derived from the study of music.

Miss Hale answers several questions showing the importance of music to its students and to others as well.

"What are a few of the benefits to be gained?"

"First, accuracy. You cannot play hundreds, even thousands of notes in quick succession without acquiring the mental habit of accuracy and precision.

"Then think of the training in memory work when one must remember many, many pages of music with out a slip.

"There is also the muscular control necessary for the hands to respond with exactly the kind of touch required to convey a certain idea. And poise—everyone who plays knows the demand on self control. The attention also may never waver. There must be constant concentration.

"Unquestionably the whole process in mastering any instrument increases enormously one's thinking speed."

During the interview Miss Hale mentioned several prominent men who are skilled musicians. "Charles Schwab, the great American steel king, recognized the great mental benefits to be gained from the study of music. Himself a professional musician, he attributes his success in business to the mental drill he acquired through the study of music."

Miss Hale named Coolidge, Dawes, Longworth, Lord Balfour, Mussolini, and Paderewski as great statesmen-musicians.

Among the world leaders who are pprominent in the musical world Miss Hale mentioned Karapetoff,

WOMEN'S GLEE CLUB TO GIVE ANNUAL CONCERT NOV. 30

Classical and Popular Songs On Program Of Singers

MISS HENRY DIRECTS

Unusual Popularity Attended Entertainment of Club Last Year

Monday evening, November 30, at 8:00 o'clock the Women's Glee Club of Maryville College will present its annual concert of classical and popular songs.

The Club as a unit will sing a group of numbers from Friml's musical comedies. Miss Frances Henry, assisted by the Club, will give three Indian compositions in costume. "Jesu Bambino" will be presented with a beautiful Angel Pantomime suggestive of Christmas.

Another unusual feature of the program will be the appearance of Miss Evelyn Boring of Knoxville, in a number of Readings. Miss Boring has studied at the New England Conversatory of Music at Boston, Massachusetts.

The concert of the Women's Glee Club last year enjoyed unusual popularity, being called by many the finest musical program presented throughout the year. This year's program bids fair to be even better as practically all the talent from the former presentation remains and in addition many new members have been added to the Club.

ANDERSON REPAIRS COMPLETED SOON

Old Lecture Room Converted Into Office Suite

The work on the interior of Anderson Hall is nearing completion. The one-time biology lecture room has been converted into a number of small offices to be used for various purposes. There will be a faculty council room, a business manager's office, two rooms for the Student Help Department, and one room the use of which has not yet been decided upon. The printing office has already moved into its new quarters. Besides the new offices, there has been built a fireproof vault, in which valuable records will be kept. The woodwork and the radiators in the rooms are being painted with enamel paint.

Recent improvements on the campus buildings have not been confined to interiors. The roof of the Post Office has just received a new coat of tar, and Pearsons is being tarred in similar manner.

Records Show Scotties Beat C-N Regularly

TEN YEARS AGO

The Scotties journeyed to Jefferson City and defeated Carson-Newman 5-0, scoring by means of a safety and a field goal. Maryville seriously threatened to score three times and outplayed the Eagles in every phase of the game.

The student body held a meeting for the purpose of discussing the Washington Disarmament Conference called by President Harding.

FIVE YEARS AGO

Maryville closed a successful football season by defeating Carson-Newman 10-6. Shorty McCall established himself as one of Maryville's immortals by scoring every point himself, including a 58 yard dropkick for a field goal.

The Three I Club reorganized after a two year period of inactivity.

After four weeks of trials the Maryville Glee Singers held their final tryouts at which seventeen men were picked.

Tom Taggart, a freshman, won the two mile cross-country run with a time of 19 minutes, 24 seconds.

HELEN CROWDER SNARES TURKEY

At the recent fowl flying exhibition put on by Proffitt's Helen Crowder was the proud though unsuspecting recipient of a huge turkey. She did not even have to mingle with the common herd and make a wild dash for the turkey. Helen was sitting in her parked car on the side street near Proffitt's and was watching the activity of the mob in front of the store. Suddenly before she realized it, a huge turkey was sitting complacently (or however turkeys sit) on the radiator apparently wanting to go for a ride. The turkey may have had other motives, no one will ever know. Perhaps the radiator had incubating possibilities, but that is neither here nor there.

Helen got out of her car and embraced the turkey around its neck until her companion arrived to help her put it in the car. A man came up and tried to take the turkey away from its new owner but Helen would not submit, and soon the proper help came.

CURTAINS REWORKED

The green curtains that have been used in Voorhees Chapel these many years underwent a complete transformation in the College Maid Shop this past week and will be ready for initial service in the play Monday night. The curtains were cleaned with gasoline, and completely remade. The two ceiling drops which were designed will be the first ever used here. Plain valances were made for the side curtains and the old valance was trimmed with gold fringe. Large gold letters M. C. were cut for each side.

The curtain s will be far less trouble to manage than the old ones and they will provide more space on the platform.

COLLEGE MAIDS BUSY

The College Maid Shop has been a very busy place the past few weeks filling several rather large orders. One of the largest was from Church and Dwight, makers of Arm and Hammer Soda. This order has just been delivered.

The new vestments of the Vesper Choir, which were made by the Shop, made such an impression on the visiting representative of Cumberland College during the inauguration that, immediately upon his return to his school, he sent in an order for robes for the choir at that school. The vestments were made and shipped within two days of the receipt of the order.

Practice House Prepares For Student Occupation

POPULAR SENIOR HURT IN FALL

Junius Allison, popular member of the senior class, suffered painful injuries Friday afternoon when he fell on the sloping pavement leading to the west approach of the Pistol Creek bridge.

The fall caused a slight dislocation of the verebrae from which he was rendered unconscious for several minutes. The most serious injury however was to his right knee which made necessary the services of a physician.

Mr. Allison was able to move about today on crutches and expects to be back in good condition within a few days.

M. A. Lambdin (at Proffitt's): I want to get a sweat shirt for gym.

Clerk: All right, what size does he wear?

The acquisition of a new Westinghouse Electric range and a new electric automatic heater for the kitchen of the practice house has been the occasion for great rejoicing among the home economics seniors who are to live there this year. A radio in the living room is also a decided attraction, but the girls have been very busy during the past weeks redecorating and renovating the house furnishings in general.

The furniture in the living room has been re-upholstered by Virginia Crider, Ruby Hitch, and Georga Burke. The re-painting of the kitchen and bathroom furniture, the mending, laundering and hanging of curtains, as well as some re-varnishing and re-finishing of the lacquer furniture has kept the girls working hard. Everything will be fresh, spick and span by Monday, November 23, when Helen Burdette and Mabel Hembree will move in for their three weeks stay.

UNITED WE STAND

Almost the first question an alumnus of more than five years will ask the student of Maryville is "To what literary society do you belong?"

Up until the last few years the societies on the Hill were the most important student organizations of the college. Keen rivalry was manifested between the groups. Programs were eagerly compared and discussed. To hold an office in one of these organizations was a signal honor. A large attendance at every meeting was assured and to be on the program was the ambition of nearly every student.

Today the societies have very nearly passed into oblivion relative to the important place that they once held. Just why this is no one seems prepared to say. But that this condition is deplorable and should be remedied at once is almost universally agreed.

Many plans have been suggested for the reinstatement of popularity of the societies but the best yet submitted seems to be the combination of the brother and sister societies. Attendance will be increased, a greater supply of talent will be realized and an extra period of social contact will be created.

As conditions exist now, those on the program (the boys particularly), make their preparation in a half-hearted manner and "serve up" their gems of creation more from a sense of duty than from pleasure, whereas, should a combination be made, the very presence of a mixed group would tend to arouse and maintain interest.

There may be difficulties to be overcome before this plan could be put into successful operation but they are in no wise insurmountable. Why not have two live, wide-awake and interesting societies in the place of the four present ones of questionable vitality

THE NEW DIPLOMACY

That the "inevitability of war" may after all prove only a myth is beginning to dawn on the minds of the thinkers of the world. Such a revolutionary idea is as yet almost too tremendous in scope to arouse the hopes of the world, but great numbers are being added to the exponents of this ideal daily. When contemplating the possibilities of the success for world peace in the light of the new international philosophy the arguments against its realization sink farther and farther down the scale of importance.

This rising international philosophy, so aptly named the "new diplomacy" by Signor Grandi speaking to the American press in Washington last Tuesday, is a spirit of informal discussion of international problems of the world by the leaders of the notions. The frequency of these "discussions" in recent months is an accurate index of a changing national policy of the nations. Beginning with the visit of Prime Minister MacDonald to the White House, followed in rapid succession by the arrival of Premier Laval of France and Signor Grandi of Italy along with the diplomatic calls of Secretary Stimson to Berlin, Rome, Paris and London, a spirit of international political brotherhood and cooperation was born.

That this is the proper approach to the problem of world peace is almost unquestionable. War cannot exist between peoples when a feeling of personal relationship is present. Science has furnished the physical means of linking the nations into a great unity; it remains only for the thought of the world to adjust itself to the fact of national kinship. When this is realized world peace is an inevitable consequence. Strife and slaughter cannot exist where a consciousness of the ultimate unity and brotherhood of all races prevails.

THE LEAGUE'S TEST

Of all the machinations of man throughout the ages for the realization of world peace the present League of Nations has the brightest hopes. Couple with it the Kellog Peace Pact and the Nine Power Treaty and a plan is obtained which, theoretically at least, makes war almost an impossibility.

In the few years of its life it has never had to withstand the "test of practicality" until the materialization of the present Sino-Japanese disturbance. With Nippon adament in her demands that her Five Points be recognized by China and China, on her part, ready to send into battle two million men to retain what she calls her rights, the crucial test of the League is at hand. Within the next few days the success or the failure of the idea of arbitration of national disputes will be determined.

The only weapon in the hands of the League is that of economic and diplomatic boycott. Up to the present Japan has flauntingly defied the whole world to force her to respect her promises as a signer nation to the League. She has thrown down the gauntlet of war and dared any nation or combine of nations to block her march toward the culmination of her eighty year old plan for national unification and expansion.

Economically there may be some justice to the Tokyo policy but ethically there is none. A nation, supersaturated as Japan is with unemployed men and with an acute paucity of economic resources, can scarcely be blamed if it attempts to acquire the necessary territories from a source where these resources are not being developed to any extent at all, since natural resources are the common property of the world and if not utilized by the logical owners should be developed by another. But this does not give that nation license to override deliberately the desires of fellow nations to keep peace in the world, and with the most audacious impunity to plunge a half of the globe into another era of legalized murder.

The test is here and now. Will the foundations of mutual trust, being laid so rapidly the past twelve years, be substantial enough to uphold the skeleton framework of the League of Nations?

Ed Buchanan, whom everyone remembers as "Little Buck", has vacated his mother country in favor of a school teaching job in Japan. He left the United States last August. In the west he met up with difficulty in the first degree when he was forced to sign ninety dollars worth of travelers cheques. Buck's face, like all good faces do, got him by, and he managed to get back on his feet. He took his ocean trip on the U.S.S. Cleveland, helping to put the Cleveland press out on the way over. Buck, we might mention, is one of the very few men to make (————) in Maryville. He sends his sympathy to the freshmen and his best wishes for a successful year to the editor of the Echo.

Student Questions Truth Of "Baldwin Dwellers"

Joyce Kilmer would have said—
"I think that I shall never see
A work more dull than travesty."

This, however, is not Joyce Kilmer, nor is it travesty, so we feel obliged to submit. This treatise is for the express purpose of reproving a somewhat prejudiced conception of the qualities of Baldwin dwellers.

We are told that Baldwin girls are industrious; therefore they get up early. That is, they get up for breakfast. Does it seem more credible to believe that people get up to satisfy their hunger or that they rise from the pure joy of getting up and going to work? Faith, don't tell us that you ponder for a decision. We have yet to see a Baldwinite twiddling her thumbs while the rest of us eat.

We are told that the Baldwin lodgers retire at ten o'clock because they are sensible and sane minded. Now, that can't be. They go to bed as a last resort, after they have become too sleepy to do anything else.

"Early to bed and early to rise
Was made for those old fashioned guys
Who insisted that they economize.
Instead of using their precious eyes."

Ah, this is the age of glasses—spy glasses, nose glasses, water glasses. Sane minded? Sensible? Baldwin residents go to bed early—they get sleepy.

Finally, we are forced to give vent to an evident gutteral sound coming from goodness-knows-where concerning the individuality of our sisters in Baldwin. Would one be led to believe that from the appearance of Baldwin parlor on the night of an entertainment on the Hill? Individuality, according to Webster, means oneness. Baldwin girls are characterized by twoness.

There are those redeeming features that can not be ignored. Someone says Baldwin girls are not green, nor are they dignified. Yes, that is unquestionably true; but bear in mind that there is a minority of freshmen in Baldwin and a complete absence of upperclassmen. They are humble and studious. Granted. Freshmen haven't learned to study, sophomores have, while juniors and seniors have learned how to survive with the avoidance of such. Their humbleness is likewise accounted for in view of the fact that they are too young to be supercilious (not super silly).

Baldwinites will continue to economize, get up early, act industrious, etc., but we can't have them fooling the rest of us about the motives in doing these things.

The atmosphere of Carnegie Hall is unusually serene and is not subject to whirlwinds. Speaking of whirlwinds reminds of several room stackings, the results of which resembled the results of very big whirlwinds—of cyclones, in fact. Mike Testa felt that the room stacking business had come to a climax when he discovered that someone had taken his mattress out for a shower. The mattress was very absorbent.

The arrows of Cupid are being fired at random in its midst. To keep serious complications from arising on account of the arrows, a petition was recently drawn up requesting certain fellows to read Article 55, Section 4, of Rules of Attendance, Scholarship, and Conduct.

Came the Monday night concert, bringing the often-repeated scene. At the last minute, fellows scrambled into their best clothes, praying not to be late on their quest to Pearsons, or Baldwin, or Memorial.

OBSERVATIONS

Each time "Chevrolet" is mentioned, we think of the large number of Chevrolets in the faculty department. Then we run across Dr. Hunter's car which often calls to mind on incident of recent years which stamps Dr. Hunter as an out and out absent minded professor. One day he had difficulty in getting his car started. Believing that he could keep warmer walking anyway, he took that method of returning home, leaving the automobile on the campus. The part that we're most interested in deals with the next morning when Dr. Hunter, going to the garage and finding his car not there, rushed to the house to report the theft to his wife, and even attempted to make the report general. His wife told him how it all was, however, and the disturbance was quelled without any further embarrassment.

College recreation, like everything else, goes in cycles, it seems. Fifty years ago in Maryville the popular pastime was for all students to gather in Baldwin parlors where games of all sorts were played. This form of recreation was carried on for an extended number of years, at the end of which time something more "collegiate" was sought for. Following much speculation and deliberation the "new" game, "snap", was decided upon to displace the old plan of recreation in Baldwin. Now, in the twentieth century we find that snap is too antiquated, so

Eagles To Be In Best Conditon Of Year For Thanksgiving Tilt With Scots, Eagle Scribe Says

Carson-Newman Team Working Daily To Get Ready For Biggest Game

Special to the Echo

Jefferson City. The Fighting Eagles have been going through an extensive training schedule this week and they expect to be "ready" when they meet the Highlanders on Thanksgiving day, in the battle for the Smoky Mountain Championship. Maryville and Carson-Newman have shown themselves to undoubtedly be the outstanding elevens in the Conference and there will be a record crowd of Carson-Newmanites and Jeffersonians coming to Maryville to see a clean, but hard-fought contest. The spirit of the Fighting Eagles is an indominable one, but they mean to play fairly and win squarely, if perchance the fates are kind.

The Highlander-Eagle affair is a time honored occasion both for the followers of the Orange and Garnet and the Orange and Blue, and the Eagle followers are looking forward with much anticipation to the game of games. It is a known fact that the followers of the two clans have a high spirit of friendly rivalry and a host of the exponents of the Eagles will be on hand to cheer their team on, perhaps to victory, perhaps to defeat, who knows? The Eagles will be out to do their best and no alibi could be offered ex-

Football players may come and go but in my humble opinion, it will be many, many years before another football player who is Lea Callaway's equal, both as an athlete and a man, will come to Maryville College. And never before have I known an athlete at Maryville whose going out from the college has been felt as deeply among the college students as is the departure of Lea Captains that has ever led a Maryville College football team. If an all southern college football team were being chosen, there is not the slightest doubt in my mind that the Pride of Maryville would be placed on the first team. He is the best college football player I have ever had the privilege of seeing in action. I bar no one.

ALL-SOUTHERN HALF?

Capt. Calloway

One of the queerest incidents that I have ever seen happen at a football game occurred last Friday night while the Highlanders were playing Lenoir-Rhyne. Just whether it was pre-arranged and intended for humor or whether it was merely a coincidence would be hard to say. Here's what happened: a colored orchestra was scheduled to play at a dance after the game was over and they came out to the field and played during the game as a means of advertisement. During the course of the game, one of the Lenoir-Rhyne players was hurt and while the trainer and coach were working fervently in an effort to "bring him to", the colored band played "Please Don't Talk About Me When I'm Gone". Application of smelling salts and ether brought the incapacitated member around and as he got to his feet to resume play, the orchestra struck up the tune of "Just One More Chance".

Songs For The Unsung

(Note: This is the first of a series of articles on reserve players who have not been in the headlines this year but who have played a very important part in the making of one of the best football teams that Maryville College has ever produced.)

Bill Peacock. Peacock has been out for football for four years and during this time he has never been known to quit working. He is on the field every day, working hard, furnishing opposition for the varsity players and after all, a team is no stronger than its reserves. Bill's size handicaps him considerably in college football but he has refused to let his lack of stature keep him from trying out for the team and the result is that he has developed enough to play in several games. He is valuable enough to be taken on the trips and whether his role is that of general handy man or quarterback, he always does it right.

Lou Blair. Lou was forced to give up footall about the middle of the season due to an injury to his side but he did it only when he was advised to do so by his physician. He has been out for football for three years and during that time has reported for practice just as regularly as any man on the squad. He was out for a tackle position and very few people realize how much punishment a reserve lineman is forced to take. Playing against such men as Overly, Carper, Tolliver, and the rest, he is right in the path of the power of the line attack. These men have to give their best in scrimmage and the backs are called upon to hit the line just as hard as if they were playing a strong conference foe. It has been Lou's task for the past three years to battle against the opposition of husky linemen and stop the charge of hard driving backs.

Merritt Slawson. Slawson came here from Florida last year and although he weighed only 145 pounds, reported for line duty. He scrimmaged at tackle, guard and end last year and whatever position he was called upon to play, he filled it with all of the fight that his 145 pounds could muster. He proved to be a hard man to run a play around and he made the team a very valuable reserve wingman. His fighting spirit brought great improvement and this year he is making the trips. Slawson's greatest ambition is to earn a letter before he graduates and here's hoping that he does it.

Second Idiot: Oh, about ten years older.

Football Season To Be Brought To Dramatic Close As Two Good Teams Battle For Championship

Frosh Win Football Title In Fast Game

Sophomores Are Defeated By Narrow Margin

The prestige of the freshman class rose to a new high level Monday when their football team defeated the sophomores by the narrow margin of one touchdown. This game brought to a close the interclass football schedule and awarded the 1931 championship to the freshman team. The new champs had to play "heads up" football to win this title. Although their goal line has never been crossed, both of their games were hotly contested from start to finish.

In order to qualify for the playoff, the freshmen first had the difficult task of beating the juniors. The winning stroke of the game came when it was least expected. On the fourth down and with twenty-five yards to go, Nee, star quarterback of the freshman team, stepped back and threw a long pass over the goal line to Bunch. Bradshaw's punting kept the freshmen from scoring more than one touchdown and the contest ended in a 6 to 0 victory for the freshmen.

The game with the sophomores was won in a somewhat similar manner. Jess, a big cog in the freshman wheel, faked an end run and then threw a pass to Jack Nee, who ran 43 yards for a touchdown. The punting of Jess was one of the high-lights of the game and kept the sophomores on the defensive most of the time. Narcisso, Vick, and Beale were constant threats for the losers. The chances of the sophomores were weakened considerably because of the absence of Young, stellar end.

Joe Woodard's Kicking Will Be Big Asset To Scots; Capt. Lea's Last Game

Two of the best college football teams in the Southland, each desiring above all else on this earth a victory over the other, each playing for the right to be called undisputed champions of the Smoky Mountain Conference, and better yet, each having a bitter feeling of hatred toward the other, at least on the field, will meet Thanksgiving Day. No, this is not the theme for a new college football picture but it is really what is about to come to pass in the near future.

WATCH HIM KICK 'EM

Joe Woodard

Maryville College has one of the best small-college football teams in the South. Now that we have agreed on that, let's consider our opponents' side of the story. Maryville and Milligan deadlocked, each going scoreless and the Fighting Eagles played to the same end with the same team. They are even in that respect. Our Scots defeated L.

THE WEBB STUDIO

BARNWARMING WILL END THANKSGIVING HOLIDAY PROGRAM

Thanksgiving Day on the Hill will come to a close with the annual barnwarming which will be held in the Alumni Gymnasium at 7:30 p. m.

The program will consist of four stunts by the literary societies and a stunt each by the Y. W. C. A. and the Y. M. C. A., an exhibition by the Girls' Tumbling Team, a group of songs by the Bowles-Briggs-Culver-Wallace quartette, and a stunt featuring Wesley Culver. Dr. Lloyd will be the guest speaker of the evening. Old students will remember that the president made his debut at this occasion last year. Iva Babcock and Larry Somers are general chairmen of the barnwarming and have assisting them, Virginia Crider, who is in charge of refreshments, and Dorothea Thomsen who has charge of decorating the "Barn".

A charge of ten cents is asked of each person attending the program to help defray the cost of the necessary refreshments.

With the Christmas Holidays less than a month away, Baldwinites are getting hilarious. Or else how can we explain the fact that several yo-yos have appeared out of nowhere although it is rumored that such atrocities are being reintroduced into Knoxville.

A cat is a quadruped, the legs, as usual, being at the four corners.

CARSON-NEWMAN GAME

M. U. by a score of 25 to 0 but those pesky Eagles scratched their way to a 38 to 0 win over the same. That's one for the Eagles.

Maryville held the University of Tennessee's varsity team to a 33 to 0 score while the Tennessee regulars took a day off and let their little brothers spank those naughty Eagles by a 32 to 0. But wait, Maryville does not go to the head of the class yet. We must consider the fact that the Highlanders played the Vols in their first game of the year and they were by no means organized. They were a fumbling, loafing and indifferent bunch of ball players while the reserves, when they got their big chance against Carson-Newman, tried with all they had to make a creditable showing. Well, the Eagles are still leading the class.

But just a minute, Coach Frosty, you can't go to the head of the class yet. Mr. Honaker has an ace in the hole. In fact he has several aces that are going to run your pet Eagles into a hole. This particular ace is one Mr. Callaway, of the Callaway Street Callaways, and aces are going to be wild in this game. Mr. Honaker will turn loose eleven aces, the pick of his hand, and they can catch anything that Coach Frosty Holt plays and ain't it a fact that aces are hard to stop?

Seriously, the Battle of Turkey Day should be by far the greatest football game that has ever been played on this field. The Eagles undoubtedly and undeniably have one of their greatest teams since the days of Haas, Hutchens, Abbott, Taylor, Bebb, Higgins, Mudford, Holt and numberless other stars that they have boasted in days gone by. They have hung up a record this year that slightly overshadows Maryville's due to the fact that our boys have three tie games marked against them.

Both schools are coming right out in the open and giving the facts about their teams. The time honored custom of sending out pitiful tales of woe concerning the deplorable physical condition of Johnny Whizzledezzer or Oswald Pafninthe-neck, has been done away with and the losing team will offer no alibis for their downfall but rather take off their hats and salute the winner as undisputed Champions of the Conference.

CLUB ESPANOL

The Club Espanol held its first meeting this year on Thursday night, November 12th. The program consisted of the reading of the Lord's Prayer and the singing of "America" in Spanish by the entire club; a short inaugural address by the president, Bob Overly; a reading by Lucy Ann Vorhees, and "La Espanola" sung by Bob Wallace who was dressed in Spanish costume.

For the benefit of new students interested in the club the following regulations are announced: Second year and advanced students of Spanish are eligible to membership in the club if they are doing B work in the languge. During the first semester of the second year of Spanish, students are called pledge members. They do not have to pay dues, and if they have fulfilled the requirements of attendance at meetings and participation in programs become full fledged members the second semester.

The club looks forward to a large membership and a year of good programs.

"The literary world numbers among its professional musicians Owen Wister, Upton Sinclair, Rupert Hughes, John Erskine, and the famous publisher Cyrus Curtis, whose daughter, Mrs. Edward Bok, has given twelve million dollars to the cause of musical education in America."

"Considering it from the standpoint of the listener, what does music do?"

"Well, is there any channel through which the best in man can more effectively be reached? His truest, highest self responds to the message which comes through the channel of music. He may not understand, but he does feel the spiritual significance and uplift, the appeal to his imagination and love of the beautiful.

"The increasing demand for music in the regular college curriculum is no doubt due in part to the recognition of the mental stimulus derived from the study of it, but more and more there is a growing recognition of music as a branch necessary in the curriculum for development of aesthetic taste, love of beauty, and for fostering and encouraging the spiritual in men. Nothing in the entire curriculum can effectively reach beyond facts and establish spiritual contacts in the way that music does."

cept, the winner has the best team.

The two starting elevens that will face each other will be almost equally matched in poundage, both backfields averaging around 165 pounds. The Eagles' line, from end to end, will average between 170 and 175 pounds, varying slightly as to the exact starting lineup.

A number of minor injuries were suffered by the Eagles in their tilt with the L.M.U. Railsplitters, but most of these hurts are a thing of the past and Coach "Frosty" Holt believes his team will be in as good a shape as it has been any time this season when the Turkey day clash arrives.

The Eagles' starting eleven is a bit uncertain, but herewith are the best bets: Joe Sewell and Carl Hutchins, ends; Bill Rogers and Roy Hendley, tackles; John Childs and Jim Reynolds, guards; "Poopy" Davis, center; Johnny Coran, quarterback; Clyde Childrers, full back; Ed Shabel and Ben Clark, halves. Bill Green at end and "Slim" Layman at half have excellent chances to receive the bids over Hutchins and Clark.

IS DEBATING WORTH YOUR TIME

The following letter is one of a series on the value of debating to the college students written by members of past varsity debate teams. —Editor

It might as well be admitted in the first place that real debating means WORK, but "what a whale of a difference an incentive makes!" After the work is over and one has had his opportunity on the platform, there's no joy in the world like that of hearing those judges come across with the votes in favor of one's team. And then it is well, while in college, for one to pursue some steadfast aim in realms of thought not necessarily included in the curriculum. Moonshining may serve this purpose, of course, but the benefits of debating will doubtless have more material value. Personally, I tried to get some of both kinds. This is possible, but the percentage of won debates usually suffers thereby. Anyway it meant more to me than I can tell just to be associated with a group who were eager to learn about men and affairs, and intent upon putting learning to use in action. The trips away, the good fellowship, the fun, the work, the smiles of friendly co-eds at rival schools, the stings of defeat, the joys of victory, all added the spice of life to four years in college. I would hate not to have been on the debate squad.

J. STUART JAMES

If you want to hear some real masterpieces in the way of yarns, just catch Coach Honaker in one of his frequent yarn spinning moods. Here's one he told on the way to Milligan: Maryville was playing one of her conference opponents several years ago and reports had come to Maryville that this team was playing men who did not meet the elegibility requirements of the conference. Coach Honaker and some of the other Maryville officials met with the men in control of the opposing college and were discussing the matter. Coach Honaker referred to a certain man whom he had heard had played at another college the preceding year. One of the visiting moguls insured the Maryville mentor that the player in question was a brother to the one who was then playing on his team. Coach Honaker immediately produced a letter from the other college which stated the man's name in full and much to the surprise of his adversaries, the name corresponded exactly with the name of the man on the team that the Highlanders were about to play. "That's quite a coincidence", replied one of the visiting officials, "I don't know as I have ever heard of two brothers having exactly the same name before."

I ran across a story in the Nashville Banner last week on the game between the freshman teams of Tennessee and Vandy, which was signed "By Bob West". I have found out that the writer was none other than our own Bob West, who was in school here last year. Bob is in school at Cumberland University, where he is working on a law degree and is on the Nashville Banner staff. He was a member of the Highland Echo staff last year and his many friends here will be very glad to learn of his success.

OBSERVATIONS

Milk For Sale
Pep Songs
Yo-Yo's Again?
Saturday Studies

Counting up for the fortieth time this semester, we discover, much to our surprise that there are ten more school days until Christmas. Now we feel the need of a five day week again. This time last year under the five day schedule there were only eight school days until Christmas.

One night last week, when general turmoil prevailed on the campus in anticipation of the Carson-Newman victory, several of the fellows were attempting to drive the cows into the dormitories. It all seemed like innocent play until the next morning when a sign appeared on the bulletin board of Carnegie advertising "Fresh Milk for sale in Room 226".

One day not long ago it was a little too damp for Dr. Lloyd to get his customary exercise in the form of tennis, so he devoted that period of time to playing football with the scrubs of the football team. He felt the boys needed a little roughing up. He showed the boys that Albie Booth hasn't a thing on some of the old timers when it comes to flinging passes. As a veteran he feels that he may not retain quite all of his former speed, but the brains that make up a good quarterback are still there.

The orientation program was resumed last week. It took quite some time to put across to some of the freshmen the idea that we have only thirty issues of the Echo in a year, necessiating, therefore, an occasional week when we don't have a paper. It looked for a time as though the freshmen were going to join en masse and demand an understanding from the editor.

It might be hoped that with the passing of a football season, there might also be a passing of some of our loyalty songs and pep songs. For a time, anyone knew what the yell-leader meant when he aid "the Old Pep Song", or "the New Pep Song", but toward the last of the year the yell-leader had to start it off before we could follow successfully. Incidentally, it might be well if we could all forget some of the distinctly high-schoolish (if you could say that) yells that have been in use this year.

We have heard that the commonwealth is arising to the call of duty and cooperating in an attempt to bring about an end to the economic depression. We have one particular evidence of such truth and feel that it should as a project do great

PI KAPPA DELTA TRY-OUTS TODAY

Tryouts for the varsity teams for both men and women were scheduled to be held today. Eight men and six women debaters were to be chosen. The tryouts were scheduled to begin at 12:40 and to continue until 5:30. All would-be debaters have been working particularly hard this year for competition is strong and membership to Pi Kappa Delta means the possibility of a trip for one member of each team to the National Convention to be held in the spring at Tulsa, Oklahoma. Judges for the tryouts are Dr. McMurray, Dr. Knapp, and Dr. Hunter.

McMURRAY, COACH TO ATTEND ANNUAL CONFERENCE MEET

Football Schedule For 1932 May Be Completed At Jefferson City

Coach Honaker and Dr. McMurray will leave here Monday morning for Jefferson City, where they will attend the annual meeting of the Smoky Mountain Conference. The games for next season will be decided on and Coach Honaker expects to have announcement concerning next year's football schedule when he returns. The coaches of all of the teams in the conference attend this meeting and it is here that the all-conference team is selected.

Coach Honaker will have a number of men to recommend for all-conference honors. Captain Lea Calloway is a dead cinch to land a berth for the third consecutive year and Cliff Overly can hardly be kept off. He has been placed on the team for the past three seasons. Easy White, one of the finest ends that has flanked the Highlanders in many seasons, will come in for considerable consideration, and Millard Tolliver and Martin Gillespie are also outstanding.

Tolliver's work this year has been one of the high lights of the Maryville teams defense and Gillespie is without a peer as a defensive full back in the conference. He is not a flashy ball carrier although he seldom fails to produce yardage when the oval is slipped to him. He is a fine blocker and has made a practice of getting two thirds of the team's tackles this year.

Coach Honaker did not have any definite announcements to make about next year's schedule but he intimated that Catawba College, of North Carolina, might take the place of Lenoir Rhyne next year. Catawba defeated Lenoir Rhyne this year by a score of 26 to 6 and the addition of this team would make the sledding much tougher next year.

Arline Miller, 20, of Los Angeles is one of the nation's few women transport pilots, the highest rating.

ALPHA SIGMA SEES NEED OF DRASTIC SOCIETY REFORMS

Believes Organizations Not Functioning As Intended Originally

Possible changes in the "programs and general functions of societies to adapt them more to the interests of students" were considered at an open forum discussion held by Alpha Sigma literary society last Saturday night.

According to Reno Smith, president of the society, the belief of most members was that the societies were "not carrying out the functions upon which they were founded; namely, the promotion of training in literature, oratory, and debate."

The explanation given is that, "since the college has its debating teams and oratorical contests, etc., there is not such an interest in literary work in the societies."

Alpha Sigma appointed a committee to discuss the matter with a like group from Athenian literary society. As yet, the committees have not met.

SECOND MIDWINTER MONDAY DEC. 14

Bainonians To Present Tudor Romance In Great Play

The Bainonian Literary Society will present the second midwinter of the current season on Monday, December 14.

The play, "When Knighthood was in Flower" is an adaptation from the novel of the same name. It is a rather difficult production of the costuming and staging but the formulated plans are already being put into effect by the stage manager, Marjorie Jones. She has some unusual ideas concerning stage settings which, if put into use, will be something new on the Maryville stage, at least, within recent years.

This romance of the Tudors was effectively produced on the screen several years ago and has always been a popular play with those who are acquainted with it. Betty Wilbar as Mary Tudor, and George Osborne as Charles Brandon have the leading roles. They are ably assisted by Lois Wallace, Bob Stevenson, Harry Wood, Louise Avery, and Arthur Courtenay. The cast of characters, all of which are not mentioned here, is unusually large.

Georga Burk as business manager has planned a thorough campaign of advertising and it is hoped through these methods, that the play will be rewarded by a large attendance.

Mrs. West is directing the play and her abilities as a play director have been successfully proved through her years of service at Maryville. The admission price will be the customary thirty-five cents.

She: I don't like the clothes you are wearing.

He: I'm sorry. They're the best my roomie can afford.

PRESIDENT GOES TO ANNUAL MEET OF COLLEGE HEADS

Association Is Accrediting Agency For Southern Colleges

Dr. Lloyd left Maryville last Wednesday morning for Montgomery, Alabama to attend the annual meeting of the Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges of the Southern States. The meetings were held on last Thursday and Friday. Last year, at the regular meeting of the Association, Dr. Hunter and Dr. Lloyd both attended.

The association is an accrediting agency for schools and colleges of this part of the United States and it requires that all of the colleges come up to certain standards to become members. Those attending the meeting will be representatives of the schools that belong and representatives from schools wishing to be taken in or reinstated. Maryville has been a member of this association, which means ranking as a class A college, since 1922.

FACULTY SERVED UNUSUAL DINNER

Yule Tide Dishes Of Many Nations On Menu

Christmas foods from more than a dozen different countries were eaten at the Faculty Club dinner, Tuesday evening. Miss Gertrude E. Meiselwitz, acting professor of Home Economics, read a paper based on the origin of Christmas, going back to the sun gods. Dr. Horace E. Orr presided.

Miss Meiselwitz discussed how Christmas became a Christian holiday; how Christmas customs left over from pagan days have become united with Christian ideas. The climax of her paper was the dinner.

Some of the foreign foods on the table were beef soup with farina dumplings (German); caviare crackers (Norwegian); frikadeller (Danish); macaroni croquettes (Italian); pea custard with choy noodles (Chinese); cole slaw (Dutch method of preparation); tomato preserves (Cuban); mint jelly (Welsh); raspberry jelly (Canadian); ripe olives (Spanish); cornmeal biscuits (Creole); French ice cream; dark fruit cake (English); white fruit cake (French); vienna coffee (Austrian); wassail bowl (English); pfefferneuse (German); and stuffed dates (Persian).

We're through, beginning now, wisecracking on these freshmen. We have reason to be. A sophomore came in the library the other day and insisted that it was quite proper, fitting, and desirable on her part, for her to take a book for two weeks on a blue slip. Considering everything, that outdoes the prize freshman boner by at least three lengths.

ENGLISH DEP'T. MODIFIES RULING

The English Department has decided to modify its prescription of courses for the major in English by omitting the requirement of Advanced Composition, English 20. This will not modify the total number of hours required for the major, but will permit six hours of elective work above prescribed courses, instead of three hours as at present.

This modification is effective immediately. The Advanced Composition course will be offered next semester and is open to juniors and seniors. It will not be given in 1932-1933, but will be in 1934-1935, and so alternately.

MORE WOMEM ENTER INDUSTRY YEARLY SAYS PROF. KIGER

Ease of Adaptibility To New Conditions Aid In Business World

The ability of woman to find more congenial places among the world's workers is attributed to three reasons by John H. Kiger, professor of Bible at Maryville College.

"The first is the lower pay given to women; the second is the higher degree of fitness in women; and the third is the accidental fitness for women of many employments which open in the forward march of events.

"A few days ago, a department head at Bryn Mawr declared that the lower pay was a regrettable fact which should be corrected, and also the relative fitness of women cannot be easily settled to everybody's satisfaction."

Prof. Kiger believes that of the many new vocations now open to women, many of them have been created by the women themselves.

"During the last five or six years I am almost certain that the percentage of women in business and public clerical positions has advanced substantially, especially in the responsible positions in mercantile establishments.

"Female doctors and lawyers are no longer exceptional, and the list of religious sects that ordain women ministers is growing. I have even noted a number of university women in regular agriculture courses. They frequently take training in surveying, which is useful in such positions as register of deeds, or any work in which deeds must be checked intelligently. The same knowledge is helpful in teaching practical mathematics.

"Recently, an eastern periodical reported women's entrance into proof-reading, until now almost monopolized by men.

"It seems to me," said Prof. Kiger, "that, in recent years, woman has notably developed the tendency to find and hold remunera-

ATHENIAN PRESENTS CLASSICAL COMEDY NEXT TUESDAY NIGHT

Repass, Culver Carry Leads In First Mid-Winter of Present Season

SOCIETY HOLDS CUP

Goldsmith's Great Play Still Popular With American Theatre Audiences

Athenian Literary Society, winner of the cup for the best Mid-Winter of last season, will present Oliver Goldsmith's classical comedy, "She Stoops to Conquer", at Voohees Chapel Monday evening at eight o'clock.

The play is a revival, having been written in the 18th century. Lord Macaulay, writing in the 19th century, described the play as "an incomparable farce" and commends it for its "rich drollery". The 20th century revival promises to be just as amusing to a modern audience as the original production was to the original audience.

In the story, Marlowe and Hastings lose their way while journeying through the country, and are directed to the Hardcastles, as an inn, by Tony Lumpkin. While here they find themselves in many unusual and comic situations.

Marlowe is naturally bashful in the presence of all women except barmaids, who seem to be his especial weakness. In their presence he regains all that masculine dignity and boldness so conspicuously absent when in the company of women of his own station in life.

He finally becomes so interested in Miss Hardcastle, whom he thinks the tavern bar-maid, that it is only his fear of lowering his own station that prevents his marrying her. The climax comes when his great mistake is discovered.

Some of the most experienced actors on the hill will appear in the play. Wesley Cuver will have the male lead, Young Marlowe. Lou Repass will play Miss Hardcastle, whom Marlowe woos. Robert Leach, as Tony Lumpkin, will furnish much of the "rich drollery", Lucy Ann Voorhees and Reeder Carson, as Mr. and Mrs. Hardcastle, will be his able assistants.

Other members of the cast are: Miss Neville, Bernice McNutt; First Fellow, Thomas Davis; Second Fellow, Walter Cloud; Third Fellow, John Phay; Stingo, George Stanley; Hastings, Earl Crawford; Diggory, Donald Buchanan; Roger Thomas Davis; Third Servant, John Phay; Dolly, Margaret Smith; Jeremy, Arthur Lazell; Sir Charles Marlowe, Junius Allison.

Jack Nee—Say Joe. can you tell me why there are fewer railroad accidents than automobile accidents?

Joe Woodard—Well, perhaps not exactly, but I think it is because the engineer isn't always hugging the fireman.

Vesper Choir Will Present Annual Christmas Cantata

On Sunday evening, December 13, at six fifty, the annual Christmas Cantata will be presented in Voorhees Chapel. For the past two months the choir has been preparing what promises to be a very unusual program.

The first part of the program will consist of carols and noels from various countries. Some of them date as far back as the year sixteen seventy, which makes them unusually new to us. The singing of carols, as of all folk music, is essentially, a unison performance, but choir, to secure a higher artistic production, has arranged to sing them in four-part harmony. This year the choir will be aided by violins, harmonicas, a cello and the organ.

The second part of the program will consist of excerpts from the Christmas Cantata, "The Manger and Star", by Stults.

The public is asked to be seated on time, as there will be a ten minute organ prelude.

KNIGHTHOOD IS STILL IN FLOWER

A familiar figure on the campus especially in the library, is the worthy senior class president, Mr. George Osborne. Every morning he carries with him through that room full of chairs, tables, people, books, and silence, a pole by means of which he lets fresh air and sunlight in on the patient patients who are trying to digest the knowledge given in huge doses by the doctors of philosophy, English, modern languages, and history. On this particular morning Sir George carried the pole as if he were on his way to a tournament where jousts and bouts are in order. Pat Henry exclaimed, "Ah, when knighthood was in flower." George seems to have effected a transfer of training from his role as head man in the Bainonian midwinter to apply to his duty as sergeat-at-arms in the library.

Freak Methods Of Marking Days Until Christmas Used

It is amazing how varied the means of showing anticipation can be. Were you to visit certain rooms in Baldwin and Memorial Halls, you would be amused by the "strings" of various objects which have been strung up on the walls on which to count the number of days till vacation. In one there is a family of paper dolls which shows a death rate of one a day; in another English walnut shells strung on ribbon are used for counters. One pair of roommates share an animal cracker from their hanging menagerie every morning, while others have such decorative reminders as toy baloons. We understand that each day a neighbor friend is allowed the privilege of bursting one of the "balloon days". Others allow their neighbors to take the counters home for souvenirs.

We hear that in Carnegie and Pearsons, such childish tricks have been outgrown and calendars are in use instead.

BAINONIAN HAS INSTALLATION

Last Saturday night was the occasion of the installation of the newly-elected Bainonian officers. They are:

Kitty Hodges, President
Lou Repass, Vice-President
Barbara Lyle, Secretary
Marjorie Gould, Laura Jean Worsizer, Program Secretaries
Lila Barr, Elizabeth Peterson, Poster Chairmen
Tess Frey, House Chairman
Eleanor Johnson, Sergeant-at-Arms
Dorothy Nethery, Editor

Each retiring officer presented her successor with an article representative of the office. The accompanying advice was also appreciated.

We are told Tiny Waters is growing a moustache on the installment plan—a little down each week.

A PLEA FOR DISTRIBUTION

Again we find ourselves in the midst of one of those periodic orgies of academic cramming. Midnight oil and frantic last minute reviews are familiar sights. Heated classical discussions by groups of students are the near-comic scenes that one views almost everywhere.

With all our advancement in educational methods the bogey of examination remains with us still. It seems a necessary evil. New types of examinations have appeared, but, camouflage them as you wish, an examination is still a very unpopular diversion. They're hard, they're troublesome, and to make them even less alluring they are only proximate, and frequently fail in the very thing attempted.

However, since examinations are, so far, the best method of measuring the knowledge absorption powers of students, we must bear them patiently and grin as if we liked them. But, even supposing we did actually like them, why must we take such enormous doses at certain limited times and enjoy a glorious vacation for the remainder of the time?

Perhaps it really is desirable to ascertain the retentive powers of an individual student in all lines at the same time but if a consideration of the feelings of this same student shows the hardships imposed on him at these periods of trial, could not some plan be devised to spread these examinations over a greater length of time? Why not let him recuperate, at least partially, from one before subjecing him to another? It is just possible that more satisfactory results would be obtained and that the knowledge in question would become a permanent possession rather than a mere temporary acquaintance.

Surely some plan for a more equitable distribution of these eras of woe could be devised by a little cooperation on the part of the department heads. The students would appreciate at least an attempt.

AN APPRECIATION

Again it happens that we are privileged to toss a few bouquets. This time our target is a group of Maryville men who have been both faithful to the school and successful beyond expectation—the Highlander Football Squad.

By dint of much personal discomfiture and personal sacrifice on their part, Maryville again wears the crown of Conference champions. Again we can expand our chests in pardonable pride and claim that we are the best of this section.

This was not won for us by a highly paid organization, but by the personal donation of time, energy and initiative of some thrifty individuals. It is no fun to turn one's back on pleasures for the privilege of cavorting about in the cold and mud clothed in a smelly uniform. When everyone else drops worry and work for a few hours in town, it's no easy thing to drag one's self to the football practice field to listen to the sharp-tongued harangues of coaches or to suffer innumerable bruises and "charley-horses" that are always present in every scrimmage.

But these men were not deterred from their purpose by the allurements of personal comforts and pleasures. Their eyes were on the championship for Maryville and they got it.

It is impossible to single out any group of players and say that here are the reasons for success. It was a cooperative victory and each man's part was an essential feature of the whole. Of course White, Callaway, Boretsky, West, Overly, Woodard and the others usually placed in the line-ups, deserve much credit, but their showing was possible only through the work of others on the field and bench. Cooper, Peacock, Slawson and others who did not stand out so prominently from the grand stand, deserve equal praise and commendation.

In short, each man on the squad played his own particular part, unselfishly and conscienciously, and the student body extends to each of them its thanks and appreciates their sacrifice in the interest of the college.

WHY NOT TIMELY TALKS?

The modern college student is being denounced frequently as having no interest in things outside proms, football, and gin. It is claimed that the average student is as ignorant of contemporary occurrence in the fields of politics, religion, and science as an inhabitant of Mars probably would be.

It is loudly blated that when responsibility eventually falls on his untutored shoulders the very strangeness of the situation will react unfavorably for civilization.

Perhaps there is some truth in this. But whose fault is it? Surely not the student, for he can hardly be expected to plan his life's curriculum at the "tender collegiate age". Is it not more logical that the colleges should provide this up-to-the-minute knowledge?

We know that when properly excited the college student can take over the responsibilities of the rule of his land, for this is amply proved by European conditions at the present time. But why must we wait until a great emergency has arisen before we begin the training of youth in things larger than the campus?

What does the average Maryville student know of the Sino-Japanese situation? What does the majority of collegians know of the present economic readjustment, or the changing views in religion or the newer conceptions of life and living furnished by science?

It is not impossible to place these subjects before the students in short but interesting talks by the faculty members and outsiders? We could profitably devote a few minutes of the chapel time to expositions and interpretations of the happenings in the world of today. Perhaps they would not be so uninteresting to the "flighty" students as might be believed. At least it would tend to produce a more cosmopolitan system of thought in the leaders of tomorrow.

MEN TO SING CAROLS

The men of the college will join in a service of Christmas Carols in Bartlett Hall tomorrow night after Vespers. The reading room will be appropriately arranged with a Christmas atmosphere. Besides carol singing by the group, there will be some special music consisting of a duet by Naomi Willingham and Ann Smartt, violin music by Pat Henry and Mildred Purviance, and musical saw numbers of Ed Keeler.

Our Family Christmas Cards are on display—Don't forget the folks at home.

Student Sends Startling Confession To Echo Office

Ever since the eventful meeting of the student body in chapel after chapel after the final football game the final football game my conscience has been troubling me to no small extent. The wonderful school spirit displayed by our student council president and football captain in the talks that they made before us has left me with little respect for myself. Ever since that day, I say, I have been fighting with myself as to whether to make the whole affair public or to go through the school year, deceiving the student council, the faculty and being bothered with a guilty conscience.

That this act was in every way disrespecful and uncalled for I am now convinced. For some reason or other, I am no longer able to look the students straight in the eye, I can't mix with them as I used to and, all in all, I am not in any sense enjoying my school work. My grades have suffered from my indifferent attitude. I have taken cuts when they were entirely unnecessary and the result is, I have all of the absences that I can take this semester. I am fully convinced, however, that after I make my confession public and when every one knows just what kind of a chump I am, I will feel better.

By my making this degrading act of mine known to everyone, I am hoping that my conscience will be relieved and that the students and faculty members will at least have a small bit of respect for me. At least I could have done worse and never made this confession but after the spirit of the student body got hold of me, I felt that it was the only manly thing for me to do. Just what the result of this whole thing will be I don't know but I am hoping that the faculty will not take any drastic steps against me for I am now convinced that the whole thing was not done in true school spirit but just in "over enthusiasm".

And now, with fond hopes of a light punishment and at least a partial restoration in the respect of the students, I make my confession, which has taken more will power than anything I have ever attempted: "I KILLED COCK ROBIN".

KEYHOLE KOMMENT

KEYHOLE KOMMENT

There comes a time in the life of every man, so the book runs, when he is privileged to attain one of the highest goals which he has ever anticipated. Of course, these goals may vary, as they usually do. But a goal achieved is a goal achieved, no matter whether it be to light a big cigar on the steps of Pearsons or to hear the breakfast bell ring and roll over, knowing that a breakfast of first quality will be sent up for consumption in bed as soon as you desire it. Be that as it may, we have at last come to the point where the attainment of one of our pet ambitions is in view: we are going to expound at length on the relative merits of Tom Cooper, Maryville's one and only hope for national honors in his field.

Tom has a thousand and thirteen distinctions on this Hill, but his best known one, probably, is his ability to concoct wierd expressions. He can compare any object to any other object in more diversified modes than any other person ever to set face to Pearsons beans. He is especially apt at likening anything happening to arise to some biped rightly belong in an aviary. Another aptitude essentially a Cooper copyright is his power to think of more places to go, and proposing to go there, than any wife who ever planned a summer vacation. We have had him propose trips to us in a period of half an hour varying in length from two blocks to nine hundred and sixty-one miles, and in climes from the North Pole to the Hottentot Islands. We almost took him up on his trip to the Hottentots, by the by. He has probably attended more Maryville football games than any other non-varsity man on the Hill. And, while we think about it, we do hear that he is fast approaching the acme of perfection in this art of moonshining. He will be among those present in the cap and gown train next June, barring accident, and we predict more cheers for ole Tom Cooper than for any other '31 alumnus. than for any other '32 alumnus.

S COLLEGIATE S ! W A P !

Things are settling down to the regular old hum-drum routine most everywhere else, so we are having a time of it getting any news. In fact, news is getting so scarce that we are fast beginning to believe that we are becoming victims of this Depression, about which people like to talk so much. With our natural nose for news (other people call it gossip), we have managed to run a few tid-bits to earth in spite of this handicap.

Morehead State Teachers College has a novelty, a uniquity, a name-it-yourself. It is nothing more nor less than a Dean of Men in the feminine gender. The male Dean of Men recently resigned and the new Dean was ushered in to take his place. She is expected, we understand, to end the rowdyism heretofore prevalent among the male students.

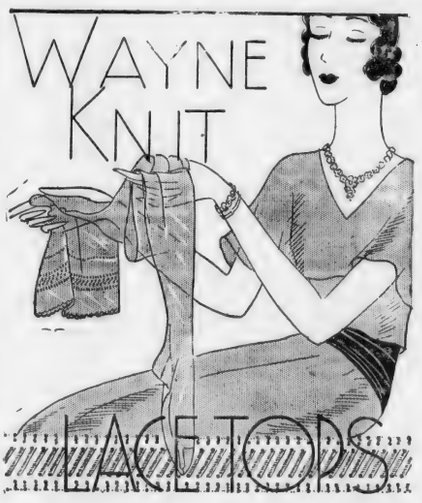
A recent ballot at the University of Kentucky showed that the majority of men there are in favor of dutch-treat-dates for co-eds and male collegians. Out of the hundred and fifty votes cast, one hundred and forty-six voted the 50-50 date, with three against it and one indifferent. Only seven co-eds voted, but those who did showed Scotch blood and voted against the measure, four to three. Maybe in this question lies the answer to distress signals sent up by various and sundry Maryvillians on the question of the depressing lack of dates this year.

See by the papers where the University of South Carolina co-eds don't get the varsity basketball they were after and which we mentioned herein a few weeks ago. As a reason, the powers that be gave the never-failing cry of depression. It is good for Herbie Hoover! ! Why not the U. of S. C. b

Y.M.C.A. TO MEET

According to information received from the Y.M.C.A. a membership meeting of all the men on the campus will be held next Friday evening at 6:15 o'clock, in the auditorium of Bartlett Hall.

This meeting is for the purpose of distributing membership cards and awakening interest in the local projects of the organization.



It is planned to invite speakers from the Y.M.C.A. of the University of Tennessee to aid in the program.

The prize name for the week is that sported by a freshman from the oil fields of Oklahoma. Her name is Kara Lee Coldiron. No one can remember her name, making it necessary to draft several other names by which she is called for short. These nicknames are, "Oklahoma", "Pocahontas", and "Ironsides". You'll see that any one of the three is appropriate.

Victory Over Carson-Newman Gives Highlanders Undisputed Smoky Mountain Conference Title

Scots Have Not Been Beaten By College Team This Season

Line Plays Heroic Ball in Stand Against Fighting Eagles of Carson-Newman College

CAPT. LEA IS THROUGH

Scots Are Conference Champs For Second Straight Year; Seven Men Lost

The close of another football season finds Maryville College's Highlanders again perched on top of the heap in the Smoky Mountain Conference. The Highlanders are admittedly and unquestionably champions of the Smoky Mountain Conference for the second straight year. The Highlanders won the title last season when they defeated everyone in the loop that they played by decisive scores.

In defeating Carson-Newman in the final game of the season, the Scots finished the season without a defeat by a college team registered against team. This is a feat that no Maryville team has accomplished in many years and this year's outfit has a just right to feel proud of themselves for their success. They played a ten game schedule, lost only to Tennessee and Kentucky, were tied by Howard, Milligan and the Appalachian Teachers and won over L. M. U., Wesleyan, Union, Lenoir Rhyne, and Carson-Newman.

The Maryville team looked better agaist the Eagles than they looked against any college opponent this year. They presented a defense that stopped the Eagle offense dead and with the redoubtable Lea Callaway leaing the way, opened up one of the most potential offenses that they have showed this year. Facts show that the Maryvillians outplayed the Eagles as badly as they have outplayed any team this year. They gained 211 yards from scrimmage on their running plays while the best that the Carson-Newman team could do was to pick up eight yards (count 'em) from scrimmage. The Highlanders gained 46 yards on forward passes and the Eagles gained but 32. The Highlanders registered 12 first downs while Carson-Newman made but three, two on penalties and one on a long forward pass.

Let's pause here for a moment and pay tribute to the men who composed Maryville's starting forward wall. They stopped Shipwreck Kelly dead in his tracks in the Kentucky game, they held the Wild Bull McEver at least for part of the time in the Tennessee game and they stopped the classiest set of running backs that they were called upon to play against when Howard came into town but the way they played against Carson-Newman deserves the greatest praise that can be given to football players.

For this impregnable line we owe a vote of thanks to Coach Robert C. Thrower. Coach Bob has worked under the greatest handicap this year that he has ever faced. Before the season started it looked rosy for him when Chandler, Don Wilson, Quinlan, Atkins, Tope and several others were expected back but when things went wrong and these men failed to show up, Coach Thrower was left with only six really experienced linemen. He shaped together seven men who proved to be the best defensive unit that has played here since Coach Bob himself was wearing a uniform.

And for the first time in a number of years, Maryville's offense has been just about as good as the defense. Maryville teams have always boasted good defensive teams but until this year they have never had a really powerful running team.

Songs For The Unsung

JOHN S. KIZER. Coming up from Friendsville High School last year, Kiser had never played football. He was coaxed to go out for football and last season he saw quite a bit of service as a half back. His speed and elusiveness made him a good reserve back but when the Maryville team was hit so hard by a depression in line material, Kiser was pressed into service as a guard. Coach Thrower started at the very beginning of line play and taught him all the fundamentals and before the season was very old he had developed into a valuable reserve lineman. He very seldom missed practice and worked faithfully all year. He made all of the trips. Kiser is also noted as an amateur boxer. He won the light-heavyweight championship of South two years ago.

JACK OVERLY. When Cliff Overly returned for the starting of the football season this year he broke into the family circle and reported for football with a kid brother along with him. Jack proved that he was made of the same stuff that Pee Wee had in him and he served the team all year as a reserve half back. Day after day he practiced place kicking and it seemed as if his chance to prove his ability in this line would never come. The team journeyed to Hickory, N. Car. for a game with Lenoir Rhyne and when the Maryville team scored the tieing touchdown, Jack got his chance to strut his stuff. He went in, tossed his head gear aside, and nonchantly added the extra point that could have easily won the ball game but for a 64 yard run later in the game by Steve Boretsky.

JIM HOLLOWAY. Holloway, like Kiser, had never played football before he came to Maryville. He reported for line duty and Coach Thrower immediately saw his possibilities as a football player and he saw quite a bit of service this year. He was used at tackle and guard and he looked good at either. Holloway is a favorite among the boys and he was the source of much merriment on the football trips. He has three years left to give as a football player and before many seasons have passed, he should be carrying on just like Overly, Tolliver and the rest did this year. Holloway is from Crab Orchard, or some such place and he is reported to be a basketball player, also. He may bear watching when the hardwood season starts.

DAVID PETERS. Pete came here this season with his heart set on making a football player and from the way that he looked, he is not doomed to any disappointment. He played quite a bit of football as a relief man for Carper and Overly, and ht always produced the goods. He was good enough to start one or two games and he was never taken out of a game because he was not holding down the position as he was expected to. Competing agains Overly and Carper, he had little chance of making the varsity team but he seems destined to hold down a tackle berth next year. He is a brother to Harmon Peters, who was in school here last year.

SPORT SLANTS

By BOB RULE

Looking through the exchanges the other day I ran upon the all-state selection in North Carolina colleges, and whose name should appear but Big Don Wilson's. Don will be remembered as one of the best tackles that Coaches Honaker and Thrower has ever tutored and it is no surprise to see him land a berth on any all star team. Don is playing at North Carolina State and reports from that school say that he is one of the classiest men in the line.

It seems as if I will never quit hearing these baseball yarns. My latest one came from Speedy Ruble, former Maryville athlete and at present a member of the Minneapolis baseball club, so I won't vouch for the truthfulness of the thing. Speedy says that Rube Waddell, former major league hurler, was pitching to a youngster in a game several seasons ago and the big awkward hurler breezed two fast ones by the young batter for called strikes. Waddell, throwing a tremendously fast ball, was very hard to hit and the batter became very tense as he was about to deliver the third one. Waddell wound up in his unorthodox manner, fell all over the mound and threw the ball to first base and the batter struck out.

This year has found more deaths from wounds received in football, occurring in the United States and Georgia than ever before. Up to Friday of this week, 32 athletes had lost their lives from accidents received in football games. Maryville College is indeed fortunate in having two men like Coaches Honaker and Thrower to train her athletes. I honestly believe that this pair can put a football team in better condition than any college Coaches in the South. Up until the final game, only one man received a serious injury and that was Tope. In the final game, Tolliver and Kalman received slightly sprained ankles but neither of them is seriously hurt.

Kalman, of course is on crutches and his injury is no doubt painful but he has no fears of his ankle injury hampering him any more after it heals. That is, he won't be crippled for life or anything like that. Tolliver has now discarded his crutches and is back on his old job. (Moonshining, of course.)

Five Lettermen Back To Form Nucleus For Basket Ball Team

Chances For Winning Team Look Bright; Return of Speedy Mann Will Help

SQUAD IS LARGE

Plenty of New Talent May Be Discovered In Frosh Ranks This Year

Maryville has finished a very successful season on the gridiron and is now turning her attention to basketball. Official practice starts next Monday. This means that a number of letter men who formerly spent their afternoons on the football field, will be seen dribbling and passing in the Bartlett gymasium. The varsity men who will start practice next week are Wilson, Mann, Woodard, Nee, and White, who is captain of this year's team.

The squad, this year, will feel greatly the loss of Captain Davis, whose passwork kept Maryville constantly on the offensive. Not only was he a great forward, but he inspired the other members of the team to play better basketball. Marypille will aso miss Cooper, the giant center that used to "get the tap" with such reguarity. It seems hard to fill the places of those who have gone before. However, there are about fit freshmen out for basketball this year who will give the varsity men some stiff competition.

It seems likely that Coach Honaker will start some such combination as this: White and Wilson forwards, Nee and Kiser guards, and Woodard center. Although he played only occasionally last year, Kiser

FRESHMAN SOCCER TEAM HUMILIATES MIGHTY SENIORS

Lorrainne Yennie, Soph Flash Wins Aerial Dart Title

The sophomores won the soccer championship when they defeated the seniors 6-2 in the final game of the tournament.

Before the last game the seniors had been victorious over the juniors and the freshmen had yielded their game to the sophs with a 7-3 score.

The game to decide the championship was fast and interesting. Lorraine Yennie, forward, and Sarah Dick, goalkeeper, played well for the sophs. Iva Babcock was outstanding in the senior defense.

Lorraine Yennie, sophomore, is champion of the aerial dart tournament. She defeated Mary Gamble in the deciding game by 15-11. Of the 72 entries, Kathryn Wayland and Kitty Hodges went to the semi-finals. They were defeated by Gamble and Yennie, respectively.

In the final game Yennie kept the lead, although Mary gave her a close victory. Lorraine received 50 points toward her sweater when she won this match.

The sophomores practiced on Friday afternoon, and the juniors and seniors will practice for the first time on Monday.

Coach Queener reports favorable prospects for a good basketball season.

things in accomplishing its end. That is the return of the Yo-Yo. Everyone knew all the time that something was lacking to make our economic program complete. However, when one sees a college student playing with a Yo-Yo he is forced to think that something else is lacking, and that's more serious for it involves the mentality of the student.

Staying by the economic system for only one more time we would like to argue by analogy this business of inequality. We know that the tendency for human inequality is present in every person, but no one can see that it should be manifested to the extent that Clarence Brachie used it in the Barnwarming. Bratchie has a holding way about him when he tumbles with the girls, but the noticeable thing about it all is the liberty which he takes to disregard the time he is using in this particular act.

Some of these ladies men take a back seat around vacation time. It seems nearly cruel to see some fellows back off to give way to THE man when he comes back. "Squelched" says in the smallest space the way we would try to describe our fellow students condition when "father comes marching home."

One is reminded of the old hymn "Mighty Army of the Young" when he goes to a football game at Maryville. The field is occupied by 22 men during the playing time and during the half it is occupied by about seven times 22 of the "Tom Sawyers" about town. They swarm the sidelines, the field, and the bleachers, creating a condition of unrest in general that is not conducive to the best enjoyment of a football game by the students, or by the people who pay their way in.

One might be inclined to think that Maryville had gone jewish should he observe the library on Saturday afternoon. It resembles the constitution in that it is represened by its conspicuous omissions. While the six day weiek does encourage Sunday studying, much of this could be avoided by some extended efiort to do something on Saturday which is a free day after the C period.

There are students who wonder how and why some of the jokes in "Campus Comment" can get in the paper. Well, here's the answer: We give the joke to either Bob Stevenson, or Jerry Smith. If after reading the joke, we hear either of them go "Hoo, Hoo, Hoo, Hoo," we think it's O. K. and pass the joke to you. That should explain almost any joke that you consider unfit for our paper.

MORE ABOUT BASKETBALL

displayed exceptional form and may see a good deal of action this season. Another good prospect is "Speedy" Mann, who was on the varsity several years ago. Thus, with a number of letter men back, Maryville should have one of the best teams in the history of the college. So far only one game has been scheduled, but the Maryville Cagers are sure to meet a number of good teams. The first game will be on December 16 when Coach Honaker's boys will meet a Knoxville independent team.

MORE ABOUT FOOTBALL

Coach Honaker took a few men who had had experience and in the very first game they showed signs of stepping with the best all year and that is just what they did. For the first time in years, Maryville's offense really bothered the stronger teams. Tennessee and Kentucky were forced to fight with all of their might to keep the plucky Maryvillians from scoring on them and the backfield has not been stopped by a single team this year.

Seven men wrote finis on their gridiron careers in the Carson-Newman game. Almost the entire line will be long through graduation this year and to replace them will be anything but easy. Starting on left end, White, Overly, Tolliver, Ferguson, Teffeteller, and Carper played their last game and Captain Lea Callaway, of course, sped across Wilson Field for the last time in front of the home folks. The loss of these men will be the greatest blow that Maryville has received in many seasons.

That's all, there ain't no more.

THE LITTLE CHURCH

THE ATONEMENT—Phil Sorce

The death of Christ is one of the most significant differences between Christianity and the other religions of the world. Practically all acknowledge as a fact the death of Jesus Christ on the cross at Calvary. But while there is approximate unanimity in believing that the Nazarene was crucified, there is no such concensus interpreting his death. There are several prominent theories of the atonement.

1. The Example theory holds that the death of Christ is the death of a martyr. He redeems us only as his example of faithfulness to truth and duty has an influence upon our moral development. But example condemns shortcomings. The cross must show a satisfaction made for sins. When a convicted sinner was told that God could cleanse his heart and make him over anew, he replied, "That is not what I want,—I have a debt to pay first."

2. The Moral Influence theory says that the atonement is a suffering, not of penalty in man's stead, but of the woes and griefs which the living of a human life involves. But their sufferings don't make Christ's sufferings vicarious. The word "vicarious" implies substitution. Potwin says that the suffering and death are the cost and not the atonement itself.

3. The Governmental theory. The atonement is an exhibition of the high estimate which God sets upon his law, and of the heinous guilt of violating it. This theory makes the atonement not an execution of law, but an exhibition of regard for law. It is an exhibition of justice which is not an exercise of justice.

4. The Theory of Gradually Extirpated Depravity holds that Christ possessed a tainted and depraved nature, but through struggle, suffering, and death he completely extirpated its depravity and reunited it to God. The evil taint of human nature cannot be extirpated by suffering its natural consequences. This theory makes penalty a reformer and death a Saviour.

5. The Satisfaction or Commercial theory. Sin is a violation of the holiness and majesty of God. Sin, therefore, must be punished. But God is love, and gracious in his dealings. Grace, however does not violate or suspend law, but takes it upon itself and fulfills it. The Judge, the source of law, voluntarily submits himself to bear the penalty and to bear it in the human nature that has sinned. "That He himself might be justified and the justifier of him that hath faith in Jesus." Christ, in order to be a proper substitute, must of necessity comply with several requirements.. He must be a man. "Jesus Christ. . . made himself of no reputation, and took upon himself the form of a servant being made in the likeness of men." He must be sinless. "Him who knew no sin he made to be sin on our behalf." His substitution must be all-inclusive. "He is the propitiation for our sins; and not for ours only, but for the sins of the world." His substitution must be acceptable. "He hath made us accepted in the Beloved."

To be a Christian means to believe that Christ was our substitute in paying the penalty of sin, and to make Christ, as Thomas said, "My Lord and my God."

The effect of Christ's atonement on Christian character and life may be illustrated from the proclamation of Garibaldi. "He that loves Italy, let him follow me! I promise him hardship, I promise him suffering, I promise him death. But he that loves Italy, let him follow me!" And as John says, "We love Him, because He first loved us."

For a week before and after Thanksgiving Baldwin Hall was plagued with mice. Every morning new tales were heard about being kept awake all night by a "rat". During study periods, shrieks were often heard from terrified maidens who had climbed up on their desks for safety. Now that the contents of Thanksgiving boxes has disappeared, there is famine among the mice, but peace for Baldwinites.

Ventriloquism will be taught at Alpha Sigma literary society, this evening, by Luke Bettis. Others on the program are: Thomas Vannatta and Fred Kniesly, clarinet duet; William Huxtable, "Kentucky Philosophy"; and Paul Ramsey, football scores.

KIGER DISCUSSES WOMEN

tive work. Examples of this are three of my teachers in grade school.

"One is now in charge of the city home of a family of leisure. Although a widow and the mother of a family, she is in the ranks of the salaried. Another is a practicing physician in Chicago. The third is city superintendent of schools in a thriving college town.

"A generation or two ago probably none of these occupations would have been found by these women."

Other fields open to women, which were suggested by Prof. Kiger, are religious education, pastor's assistants and secretaries, city mission and settlement house work, Bible teachers and Sunday School workers in the mountains and among the various under-privileged groups.

"In addition there is still much work for college-trained white women in negro schools. However, one of the most significant offerings for women, now, I believe, is in social service.

"At present there is an Association of Schools of Professional Social Work, with twenty-eight member schools attached to as many large universities. There is such a demand for trained workers that some are making liberal scholarship offerings.

"College or special education is needed for practically all types of work to which I have referred. But the women are training", concluded Prof. Kiger, "and so I suppose the forward movement of women in prestige must go on."

STUDENT PUBLICATION ? ? ?

The Handbook of Maryville College supplied to Freshmen gives a new nan the idea that the Highland Echo is a student publication. With the idea in mind he eagerly awaits the coming of his first issue only to discover it to be too closely censored and lifeless. Recalling to his mind the days when his mother read his mail, before he did.

Constructive criticism is always in order. With this idea in mind the writers of this article would like to know why so many editorials of our "Student Publication" deal with foreign problems? Is our editor too cowardly to face those of his home campus and voice an opinion upon questions of vital local significance?

Are we to believe the "Cubs" and assistant editors to be so disinterested and careless in their work that they attempt to, not only satisfy, but rather rate the appreciation of the student body by leaving their work until the last 30 minutes of time to get it in and rushing through it, misspelling and mistating both names and facts? If not, why is not some provision made to at least partly eliminate some of the multitude of erroneous statements in the write-ups of inter-class sports and varied activities of the hill?

The writers would suggest that unless the staff of the Highland Echo wants its publications to bear, here at Maryville, the same significance that those of the Colonial Bus Co. do, a distinct awakening in the pep, accuracy and subject matter its articles is recommended. Staff, it is quite possible for you as a unit, working more definitely together, to bring the Echo to the proper place in the minds of the students instead of the improper one which it now occupies.

Phay's Story

This is a bad winter for pairs. . and it is not because of the early frost. But there is, on the hill, a noticeable individualistic spirit being manifested in the component parts of several couples. Two things can be credited with the blame for this change. Several of us are forced to acknowledge the depression, and others who still have consciences must bear in mind at this time of year that there is a girl in every port and it won't be long now till we'll be sailing in on a new one (meaning port, of course).

—o—

Someone was wondering how to distinguish a tramp from a hitchhiker. They both carry a bundle and goodness knows they're both financially broke—at least badly bent. It seems that the only noticeable difference concerns their objectives. The tramps have no particular destination in mind, while the hitchhiker, confining our views only to college students, has a goal in front of him, and that is to park the old Florsheims under one table, and that table sits under the best roof in the old home town.

—o—

After very much deliberative thought about the matter, fire extinguishers were placed in the boys' dormitory for the protection of the hall. They remained untouched for several weeks, but now the war has begun and it looks like the fire extinguishers will become as useless as refrigerators in Greenland. The difficulty of living in a place like Carnegie, or rather the unpleasantness of such existence, is largely experienced simply because three or four (twenty counting the freshmen) students don't know when enough is enough.

—o—

We found this notice on Miss Heron's blackboard: "I want to tell you, Charlie, that my only brother, who lives in Covington, Kentucky, will arrive on December 10, 1931, for a visit." Well, we're learning. Miss Heron had kept this from us all the time. We just publish this to say that we hope Charlie has a pleasant visit with Miss Heron's brother, and we regret that we couldn't get this published a little sooner so we could be sure Charlie could see the announcement.

WOMEN'S 'M' CLUB STUDIES PROGRAMS

The Women's M Club held its monthly meeting, Tuesday night, at which time athletic programs in other colleges were discussed. Jeannette Eshelman, representing Wooster College in Ohio, Martha Watkins representing Texas State Teachers' College for Women, and Dorothy Krupitzer representing Vanderbilt University spoke of women's physical training programs in those colleges which they had previously attended.

The need of a more extensive program for Maryville was brought out and several important problems were considered.

HODGES WINS HIGH SCORE IN SENIOR QUIZ ON ENGLISH

Grammar, Spelling, and Other Factors in Composition Covered By Test

One of the last academic hurdles was cleared by the majority of the members of the senior class when the much-talked-of, and greatly feared, senior English examination was returned to the victims on the day when they were digging into the grounds of theistic belief. Indeed, it was the irony of fate that set December 5, Saturday, to be the eventful day when the theism examination and English examination were given and returned, respectively, to the almost unconscious survivors.

There were some results of the English examination; somebody made the highest score and someone made the lowest score, and there were about one hundred or so in between. Kitty Hodges leaped highest over the hurdle with a score of 209 points out of a possible 217 points; Lucy Ann Voorhees and Julia Terry came next with a score of 202 points. The next seven in order are: Wilma Dick, 200; Lynette Johnson, 199; Hubert Duncan, 198; Ann Smartt, 197; Betty Wilbar, 197; Elizabeth Hunt, 195; Edith McDuffie, 193.

The examination covered the field of English fundamentals including grammar, spelling, punctuation, letter writing, sentence structure, and other factors that enter into the writing of English. Although the average senior in his three years of college residence has written perhaps three hundred letters, he is most deficient in this form of English composition, but of course, from the English standpoint only.

BEALE, KIPP HEAD PRODUCTION STAFF OF '33 CHILHOWEAN

Two Popular Students Chosen By Classmates For Signal Honor

STAFFS NOT NAMED

Important Election Draws Much Interest From Student Body

Two of the most important student offices on the campus were filled last Wednesday morning at the sophomore class meeting when Charles Beale and Howard Kipp were elected as editor-in-chief and business manager, respectively, for the 1933 Chilhowean.

The nominating committee of the class had met previously and nominated three members of the class for each of these positions. The election was by no means a landslide for the victorsb ut was closely contested. Thost nominated were: editor-in-chief Charles Beale, Walter Pippert, and Richard Orr; business manager, Fred Kirchner, Howard Kipp, and Jesse Willis.

Charles Beale, the editor-elect, has been a member of the staff of the Echo for the past two years and has, by his originality and ability, become one of the most popular members of Class '34.

Howard Kipp, the successful candidate for the managership of the yearbook, has shown his ability in the various positions of responsibility that he has held while at Maryville. At present he is an assistant in the Lamar library.

The combined originality, ability, and initiative of these two men assures the college of an unusual Chilhowean for 1933.

As yet neither officer has indicated the students to be chosen on their respective staffs.

CHRISTMAS MUSIC FESTIVAL INCLUDES MANY CAROLS, NOELS

Vesper Choir, Music Students Offer Program Of Varied Type

IN TWO PARTS

College Pastor Will Give Short Christmas Greeting To Student Body

On Sunday evening, December 13, at six-thirty, the annual Christmas music festival will be held in Voorhees Chapel. The Vesper Choir and other students of music have been preparing the program for over two months.

The first part of the performance will consist of the more unfamiliar carols and noels from various countries. Some of the compositions date as far back as the year 1670. The choir has arranged to sing the carols in four part harmony, which is a variation from the customary unison performance. An innovation this year will be the playing of violins, harmonicas, a cello and an organ to accompany the singing of the choir. The violinists will be Eleanor Henry and Mildred Purviance; the harmonica quintet is made up of Red Courtenay, Frank Thornhill, Reno Smith, Malvern Clopton, and Wilbur Milling. Mildred Harris will be the cellist, and Frank Neff the organist for the evening.

Between the first and the second parts of the program, Dr. Stevenson will deliver a short Christmas message. Excerpts from the Christmas Cantata, "The Manger and Star", by Stults, will comprise the second half of the program.

The evening's performance will be preceded by a ten-minute organ prelude of Christmas carols, commencing promptly at six-fifty.

SOCIETIES MAKE NO CHANGES YET

No further advancement in the suggestion to make reforms in the men's literary societies will take place until after the Christmas holidays. Athenian will debate the question at that time, during one of its meetings.

According to Robert Wallace, president of Athenian, the society as a whole is in favor of some changes. However, he believes that most of the members Athenian favor the retention of the society, with improvement of the programs and elimination of debating and oratory.

Reno Smith, president of Alpha Sigma, says that his society remains the same in its original suggestions.

M. C. STUDENTS TO ATTEND BUFFALO MEETING OF S. V.

Eight Students Expected To Attend National Convention

Eight students from Maryville College plan to go to Buffalo, New York, during the holidays to attend the Quadrennial Convention of the Student Volunteer Movemet. The meeting will be in session from December 30, 1931 through January 3, 1932.

It is probable that Maryville College will fill its quota of delegates as recommended by the Quadrennial Committee. Those who are planning to go are, Elizabeth Gillis, president of the local group, Eleanor Wynn, Lorena Mae Dunlap, Andrew Newcomer, Lila Barr, Frank Neff, Dorothy Casseres, Paul Wynn, and Roberta Robison.

A specially arranged trip to Niagara Falls, music by the Westminster Choir double quartette, and a series of international teas will be among the special features which combine a real holiday excursion with a very significant student conference.

A pageant directed by Miss Nancy Longenecker and Mr. Jay Fisher, of Chicago, will be presented in the Masonic Consistory Auditorium. The production will involve the use of modern stage settings and a choric speaking group.

Among the leaders of Christian thought who will speak at the convention are, Dr. John R. Mott, Dr. Paul Harrison, Bishop McConnell, Kirby Page, and Dr. Robert E. Speer. Dr. Walter Judd, who has spent the past six years in the war torn areas of China, will appear on the program.

BAINONIANS WILL PRESENT POPULAR PLAY MONDAY NITE

Drama of Tudor Days Requires Unusual Costumes, Stage Settings

WILBAR HAS LEAD

George Osborne, as Brandon, Carries Male Lead In Production

"The fightingest play I have ever seen", says Mrs. West regarding the Bainonian midwinter, "When Knighthood Was In Flower", which will be presented in Voorhees Chapel next Monday night, December 13, at 8 o'clock.

The play is based on the historical novel written by Charles Major and has been adapted for dramatic production by Paul Kester. It deals with the political life in England at the time of Henry VIII about the first quarter of the sixteenth century, and about half the cast is made up of actual historical characters. Besides Henry VIII who is played by Arthur Gordon Courtenay, there are the Duke of Buckingham, played by Bob Stevenson; Bishop Wolsey whose part is taken by Hadley Webb; Anne Boleyn, played by Jean Campbell; Mary Tudor, the heroine, played by Betty Wilbar; Jane Seymour, who is represented in the play by Ruth Brocious; Catharine of Aragon, whose part is played by Louise Avery; Frances I played by Homer McCann, and Charles Brandon, the hero, played by George Osborne who were actual people at that time in history.

The story centers about Henry's younger sister, Mary Tudor, who in history was married by the state to a French prince. After his death she married a Charles Brandon, a commoner who was raised to nobility. This marriage caused much discussion because it had not been sanctioned by the state. It is concerning the romance of Mary Tudor and Charles Brandon that the play is written in a somewhat revised form.

The scenes are laid at the court of England and the court of France with the exception of one tavern scene in Bristol. Because of the type of characters depicted the costumes will be very elaborate as will the production as a whole. The stage effects will be different from any that have been presented on the Hill in former years. There are four acts and five scenes, each scene in a different setting and the time element is of four months duration.

PRESIDENT LLOYD EXTENDS PERSONAL CHRISTMAS GREETINGS

Christmas means home to most college students, and I rejoice with all who are to be in their homes this year.

Christmas means good will. I wish I might give to all Maryville students some convincing evidence of my own good wishes for them, for they are many and sincere.

Christmas and New Year's Day mean a new beginning. May each one of us have a sense of honest effort expended in past months and worthy ambitions for the new year.

Christmas means Christ, who would be reincarnated in every man's experience.

Famous Pianist To Appear On College Lyceum Program

The greatest musical program ever presented at Maryville College will be the appearance of the famous Russian pianist, Vladimir Horowitz, at Voorhees Chapel, Tuesday evening, January 19th. This artist, who is more like the great Paderewski than any of the younger musicians, is being brought to Maryville by the Lyceum Committee.

When asked for a statement concerning Horowitz, Miss Hale said she enjoyed his playing more than that of any artist she ever heard, with the exception of Paderewski. Miss Hale heard Horowitz in his Bristol concert last year.

Born October 1, 1904, in Kieff, the initial years of Horowitz's professional life were spent giving concerts in Russia. In 1925 he burst on the continent like a meteor. Today he has appeared over and over again with all the great orchestras of Europe and America, and his name brings forth the "sold out" sign in the concert halls of two continents.

Horowitz is an artist whose work is his story. As a boy he was taught by his mother who as also an artist of very great ability. His career has been the logical development of an extraordinary gift, and he has made his name world-famous through

DEBATERS CHOSEN

Tryouts for varsity debate teams for men and women were held in the Y. W. C. A. Auditorium last Saturday afternoon, December 5th, with Dr. Hunter, Dr. Knapp and Dr. McMurray as judges. The men chosen were: Charles Beale, Ben Groves, Fred Kirchner, Arthur Lazell, James Lewis, Harry Mathias, Andrew Newcomer, Robert Stevenson, and Robert Tripp. The women chosen were: Elizabeth Duncan, Ercelle Hunter, Mildred MacKenzie, Edith McDuffie, Lucille Swafford, and Carrie Lou Tweed.

The debaters showed such enthusiasm in preparation for the debate and such determination to make the team during the tryouts that the judges position was not an enviable one. Since the majority of the debaters are sophomores, the next few years are hopeful ones for a successful and well-known debate squad.

The debate program is not yet completed, but a trip is being planned for a women's team through North Carolina and South Carolina, and one for a boys' team to Tulsa, Oklahoma to the National Convention.

FOOTBALL MEN HOLD ANNUAL BANQUET THURSDAY EVENING

Martin Gillespie Is Honored With Captaincy For Next Year

Martin Gillespie and Floyd Wilson were elected captain and alternate captain, respectively, for the 1932 football season, at the Maryville College football banquet in Pearsons dining hall, Thursday evening.

R. O. Smith, superintendent of city schools, was toastmaster. The program was divided into four quarters. Karl E. Steismetz, ex-manager of the 1906 and 1907 football teams, sketched the early history of Maryville during the first two quarters.

During Mr. Steinmetz's managership, Maryville played five games in eight days, and lost but two of the games. They played in the following order:

September 29—Georgia Tech (6), Maryville (6); October 4—University of Mississippi (16), Maryville (6); October 6—University of Alabama (6), Maryville (10); October 8—Alabama Polytechnic Institute, now Auburn (0), Maryville (0); October 13—University of Tennessee (0), Maryville (11).

Y.W.C.A. SPONSORS CHRISTMAS PARTY IN LIBRARY TONITE

Musical Program, Visit From Santa, Carols Items On Program

Just one more chance in the year 1931 to do "As You Like It' or to enjoy "Much Ado About Nothing" tonight in Thaw Hall at seven-thirty. A Christmas entertainment has been planned besides the usual games for the pleasure of the eight hundred students who will want to take advantage of this last opportunity.

The Y. W. C. A. through its social committee is decorating the library and providing refreshments for the hungry multitude. Dorothea Thomsen is in charge of the decorations and a Christmas atmosphere is assured.

Instead of the regular program in the auditorium, at 9:30 an entertainment will be presented by Garnet Manges and some of her music pupils around the huge Christmas tree which will be placed in the library. Carol singing will follow this program and Santa Claus will present stockings to all those present.

The entertainment as a whole is under the direction of the Student Council and the Y. W. C. A.

CHRISTMAS CAROLS

On Sunday, December 13, at 6:00 a. m., and on Wednesday, December 16, at 9:30 p. m., the following program will be broadcast over the campus from one of the front windows of the chapel:

Joy to the World
As With Gladness Men of Old
Good King Wenceslas
Thou Didst Leave Thy Throne
Christians, Awake
It Came Upin a Midnight Clear
While Shepherds Watched Their Flocks by Night
Draw Nigh, Draw Nigh, Emmanuel
Hark, the Herald Angels Sing
Canticle of Noel
Away in a Manger (first tune)
Away in a Manger (second tune)
Shepherds, Shake Off Your Drowsy Sleep
We Three Kings of Orient Are God Rest You Merry, Gentlemen
In Excelsis Gloria
O Come All Ye Faithful
Hark! What Mean Those Holy Voices
Angels from the Realms of Glory
O Little Town of Bethlehem
Once in Royal David's City
The First Noel
The Messiah—Hallelujah Chorus

Louis A. Black Appointed College Business Manager

President Lloyd announced today that the Directors have appointed Mr. Louis A. Black, of Denver, Colorado, as Business Manager. He will enter upon his duties December 15.

At Maryville in the past the duties of a Business Manager have been combined with those of the Treasurer. It has been necessary for Treasurer F. L. Proffitt to carry the entire responsibility. The new arrangement provides for two separate offices: that of Treasurer held by Mr. Proffitt, and that of Business Manager held by Mr. Black.

Mr. Black has had a long and successful experience as an administrator, principally in the Young Men's Christian Association Movement. He comes to Maryville following a period of four years as Executive Secretary of the Estes Park Conference in Colorado. In that section he was in charge of the grounds, the buildings and cottages which numbered one hundred fifty, and the various national and regional religious and young people's conferences which meet at Estes Park during the summers.

He entered the Y.M.C.A. service as Secretary for Boys' Work in Troy, New York. Later he was General Secretary in New York, Massa-

ARE WE.
IRREVERENT?

One is sometimes forced to think that nothing is held sacred by some people. This attitude of irreverence is particularly noticeable in persons just approaching maturity, and unfortunately this is the age period of the average college student.

It is impossible to say whether such seeming irreverent expressions here in Maryville come from an actual studied disregard for things sacred, a desire to revolt against customs observed by the past generation, or just the irrepressible ego of the pre-mature man, but the fact remains that when the blessing is requested in our dining hall it is a signal for snickers, unsuccessfully smothered giggles, whispering and many other forms of noisesome activity.

The purpose of the blessing just before the meal is not merely the observance of a time honored ritual or the opportunity for some one individual to learn to overcome stage fright, but a time for the honest and whole-hearted thanksgiving to the Provider of the food. Naturally some are not willing to go to the trouble of switching their minds from the concrete things of everyday life to pay homage to a Being that seemingly does not require attention, but there are many who desire to do so and this is made practically impossible by the undertone of levity and irreverence invariably present at these times.

Why not give the "other fellow" a chance?

A "BAD SIGN"

At last Maryville has something uniquely her own. Regardless of whether it is something desirable and something of which to be proud, the fact remains that we have a very distinctive object here on the Hill. And that "something" is Nicotine Row.

To say that this congregation of students just over the boundries of the campus is a poor advertisement for the college is putting it very mildly. Though we are not in a position to describe the impressions gathered by casual passers-by or by interested visitors, it is safe to say that they are not of the best.

Nicotine Row is a product of necessity. A great percentage of the men of the campus use tobacco and it is just as reasonable to ask them to stop going down town or to the show as to ask them to cease smoking. Men will smoke in the most convenient place and they are not usually zealous in guarding against making bad impressions of the college. Legislation will not stop this practice that obviously should be stopped. The cure probably lies deeper.

In the ordinary procession of events rules and regulations are, of necessity, changed, modified and altered in many respects if they are to remain effective. Perhaps this should be done with our rules regarding smoking on school property.

It is just possible that permission to smoke in the men's dormitory might be the best method of ridding Maryville of this blot on its otherwise fair countenance. We do not advocate smoking on the campus as the smoker is sometimes careless in the disposal of the unsmoked portion and the conequent litter would probably be a bad as "Nicotine Row."

This suggestion is not unique in college regulations. Without exception the colleges of the class of Maryville in this immediate section permit smoking in certain appointed places on their respective campuses and with a single exception this place is the dormitory.

Again, such a provision is bound to react favorably on the scholarship of the men. At the present time study is often broken into by a visit "to the curb" or books are taken to the stores and cafes in the city where one can "smoke and study" in an atmosphere not exactly conducive to concentration.

At any rate "Nicotine Row" is a disgraceful whole composed of perfectly respectable units and should be replaced by a less undesirable custom.

KEYHOLE KOMMENT

Students have been observing for the past few days that the Depression hasn't seemed to have affected old Jupe Pluvius, who, as everyone knows, controls the affairs of men and mud. Besides that, they admit, sadly as a rule, that the monster has affected everything else, not excepting the amount of apples in each dish at Pearsons. But we have not become gloomy as yet. When we get out the senior list and gaze fondly and longly at the great number of notables we feel like the proverbial Scot who found that he had not really lost a nickel but had only worn it out. Happy, if you get what we mean. And one of those notables who gives us large cause for rejoicing is John Stone White, alias Sleepy.

Following in the clear prints of his famed kinsman, John Stone, Sleepy is one of Maryville's most versatile and skilled athletes. He exhibited his prowess in several times several football contests under the Orange and Garnet and each time his work at end was one of the reasons opposing coaches wished they had devoted their lives to the coal business. Playing in his last game, against Carson-Newman, he finished his last football season and proved himself sufficiently meritorious to be placed with the All-Smoky aggregation, the eleven outstanding players of the Conference. And now that baxit-ball is with us for a visit, Sleepy has donned his abbreviated trousers and taken his place as chief of Maryville's five. And the experts do say that he is a forward to be noted as a blessing to his fellows and a curse to his enemies. We know that he looks as if he might prove embarrassing to an opposing team, but we're only an average fan. And when baseball season eventually arrives, Sleepy will be right out there on the initial base, chewing his gum, or whatever it is that he chews, and in general making himself conspicuous by his most decided presence. To make a long story a short story, he's an athlete par excellence.

Four new students, by name, Dorothy Parr, Mildred Harris, George Deebel, and Ed Keeler, are making an appeal to the student body to receive less publicity. They claim that the overwhelming popularity they have acquired is really quite too much for him. We only mention this to assure anyone that were lending our assistance, and to ask anyone else in such a position, to do likewise.

High heels for women may be injurious to the feet of the wearer, and all that, but they are much to be preferred to anything that resembles a gym shoe. Those shoes can make the best arch in the world disappear and give any foot a decidedly "flat" appearance. They also can ruin anything that might resemble style in any woman, and what they do to a short girl is a shame. When we think of girls in gym shoes in terms of comparison we have to think of them as being "as graceful as a turtle on its back."

CHRISTMAS SPIRIT—BEALE

While observing a couple of moonshiners in the act of dissolving partnership the other day, we were poignantly reminded of the fact that the Yule season is fast approaching. In spite of the fact that the weather bureaus seem to have forgotten the time of the year, December 25 is a matter of only a few days now, and for that reason, most of us are recalling fond memories of Christmases past. And, while few among us are seriously considering an epistle to Santy Claws, all of us are looking forward to the time when we shall watch the members of our respective families, whose years do not warrant a disbelief in that personage, gravely depend their hosiery by the fireplace and repair to bed, not to dream, as the poem says, but to awaken the entire household ere morn with shrieks of glee and gladness.

No one knows the exact reason for the manifestation of the so-called Christmas spirit. We only know that, in small girls, it makes itself apparent in the form of requests for dolls, tea sets, etc., and that as they grow older their requests grow mutually more mandatory and expensive. In the male, however, we observe a differing reaction. At first, his letters to Santy are filled with orders for such monstrosities as fire engines, cowboy suits, and other destructive implements so dear to the male heart in childhood. But when he approaches manhood, Christmas ceases to be a time of fun and frolic and becomes merely a day when he receives countless quantities of neckties, which are noisome to say the least. There is no particular reason for this profusion of cravats, but rumors point its origin as the time when, on Christmas Day, a hoted gangster was hanged in England and the Queen insisted that the rope be tinted in the soft, but flashing, hues seen in our present day Yule ties.

In spite of all the joy brought by Christmas, however, there are a few people to whom it brings a touch of sadness. For instance, college night watchmen must, for each evening in an entire fortnight, think up a new excuse to present the missus on leaving for the evening. They cannot use the old gag about going to work, but must tell the wife that they are attending a lodge meeting, or make some other equally confusing pretext. And then there are the persons who tend the heating(?) system of colleges. For two whole weeks, they are without any subjects to torture by an absence of hot water and heat. No one is present to make indignant and insulting remarks concerning the absence of warmth, thus making the keepers of the warmth dispensers feel that something has fled from their lives. And the soda jerks feel the impress of the holidays. We are told that, in the absence of moonshiners, they are called upon to dust the line of pews each day, since few come in to relieve them of this duty.

Notwithstanding all these sorrowful reactions, however, no action is being taken to discontinue the holiday season, so we suppose that whoever controls those things has decided that the bad points are less numerous than the good. So don't feel alarmed. Go right on packing.

STATISTICS PROVE WOMEN IMPORTANT AS WAGE EARNERS

Survey Reveals 51 Percent Of Women Employees Support Others

According to figures which have appeared in the New York Herald-Tribune, "one out of every five of the 10,000,000 women wage-earners in this country is a married woman living with her husband." For every eleven married women, one is working gainfully.

Similar figures showed that out of the 2,000,000 wife wage-earners, the major portion were employed at unskilled labor, assisting husbands whose jobs were no better than theirs.

A survey carried on by Miss Agnes Peterson, assistant director of the Federal Women's Bureau, in a printing plant, brought to light the fact that not one of the men employed was caring for a dependent, while the married men were caring for no more than their wives and children. However, "every woman was supporting fully or partially one or more relatives."

Statistics from the Women's Bureau of the Department of Labor show that out of 59,876 women wage earners, the entire earnings of 51 per cent went to their families; the number of women who contributed nothing amounted to less than 9 per cent.

A report recently completed by the Federal Women's Bureau shows that, in Philadelphia the number of mothers who are working has increased considerably in the past ten years.

"In the areas of the city covered in the study, 21 per cent of the white wives with one or more children of school age or under were working, as compared with 14 per cent in a similar neighborhood a decade before. The investigation also showed that it is the native white mother, rather than the Negro or foreign-born mother, who shares the burden of supporting the family."

S COLLEGIATE S
! W A P !

We think we'll do something revolutionary this week and write at length without even mentioning the depression. Perhaps if the guy who mentioned it first had kept his canyon blocked instead, we would even now not be clad in ventilated shirt and buttonless lingerie, to say nothing of other recalcitrant articles of dress and undress. Suppose this thing about which nothing is to be said has something to do with the fact that the students at the University of South Carolina are joining together to lay some sidewalks on the campus. No doubt the unfortunate business situation has made the brick-makers lower their prices. We're sorry for the masons this puts out of work though. Very likely, the studes don't even know how to browbeat the boss for a few extra hours each week.

—o—

See where the University of Southern California is giving credit for bull sessions. The authorities maintain that an informal meeting of students to discuss the doings of the day is invaluable educationally. We don't know about this, but if Maryville started such a practice, we should like to nominate a certain couple of fellows as co-heads of the department. They have Carnegie Ph.D.'s.

—o—

We sincerely wish that our Sports editor would get busy and pick himself an All-Something or Other Team. The Echo is one of the seventeen papers in the nation who have not published such an aggregation. And we notice that the most conspicuous men on these teams are home boys. We wonder why?

Notice the genetics class of Morehead State Teachers College took its annual trip to Lexington to visit an insane asylum. They all get back safely, so maybe it might be a good idea for a few students from a corresponding class to take a trip to Washington for the same purpose.

Calloway, Carper and White Are Chosen On All-Conference Team

CAPTAIN RECEIVES HONOR OF BEING CAPTAIN OF ALL-STAR TEAM DUE TO UNANIMOUS VOTE OF CONFERENCE COACHES

GILLESPIE ON SECOND

Boretsky and Teffeteller Given Honorable Mention For Berths On Team

Maryville players were prominent on the All-conference selection, compiled by the Knoxville Journal, through the vote of the coaches in the conference, which was announced last week. Capt. Lea Calloway, halfback, Judge Carper, tackle and Easy White, end, were the Maryville men placed on the team. Captain Calloway was the only man in the conference to be selected unanimously and on the face of this fact, he was selected as Captain of the all star team.

Simmon Ferguson was chosen as center on the second team as was Cliff Overly and Martin Gillespie, the captain-elect. Tolliver, Teffeteller, and Boretsky were given honorable mention. The newspaper stated that Ferguson gave Solomon, of Milligan, a merry fight for the center post on the first team but the big Buffalo got the edge on him due to the fact that he was chosen last year and also because he has played more football. This year, of course, Ferguson's first year on the varsity team.

Calloway's selection was just a matter of form. This makes the third straight year that the big, bone crushing halfback has been placed in the select class and had it not been for a serious knee injury which he received in his freshman year, he would have surely been chosen when he was a member of the first year class. Calloway's playing during the early games of the season of 1928 was one of the high lights of the Maryville offense.

White was probably without a peer as a pass receiver in the conference as well as a defensive man to rave about. The combination of Calloway to White has netted Maryville many yards this year and it will be a great blow to the team when these two men graduate in June. Sewell, one of Carson-Newman's contribution to the all-star team, was completely outplayed by the great Maryvill end this season when the Scots and Eagls met.

Carper has never been a brilliant football player but he is just one of these proverbial "war horses" who never knew when to quit working. He was in there every game, plugging away, sometimes outstanding, always dependable, and his selection meets with great approval. This is Carper's last year of football and he will certainly be missed next year when Coach Bob starts looking around for big tackles.

GIRLS' BASKETBALL TEAMS PREPARING FOR TOURNAMENT

Largest Number in History Report For Duty

Four girls' basketball teams are working out daily in an effort to get in condition for the championship tournament which is to be held after the Christmas holidays. During the two weeks that the teams have been working out, passing, shooting, and guarding have been the fundamentals which have been drilled most extensively.

Mrs. Quesner Pleased

Basketball has attracted more girls this year than ever before in the history of the college. Eighty six, all told, have reported to Mrs. Quesner, Director of Women's Athletics on the Hill, and she feels confident that each class will be represented by strong teams this year.

Large Squads

The senior team is the only one that has a shortage in players. Only six girls have reported so far and they will have to increase their number considerably before they will be able to develop a representative team. Fifteen juniors, twenty-one sophomores and thirty freshmen have reported. The sophomore squad will be cut from twenty-one to fifteen and the freshman squad will be reduced also to fifteen.

The Captains

Captains and managers have been chosen for all of the teams with the exception of the juniors. Elinor Johnson, who has been very prominent in girls' athletics this year, is captain of the frosh team and her roommate is manager. Virginia Crider, vice-president of the senior class, is captain of the senior team and she has Kitty Hodbes, the tennis champion, as her manager. Lorraine Yennie, aerial dart champ, is the soph captain and she will be ably assisted by Mollie Little.

Laws Made to Break?

Another disadvantage about obeying the traffic laws is that it makes one so conspicuous.—Hamilton Evening Journal.

SPORT SLANTS

By BOB RUTH

At the close of every football season, there is a cry that some star football player has not received the credit that he fully deserves and the season of 1931 is no exception. Maryville students and fans, I think, have a perfect right to step up and say vile things about the person or persons who picked the all-conference team.

It is a fact that Maryville placed three men in the select class and I am not trying to claim an unnecessary honor for our school but just how the officials could select an all-conference team and ignore Millard Tolliver is more than I can see. It might not have been so terribly dumb if the officials had put the great Maryville guard on the second team but they didn't even do that.

Tolliver was given honorable mention. That's a joke. That's just like admitting that the U. S. has a pretty fair little army after they had won the World War. It is nothing short of an insult to an athlete of Tolliver's calibre to be given "just honorable mention". This selection has become a joke on the campus and Tolliver is often referred to by his team mates, in a joking manner, as "Honorable Mention" Tolliver.

Big Judge Carper is married; has been since August. The formal announcement was made last week but it seems as if Carper must have let the cat out of the bag for some of the students vow that they have known it for some time. This seems to be a great year for marriages among athletes, anyway. Gene McEver, Tennessee's all-American half back, is to be everlastingly united with a strawberry blond co-ed in Knoxville; Van Raburn, another Tennessee star, has already made the leap and Jerry Dalrymple, of Tulane, has already erred. But brother, if Carper works as hard to earn a livelihood for his bride and himself as he has to make Maryville one of her best tackles, there will be no wolf hanging around his door.

Those guys who thought that last season's basketball schedule "leaked" will have to find new subjects for their idle gossip this year. Upon returning from the Smoky Mountain Conference meeting, Coach Honaker announced that the Highlanders would play every team in the Conference this year. The schedule will be played on a home and home basis and this means that every team in the loop will show in Maryville.

The decision of the officials to do away with the annual Conference Tournament seems to be a wise one. Last season Maryville had as good a team as there was in the Conference but they were off their stride in their first game and lost to Carson-Newman. The new ruling of awarding the title on a basis of games won or lost will give all of the teams an equal chance. However, the winner will have to play consistent ball all year.

Songs For The Unsung

TOM COOPER. Quite a bit has been said about Tom Cooper but there is no danger of giving old Tom more than he deserves. Tom came here four years ago as a freshman. He reported for football. He really looked small for even high school football but that did not keep him from trying out for a position. Day after day and year after year Tom has donned the moleskin and has taken his share of the hard work that is dished out to college football players. He was called on to block and tackle men who were twice his size but he has never yet been known to take back water. He has never played enough to earn his letter, but for his faithfullness to the sjuad, for his undying love for the team that has taken him on many long trips, Tom deserves a football letter as much as any other man on the squad. He was presented a silver football at the banquet Thursday night and we would be willing to wager our most prized possessions that all of the money in Mr. Proffitt's office could not take it from him.

JOHN TOPE. Topie's broken ankle forced him from the football field just before the Kentucky trip, but up to that time he was working faithfully in an attempt to make himself a valuable man for Maryville. Tope was drafed for line material at the first of the year, although he was by choice a fullback. He showed great promise as a lineman, as he had as a back. and had his injury not struck him down, he would have played quite a bit of football for Mr. Thrower this year. Tope is a junior, and he will be right out there with the rest of them next year when the opening call for football practice is issued.

GWYNN. Gwynn came here from Vanderbilt University where he was a member of last year's freshman team. He showed up exceedingly well at his end post and was in line for quite a bit of service when he received an injury to his leg which slowed him down considerably. His injury was not serious enough to keep him out of practice but just bad enough to keep him from doing his best. He stuck by the squad throughout the season and after his injury healed, he was taken on the remaining trips. He was used quite a bit in several of the games and he shows promise of making Maryville a valuable man next season. Gwynn hails from Lebanon, Tennessee where he played football in high school. He is an exceptionally good student and is very popular with the students.

Aspirants to Hall of Fame

Sara Dick (in systematics speech) "Memorials are not erected to anyone in the Hall of Fame until ten years after their death."

Sighs of disappointment from the class.

Coach Honaker Swings Axe First Time On 1931 Basketball Squad

SQUAD REDUCED TO 22 MEN AS FIRST TWO WEEKS WORK IS COMPLETED; CAPT. WHITE IS READY FOR GREATEST SEASON

NO GAMES SOON

Team To Be Strong on Offense and Defense; Woodard and Mann Battle For Center

Maryville College's basketeers will find a rough and rocky path ahead of them after the Christmas holidays but a squad of twenty-two men is working out daily in an attempt to have a team shaped together before the season opens. Coach Honaker weilded the axe on his squad for the first time this week and it was reduced from the original 30 to 22.

White Ready

Captain Easy White seems to be all set for his greatest year. Carrying to the basketball court the same efforts that won him a place on the all-conference football team, the Maryville leader is in the best of condition and he should cause plenty trouble for the conference opponents. He was the leading scorer on the team last year and many believe that he is one of the deadest shots that Maryville has had in several years.

The Scots' offense should be exceptionally good. White, Wilson, Woodard, Mann, Nee and Kiser will undoubtedly see plenty of service this year and any one of this group is capable of causing trouble in the scoring department. Coach Honaker has not yet decided on his starting combination but it is almost a decided fact these men will be in the thick of the fight this year.

Defense Good

The defense should be no worse than the offense. White and Wilson will form a front line that will test the offensive ability of any team and either Woodard or Mann will make the center post strong. Jack Nee, who made the varsity team as a freshman last year, is a fine prospect for a really great performer. Kiser has the inside track for the other guard post and he will make Nee a good running mate.

MARTIN GILLESPIE ELECTED LEADER OF 1932 HIGHLANDERS

Floyd Wilson, Sophomore Is Chosen Alternate

Martin Gillespie, one of the best defensive fullbacks that Maryville College has produced in many many years, was elected captain of the 1932 Highland Machine Thursday night at the annual football banquet held in Pearsons' dining room. Floyd Wilson, sophomore halfback, was elected alternate captain.

This was Gillespie's first year on the varsity but he proved beyond question of doubt that he was as valuable a man as the Maryville team had this year. He was in every play, it seemed, and when the heap cleared away, Martin was generally to be found at the bottom. He got more tackles playing his position backing up the line, than any lineman.

Gillespie's ability, however, is not confined to defensive play alone. In several of the games he smashed through the line for long gains and he was always good for a yard or so when they were needed most. He carried the ball quite a bit during the last few games of the season and he generally ranked second to Calloway, whom he succeeds, in the ground gaining.

Wilson, the alternate captain, served his second year on the varsity team this year and he is one of the best prospects for an outstanding ball carrier that has entered Maryville in a long time. He is a member of the sophomore class also and he has two more years on the varsity team. Joe Myers was elected to succeed Emil Farr as football manager. Myers has worked diligently all year in his role as assistant manager and he fully deserves the job.

IS DEBATING WORTH YOUR TIME

The following letter is one of a series on the value of debating to the college students written by members of past varsity debate teams.
—Editor

To me, debating was something to be enjoyed, a thing to enjoy working on and then a thing to enjoy delivering. Athletes have been told play for the love of the game. I was one of a number who debated for the love of debating. During debate season I placed debating before academic work, athletic interests, or social attractions, regarding it as a hobby rather than as a task. Debating inculcated in me an interest in economic and social questions. It tended to make me more open minded and sent me in search of good magazines and good magazine articles rather than fiction. Debating has tended to make me critical minded, causing me to weigh both sides of a statement, even in informal conversation always seeking truth rather than opinion.

Since I left Maryville I have had the opportunity to talk to groups of people on several occasions as every college graduate does, and, invariably, I was comforted by the fact that I had done some of this before. Experience constantly verifies my belief that time invested in training for public speaking pays the greatest dividend of time invested in any field. It has been said that a college graduate is one who has had a chance to get an education. Without some experience in public speaking this education is not complete. A debater at Maryville, working under Professor Queener is one who has had a chance to learn the fundamentals of public speaking, thereby gaining poise, and confidence when facing a crowd.

chusetts, and Pennsylvania. For twenty nine months during the World War he was in War Work in America and overseas. After the War he was General Secretary in charge of the Y. M. C. A. work in Wichita, Kansas, for seven and a half years, resigning to accept the position at Estes Park.

Mr. Black's family consists of a wife, two sons, and two daughters. One son is in medical college preparing to be a medical missionary, and one in the Chicago Theological Seminary. One daughter is in a teachers' college and the other in high school. The family does not plan to come to Maryville at present.

Mr. Black is an Elder in the Montview Presbyterian Church of Denver.

FAMOUS PIANIST

sheer ability. His personality is glamourous, but it was not built up by fictitious press operations. What Horowitz has accomplished has been accomplished entirely by his great art.

Horowitz has given America four seasons of his artistry, beginning January 12th, 1928, with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra. Music critics at the time made the following statement of him: "the most successful concert artist to appear before the American public in the decade since the debuts of Heifetz and Galli-Curci." Thirty-six concerts in eighty-eight days followed. By his fourth season he was no longer a novelty but a sensation. Again the public and press went to extravagant lengths to celebrate his every appearance.

Horowitz as a type is timid, dreamy, and extremely poetic. He has dark eyes and hair, is of medium size, and is typically Russian. He is sensitive to any noise or lack of attention in the audience, but is very appreciative when people enjoy his music. At the Bristol concert he was very generous about encores in the last part of his program.

Maryville College is fortunate to secure this 27-year-old pianist for a concert. He is an artist who bids fair to be a successor of the renowned Paderewski.

The Horowitz Concert takes the place of the Barre Symphony Concert which was cancelled because it conflicted with the February Meetings. The Lyceum Committee hopes to present the Barre Concert sometime next year.

A MERRY CHRISTMAS!

FOOTBALL BANQUET

The 1906 team has been the only Maryville team which has defeated a Tennessee University team.

Charles F. Hunt, center of the 1906 team, was the next speaker. He told this story about Steinmetz:

"During the 1907 season, Mayville was scheduled to meet almost every football team in the southern conference about every other week. The climax of the schedule, however, was the fact that Steinmetz arranged for a double-header with Tulane and Louisiana State University."

Carl V. Burger and John Henry, halfback and right end of the 1906 team, spoke a few words about old memories.

Coaches L. S. Honaker and Robert Thrower talked, according to the toastmaster, upon humor and brains, respectively. The former praised the work of the 1931 team, especially that of Lea Calloway. He attributed the good work of the team during the season to the good showing made against Tennessee and the "something" found during the Kentucky game. He called the line "better than any other Maryville line."

According to Coach Honaker, three lines have been graduated during three successive years; while only three men with any good high school experience have entered Maryville.

"If Thrower turns out a good line next year he's better than Parker of Tennessee."

President Ralph W. Lloyd, in an impromptu talk, wished the old team well and the team-to-be success.

Toastmaster Smith, at that time, found it opportune to point out that the 1916 football squad scored 247 points as against nothing scored upon itself. During that year, Chattanooga was defeated 13-0, and Carson Newman lost 99-0.

Dr. H. A. Calloway was captain and quarterback of the team; while "Turkey" Smith was a guard.

Coach Thrower recalled the facts that Millard Tolliver, when he entered Maryville, had only "two gaits—one a stumble, the other a fall." Of John S. White, he said that he was about as big as his (Thrower's) arm. His remark about Clifford Overly and Tolliver was that, though they were both fullbacks in high school, he "would have liked to have seen them play."

Lea Calloway pointed out the memories and the self-respect which football gives to a player. He made a reference to the Maryville-Kentucky game in which, at the start of the last quarter, a Maryville player suggested that since they had given almost everything during the first three quarters, they might just as well put out everything they had, as long as they lasted, for the remainder of the game.

Captain-elect Martin Gillespie and alternate captain-elect Floyd Wilson were called upon to speak. They both promised to do the best of which they were capable.

Through Clyde B. Emert and Carl Storey, the Maryville business men brought the banquet to a finish. Mr. Emert said that he was bringing the backing, appreciation, and feeling of pride of the business men. Mr. Storey presented gold footballs to these senior members of the 1931 team and the manager:

BAINONIAN PLAY

Henry says of his unconventional younger sister, "She is the thorniest rose on the Tudor stem." Mary herself says, in referring to another character in the play, "If she were like me she would despise all men."

The cast of characters is completed by the Duke de Longueville played by Phil Sorce; Sir Edwin Caskoden played by Harry Wood, Sr Adam Judson played by Bob Wallace; Bill Hannah plays the part of the court fool, Will Somers; Al Duff is Captain Bradhurst, and Andy Newcomer is the Host of the Tavern.

Lois Wallace plays the part of Jane Bolingbroke, and Roberta Robison is the French Maid of Honor. There are several other minor characters who take the part of dancers, adventurers in the working out of the play.

The usual admission price of thirty-five cents is charged for which a good dollar's worth of entertainment is assured.

CLUBBY COMMENT

The four literary societies are each presenting Christmas programs this Saturday evening.

Bainonian will have Asop Gillis, Katherine Wayland, Virginia Lee Johnson, and Mary Elizabeth Chromer, as a quartet, to sing Christmas songs. Julia Terry will read a Christmas story; and Lucy Ann Voorhees will read "The Night Before Christmas."

Santa Claus, in the person of Mary Swassick, will visit the society.

Wesley Y. Culver will sing "Christmas Ev'rywhere" and "O Little Town of Bethlehem" at Athenian literary society. Charles Beale will act as Santa Claus; Robert Toms will tell of the holiday season in Korea; and a quartet led by Chilton Bowles will sing Christmas carols.

The new officers will be installed at this meeting. The society reforms suggested by Alpha Sigma society will be debated after Christmas holidays.

Alpha Sigma literary society will present a mystery program in all but one respect. John Tope will read several letters to Santa Claus. New and old Christmas carols, and a "tall Christmas story" will be sung and read by two unknowns.

Theta Epsilon literary society will show to the freshmen girls what Christmas at home, after being away to school, will be like.

Dorothy Narvan will give a violin solo; Jean Martin will read; and Christmas carols will be sung by Betty Hunt.

Kentucky Club held its meeting Thursday night, in the Y. W. C. A. reading room. Aubrey Bradshaw and Kenneth Blades sang a duet; Ruth Henry played the piano; and Maria Wynn gave several Christmas readings.

The newly organized German club met in the Y.W.C.A. auditorium, Friday night. Most of the conversation was conducted in German. The refreshments were German.

George Fischbach, and Daniel Hicks gave readings; Prof. Kenneth R. Lagerstedt explained Christmas in Germany. During the meeting, everyone joined in singing German songs and playing German games.

The officers of the German club are: George Fischbach, president; Dorothy Krupitzer, vice-president; Fred Kirchner, secretary; Robert Stevenson, treasurer; Robert Tripp, sergeant-at-arms; and Whilemina Quandt and Daniel Hicks, program secretaries.

OBSERVATIONS

—o—

If Professor Queener would stop wearing a hat it would complicate matters a great deal for some of the moonshiners on the second floor of Thaw. An axiom is (and it has been known to work) that if the hat is there the professor is there, and if the hat's gone, the professor is gone. Sort of a "cat's away, mice will play" idea, you know. We know that if Mr. Queener has the best interests of the students at heart, he will keep on wearing the headgear.

—o—

Although there can be seen plenty of room for improvement, there is already enough change in the appearance of some of the underclassmen to deserve our mention. There is a reason for it and the reason is obvious that we're prone to wish that Daddy Webb would take about four pictures of each of the students in the course of a year.

—o—

Ten would-be debaters were placed in the proper class, three judges were practically exhausted, and Professor Queener was satisfied after the debate tryouts in the Y. W. C. A. auditorium last Saturday afternoon. Several students became debaters—others remained debaters, while still others felt that although they were probably made much less popular they were also made much wiser for their efforts.

—o—

John Phay likes to tell tales of the Florida flood. His particular story relates of the man who was taken out to sea in a bathtub, with his wife accompanying him on the piano.

—o—

Your humble scribe has a distinct hankering to get hold of the fellow who instituted this tradition against the giving of neckties for Christmas presents. Here we are, all of us over in Carnegie, hard-up for neckties, and people will send us Christmas cards rather than give us neckties because they'll think it isn't the thing to do. Well, from right here on, one of the platforms of this column is "bigger, longer, wider, and more beautiful ties for Christmas presents."

—o—

We feel squelched after so many criticisms were laid before our eyes by the company of Byar and Kipp, and for that reason, and for the fact that we realize our weaknesses and our inefficiency, we all voted not to publish any more papers this year. May this meet with the approval of "you all". Let us voice ourselves once more when we say for everyone from the president to the freshman who spells his name with five f's that we hope you enjoy your Christmas as well as we are expecting to. . . Cheerio!

THE PROPER USE OF TEXT BOOKS

By Julia Terry

Textbooks have certain proper uses which should be put into practice by the students who wish to get a liberal education—and a liberal education that is practical.

In the first place, a textbook is an adequate repository for hairpins, handkerchiefs, old letters, and anything else that one feels the need of carrying around. The blank pages and margins of the book act as a satisfactory medium for a silent conversation during a class or while in the library.

A textbook makes a most excellent doorstop if it is of the proper weight. Any book on philosophy, physics, or physiology will be heavy enough to stop any door; in fact, such a textbook has infinite capacities for stopping a train of thought. A textbook has striking possibilities as a weapon if the proper stimulus is given and if the proper target presents itself; for instance, the roommate comes in and says, "Gimme a clean shirt; I have a date tonight". By all means use the textbook before your conscience attempts to guide you.

It used to be that the old grammar school geography would hide Tom Swift or the Rover Boys and even now a chemistry notebook amply covers the latest "Ballyhoo". A book is a most acceptable deceptive article of bluffing when one wishes to speak with one's friend down the hall during study hours. Of course, this foil has became rather weak after years of constant application, but with the proper amount of entreaty and desperation the latest gossip can be discussed behind closed doors and unsuspecting textbooks.

One of the greatest uses of textbooks is to challenge the fast-escaping chivalry of the young swains on the Hill, now that playing drop the handkerchief has become archaic, passe, and otherwise antiquated.

Textbooks also give one the appearance of high intellectual productivity—although as the old saying goes, some beauty is only skin deep.

A student who struggles around the campus loaded down with books, of course, may be a high type of bookworm, or he may be the admiring cohort of a studious upperclassmen, or he may be a chemistry assistant, or he may be anything; in fact, he may be chivalrous.

Which all goes to prove that textbooks are necessary impediments for the average collegian.

Viola Lightfoot: There's only one way that I can tell my Sunday dress from my school dress.

Frances Massey: How's that?

Viola: Well, my Sunday dress has cranberry sauce on it, and my school dress has beans.

Gilmore Here

Ah, Ha! We're here again, with rings on our fingers, bells on our toes, and sorrow in our hearts, for it's less than a week until semester examinations. Your observer feels like three blind mice when it comes to observing, but he nevertheless continues to try to see all, report all, and get in on as much scandal as possible.

When old Jack Diamond bravely bit the dust it meant mishap for several prospective Maryville engagements, evidently, for to date there has not been one rock seen on the hand of any fair young Co-Ed in these parts. Maybe the fellows are building their hopes on sand, or maybe they're depending on Leap Year to do the work. . . . which it probably will.

Great things should be in order for our college this year in the way of track. . . . . at least it should be good for all prospective broad jumpers and high jumpers.

Back to diamonds. . . . . Yankee Lewis thinks that diamonds are not in order anyway. . . he is strong in his preference for Opals. Well, everyman for his own likes and dislikes.

COMMITTEE CHOSEN FOR WOMEN HONOR RANKING SYSTEM

Terry, Purviance Chosen For Student-Faculty By Council

The student members of the Student-Faculty Honor Rank Committee, together with the members of the Student Honor Rank Committee, have been chosen and will begin functioning soon after the beginning of the second semester.

The student members fo the Student-Faculty Honor Rank Committee are Julia Terry, senior, and Mildred Purviance, junior, who were selected by the women on the Student Council. This committee has final jurisdiction in the matter of honor ranking.

The following students were chosen to represent their respective classes as members of the Student Honor Rank Committee: seniors, Barbara Lyle, Jeannette Eshelman, and Ann Smartt; juniors, Nathalia Wright and Dorothea Thomsen; sophomores, Katherine Wayland and Elizabeth Gillis; freshman, Maxie Smith. One of the senior members will be selected chairman of this committee.

This new Honor Rank System was inaugurated last April and has been in effect since that time. However, the above-named committees are the first that have been chosen for the purpose of determining the ranking of the dormitory women of the college.

These committees will function soon after the beginning of the second semester and proper delegation of ranking on the basis of scholarship, character, initiative will be made at this time. The committees will work in cooperation with the matrons and with the Dean of Women. The Dean of the College is chairman of the Student-Faculty Honor Rank Committee and with him serve five faculty members. Recommendations are given to the Student-Faculty Honor Rank Committee by the Student Honor Rank Committee and by the Dean of Women and matrons in the dormitories.

DR. W. H. FOULKES TO LEAD ANNUAL MEETING SERIES

New Jersey Pastor Is Man Of Note In International Youth Movements

STRINGHAM RETURNS

Song Leader Has Assisted In Last Ten Series Of Historic Meetings

The February Meetings of 1932 (February 2-10) will bring to the campus one of America's outstanding leaders of youth, Reverend William Hiram Foulkes, D. D., LL. D., Pastor of Old First Church (Presbyterian) of Newark, New Jersey, who has consented to be the leader.

Dr. Foulkes is vice president of the International Society of Christian Endeavor of which Dr. Dan R. Poling is president; is a member of the General Council of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A.; chairman of the Central Bureau of Relief for the Protestant Churches; Chairman of the Cooperative Committee on the Near East; a trustee of the American College at Sofia, Bulgaria; a member of the Executive Committee of the National Citizen's Committee of One Thousand for Law Enforcement; and is identified with other national and international movements.

The following are excerpts from a recently published article about him: "Minister, public speaker, writer, administrator. . . Dr. Foulkes is in the forefront of American religious life today. More vital even than that is the fact, recognized by all who have had opportunity to work with him, that he is keen, kindly, and thoroughly dependable in every personal relationship. . . . Dr. Foulkes has become nationally known as a leader of devotional services. His volume "Youth-Ways to Life", is but one of his writings, all of which reflect the spirit of a skilled observer of men and motives and of what Christ can do in daily living."

Dr. Foulkes is a graduate of the College of Emporia, Kansas, and of the Presbyterian Theological Seminary (formerly McCormick) Chicago. At the latter place he won a fellowship which enabled him to take additional work in the University of Edinburgh, Scotland. He has held pastorates in Elmira, Illinois; Clinton, Iowa; Portland, Oregon; New York City, and Cleveland, Ohio. His present parish in Newark has four church buildings and a staff of twenty persons.

For the eleventh consecutive year Reverend Sidney E. Stringham will be the leader of song. He is now pastor of the First Methodist Church of Pekin, Illinois, having gone to Pekin from Auburn, Illinois, within the past year.

CHILHOWEAN STAFF REPORTS PROGRESS ON NEW YEARBOOK

Proofs For Two Sections Returned To Staff

Work on the 1932 Chilhowean has been underway for some time and considerable progress has been made in the collection and arrangement of materials. The staff is very well pleased with the way the work has been going. Two books of the annual have been practically completed and proofs of the copy have been printed.

Pictures of the various clubs and organizations will be taken soon after the opening of the second semester. Individual pictures of the seniors are all in and have gone to press. Pictures of juniors, sophomores, and freshmen are expected to be in by the end of the semester. Those who intend to have their pictures in the annual and have not yet had them made should notify their class editor or the editor of the Chilhowean. The staff hopes to make the 1932 annual "bigger and better" and will appreciate the cooperation of the student body in this matter.

STUDENTS HEAR J. A. STEVENSON IN CHAPEL WED.

'The Fine Art of Thinking' Was Theme of Interesting Talk

The mere fact that prohibition, law enforcement, world peace, and social justice figure in our everyday vocabularies bids fair for better times, according to Dr. Joseph A. Stevenson, general director of the Department of Moral Welfare, Presbyterian Board of Christian Education, Philadelphia, who sees the crystallization of man's conception of right and wrong as the cure for present-day evils. Dr. Stevenson spoke on "The Fine Art of Thinking" at the morning chapel service last Wednesday.

"Ideas are the most powerful things in the world," said Dr. Stevenson. "There is always room for a vital thinker. The thought of right and wrong has never been eradicated from Man's ideas. Deterministic philosophy may be very learned in the forum but it has no place in the court room. Mr. Darrow may say, "Of course he killed that man but you have no right to hang him; he could do nothing else." Why has so-

STUDENTS ATTEND COMMUNITY CONCERT

Several students connected with the music department of Maryville, as well as a few members of the music club of the town, attended the concert of Jeanette Vreeland on Tuesday evening at the Church Street Methodist Church in Knoxville.

Miss Vreeland was presented under the auspices of the Community Concert Association and the Tuesday Morning Musical Club. She is a soprano of international popularity, but is proud of having received all her musical training in this country. The program Tuesday evening included two well rendered operatic numbers and some of the best loved shorter songs to be found in a cosmopolitan range of music.

This concert was the first in a series of three programs which are being sponsored in Knoxville during the season.

MISS McREYNOLDS RESIGNS

Announcement has been made by President Lloyd that Miss Grace E. McReynolds, Associate Professor of English since September 1929, has decided to give up her work in the College at the close of the first semester.

It is with regret that the College accedes to her request. Miss McReynolds received her B. A. degree from Maryville, and her M. A. from Cornell. She has studied also at Columbia. Her excellent training and experience and her admirable Christian spirit have made her a valued and highly esteemed member of the Maryville faculty.

As she lays aside her work here, she carries with her the good will and good wishes of the faculty and students.

TWO MIDWINTERS REMAIN ON CURRENT SEASON'S PROGRAM

Alpha Sigma, Theta Epsilon To Present Modern Plays In February

Intensive work has begun on the two remaining midwinters which will be presented in February by the Theta Epsilon and Alpha Sigma Literary Societies. Alpha Sigma is presenting "David Harem" on February 15 while Theta Epsilon presents "Alison's House" one week later on February 22.

"Tiny" Waters has the lead in "David Harem", assuming the role for which the play is named. He is the horse trader, bank director, and general big man around the little New England town in which the scenes are laid. David lives with his sister whom he calls Aunt Polly, this role being taken by Naomi Willingham. Mary Katherine Mize has the role of Widow Cullom who is continually being cheated out of her money by Ezekial, who is portrayed by Cecil Marley. Don Briggs and Kathryn Kizer carry the love plot while other characterizations are assumed by Allen Amsbury,

RUTH PEARSON, '30 HAS GOOD POSITION

Ruth Pearson, a graduate of 1930, has now assumed the company name of Margaret Mitchell in her work with The Aluminum Cooking Utensil Company. Ruth Pearson is the director of the "Wear-Ever" Experimental Kitchen located in the "Wear-Ever" Building in New Kensington, Pennsylvania. Her work consists of experimental work and sales promotion, working in cooperation with the sales, manufacturing, and advertising departments of The Aluminum Cooking Utensil Company.

While a student Ruth was an assistant in Home Economics, and since her graduation she has served as hostess, dietitian, and manager of southern resort hotels in which work she has achieved remarkable success.

PROFESSOR QUEENER HONORED

In the December 17, issue of The Orange and Blue, official publication of the students of Carson-Newman College, Professor Verton M. Queener of Maryville College received unusual recognition for his work as critic-judge in a debate between Carson-Newman and Emory-Henry College. The article follows:

"Perhaps the most enjoyable part of the debate was the critic-judge's report of Professor Queener of Maryville College. He took up each speaker's argument and gave its weak points as well as its high points. Never have the students of Carson-Newman witnessed such an interesting critic-judge's report. Mr. Queener understands debating."

ANNOUNCEMENT OF REVISED COURSES MADE BY OFFICE

Psychology, English, Home Ec Departments Make Revisions

A number of somewhat revised courses will be offered in various departments of the college for the coming semester. The ethics course required of all seniors will be taught by Dr. Orr, this being his first year of teaching ethics. He is planning to approach the subject from three different standpoints, namely, historical, practical, and theoretical standpoints. He will place special emphasis on the theory of ethical conduct. The course will be a lecture course with frequent group discussions.

Miss Keller is planning to have a class of junior psychology students who have done the best work in their respective classes this semester which will study the regular psychology course required of all juniors, Psycholgy 12, in a somewhat advanced form. That is, the students who compose this class will chose their own topics and make individual studies of subject matter which interests them most. The same text will be used as is used by the other classes but more intensive work will be done with the same material.

Miss Wilkinson will conduct a beginning French class which will be a great aid for those who failed to pass the first semester's work and for any new students who may enter at the middle of the year and wish to begin language work at that time.

REUNION OF WILSON FAMILY HELD DURING CHRISTMAS HOLIDAYS

Daughter President-Emeritus Returns From Syria

President-Emeritus and Mrs. Samuel Tyndale Wilson had the pleasure of entertaining all the members of their family during the Christmas holiday season, this being the first complete reunion they have enjoyed in more than twelve years.

Miss Lois Wilson, who is principal of the Sidon Girls' School of Sidon, Syria arrived on the Saturday before Christmas to spend her furlough in Maryville with her parents. Rev. and Mrs. H. B. Phillips of St. Louis, Missouri; Mrs. Mary Wilson White of Phoenix, Arizona; Mr. and Mrs. Howard Wilson of Johnson City, Tennessee; Mr. and Mrs. Lamar S. Wilson of El Paso, Texas; with Mr. and Mrs. Clyde T. Murray and two children of Maryville, were with Dr. and Mrs. Wilson for a number of days.

In coming and returning, the family will travel a distance of more than twenty-four thousand miles, almost around the globe.

FAMOUS PIANIST IN CONCERT NEXT TUESDAY EVENING

Vladimir Horowitz Hailed As Greatest Pianist Of Rising Generation

LYCEUM NUMBER

Great Interest Manifested By Music Lovers In All Nearby Cities

Vladimir Horowitz, the concert pianist who has been hailed by critics as the greatest pianist of the rising generation, and as the greatest genius presented to the American public since the debuts of Heifetz and Galli-Curci, will present a concert at Voorhees Chapel Tuesday evening, January 19th.

Mr. Horowitz will appear under the auspices of the Maryville College Lyceum Committee, and is undoubtedly the greatest attraction ever presented at Maryville. Tickets for the concert are rapidly being sold and students are advised to get theirs early. Many people from outside the college are expected to attend, as this is Horowitz's first appearance in this immediate vicinity.

Horowitz made his first appearance in this country when he was only twenty-three years old. He was immediately received with great acclaim by the critics, and has been described as a reincarnation of Listz, Chopin, and Rubinstein. His fame, however, is due solely to his ability as an artist, and not to any enraptured comments by critics.

Critics in attempting to describe have used many and varied figures. Some have spoken of "his Paganini magnetism", of his "ectrifying personality" and sum up his attraction for his audiences as "Horowitz magic."

Mr. Queener: Do you know Lincoln's Gettysburg address?

Elizabeth Duncan: No, I didn't even know that he lived there.

REGISTRATION FOR SECOND SEMESTER BEGINS MONDAY

First Four Days of Coming Week Alloted Students For Registering

The following schedule for second semester registration was issued from the college offices:

Seniors—Monday, January 18

Juniors—Tuesday, January 19

Sophomores—Wednesday, Jan. 20

Freshmen—Thursday, January 21

Registration will begin each day at 9:00 a. m., at the registrar's office in Anderson Hall, and continue until 3:00 p. m. Students who were registered for the year in September need not go to the registrar's office.

Students will enroll with the classes in which they enrolled in the first semester. No changes will be made until the grades are recorded. Those eligible for promotion will be notified.

Students should have their students' cards with them when they register. A duplicate will cost ten cents.

All students will be reported to teachers by Wednesday, January 27, and absences will be recorded beginning with that day.

The treasurer's office will be open for the payment of bills, from 9 a. m. until 3:00 p. m., on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, January 25, 26, and 27. The late registration fee of $5.00 will go into effect on Thursday, January 28.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Due to the semester examinations which are to be taken next week and the heavy work members of the staff will have there will be no ECHO issued Saturday, January 23rd.

The next issue will be the following Saturday, January 30th.

We feel certain that something should be done about something, but frankly we are not in the mood to reform anything. We sit down to the typewriter with the best intentions in the world to spread vitriolitic and vituperative phrases all over this page, with our mind filled with caustic and sarcastic epigrammitical statements meant to put the existing systems into the bone yard of disuse, but when we start to think them over our little balloon of indignation is suddenly punctured with a very loud "poof" for there's always "Well, on the other hand. . . . " and then we are lost.

But then, just to be consistent in our policy of inconsistency, we will mention a few things that have forced themselves upon our somewhat lethargic consciousness. . . .

A FIRE IN CARNEGIE

Might bring forth some amusing and comic situations. For instance, the fire hose in the south end of the first floor of the hall could hardly be used by anyone except an extremely cross-eyed man in a manner at all approaching efficiency. The reason for this unique characteristic of the aforementioned hose lies in a skillfully concealed slit, about thirteen inches long, running lengthwise down the side of the hose. A conduit of this kind, in use, would probably present the aspect of a roaring Niagara when viewed from the side, but from the front, the supposed business end of the instrument, a scene, reminiscent of the well-known eye dropper in action, would greet the close observer. It may suddenly become useful some day, but certainly not in its present condition.

WE ARE NOT ASHAMED

Of our scores in basket ball this season, but one futile glance at our scoreboard in the Alumni gym would make a visitor think so. It is really a fascinating game to deliberately lose count of the score in one of our many tilts and then try to solve the riddle of the scoreboard. It's harder than it sounds. Though the wit who said "a little paint is often justified by the end attained was not speaking of scoreboards, yet the same principle might apply.

BELIEVE IT OR NOT

There has been an organization on the Hill for several years known as the "Student Council". Various thinkers have put their minds to the task of finding a justification for this organization since its inception, but until this year failure has been the order of the day. However, success usually comes to those that do not get a faint heart and now the problem is solved. It is justified, according to this view, by its social activities. It is true that it is becoming more and more an organization to provide "As You Like It"s, "Much Ado About Nothing"s and mountain hikes. This is commendable and thanks are due them from the student body for these "lighter moments". But to keep the name from misleading some few, perhaps it would be better to change it slightly and interpose the word "Social" in it so it would read "Student Social Council of Maryville College."

A WORD OF THANKS

Is due someone for the work done on the steps leading to the second floor of Thaw Hall. In all probability a serious accident has been averted as students are prone to pull themselves up steps rather than push and a few more pulls would likely have caused a total collapse of the retaining bannisters. We do not know who to point out as the "good Samaritan" but if he or she should stand on those steps a short while and hear the comments made, thanks would be heard in no uncertain terms.

OBSERVATIONS

"butts" and "snipes" he pounces upon, the fact remains that his scavengeric operations keeps the "Row" in a more sightly state than formerly and he is to be congratulated upon this spirit of "loyalty" to his alma mammy.

If it pays to advertise, the writer is the athletic reporter for Ballyhoo. That goes, as far as this column is concerned, for after a prepared advertisement, denouncing the use of Christmas cards, and praising the custom of giving ties for Christmas, your unworthy scribe continues to go around with his shirt collar unbuttoned, after receiving a record number of Christmas cards.

Footprints on the campus were spare over the Holiday season and the grass got a chance to come out of its suppression. There was some walking on the campus over the vacation, we hear, some students being "night moonshiners" just to see how it might seem to defy the night watchman.

Drudgery will probably be in order until January 24, at which time it will be again "time to retire". Fisk's however, are not in popular favor, for everyone is hoping to take off safely and successfully with an entire set of Heavy Duty GoodYears.

Homer McCann continues to call his little woman by her nickname. He calls her "Zel" instead of "Zelma" because she hasn't yet received her M. A. Pretty clever, ... this Homer.

Bob West—debater, writer, friend of the professors, and still a popular student, who was at Maryville last year, returned for a short visit over the vacation. Bob is in Cumberland this year taking the law course given at that school. By the end of the year he expects to take the Bar examination for Tennessee, and then, as soon as possible he hopes to begin the practice of law in this state.

With the coming of spring there will be some necessity of our seeing better, a need which will probably necessitate the purchase of some binoculars. With the early spring. . these balmy days, and all, it looks like a bumper crop of pairs for the season that's on its way.

Georgie Osborne, senior president, thinks that the only place to use binoculars is from the third floor of Carnegie. That's like George. Wonder if you get that way being senior president.

Leland Gilmore, married and still happy, and graduate of the 1931 class, blew in one day last week. Lea is on the commencing end of a trip to the far west, probably New Mexico, where he will make an attempt to regain some of his old vim, vigor, and vitality.

Among the celebrated matches: Tennis . . Parlor . . Boxing . . Love . . .Safety . . Hacker and Company.

Dr. H. E. Orr Reads Paper At Monthly Faculty Dinner

'The Natrue of Evil and Its Relation to Ethics' Is Subject

Dr. H. E. Orr, head of the Religious Education department of Maryville College, spoke at the Faculty Club dinner last week. His theme was "The Nature of Evil and Its Relation to Ethics."

Dr. Orr's conclusions are that "ethical principles—principles of right conduct—are no less valid in the realm of life than the law of gravitation is in the natural universe. The penalties imposed for the violation of ethical laws are as relentless and inevitable as the penalties imposed for disregarding laws that govern the physical universe."

Dr. Orr believes in a difference between theological dogma and moral views and says that "the principles of a valid ethic are simply statements of the conditions under which fullness of life is possible.

"The idea seems to be that if theological views are open to question, moral laws are also open to question and may be found, at last to be made up mostly of the "narrow-minded notions of Grundyish moralists who have had their fling and whose middle-aged passions have now cooled'."

Before entering into this discussion of moral and theological views the speaker said that "the nature of evil bears directly upon practical ethical problems, because one cannot hope to set-up successful standards of right conduct unless he has some idea of why it is that wrong conduct is wrong and, quite naturally, the reason why wrong conduct is wrong has to be sought through a study of the problems of evil."

With Apologies

A "B" or not a "B"; that is the problem:
Whether 'tis better to sit up tonight
And try to memorize three hundred pages,
Or to get up at four o'clock tomorrow
Is to be questioned: to sleep; to snore;
No more; and by a sleep to say we miss
The joyous prestige of the honor roll
A "B" would give us when 'tis a distinction
Devoutely to be wished? To sleep; to snore;
To sleep; perchance to dream; aye there's the rub;
For in that guilty sleep what dreams may come
Of work we done and lessons long forgot.
Must give us pause. There's the regret
That makes calamity of too much pleasure;
For who would bear the whips and stings of shame,
His classmate's snurs, his favorite teacher's frown,
His parents' diappointment, and the tears
That missing a Cum Laude's sure to bring
When he might stay awake for one short night
To study for a two-hour test tomorrow
Who would these sorrows hear deliberately,
When by a little strength of will right now
He might attain the rank and dignity
So longed for by the common run of men,
But that he yawns with every sighing breath,
And nods in sleep most piteous to behold,
Making his roommate grunt disgustedly,
Call him a fool, and bid him go to bed.

—Jaculyn O'Dell.

The annual conference of the State Student Council of the Y. M. C. A. opened this morning at Nashville with delegates from the many colleges and universities in the state attending. Ralph Teffeteller, president of the Maryville association, will represent Maryville at the meeting. Mr. Teffeteller was elected president of the council last year. The delegates will discuss local campus work, problems, activities, and regional cooperation. The meeting will close tonight.

CLUBBY COMMENT

Theta Epsilon literary society will present "The Knave of Hearts", this evening. Betty Hunt will sing; Maria Wynn will read. Those in the pantomime are:

Dorothy Patillo, Lynette Johnson, Margaret Parnell, Mary Branche, Jasmine Orr, Emma Marshall, Elizabeth Lanterman, Charlotte Augustinus, Beatrice Thorson, and Thelma Iles.

Alpha Sigma literary society's orchestra will play at the meeting tonight.

"Corky" Crawford, ex-Athenian cartoonist, will appear before Bainonian literary society this evening. Norma Spilatore will sing, and the following will take part in a leap year stunt:

Julia Terry, Margaret Jones, Eunice Grant, Janet Stanley, Marjorie Soloman, and Alma Allis.

Athenian literary society will have at its meeting tonight Don Buchanan in "Bay Billy"; Thomas Davis playing the violin; and Harry Wood telling "how to get by" with exams.

The Home Ec. Club held its first meeting of the new year on Friday night in the Home Ec. lecture room. An interesting program on historic costume was given by one of Miss Brown's costume designing classes.

A committee consisting of Harvey Doublede, Thomas Duncan, and Robert Tripp, was chosen to work on the revision of the constitution.

A new use for alarm clocks has been discovered. Last spring we thought it novel to have Dr. Lloyd's April Fool's Day talk punctuated by the buzzes and rings of alarm clocks. Harry Mathias and Ruth Brocious had special music during their parlor date a few weeks ago. Some of Ruth's clever friends had hidden a number of alarm clocks in Pearsons' parlor for the event. They were set to go off at certain intervals of the date. A little early for jingle bells, we should say.

We're just thinking what a job it would be to hitch-hike seven or eight hundred miles back in the time when Dr. McMurray was a boy. He tells us that there were exactly four cars in existence when he was graduated from college. At that rate, some of us would come to school only every other year, spending the ensuing time going home and getting back to school.

KEYHOLE KOMMENT

If we have ever been an admirer of any state or condition, that state or condition is the state or condition which is commonly known as the state or condition of irregularity. Therein lies our motive for the seemingly insane antics of staying up an hour after we are ready for Morpheus rather than retire at the same hour two nights successively, of never applying any regularities to what gives us ecstacies to call our writings, and most irregular of all, that seldom seen irregularity of attending each and every matutinal orgy commonly classified as breakfast at Pearsons. Therefore, we are afforded an excessive amount of joy when we behold the unusual.

Since the time we desisted from the practice of sweet-swiping and began swiping our elder brothers cravats, we have always understood that June was good for no other purposes than marriage and graduation. Perhaps that is true yet. But we have discovered that graduation occurs at times other than June. In fact, Monday closes the careers of six Maryville students and begins the careers of six college graduates, among whom are Hubert Duncan and Judge Carper.

The first time we ever remember seeing Hube Duncan he was exercising his educated tonsils in unison with three other members, forming a quartette which was performing some hot perambulations for the entertainment and amusement of the populace at large. The tenor was exceptionally meritorius; the other two performers were excellent; but we were spellbound by the profundity of the notes which emitted from the cavern which opened in Duncan's face at regular intervals. He sings a wicked bass for the Glee Club, the choir, and other organizations songfully inclined. He has been holder of many important offices since he first took up his abode in Maryvlle's sole frat house, just off Court street. When he leaves the Hill we can all see a practical application of the old axiom which will demonstrate that his gain is our loss.

In Judge Carper we have the proverbial unseen blushing flower. Not that we are insinuating that the Midge is a pansy, but only are declaring that his is the case of a man being short-changed in credit. We would not detract from the glory of other linemen. In fact, we wish them power. But we think, and several sports authorities corroborate our opinion, that if a lineman ever played a game of ball, the Judge played that game against Carson-Newman. He has already bid his moleskins a farewell and as soon as he can afford to begin cuts, he will have made his last bow to the classroom, practically confident that he will not be obliged to answer an encore.

Hardwood Squad Off To Another Successful Season; Three Wins Are Recorded Against One Loss

Three Fast Independent Teams Are Defeated; Wesleyan Scores Triumph

WHITE LEADS WAY

Coach Honaker Uses Various Combinations In Early Season Games

Maryville College Highlanders are off to another successful basketball season and within the next two weeks they will be playing one strong conference team after another. This year's schedule is composed of more conference teams than ever before, since the loop title is to be decided this year on a percentage basis.

The Maryvillians opened the season with the Maryville Merchants and as was expected, they came through with a clean cut victory. The Highlanders showed a varied assortment of form in this opening game but through all the clouds of mistakes comes a ray of light in that the Scots were nothing short of brilliant at times.

Captain Easy White looked even better than he did at any time last year, and this season, which will be his last, should easily be his best. He showed an uncanny ability in hitting his one hand shots, and his defensive game was something to scribble to the folks at home about. He was aided and abetted by Jack Nee, Johnnie Kiser, Speedy Mann, Jack Overly, Bob Cherry, Yank Lewis, Joe Woodard and a host of freshmen.

The second game was with Woodruff's Sport Shop from Knoxville, and again the Maryville boys showed class that brands them as title contenders. The Woodruff's team is made up of the cream of the Knox County basketball crop and in defeating them the Scotties accomplished a feat of which they have a perfect right to be proud.

Captain White again led the team to triumph and again lots of basketball players took the floor for Mr. Honaker's team. He used almost everyone except Scott, Ross, and Dr. Lloyd's boys. Every man who was called upon to take part came through in fine style.

The Athletic House from Knoxville offered the opposition in the third game, and again the Maryville boys took things in hand. From the very first whistle to the last one the men of Honaker were out ahead, and never once were they threatened. They passed the ball with greatest speed and skill that they have shown in a long, long time, and their attack completely bewildered the Knoxville boys.

But it was the same old story when the Maryville boys took off foreign fields. They traveled to Tennessee Wesleyan Wednesday night and the Bulldogs were positively ferocious in avenging the defeat handed them by the Scots on the football field this season. They shot goals from every angle and the end of the game found them ahead of the Maryville outfit by a margin of five points.

The game was close until Captain White was removed from the game on personal fouls, but the brilliant Maryville leader could retire well satisfied as he had amassed a total of 18 points during his stay in the game. The final score, 45 to 40, shows that both teams concentrated more on offense than defense. Both scored enough points to win an ordinary ball game, and had either had a good defense, a victory would have been easy.

Wrestlers Meet Knox Y. M. C. A. This Week

Tough Meet Is Expected When Knoxvillians Come

Coach Bob Thrower is drilling a large squad of ambitious candidates daily for the coming grung and groan (?) season. With the first match of the season, with the Knoxville Y.M.C.A. only one week away, they will have to do some tall conditioning in this short time in order to get ready for their first encounter.

Coach Thrower is optimistic over the outlook for a very successful grappling season and he thinks that his boys will be able to stack up with the best of the college teams in a short while. He has Overly, heavyweight champion; Teffeteller, who was not deefated last year; Burns, one of the strongest men on the Hill; and a number of others with which to form his team.

The Knoxville "Y" team will offer the stiffest opposition that they have furnished in several seasons. Last week they completely swamped the Chattanooga Y. M. C. A. in their meet, and Coach Thrower and Cliff Overly, who witnessed the match, stte thaat their team is the strongest in several seasons.

No definite schedule has been arranged as yet but Coach Bob is trying to arrange a series of hard matches for his men and he will have the slate full in a few days.

It is always an interesting pastime to trace down the origin of "nick" names, but the reason for calling Arthur Lazell "Grocery Boy" has eluded us so far. Perhaps enlightenment will come to us by the next issue.

Assistant: The barometer has fallen.

Prof. Howell: Very much?

Assistant: Only five feet. The pieces are on the floor.

Wake up. What are you thinking about?

Nothing.

Don't be so self-centered.

SPORT SLANTS

By BOB HULE

Tie games infested the football season this year and it seemed as if the Highlanders would never shake off the jinx but they finally overcame this failing. Now there is another epidemic raging in the Maryville program of athletics and if something isn't done about it right away people are liable to start nodding their heads significantly and advising other colleges to play Maryville College somewhere besides Maryville College.

Last season, the Highlanders looked like the proverbial million dollars on the home floor but just let them take off on a road trip and watch them fold up and drop one game after another. If my memory serves me right and campus gossip is likewise O. K., the Highlanders won every single game at home, with the exception of course of the one with the Chattanooga Tepcos, and lost exactly every one of them playing on foreign courts.

This season the same old story has started. Captain White and his mates had little difficulty in trouncing the Maryville Merchants, Woodruffs' and the Athletic House, but Wednesday night they journeyed to Athens, the kennel of the Tennessee Wesleyan Bulldogs, and took a nice kicking in the pantaloons at the hands of Mr. McCray's men. The other teams around the circuit may take the idea that the Highlanders are able to win just because they are playing before the homefolks and under a local referee but that also leaks.

Now it could be that the boys always do their darndest to show their girl friends just how good they really are but for some reason or other, I don't take much stock in that theory either. Take Nee, Kiser, Mann, Woodard, Yank Lewis, Overly, White, Cherry and the rest; they might cast a fleeting glance at a fair damsel now and then but none of them go in for it in the Tolliver, Brown, Byerley, or Barr style. So that is out and I am in favor of looking for some other reason for this weakness.

Of course we could just play all of our games at home but what the Sam Hill would Mr. Honaker use for money? It's on those trips that the big "green wave" is made and if the Athletic Association depended on home games alone for their finances they would have to start charging moonshiners for their parking space in order to keep from going into the hands of receivers.

Oh well! They will HAVE to win a game on the road one of these days.

Coach Queener reports progress in the women's basketball teams. A good practice came from last week's scrimmages and the practice game next week should be very interesting.

The tournament will not be played until after examination week.

Songs For The Unsung

KELSO RENFRO. Renfro came here from Harriman and reported for football as a lineman. He looked husky enough to develop into a valuable man and Coach Bob Thrower spent quite a bit of time on him. He improved by leaps and bounds and developed into a good reserve lineman. He is a rather quiet fellow, has very little to say about anything but he is always in there working and doing his very best. He stayed with the squad throughout the season and he very seldom missed a practice session. He will be back next year and he should make the team a valuable man with a year of experience behind him.

BURTON GRAHAM. Graham was the smallest man on the football squad this year and he was also one of the most faithful members. He stayed out day after day and took the tough grind that is dealt out to varsity men and reserves alike and he stuck it out until the last game had been played. He weighs considerably under the 150 mark but he had more grit than lots of men much larger than himself. He is a member of the freshman class and will be back next year. It is a safe bet that he will be one of the first men to report for duty when Coach Honaker issues the call for football practice.

TED WILLOCKS. Willocks hails from Farragut High School in Knox County where he was one of the best track men ever turned out in Knox County. He had had no football experience whatever but his size and speed made him a possible future star on the gridiron. He labored day after day trying to learn the fundamentals of football and needless to say it did not take very long. He was used in the line on the reserve team and he shows signs of developing into a good man before he takes his diploma. He is another first year man and before many seasons have passed he should give some one a run for their money for a varsity position.

WILLARD LAMPE. Lampe probably improved as much this season as any man on the squad. He is a comparatively small man for line duty but he served as an understudy to Ferguson and Russell at center and he showed enough ability to be taken on some of the trips. He will return next year and he should see lots of service at the pivot position.

Maryville Wins Over Knoxville Y. M. C. A. For First Victory On Foreign Court In Two Years

Bob Cherry, Freshman, Leads In Scoring Department As Scots Triumph

LINEUP UNCERTAIN

Coach Honaker Tries Numerous Combinations In Search For Best Team

Bob Cherry, freshman star, showed the way in the Highlanders first victory away from home in more than an entire season when the Highlanders subdued the Knoxville Y. M. C. A. team at Knoxville last night. The final score was 31 to 28 and the Maryvillians led at the half way mark by a score of 17 to 9.

Evidently Coach Honaker is still undecided upon his starting lineup and Friday night's game found White and Overly at forwards, Mann at center and Nee and Woodard at the guard posts. This combination did not work together as Maryville teams are supposed to and the Maryville mentor will probably keep experimenting until he finds a lineup that will work smoothly together.

Kiser, Wilson, and Cherry were used during the game and all of them came through with the stuff that makes varsity performers. Cherry was especially brilliant in his short stay in the game and the fact that he scored 12 points, most of which were on crip shots, makes it the more remarkable. Wilson is handicapped by a broken finger but he is staying with the squad in a desperate effort to stay in shape so that he will be ready for the long conference schedule ahead of the Maryville team.

Kiser is undoubtedly one of the best ball handlers on the team and it is a safe bet that he will be in there before the season is over. He is especially good at bringing the ball down the floor and his defensive work is all that could be asked for. He also has a year of experience behind him and he has learned to work into the Honaker system of basketball in a favorable manner.

The lineups follow:

Maryville	Pos.	Knoxv. "Y"
Overly, 4	f.	Taylor, 4
White, 6	f.	Scott, 8
Mann	c.	Brown, 6
Nee, 4	g.	Bronston, 8
Woodard, 5	g.	Blackwell, 4

Subs—"Y": Blatsky, Snodderly; Maryville: Cherry 12, Kiser and Wilson.

March 1—King	Here

Scots On Tennessee Schedule

Maryville football fans were kept in the dark for quite awhile about the Tennessee-Maryville football game next year, but after much deliberation and argument, the University of Tennessee officials have announced the Vols' schedule for next year and the Highlanders, although they do not occupy the usual place on the schedule, that of the first game, are on the Vol schedule and now hold the place on the card that the Carson-Newman Eagles formerly held.

The Highlanders and Vols will play just before the Tennessee team plays Vanderbilt and it is expected that the Maryville game will furnish the Vols a "breather" before their all-important game with the Commodores from Nashville. However, the Highlanders might spring a surprise on the Neylandites and if the Tennessee Coach chooses to take his varsity to Nashville to witness the Vanderbilt game, as has been his custom on the day of the Carson-Newman game, he may be forced to send his team back to Knoxville in a big hurry.

Moonshiners were dumbfounded last Sunday night when they came to the end of the slow march to Pearsons after Vespers. Helpless wasn't the word. Every nook and post was occupied by couples of girls huddled together, mimicking, and giggling.

Lawyer: Even admitting that my client struck you, how can you charge him with giving you pneumonia?

Client: After he had got me into a hot argument he knocked me cold.

Mrs. Firefly: Go, I never want to see you again.

Mr. Firefly: All right. You glow your way, and I'll glow mine.

We are a little skeptical about the new "Perfected prune" recently announced. To our way of thinking, prunes will always be adding new wrinkles.

'BUCK' BUCHANAN SENDS INTERESTING LETTER TO EDITOR

Japanese Student Has Unusual Method of Expressing Gratitude

Recently the editor received a letter from Edwin (Buck) Buchanan, '31, who is now in Nagoya, Japan "teaching the Buddhists how to become better Buddhists; keeping out of arguments about the Manchurian question; telling the boys Indian and cowboy stories and occassionally teaching a bit of conversation."

"Buck" sent a copy of an actual letter written by a young Japanese man to a missionary who had invited him to dinner. This is an uncorrected copy of the missive received by the missionary and shows that the young man had an interest in English even if the meaning of all the words was not exactly clear. The letter follows:

My dear sir:

I have the honor to inform you that the last sunday was the most pleasant day when I was favored by the happiness of enjoying the divine lattany in the forenoon, while the afternoon seems almost as if a windfall, for during the occasion you condescended to deign a sort of sciol dinner by which you showed explicitly the fullness of benign, cozy, suave heart. I can make neither head nor tails of the cordial hospitality you vouchsafed to extend so far to me, in the very confidence of the swoon of exhilirating ecstacy generated amidst that function. I may b surmised that I took twin meals aday, the one, esculent, or fleshy diet, the other, spiritual banquet, or immaterial entertainment. I go so far as to assert that this course of events niched upon my mind as an indelible impression which shall not be worn out or stamped out if I shall have to come to pay my debt of nature.

May the lord bless you to enjoy a perrennial heyday and a lasting prosperity.

Please forgive my inexcusable effrontery to express my heartfelt thanks for your inundating kindness by means of such a grue billet as would invariably cast my impudent act in your teeth.

I beg in the end, you would, in my behalf, give my goodhumoredly compliments to the rest of your family.

STUDENTS HEAR DR. STEVENSON IN CHAPEL

ciety no right to hang him? If he could do nothing but murder because of internal and external influences, we can do nothing but hang him because of the same influences.

"The human race has never been able to escape the consciousness of personal responsibility," continued Dr. Stevenson. Opinions differ and things that were considered wrong in one age are considered right in another, and the opinion is rarely unanimous about any of them.

This, according to the Presbyterian educator, is a sign of progress The fact that our opinions change has made possible a progressive development of social consciousness and the idea of human welfare.

"When a sufficient number of people conclude that certain things have no right in civilized society, out they go", he said. "It is for the student body of today to discover the problems of human welfare o tomorrow. Not to be guided by the dogmatist, the ambitious politician, the habits of the past, the prejudices of yesterday, but the facts of today.

"Think for yourself", Dr. Stevenson urged. "The fine art of thinking is to be recommended because it is so delightful, so helpful, and has so little competition. If the facts of today indicate the perfection of an economic system in which millions cry for bread while millions of buskels of wheat lie in our elevators, support that system; if not, seek a better way. If war seems to be the best possible solution of economic difficulties, send the best men of the country to certain death as proof of a point; if not, cultivate a passion for peace. If alcholic beverages make for physical, mental, moral and spiritual ruggedness, for better homes, better business, then advocate wholesale consumption. But if sane thinking tells you, as it will, that moral welfare can be promoted through prohibition, stand fast with the drys."

THE LITTLE CHURCH

MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION

The new officers of the Ministerial Association were elected at the regular meeting last Tuesday night. The following men were chosen to lead the association for the second semester: president, Robert Stevenson; vice-president and program secretary, Warren Warman; secretary and treasurer, Harry Wood; editor, Edward Cooper. The meeting next week will be held on Wednesday night and the new officers will be installed.

The association sent Andrew Newcomer as a delegate to the Eleventh Quadriennial Convention of the Student Volunteers at Buffalo, and Mr. Newcomer will give a report of the convention in the near future.

STUDENT VOLUNTEERS

At the Student Volunteer meeting tomorrow night the second of a series of four meetings dealing with the recent convention at Buffalo will be held. Last Sunday night Michael Testa gave the first report, consisting of a description of the mechanical side of the convention. Tomorrow night a report will be given of the proceedings of the convention in regard to the present world situation. Four of the delegates will speak: Andrew Newcomer, Roberta Robison, Janet Warren, and Frank Neff. On January 24 the topic will be "The Convention and the Missionary Enterprise." At the final meeting of this series, January 31, a talk by the president of the group, Elizabeth Gillis, on the interpretation or critical analysis of the convention will be given. Dorothy Casseres, program secretary, will discuss briefly the question, "After Buffalo—What?"

At the last meeting a committee was appointed to make recommendations for a faculty advisor for the group. A committee was also appointed to look into the matter of getting a room for the Student Volunteers, which they could have for their own use.

TWELVE MARYVILLE STUDENTS ATTEND BUFFALO MEETING

Representatives Of College Report Successful Conference

The twelve Maryville College students who attended the Eleventh Quadrennial Convention of the Student Volunteer Movement returned on Tuesday, January 5. 2,200 delegates from colleges, universities, and theological schools of the United States and Canada, as well as representatives from many foreign countries, met in Buffalo, New York, from December 30 through January 3. The theme of the convention was "The Living Christ in The World of Today."

The speakers included some of the outstanding religious leaders of today. Heading this list were John R. Mott, one of the creators of the Student Volunteer Movement; T. Z. Koo of China, a vice-president of the World's Student Christian Federation; D. D. T. Jabavu, a South African educator and social server, said to be the best known African today; Robert E. Speer, Senior Secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions; William E. Miller, Missionary to Persia; Kirby Page, editor of "The World Tomorrow"; Samuel M. Zwemer, for forty years a missionary to the Moslem world and now a professor at Princeton Seminary; Walter Judd, a medical missionary from China; and Paul W. Harrison, a medical missionary to Arabia.

There were two main auditorium meetings each day at which the whole convention assembled to hear the various speakers. Round table discussion groups were held in the afternoon, conducted by the different leaders and dealing with twenty-six subjects, some of a distinctly missionary type, and others dealing with the present world situation.

Among the special features of the convention were a trip to Niagara Falls, an allegorical pageant representing the struggle of mankind for freedom, a one-act play presented by students of Chicago Theological Seminary, and an informal party on New Year's Eve. The South Atlantic Region of the Student Volunteer Movement held a luncheon, at which one ninth of the total number present were Maryville College students.

Representatives of the local Student Volunteer group were Elizabeth Gillis, Dorothy Casseres, Frank Neff, Roberta Robison, Michael Testa, Lila Barr, Eleanor Winn, Janet Warren, Lorenna May Dunlap, and Katherine Keeler. Andrew Newcomer was the delegate from the Ministerial Association.

Alumni and former students from Maryville College present at the convention were Walter Courtenay and Albert Tull, of Princeton Seminary, Vera Bowden, Richard Strain of Vanderbilt University, and Glenn Murray, who is at the University of Texas.

TWO MIDWINTERS ON SEASON'S PROGRAM

Wilbur Johnson, Bob Byerly, and others. Reno Smith is a very convincing deacon in the play who is susceptible to purchasing horses which David sells him, the value of the horses being overestimated.

The play contains very fine character work and the parts have been admirably assigned. Larry Somers is the stage manager.

Different in most respects from "David Harem" is "Alison's House." This is a biographical play having to do with the family of Alison Stanhope who has been dead for eighteen years at the time of the play. Her old home is to be sold and her relatives are gathered about to share in the disposition. All action of the play takes place on the night of December 31, 1899. Alison's sister, Agatha who symbolizes the old century, reveals a long-guarded secret which is embodied in a series of manuscript poem revealing the life of the pet, Alison.

The play is somewhat slow-moving but full of trouble implications which make a most intensive and thought-producing representation of both character and plot elements.

The leading role of Elsa is portrayed by Mildred MacKenzie; Eben, her brother, is Linsey Tope; the role of Agatha is taken by Mary Lovette. Stanhope, the father of Eben and Elsa, and brother of the dead Alison is characterized by Harry Mathias. Ann Smartt and Coile Quinn carry the love element through the play. Comedy roles are carried by Charles West, Larry Somers, and Charlotte Mathis.

The play is written by Susan Glaspell and won the Putlizer Prize in Drama for the season of 1930-1931. It is considered by the judges as "the original American play which shall best represent the educational value and power of the stage."

Frances Massey is stage manager. Mrs. Nita Eckles West is directing both midwinters.

COLLEGE GRADUATES SIX AT MID YEAR

Students Finishing Now Will Get Diplomas In June

Six members of the senior class are being graduated at the end of this semester. They are Thomas Gann. Wilson Gillingham. Hubert Duncan, Maurice Carper, Fred Urch, and John Urch.

Gann, who lives in Soddy, Tennessee, was assistant to the coaches during the football season. He majored in pychology and education.

Gillingham majored in history. He is the son of Dr. Clinton H. Gillingham, formerly registrar of the College and head of the Bible department. He lives at Glenside, Pennsylvania.

Duncan is from Flat Rock, Illinois. He is a member of the Vesper Choir and the Maryville Glee Singers. He majored in political and social science.

Carper is one of the Maryville representatives on the All-Smoky Mountain Conference football team. His major subject is mathematics.

Fred and John Urch live in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Fred majored in Greek and the classics, and John concentrated his energies on chemistry.

These seniors will receive their diplomas with the rest of the class in June.

HAZY IMPRESSIONS—Beale

Christmas has again retreated; indeed, one prominent wit insists that it never came to the Hill, if you let Pearsons be the indicator. The new year is no longer new and, as a matter of fact, we never could see the difference between this one and the last one. Down on the shore of Court street the boys have stopped offering each other cigarettes and it becomes quite a task to bum one. Sale of kerosene to Carnegie inmates is mounting. Therefore, we are able to tell that the holidays have been ended two weeks and that the next week will bring rings in other places besides on fingers. In other words, exams are upon us.

One of the most miserablest feelings ever to be encountered during these said and aforesaid exams is that empty gnawing which nags the ole cranium when the prof's blackboard literature deals with a subject of which we have never heard. The next worse feeling comes when we have heard of the subject, but are not sure whether or not a certain gentleman was a Swedish vetinarian or a fellow that wrote sonnets.

These hazy impressions are unconvenient possessions at times. For instance, when some ex-hotic co-ed quizzes her swain as too some heroic deed which he has claimed to have committed, dark and dire distress is sure to be his lot if he fails to coincide with himself on varying occasions of its telling and retelling. If he has previously proclaimed that he pursued a tiger acrosss the Sahara desert in 1926, his soul will never see rest if he allows a hazy impression to mislead him into stating that the terrible incident occurred in '27.

But hazy impressions are not always useless. On the contrary, they have their good points at times. When asked where we were on the night of the 23rd, it is much more to our advantage to manfully assert that we don't remember then to break down and confess that we were engaged in a game of darktown dominoes or at the home of the questioner, especially if he does not trust his wife (of course he would trust a pal). And then, when the roomy demands his tie or a quart of your life-blood, always put up a good front and declare that you aren't sure but that you believe the lunatic in the next cell borrowed it a week ago last February.

And then, hazy impressions are—probably by this time every one concerned in this business does not even have a hazy impression of this lecture, so we declare the class dismissed.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF REVISED COURSES

An English course in Modern British and American Poetry will be offered by Dr. Hunter, the course number being English 31 C. It is primarily a literature course with very little technical material involved. The best modern poetry of Britain and America will be studied.

Miss Meiselwitz is offering a course, Survey of Foods, Home Economics 33b, more commonly known as the "Brides' Course."

The course will include the general theory of food preparation; food selection and purchase; selection of of kitchen equipment; selection of linens, china, silver; table setting and meal service; child feeding; and afternoon and evening party refreshmets. It is a three-hour course with a lecture and two laboratory periods a week. The course is elective for juniors and seniors.

Home Economics 35 B is the course for men, a two-hour course with one laboratory period and one lecture period each week. A somewhat wider field is covered than in the Course 33b. Some of the problems which will be discussed are those concerning proper etiquette such as, how to be a successful host, how to conduct a good social event, how to become the perfect guest and the most popular man in the crowd; problems relating to foods, such as how to select a nutritious well-balanced meal, how to prepare simple foods; and problems relating to clothes, such as, how to discriminate between fad and fashion, and how to know good from poor material.

Very few changes will be made in the schedule of courses as they are compiled in the bulletin, a copy of which each student received last fall.

S COLLEGIATE S !W P! A

The new year has found us so disconsolate that we won't even take the trouble to wish our reader (we must have one, if no more) a happy new year (not capitalized this year). But we have one consolation. Soon the presidential candidates will begin preparations for their campaign and those of us who are inveigled into listening to addresses will see clearly that each party has at last found the Corner. With this happy thought, let us turn our discussion to what our fellow-loafers are doing in other colleges.

Only ten more years and we can all afford a Columbia degree. A gentleman of that institution recently prepared a fusillade which showed that the percentage of self-supporting students there has been on a rapid increase in the past few years. He predicts that the year 1941 will see no Columbians who are not earning their own beans, or whatever they use as a substitute for food at Columbia.

Engineering students at the University of Kentucky have recently been studying mine disasters and how to prevent them. That's all very well for the engineers, but we suggest that some department of the school should study mine strikes and their subsequent prevention. Not presuming to tell another school how to conduct its affairs or anything like that, but merely passing a suggestion as among friends.

Love is not blind, it is merely astigmatic. It makes a girl see twice as much in a man as there really is.

First Student: Boy, my fortune is made.

Second Dumbell: How?

First Student: I've invented a fountain pen with the table attached.

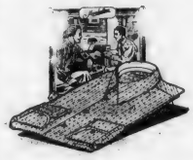
When there is no work to do, a man talks about women. When there is no man to work, a woman talks about the way men talk about women.

Fishback: I was just shaved by a barber who wasn't a gentleman.

Roommate: How do you know he wasn't a gentleman

Fishback: It was a lady barber.

Miss Jewell: What happened to Joan of Arc?



Student: She was shot.

Miss Jewel: But there were no guns in those days.

Student: Anyway, the lesson says that she was cannonized.

VOLUME 17 — THE HIGHLAND ECHO, MARYVILLE, TENNESSEE, JANUARY 30, 1932 — NUMBER FOURTEEN

OBSERVATIONS

Pistol Creek
Disarmed Apples!
Carnegie Peaceful
We Substitute

Anything for publicity. Chorus girls are made stars simply because they divorce their hubbies and remarry to Count De Liver, or some other noble personage. All walks of life clamor for notice. We even observed Saturday that Pistol Creek, not to be outdone by Ole Man River down in Mississippi, got flabbergasted and wet up most of the surrounding territory. Last reports indicated that the courthouse was thought to be free from danger. We hope so anyway.

It proves very interesting to note at times the number of stairs in the various buildings. Pearsons abounds in stairways. Carnegie and the other halls re decorated with n stair motif. Even Dr. Lloyd's home is reched only after an ascension of fifteen steps of about eight inches. It has been estimated that if all the stairs on the Hill were piled afainst one of the California redwood trees, Maryville eds and coeds would be in what is vulgarly known as a heckuva mess.

Discussion of disarmaments reminds us of our mental perambulations each time apples are served at Pearsons. Judging from the number of flying cores and dodging victims, the student council would profit much by calling a disarmament conference to discuss the problem. Maybe the powers that be in Pearsons kitchen could be persuaded to serve cored apples to the monsters who infest the club.

Everyone seems to notice that breakfast attendance has fallen off considerably the past few weeks. Some philosophers advance the theory that the missing ones are merely catching up with their sleep following the strenuous days of exam week. But we know better. The solution to the situation lies in

ALPHA SIGMA WILL PRESENT NEXT MID-WINTER OF SEASON

"David Harum" Portrays Life In New York Village Forty Years Ago

WATERS IN TITLE-ROLE

Theta Epsilon's Presentation Of "Alison's House" To Be February 22

Alpha Sigma literary society will make its 1932 bid for the Theta Alpha Phi cup with the presentation of "David Harum" on Monday evening February 15. This play is a dramatization of Westcot's novel by the same name. Like the other Mid-winters of this season it does not have a modern setting. The time of "David Harum" is the era just before the advent of automobiles. The title-part, played by Floyd Waters, portrays a kindly old soul of the Scattergood Bains type.

The examinations and the break between semesters slowed up work on the play, but with the beginning of the new semester, work has been resumed and the dramatic committee of Alpha Sigma and the cast hope to make this play the best Mid-winter of the year.

On Monday evening, February 22, Theta Epsilon will present the famous prize-winnnig play "Alison's House", by Susan Glaspell. This play also has a well chosen cast, and both the cast and others connected with the production are working hard to make the "prize-winning play" be a "cup winning play."

Alison's House deals with the life of the poetess, Emily Dickenson, who wrote beautiful lyric cycles portraying events and interests prior to the "gay Ninneties." The opening setting of the play is in 1890, and throughout its length is found a "subtle posthumous laudation of the secret and beautiful love of a poetess."

This plot promises unusual situations and the production is being awaited with interest as to the local interpretation.

British picture shows are visited by something like 30,000,000 people every week.

Our Local Merchants

[AN EDITORIAL]

Few students realize that the life of the HIGHLAND ECHO depends upon its services to the merchants of Maryville as an advertising medium. A great amount of money is spent each year by the students with the business men of this and adjoining cities. It is solely through this paper that these merchants can reach this large source of revenue.

This they have been doing. Paid advertisements have and are still being given this paper, even though the man behind the counter sometimes thinks it is a useless expenditure. They have come to believe, and possibly not without reason, that the average student prefers to take the long trip to Knoxville to purchase a fly-swatter, or an inkstand rather than buy it of a local dealer because a common idea exists that better values can be obtained in larger centers. True this was a fact decades ago when transportation facilities were limited but in this day the same article at the same price may be purchased at the cross-roads grocery as on Jefferson Avenue in Detroit.

These merchants are calling attention weekly to their goods in the pages of the ECHO. Notice them and decide to buy at home. The article is just as good and just as "late". Read the advertisements, patronize our home dealers, help the local merchants, and by aiding them make possible the ECHO.

PRESIDENT, DEAN ATTEND CONFERENCE OF COLLEGE ASSN.

Dr. Lloyd Reads Paper Before Presbyterian Group In Cincinnati Meet

During the week of January 18, Maryville was represented at the annual meeting of the Association of American Colleges held at the Netherland Plaza Hotel in Cincinnati by President Lloyd and Dean Hunter. There were several different groups meeting during this conference period among which were the Boards of Denominational Colleges, the Council of the Church Board, the Liberal Arts College Movement, and the Association of American Colleges.

On Tuesday there were held meetings of the various denominational college groups. Dr. Lloyd, of course, attended the Presbyterian group, which is made up of fifty-one Presbyterian colleges from all over the United States. At this meeting he read a paper entitled "The Development of Spiritual Values on the Campus." Three different phases were discussed at this meeting, the other two being, the financial problems of the denominational school, and the developing of the college and the fine arts.

On Wednesday there were meetings of the Council of Church Boards made up of those interested in the problems of higher education in the Protestant denominations. The Liberal Arts College Movement also held meetings on this day at which time the values of the smaller college were discussed.

The regular meetings of the Association of American Colleges were held on Thursday and Friday of this conference week at which primarily college presidents and deans were in attendance.

These meetings are held every January and are an aid in coordinating the various types of colleges and in the exchange of ideas and suggestions as to improvement of education in colleges.

Fifty thousand tons of peanuts are produced annually in the United States.

VLADIMIR HOROWITZ WINS ACCLAIM OF VISITING CRITICS

Noted Pianist Receives Well-Deserved Applause of Music Lovers

Interest in the concert of Vladimir Horowitz, given in Voorhees Chapel January 19, was not confined to the students of the college. The following news clipping from The Knoxville Journal for January 20 gives a critic's opinion of the program:

Pianist Vladimir Horowitz thrilled an SRO audience at Voorhees chapel, Maryville College, Maryville, last night, and received a well deserved ovation at the conclusion of his program.

Bach, Hummel and Brahms were represented in the first part of the program, and Chopin, Liszt and Stravinsky in part two.

Salvos of applause followed an appealing rendition of Brahm's 7 Valses, Opus 39 and Variations on a theme of Paganini, in which the artist displayed a touch of rare beauty, matchless technique and pure musicianship.

The Stravinsky group that concluded the program, "Petrouchka", "Chez Petrouchka", and "La Somaine grasse, Danse russe', was played with such gigantic power and dazzling mastery that the audience was swept off its feet. Horowitz was called back several times and finally gave two encores, Chopin's "Minute Waltz, in D Flat" and his own arrangement of "Chason Boheme", from Carmen.

Scores of Knoxville music lovers attended the recital. They were excitedly enthusiastic in their praise of frail-looking Vladimir Horowitz, whose power and technique are so stupendous as to be almost unbtlievable. Maryville college is to be congratulated for it enterprise in presenting this great musician.

FROSH DEBATERS TRY-OUT TODAY

Today, Miss Heron, Miss Crawford, and Prof. Kiger, will meet to discern the true debating ability in twelve of the fifty ardent, enthusiastic, would-be Freshman debaters. During Saturday afternoon and evening, the services of the judges will be required. The tryouts for the Freshman teams are to be held in the Y. W. C. A. auditorium. Interest is at its highest point and competition is keeping the debate class alert and eager.

PRESIDENT GIVES TWO HYMN BOARDS

Dr. Ralph W. Lloyd is the donor of the two song boards now being used in Voorhees Chapel. They are dark walnut, to match the furniture of the pulpit instead of the lighter oak woodwork.

According to Dr. Lloyd, he had planned to do this for some time. A third song board, to be placed opposite the clock, may be purchased in the near future. This will enable the choir to see the song numbers.

LEADER

DR. W| H. FOULKES

COLLEGE FOUNDER HONORED IN SHORT TALK BY PRESIDENT

Seventy-Fifth Anniversary Of Death Observed In Chapel Thursday

A significant event, the 75th anniversary of the death of Dr. Isaac Anderson, was the subject of a short talk by President Lloyd in our Thursday morning chapel service. Dr. Anderson, founder of Maryville College, and president for 38 years, was a pioneer in what was then known as the "Great Southwest", now the regions of Tennessee, Alabama, and Mississippi.

Maryville, like many other American colleges, had its origin 'in the religious zeal of early pioneers. Soon after his ordination to the ministry Dr. Anderson founded Union Academy on his farm in Grassy Valley, near Knoxville. This was known throughout the county as "Mr. Anderson's log college." During the week he spent his time teaching here, and on Sunday resumed his duties as minister to the Scotch-Irish families, who like him had migrated to this section. In 1811 he accepted the pastorate of the New Providence Presbyterian Church in Maryville. When he re-

ANNUAL MEETINGS WILL BEGIN NEXT TUESDAY MORNING

Dr. W. H. Foulkes of Newark, N. J. Will Be Speaker In College Services

FIFTY-SIXTH SERIES

Reverend Sidney E. Stringham Will Again Conduct The Singing

For the next week, beginning tomorrow, Tuesday, February 2, Maryville will focus its attention on the fifty-sixth series of annual February Meetings. During the eight days from February 2 to February 10, Maryville students, faculty, and the community of Maryville will have the opportunity of hearing Dr. William H. Foulkes, D. D., LL. D., speak in the college chapel on subjects which will be of interest to everyone attending the services.

In a letter received from Dr. Foulkes he states concerning his theme, "I have not announced a series of topics although my central theme will naturally be the fullness of life revealed and redeemed through Christ. There are so many angles of approach to the central theme of the Gospel that I prefer not to announce in advance the full series."

Dr. Foulkes is a nationally-known man of high repute and is especially noted for his abilities as a devotional leader at the International Conferences of the Christian Endeavor. For many years he has successfully handled this phase of the conference programs, speaking to as many as 20,000 students at one time. In 1928 Dr. Foulkes was one of the four principal speakers at the International Conference of Christian Endeavor held in Berlin, Germany, the conference at which Dr. Lloyd was present. Among the other speakers were Dr. Dan Poling and the American Ambassador to Germany.

Dr. Foulkes holds offices in many national organizations among which are, The National Citizens' Committee of One Thousand for Law Enforcement, The General Council of the Presbyterian Church, U. S.

The 'Ideal Professor' Is Subject Of Student's Pen

Since the time that we got our first lashing in grade school for putting pepper in the teacher's pansies, we have wanted to expound at length our conception of what a teacher should be. We have never before had such an opportunity, since up until now we have always had a feminine faculty member on our roster. Naturally, our chivalry has always forced us to suffer in silence. However, the second semester is here, and from a to e, we have classes only under the tutelage of masculine pedagogists.

In the first place, we never did believe that a teacher should delegate each one of his charges to a specific chair. We of artistic temperament grow tired of oneness. We must have our change. We like to change our shirts, our socks, our positions, our manners, and even, rarely, our diet, although we seldom do this while striving to wrest three squares per day from that den of everlasting hunger commonly called Pearsons.

And, of course, we like a teacher who brightens the weary path of erudition with an occasional pun, joke, or even wisecrack (Ballyhoo quotations grow boresome, however). According to our self-conctructed rule book, a class without humor is as dry as a W. C. T. U. political meeting.

And then, up pops this matter of work. Of course, work is a wonderful thing in its place. But we have spent the entire number of our years endeavoring to discover wherein doth be work's place. We know that it is necessary on the rock-pile (or so we have been told). Others assure us that it is of primary importance in the steel indus-

MILDRED CRAWFORD ACCEPTS POSITION IN ENGLISH DEPT.

Member of Class '31 Retained To Instruct Systematic Discourse

Mildred Crawford, a graduate of the class of 1931, has been added to the English teaching staff as instructor in English 1, Systematic Discourse. While a student, Miss Crawford attained distinction in debating and oratory, being a member of the varsity debate team for several years and the winner of the T. T. Alexander Prize in Oratory in 1981.

Miss Crawford was prominent in dramatics. She was a member of College Players, and participated in several midwinters. She was also a member of Pi Kappa Delta, the national debate fraternity, and held the presidency during her senior year. Miss Crawford coached the freshman girl debaters last season and put forth a winning team.

During her junior year Miss Crawford was editor of the Chilhowean, the college year-book, and while she was a senior she was president of the Bainonian Literary Society for one term. Many other offices could be mentioned that were held by Miss Crawford during her four-year stay at Maryville. She was a popular member of her class and was well-knownn and well-liked by the student body as a whole.

Since her graduation in June she has been teaching at her home in Lyerly, Georgia.

Survey Reveals Interesting Facts On Student Spending

On November 19, 1931 the students of the college were asked to make a report of the amounts spent with the various merchants of Maryville. This survey was made to enable the business department of the ECHO to plan its advertising schedule.

When the final tabulation was completed many interesting facts as to the distribution of these expenditures became evident. One of the most astounding discoveries was the total amount paid to the business of the city. 594 reports were selected as reliable and representative. This number of students, in the first ten weeks of the scholastic year, had contributed $13,290.00 to the stores of Maryville. This is an average of $2.29 per student per week.

The clothing stores led in individual sales, having a total of $3400.00 received from these students. The drug stores came next with a sum of $2023.00 spent by thirsty and sick collegians. Pearsons was subsidized to the extent of $883.00, which sum was spent with the cafes of the town.

The campus "cans" cost their proud owners $646.00 in gas, oil, and garage expenses, while at the same time the theatre coaxed $612.00 into its money till.

The grocery stores and the numerous 5 and 10 cent stores vied with each other for $1600.00 of the total amount and almost split the sum in half.

For miscellaneous items, covering laundry, dry cleaning, pressing, barber work, etc., Maryville students laid down over $2237.00, while the jewelry stores could entice only $400.00.

FRESHMAN GIRLS NAME FIVE MEMBERS TO Y.W.C.A. CABINET

Each Department Under Supervision of Upperclassman

At a meeting of the freshmen girls in December five members were elected to the Y. W. C. A. cabinet to serve as representatives of their class. One girl was chosen for each of the five departments which make up the cabinet. They were:

Eleanor Johnson—Nu Gamma Patricia Simpson—Social
Betty Brewer—Social Service
Margaret Kelbaugh—Business
Dorothy Nethery—Devotions

Each of these divisions is under an upperclassman. Inez Hamrick is in charge of Nu Gamma; Mildred MacKenzie, the social program; Barbara Lyle, social service work; Betty Wilbar, business management; and Pat Henry, devotions.

These departments cover all the Y. W. C. A. activities, beginning with Nu Gamma, the work with new girls. The social activities are lyceums, programs, and athletics, while social service includes the mission and the orphanage. The Y. store, benefit numbers, and building fund come under the head of business management, and prayer meetings, Sunday programs, and world fellowship are included in devotions.

Each freshman representative is responsible to her leader, and it is hoped that through them the interest of the freshmen girls will be aroused.

A RISING STANDARD

Whatever else may be said of the past semester, one thing stands out clearly in the minds of the students of Maryville, and that is the great amount of studying done by both the genius and the average student. Of course, as the time of examinations draws near, in any semester, the amount of nocturnal cramming increases, but never before has this institution witnessed such an owlish spectacle as was seen the past three weeks. Oil for illuminating purposes flowed freely and the early morning prowler, around Carnegie especially, was greeted by almost as much bustle as though it were noonday.

Couple this unusual activity toward erudition with the fact that, when the smoke cleared away, failures were as much in evidence as formerly, and only one result can be obtained: the scholastic standards of the college are on the upgrade.

To the casual student this may come as a disagreeable event, but to the man who can see beyond the upturn of his nose it is a step devoutly to be wished for although attended by unpleasant immediate consequences. The student body of today must meet standards in advance of those satisfactory ten or twenty years ago or retrogration is inevitable. If we learn only the things that were learned thirty years past, we, as a generation, have not progressed, and when progression stops, regression must begin. It is only by increasing the standards of attainment as the years go by that this advancement is realized. Occasionally there are genuises and prodigies flashing across the screen who realize this, but the average student, weighted down as he is by the well-earned reputation of unwillingness for unnecessary personal activity, must have some power greater than he to set this standard.

It is gratifying to know that Maryville College is taking steps to circumvent the natural apathy and indifference of her students by expecting more and more from each succeeding class, and though we, as students, are somewhat reluctant to generate any great stir of approbation, we feel just a little like being glad.

Election of officers will be held, this evening, at Alpha Sigma literary society. "Mike" Testa will read an excerpt from Booth Tarkington's "Penrod."

Miss Frances Henry, instructor in music at Maryville College, will sing popular and classical works, for the Theta Epsilon literary society, tonight.

Tenessee Historic Setting Of Famous Old Popular Song

(C. B. Stanbery)

There are very few students at Maryville or any other college who have not in some way heard of that famous old sentimental ballad, "When You and I Were Young, Maggie." No doubt many of them have "moonshined" to the words, "but to me you're as fair as you were, Maggie", and so on until the "moonshining" bell makes history for them. Yet, I wonder as I listen to it's enchanting strains, if very many know of the origin and the romantic inspiration that caused this song to come into being.

For many years there existed a wide variety of opinion as to the now established facts concerning the song. After the untiring research of Daisy Rice Spradling, historians have concluded that both the author and the subject of the ballad were native Tennesseans.

Only about one hundred miles from Maryville College lies this interesting bit of history. In the heart of the Unaka Mountains, a chain of the Great Smokies, is the scene of a romance which terminated years after in the song "When You and I Were Young, Maggie." George W. Johnson, author of the song, was a native Tennessean. His parents came from Virginia and leased land from the Indians near the headwaters of the Hiwassee river. Young Johnson learned, from some reliable source, that gold had been found in the Unaka range. Immediately packing supplies, he set out in a canoe up the slow-flowing Hiwassee. After several days of wearisome paddling he reached his destination. It was the spring of the year, and all nature was budding forth. Amid the low gurgling of the mountain stream and the chirping of the birds, Johnson heard that slow, consistent creaking so characteristic of a pioneer mill. As he walked forward the mill that met his gaze was one of the early type, made of hewn logs and fitted with two large overshot millwheels. In the door of the mill stood a beautiful mountain girl, Maggie Harris—the Maggie who was later immortalized in his song. Johnson sought no farther for gold. Instead he wooed, and found the key to the heart of the winsome mountain girl. This romance later evolved into a marriage which endured "until the trials of life were done."

After a brief but happy courtship at the home of Maggie and her parents, Johnson took his young bride back to their home on the Hiwassee. Here they lived happily for many years, until they were both "aged and gray and the trials of life nearly done." Being overcome by a desire to see the scene of their first meeting, they again returned to the old mill site. It was at this time that Johnson, being inspired by reminiscent thoughts of that happy courtship, wrote the poem by which the world remembers his name.

Since the original "Maggie's Mill, there have been three additional mills constructed on the same stone foundation. The first mill was washed away by a raging mountain torrent over half a century ago. The second mill was of the same type as the former, except that tradition relates it had only one large limestone wheel instead of two. These mill wheels must have looked very beautiful, as the sun would shine on the pure, crystaline water falling into a foaming pool thirty feet below. The third mill, being a combination of a sawmill and a gristmill, was the largest of the three.

Both George Johnson and his beloved Maggie died without realizing what a "diamond in the rough' he had left in his little poem. Several years after, J. A. Butterfield, the noted musician, came across the poem quite by accident and put the words to music.

One making a visit to the interesting and historic spot as it is today, can easily detect the various scenes alluded to in the song. There is "the city so silent and lone', the "hill where first the daises sprung," and now, "the creaking old mill is still, Maggie, since you and I were young."

KEYHOLE KOMMENT

Some where in the neighborhood of a year ago, the first of the series of monstrosities then known as Superior Scotties appeared. A year has elapsed. A year, under the influence of Maryville's profs, beans, and co-eds, which has wrought a deep change on this cubby-hole of the ECHO. Scanning over a few of last year's works, we find that the name has undergone very little change in comparison to the style, or lack of it. Gone is our ruthless tendency to bare the entire past of the unfortunate seniors. Gone also our inclination to rummage the dictionary for words of thru-freight properties. In fact, the glorious qualities which gained for us both of our readers have now disappeared, taking our readers with them.

Nevertheless, this melancholia reminds us that a certain member of the senior class is about due for another exposure. That man is none other than Jack Coughlin, who makes his residences on Court and Stanley streets. The first column of this kind ever issued in this weekly dealt with the voluminous subject of brother Ceughlin's deeds and misdeeds. If we remember correctly, we began our discussion with a statement that he held sway in the swimming pool as instructor, life guard and coach. We can't do that this year since the condemnation of the pool has deprived him of that position. Then we made mention of his former theatrical performances on Maryville's stage. We can still do this, of course. Next we made a perfectly lovely wisecrack about Cincinnati, his home town. We regret to announce that we have forgotten that masterpiece and are unable to think of another. Perhaps we'll hit on one when we discuss Jack as a member of next year's senior class. Last and least dependable, we made the statement that he was to graduate in June. Our mistake there was that we neglected to mention which June we meant. We'll make ourselves clear this time and promise to pat a hand for John Philip when his name is called in June, '32.

MORE "BALM" FOR DEBATERS

From the Forensic and Bee Gee News of Bowling Green State College

Extra-curricular activities and socialized educational projects are not substitutes for class room study, Dr. Luther T. Purdon, University of Mihigan vocational guidance expert, told three Toledo audiences recently.

A survey in a large New York bank showed that only one of the 20 highest paid bank employes had been a socially prominent undergraduate.

The average salaries of ex-college athletes, dramatic stars and class presidents is less than the average for all college graduates, surveys show.

Annual and newpaper editing and debating are the only extra-curricular activities that tend to make students more successful after graduation Dr. Purdon believes.

Dr. Lloyd, in an impromptu address to one of the several lines in Anderson during bill-paying time, declared that standing in line was the thing he could remember most clearly about the war.

You know there are lines for things other than bread and bill-paying.

S COLLEGIATE S !W A P!

We are fully aware of the ancient regulation which provides that scribblings of this variety should begin with the words, "now that exams have past." We also know that those ordeals are gone until May. But we prefer to salute our reader (possibly, only possibly, our readers) with discourse on some new subject, such as the stock mart, the coming election, or the child labor situation in the Hottentot Isles. And speaking of child labor, we notice that some gentleman with plenty of leisure has prepared gobs and super-gobs of statistics which prove without odubt that, in the four hundred colleges consulted, only one freshman out of every five consults more than ten library books during that particular stage of his metamorphosis. We advance this as evidence of freshmanic self-sufficiency.

See where brother Horowitz also made an appearance at the University of Kentucky. He performed his musical contortions at the Woodland Auditorium in Lexington and tickets ranged from one of Mr. Mellon's handbills to two and a half of the same articles. We'll wager our other shirt that the ole battery of coffers was full even unto overflowing.

Over in Columbia, South Carolina, the questions of "dutch treats" has become subject of considerable debate. The pros, consisting mainly of the females and the lucrative males, are having quite a bit of trouble in confronting the cons, or the rest of the studes and quasi-studes. We await the outcome with anxiety and a prediction that the females will conquer once more.

Members of Athenian literary society will have a discussion, tonight, on the future of their society. It is intneded to have this take up the entire evening.

Prof. Walker: "When I say a thing is true, I can prove it. I can prove that one dollar is two dollars."

Enterprising Student: "It's a bargain—I'll give you a dollar bill and you can hand me back two dollars."

GIRLS' BASKETBALL

Friday, January 29, the third game of the tournament was played between the sophomores and freshmen. The sophs put up a hard fight but the freshmen ran up a score of 32 to the 20 points of the sophs. Yennie and Farlee were the outstanding players for the sophomores; Gamble and Gillingham were best for the freshmen.

The line-up:

Freshmen		Sophomores
Gillingham, 9	f.	Yennie, 11
Cooper, 2	f.	Little, 7
Gamble, 20	f.	Froneberger, 2
Coates	g.	Wayland
Johnson	g.	Woods
Proffitt	g.	aFlee

Subs: Sophs: Mitchell. Freshmen: Webb, Newman, Wynn.

The total score for the three games which have been played are: Junior-Senior team—44 points; Sophomore team—47 points; Freshman team—74 points.

Tonight the freshmen play the Junior-Senior and on Monday the Fresh play Sophs.

Large Crowd Goes Wild As Scots Toss Caution To Wind In One Big Night For Maryville

Maryville College's masters of the grab and slam profession opened the 1932 season in a real big way last week when they took the Knoxville Y. M. C. A. outfit into their confidence and taught them a few lessons in the ancient Grecian method of self defense. The Highlanders took six matches out of eight from the Southern Y.M.C.A. Champions and a large crowd of students howled in delight as their favorite sons matched their well conditioned bodies against the more experienced Knoxvillans.

Cocky Campbell, wrestling in the 115 pound division, wagered a small sum before the match that he would pin his man in less than five minutes and so the poor kid had nothing to do but rush in and grab young Harry Carter by the abdomen and splatter his shoulder against the mat for five Maryville points. The process required exactly three minutes. Someone lost a bet, and brother it wasn't Campbell.

Donald Cross followed up Campbell's victory by winning a time decision over Knoxville's representative in the 125 pound class. Cross had his man whipped down and had a good opportunity to win a fall but he was a little cautious in his first college match and came out only with a time decision. Bill Peacock ran into tough luck in his match and was pinned in short order by the Knoxville man in the 135 pound class. Peacock slammed his man to the mat but his opponent deftly did a reverse or somepin' and Peacock found himself reposing unwillingly n a horizontal postion.

Steve Boretsky gave one of the gamest exhibitions of the night in losing to a man that had him outweighed with several pounds to spare. Steve immediately discovered that he had little chance against his much larger opponent and he decded to stay with him until the finish and lose only three points instead of five. He put up a terrific struggle and kept his shoulders off the mat until the timer ended the affair and he was given a big hand when he left the mat.

Little Tope received the whole hearted support of everyone present in his match against McKinley, tri-state champion. These two men were almost evenly matched but Tope managed to get him on the mat and hold him there long enough to stack up a time advantage sufficient to win the decision. Teffeteller put on a good show in defeating A. B. Loy of the "Y". These two boys have been known for their rough tactics and when they got together, the fans were afforded some action to scribble to the family about. Teffey won on a time advantage and came very near getting a fall.

Burns made Maryville's victory a certainty by trimming Captain Bob Maher. These boys struggled for quite awhile before Burns was able to get a time advantage but the Maryville "strong man" produced the goods that it takes to make a winning wrestler and it was just tough for Mr. Maher. Overly ended the night's acivity by slapping Grecian John Cazana all over the Gym and winning a time advantage. The Knoxvillian employed some of his professional tactics but the bg football tackle showed him just how this thing called rasslin' should be done.

Teachers and Knox Y Are Defeated By Highlanders

Maryvillians Get Good Start In Smoky Conference Title Chase

Maryville College Highlanders got off on the right foot in their conference schedule last week when they defeated the Tennessee Teachers College in decisive fashion. This wah the first of a large number of conference games for the Maryvillians and they seem destined to have one of their best seasons in several years.

The Maryville team worked fairly well together in this game and they showed signs of developing into a cage outfit that will be plenty hard for the rest of the conference teams to beat. They passed the ball well and in Captain White they have one of the best shots in the loop. His defensive work is also everything that could be asked for.

The Highlanders also played the Knoxville Y. M. C. A. last week and again the Maryville team came out ahead. In an earlier game this year, the "Y" team held the Scots to a low score and so they reaped revenge when the Knoxvillians came to the local court. Capt. White was again instrumental in the victory and his shooting ws largely responsible for the victory.

SPORT SLANTS

By BOB RULE

I happened upon one of the finest pieces of news the other day that I have received this year. The big break came from none other than our own Prof. Queener, debate coach, teacher and one interested in other things than the ordinary college and classroom routine. To some, this big news break that I am speaking of will mean practically nothing but undouubtedly there will be some who, like myself, will welcome it with open arms.

Mr. Queener is interested in golf; and what's more he is very much interested in a golf course right here on the Maryville College campus and even more than that, he really and truly thinks that a golf course CAN be built up on the campus. To say that his idea is a good one would be putting it mildly. It's a whiz.

Personally, I have always been inteersted in this swing and swear sport and I have, since entering Maryville, harbored a burning desire within my person for just such a thing as Prof. Queener is suggesting and agitating to come to pass. There's something about this game of golf that grips you and holds you until you yell "uncle" then holds you tighter.

Whether or not we could have a regular ollege team in this sport I am not sure but one thing is certain; it would be a means by which the students, boys and girls alike, could get some of the finest of recreation. Just imagine having a nice course right now during this "spring" weather, perfect weather for golf.

Of course the building of the course would not be an easy task. Doubtless, there is enough unused property on the campus to build a delightful nine hole layout, and to be sure certain parts of the campus are rough enough to provide natural hazards. But the financial part of the thing must be considered.

Just what plan could be worked out for this is yet to be seen, but I am sure that our President, Dr. Stevenson, Dr. Hunter and some of the others who are themselves interested in golf, could find a working solution. If the course were once built, the rest would come easy. The students could take care of that.

A club could be formed, officers elected and last, but not least by any means, the dues could be decided upon. Naturally, the dues could not be set very high but reasonable enough to be within the reach of everyone, even members of the ECHO staff. This money could be used for the upkeep of the course, for buying small articles which are necessary for a golf club, and for any purpose that the club officers saw fit to use it for in the benefit of the club.

Instead of hiring labor for the building of the course, interested students could work for membership in the club. Nothing would suit me better than to don a farmer's dress suit and start right away. I believe that there are just lots of students in the college who feel the same way about this thing and I just wonder if it could be considered.

Songs For The Unsung

PAUL EDRIS. Paul was not able to attend as many of the football games as he would liked to have attended, but when he was able to get away from his work he was usually to be found out in front of the football bleachers with his megaphone. He has been a good cheer leader and has worked hard to give the Highlanders the kind of support that they deserve. This is his last year in the capacity of a racket creator and here's hoping that he will be as successful in the years to come as he has been at Maryville.

JACK NEE. No, Jack was not out for football this year but just the same he has stuck by the team as loyally as anyone on the campus and he certainly deserves a word of commendation. In his position as cheer leader, Jack has been a great help to the team and he has made Paul Edris a great running mate. Jack was on every trip with the exception of the Lenoir Rhyne trip and always managed to stir up some noise for the Highlanders. His work at the home games was all that could be asked for and here's looking forward to next year to bigger and noiser football games.

ANGELO NARCISSO. Narcisso did his best to keep the students keyed up for the football games and he should also have a good year when the students next file into the stands to see the Scots in action. He also followed the team on every trip possible and he, was always right there with Nee when the noise started. He is also keeping the work going at the basketball games, as Paul Edris' first assistant.

Conference Champs And Teachers College Fall Before Maryville

Fighting Scot Team Topples Milligan College Buffaloes From Lofty Perch Atop Heap In Smoky Mountains Title Chase.

WHITE BRILLIANT

Tennessee Teachers Are Whipped For Second Straight Time; Play King Tonight

Our Highlanders seem to have overcome the weakness of losing games on the road and they are creating quite a stir on their trip through Tennessee and Virginia. They have encountered two conference foes in as many nights and in both of their games they emerged victorious. Tonight they play King College in Bristol and then go on into Virginia to play V. P. I. and Roanoke.

Thursday night they met the Champion Milligan College Buffaloes on their own court and captain Easy White and his mates showed the Buffs a thing or three about this hardwood game. The Scots led by a good margin throughout the game and the end of the fray found the men of Honaker out ahead by a score of 30 to 25. Captain Easy White evidently was one general pain in the abdomen to the Johnson City boys as he scored 22 points.

It is a rare occasion when the Milligan team is defeated on their own court. Naturally, any team is several points better on their own court and the Buffaloes are plenty classy on Mr. Anybody's court and this fact makes the Maryville victory even more remarkable. Earlier in the season they defeated the University of Tennessee outfit in decisive fashion just after the Vols had conquered Georgia, one of the best teams in the Southern Conference.

Not content with their mistreatment of the Buffalo Champions, the Highlanders stayed over night in Johnson City and took on the East Tennessee Teachers the night following and again the orange and garnet floated above all others. And again it was a youngster by the name of White who did the damage for the Maryville outfit. The best that he could do was to score 19 points to lead both teams in this department by a wide margin. The final score was 51 to 24.

INTEREST GROWING IN WOMEN'S SPORTS; TOURNEY ON

Fast Games Played In Class Basketball Meet

Interest in girl's athletics reaches its peak this week and next week for the inter-class basketball tournament. One interesting item of the games is the new method of playing without the toss up. At the beginning of the game the teams toss for which side will throw the ball and throughout the game the sides rotate in passing the ball instead of jumping for it. This method makes the game much faster, is fairer, and also gives less chance for injury.

The first game was on Wednesday, January 27, when the Sophomores played the Junior-Senior team. The teams were evenly matched, and at the final whistle the score was 29 to 27 in favor of the Juniors and Seniors. Crider, captain of Junior-Senior team, and Purviance, did outstanding floor work and shooting. Kitts and Gamble did nice work as guards for the Junior and Seniors. Yennie and Mitchell, forwards for the Sophomores, did excellent passing and shooting.

The line-up:

Sophs.		Junior-Seniors
Molly Little	f.	Marjory Abscher
Jane Mitchell	f.	Iva Babcock
Lorraine Yennie	f.	Virginia Crider captain
K. Wayland	g.	R. McCampbell
Naomi Woods	g.	Mary Gamble
Ruth Farlee	g.	Edith Kitts

Subs: Junior-Seniors: Purviance, Swasick; Sophs: Proneberger.

On Thursday, January 28, the Freshmen played the Junior-Senior teams. The Freshmen had a fast working team and ran up a score of 42 to the Junior-Senior 15. Gamble, as forward, led the scoring, with 18 points. Her floor work was good and she was nearly a sure shot at crips. Cooper and Webb did fast floor work and good shooting. Johnson, captain, was valuable as center guard.

The line up:

Junior-Seniors		Freshmen

Marjorie Abscher, 7	f.	I. Webb, 9.
Virginia Crider	f.	Mary Cooper, 5

April 15. men debate with University of Tennessee.

'IDEAL PROFESSOR' SUBJECT OF PEN

try and other such minor occupations. But every college magazine we ever saw had almost as many jokes about work as about gin. We like it. But we must look into the future when writing home for checks will be even more unrenumerative than it is now. When, and if, we receive our respective degrees and sally forth to reduce the captains of industry to first sargeants, we must have strong bodies and clear minds. We can never have these if we work the poor members to death while in school.

We have always desired a class under one of the highly touted absented-minded professors. We long for a class under a prof who will write encouraging notes on our papers rather than disparaging insults. Or for a teacher who when divulging our grade, instead of noncommittally remarking that we made our customary C, will absent mindedly declare that we received a B, or even an A.

And this ideal professor must never make slighting remarks about our political favortes, even if they are only second-rate speech-makers, or inferior promise-keepers. He must occasionally agree with our classroom opinions, even if they do disagee with such secondary autrorties as textbook authors.

To be sure, when this ideal professor is found, we will never have the good fortune to acquire a place in one of his classes, because we are sure that his popularity will be such that he will only have in his classes students of normal calibra, and that scribes who set such strict rule as these will be automatically excluded from this scholar-heaven.

ANNUAL MEETINGS WILL BEGIN NEXT TUESDAY MORNING

A., Executive Committee of Presbyterian Work in Europe. He was general secretary of the New Era Movement of the Presbyterian Church in 1924, and was a delegate to the World's Missionary Conference in Edinburgh in 1910. His abilities have been proved by the high acclaim with which he has been received wherever he has gone.

Dr. Foulkes, like Dr. Lloyd, studied to be a doctor, but in his senior year at the College of Emporia in Kansas, he decided to enter the ministry, a field of endeavor in which he has met with unusual success. He is an author of ability, three of his books being, "Youth-Ways to Life", "Living Bread from the Fourth Gospel", and "Sunset from the Lakeside". He is a contributing editor to the "Christian Endeavor World".

Dr. Foulkes will arrive tomorrow morning in time to conduct the morning service at 9:45. During his stay in Maryville he will make his home with the Dr. and Mrs. Stevenson. Reverend S. E. Stringham will arrive early in the week to conduct the singing during the meetings, for the eleventh consecutive year. The College feels itself unusually fortunate to be able to obtain Mr. Stringham's services year after year, and a cordial welcome is extended to him by the faculty and the students with whom he has become acquainted during his visits in Maryville.

The class schedule will be arranged so that the chapel period may be placed at a more convenient time. The a and b classes will meet from 8:10 to 9:40, a classes meeting from 8:10 to 8:55 and the b classes meeting from 8:55 to 9:40, The chapel service will continue from 9:45 to 10:35 and will be followed by the c classes which will meet from 10:40 to 11:25, and the d classes which will meet from 11:25 to 12:10. There will be no change in the afternoon program of classes.

Two services will be held daily, the morning service at 9:45 and the evening service at 6:30 with the following exceptions: the evening service on Sunday will be held at the usual Vesper time, 7:00; and on Wednesday, February 10, the series will close with the morning service, making a total of sixteen meetings in all. The College extends an invitation to all members of the community to hear Dr. Foulkes at any or all of the meetings.

COLLEGE FOUNDER HONORED IN SHORT TALK BY PRESIDENT

moved to Maryville he brought with him his students, and set up his college here. Eight years later, under the authority of the Synod of Tennessee, he founded Maryville College.

The February Meetings, which come next week, have been held annually for over fifty years. They were not founded by Dr. Anderson, but were really a natural succession to the meetings which he held each year and are carrying forward the spirit with which he founded the college.

Dr. Lloyd continued to say that "at the meetings of the Association of American Colleges in Cincinnati, one could recognize three chief notes in the discussions and addresses: first, college leaders are seeking ways to meet the special financial problems of this period; second, they are asking questions as to what is the real purpose of a college education, and what is the course of study and method of teaching best adapted to the realization of this purpose; third, they are affirming their belief that neither life nor education can be complete without a definie emphasis on spiritual values and religion. More of them are speaking regretfully of the fact that many colleges which had their beginning in religious interest, have, in imitation of the more or less necessary program of state schools, dropped religion out of a major place. Maryville has been fortunate indeed to have retained much of the emphasis which was placed on religion by its illustrious founder, and which others now wish they might recapture."

Pioneer, frontiersman, herdsman, farmer, teacher, circuit-rider, pastor, preacher, theological instructor, as all of these was Dr. Anderson known to the inhabitants of Tennessee. Together with such life, such love, such loyalty, his endowment was one of inestimable value.

At a banquet held by the football squad of Maryville College recently some of the remarks made in the annual of 1906 concerning the team for that year were recalled.

"The most sanguine supporters of the Orange and Garnet only dared hope that Maryville would hold Tech. (Georgia) down to a low score, and the result, a tie, caused great joy and enthusiasm on the Hil."

"The day after returning from Atlanta the team left Maryville again for a long, hard, Southern trip, upon which the squad traveled nearly two hundred miles, and played three of the strongest teams in the S.I.A.A., Mississippi, Alabama, and Alabama Polytechnic Institute (Auburn)."

"Steinmetz, as manager, furnished the best schedule ever arranged for a Maryville team."

"The support of the student body, an essential to a successful season, was all that could be desired."

The remainder of the 1906 schedule is as follows: September 22—Harriman (0), Maryville (22); October 22—Centre, of Kentucky (4), Maryville (6); October 27—Dahlonego (0), Maryville (15); November 20—Sewanee (28), Maryville (0); November 29—Bingham (10), Maryville (17).

"Maryville Lines" will be the stunt given at Bainonian literary society this evening. Lucy Ann Voorhees will read "The Courier"; and Sarita Casseres will play a mandolin and sing popular Spanish songs.

Ferdinand Ringer, chemist of Veinna, claims to have perfected a match which can be lighted 600 times before it becomes useless.

SHAKESPEARIAN SCOTTIES

These remarks are defiantly dedicated to the characters in the senior class who have already this year been exposed by our fellow-critic, the well-known perpetrator of Superior Scotties and its successor column, Keyhole Kommeat.

Let us focus our attention on the person— attractive person—of Portia, whose surname MacKenzie gives her the peculiar initials, P. M. She is possessed to all the intellectual powers attributed by the hearsay of men to members of the masculine persuasion. Yet her ability to express herself musically and dramatically preserves her essential feminimity. We wanted to say in the beginning that Portia hails from the city whose radio call is WDOD—Wonderful Dynamo of Dixie. Anyhow, we've said it now, and whether Portia enters connubial or some other kind of bliss we wish for her "hares' feet and equus' footwear."

And let us consider the work of the day by de-busheling next the lights of the Y.M.C.A. president and the senior class high mogul. These gentlemen, as every upperclassman as well as every freshman knows are Polonius and Good Prince Hal, otherwise known as Henry V.

Polonius is a native son, his home being in Maryville's largest suburb, Alcoa. In his high school days he played Rugby and was the local champion on field days. He has great knowledge of the world, as is demonstrated by his popularity with the gentle sex, and since brevity is the soul of wit, he is invariably witty—to the very roots of his hair!

Prince Hal! Before he was crowned king, what freshman did not idolize him? What upperclassman failed to appreciate his aptitudes? None. But now that he is a ruler, he has put away most of his puerile pastimes. Nevertheless, with all the stress and intentness of his mind, thoughtful, self-mastered as he is, his old frank love of harmless fun clings to him and in his gravest moments—such as Triangle Club parties—he now and again surprises the public with a remark such as this, "This must be an ideal place for a picnic—fifty million bugs can't be wrong."

We shall not attempt to shed rays of light on the lives of Baptista and Julius Caesar.

Baptista's only reason for living, our friend and corroborator Bill Shakespeare would have you believe, is to act in the capacity of a father. We beg to disagree (and incidentally we hope that Edwin will not be such an incorrigible child as was Katherine.) Our Baptista is also the husband of a neat little Jane who majored in home economics, and he spent part of his spare time acting as court jester at tourneys between Maryville knights of the pigskin and their luckless opponents.

MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION

Four delegates from the Buffalo Quadrennial had charge of the meeting of the Ministerial Association last Wednesday night. They were: Andy Newcomer, Frank Neff, Paul Winn, and Michael Testa. Mr. Newcomer was the Association's official delegate and gave a report of the convention. The next meeting of the Association will be February 16.

The Student Volunteers will hold the last of the four Buffalo meetings tomorrow night. Elizabeth Gillis, president of the local band, will give an interpretation of the convention and Dorothy Casseres will give an address on "After Buffalo—What "

The next regular meeting will be Sunday night, February 14. At the request of the group, Mr. Louis A. Black, business manager of the college, has accepted the position of faculty advisor. Mr. Black has shown an intense interest in the Student Volunteer movement.

I Wabash college, back in 1913, or near that time, a fellow got into some difficulty and got expelled from school indefinitely. In fact he was not allowed to return at all. Later in life he became successful in business and the college offered him an honorary degree as an alumnus of that school. This might lend hope to any ill-fated person who might have, or who might be due to, "get the slip."

Dr. Lloyd not long ago received his honorary degree from Maryville. We know that there was no such surroundings in the granting of this degree to Dr. Lloyd, for it has been only a few days since he admitted that he spent five years in Maryville . . . .of course, we don't know that he was not . . . . well, that is . . . . .we're assuming that he graduated like most students do under similar circumstances.

Little Hessie Keeton who made last year's Echo freshmen feel like eighth graders, was present on the campus last week. Since Hessie's graduation, the staff has all advanced scholastically, and have become theoretically, at least, more proficient as news writers. Still there is that feeling of uneasiness that touches one noticeably when the scrutinizing eye of the ex-editor falls in the general territory of one's whereabouts.

ALPHA SIGMA WILL PRESENT FAMOUS PLAY MONDAY NITE

New England Village Life Of Thirty Years Ago Is Portrayed

KIZER IN LEAD

Chief Charm of Drama Lies In Great Characterization Possible

Edward Noyes Westcott's striking drama of late nineteenth century American life, "David Harum", will be presented Monday evening, in Voorhees Chapel, by Alpha Sigma literary society. This play wil be the third mid-winter of the current season.

The cast includes some of the best characters on the Hill. The title character of the play demands good interpretation, and the task of turning in an excellent performance has been given to Floyd Waters. His will be the role of the one and only "David Harum".

Donald Briggs will assume the next strongest male lead in the person of "John Lennox." His work will be matched by Kathryn Kiser as "Mary Blake".

The remainder of the cast follows: Naomi Willingham, "Aunt Polly"; Mary Kathryn Mize, "Widow Cullom"; Reno Smith, "Deacon Perkins"; Cecil Marley, "Zeke Swinney"; Jesse Willis, "Doug Robinson"; Wilbur Johnson, "Dick Larrabee"; Allen Amsbury, "Chet Timson"; Robert Byerley, "Bill Montague"; James Kerr, "Peleg Hoskins"; and Bud Mattingly, "General Woolsey."

The stage manager is Larry Somers, and Mrs. Nita Eckles West is director.

FINAL LYCEUM OF YEAR BRINGS NOTED CHARACTER ARTIST

Sister of Professor Appears In Varied Character Sketches

Miss Nan Lagerstedt will present a series of characterizations and dialect readings, February 29, under the auspices of the Lyceum committee of the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. This will be the third lyceum number of the school year.

Miss Lagerstedt will assume characters native to the Jew, Irishman, and Swede. She will also take the part of an Old Maid and a mother.

In addition to her work of this type, the artist has made educational motion pictures for the S. P. C. C. Her latest appearances were at M. I. T., V. P. I., and Harvard.

PORTER FRENCH, '31, GOES TO TURKEY

Porter French, of the class of '31 a well-known and popular alumnus of Maryville College has been engaged by the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions for a three-year term as teacher in the American School for Boys at Talas, Turkey. His work begins next fall.

Porter has already had exceptional experience for a young man as pastor of four rural churches in Missouri, as a teacher in daily vacation Bible schools. He also has had musical experience in chorus and choir work. At present, Porter is a student at the Presbyterian Theological Seminary in Chicago.

LEAP YEAR PARTY WILL BE GIVEN IN THAW HALL TONITE

Quadriennial Opportunity For Girls Offered In Unique Reversal of Mode

As yet no Shakespearian name has been appended to the entertainment being presented in Thaw Hall tonight, but seventeen English majors are working like whatever works hard to select one. In the interim, the gathering will gather—at 7:30. The advance ticket sale has not been overwhelming, but Norma Spilatore, promoter of the work predicts that a record crowd will be in evidence. The rules of the contest are few and simple. However, the Student Council, which is sponsoring the quadriennial, insists that all dates must be made by the coedettes. This holds not only for the bold, dashing type of female, but also for the dear little clinging vines. The powers decree, too, that the admission price of fifteen Abrahams per pair be borne bravely by the ladies of the crowd. Then, the malevolent male must remain ensconced in his Carnegie lair until called for by his date-ess. After the games, and players, have become exhausted, and the refreshments have become memories, Mr. Mac will be set on watch to insure that the girls bring the dear boys safely home.

Get goin', maids! Here's an opportunity to both get your man and take advantage of the Council's promise that a good time will be had by all.

BARRERE CONCERT ATTENDED BY MANY

Students From Maryville Music Department Enjoy Knoxville Concert

Producing what Malcolm Miller calle in an enthusiastic criticism "a veritable sensation", the Barrere Little Symphony played to a large audience at the Church Street M. E. Church in Knoxville on Monday evening. The Little Symphony appeared under the auspices of the Community Concerts Association and the Tuesday Morning Musical Club. Several members of the music department of Maryville College attended the concert.

M. Georges Barrere, founder and director of the Symphony is a musician in his own right. He played a flute solo, Gluck's "Scene from Orpheus."

The compositions played by the 13-piece orchestra included the "Symphony in G Major (The Hen)" by Hadyn, "The White Peacock" by Charles T. Griffes, which is a part of every Little Symphony concert, and Pierne's "March of the Little Tin Soldiers".

RODGERS RETURNS

Dr. Rodgers met his classes again Wednesday after a short absence due to illness. He underwent a minor operation on January 30. The operation was for an infection from which the doctors assure a complete recovery. When he was asked how he knew the exact day on which he would return he answered, "I just figured it out."

SERVED TEN YEARS

Seven Grads In China; Six Have Places In Japanese Territory

The Hon. Edwin S. Cunningham, class of '89 at Maryville, is in the spot-light today as he seeks to intercede between China and Japan in the Shanghai conflict.

Mr. Cunningham holds the post of American consul-general at Shanghai where he has served with distinction for about ten years. Upon the success of the efforts of the American and British consuls much may depend as to the outcome of the difficulties between these two powers. The diplomatic efforts of Consul Cunningham are watched with much interest both among the college students and in the town.

Other college graduates in China include Prof. F. W. Gill, 05, of St. John's University, Shanghai; Tien Ze Chang, '20, Hankow; Mrs. George Tootell (Anna Kidder), '11, Changteh, Hunan; Rev. Edward Kidder. '16, Chefoo; Mrs. J. B. Yaukey (Grace Sydenstricker), '21, Yochow, Hunan; Mrs. R. H. Johnston (Annie Vanderslice), '27, Changteh, Hunan; Miss Ellen Cowan, '28, Canton.

Consul Cunningham and Prof. Gill are the only Maryville graduates in the danger zone but Mr. Harvey Stokeley, who married Miss Harriet Gregg, former teacher of voice in the College, is also located in Shanghai. At present Mrs. Stokeley happens to be visiting in this country.

In Japan, there are six alumni of the College, all of them engaged in mission work. Rev. Percy Buchanan, '22, Miss Ruth Buchanan, '30, Mr. Edwin Buchanan, '31, all of Nagoya; Rev. and Mrs. Sam H. Franklin, '24 and '25 of Kyoto; and Miss Mary Miles '18, Kanazawa.

EIGHTEEN GO TO INTERRACIAL MEET

Health Conditions Of The Negro In The South' Is Subject For Discussion

Eighteen students of Maryville College attended the meeting of the East Tennessee Students' Interracial Commission held last Saturday afternoon at Knoxville College.

The subject for discussion was "Health Conditions Among Negroes in the South." Much of the poor health of negroes is traceable to two factors: economic poverty and ignorance of the methods of preventative medicine. Hospital facilities for negroes were revealed as being inadequate and entirely beyond the reach of many of the colored race. The death rate among negroes, although still higher than that of while people, is steadily on the decline. Negroes seem to be peculiarly susceptible to some diseases—for instance tuberculosis—because they have not yet built up the racial immunity to these diseases which is possessed by peoples who have been longer exposed to them.

LLOYD LEAVES

On Sunday morning and Sunday afternoon he will preach in the Mt. Auburn Presbyterian Church in Cincinnati. He will return to Maryville the early part of next week.

FRANCIS COLLINS TO STUDENT COUNCIL

The year 1932 is Election Year and it is being very conscientiously observed by students at Maryville College.

Francis Collins, popular senior man, has been elected to the Student Council, succeeding Hubert Duncan, who finished his college work at the end of the first semester.

Cooley Combs has been elected secretary and treasurer of the Student Council. This position also was left vacant by Hubert Duncan.

Louise Cline was elected Junior Member of the Student Honor Rank Committee. She will take the place of Dorothea Thomsen, who has transferred to the University of Cincinnati.

Organization Sponsoring Increase in World Mindedness

The Student Volunteer World News Bulletin, is being published every week in the college library. Twenty-five issues of the Bulletin have been publihed since last March and have been read eagerly by all who attended the regular Student Volunteer meetings. So that a greater number of students might benefit by the Board, permission has been granted, and significant world news in attractive and easily accessible form is now open to all who use the library.

The scope of the bulletin has broadened since its appearance in the library to include a section for student editorial expression, and an Open Forum for student opinion concerning problems of the day. The purposes of the bulletin board are three. First, to make it possible for students who do not have time to read the newspapers and magazines to read the high spots of world news easily; second, to arouse in students an interest in world events; and third, to stimulate among all students the formation and expression of opinion concerning great questions of the day.

The appearance of the Bulletin Board is in itself sufficient to create world mindedness. The news items are typed on cards of uniform size, and are attached by strings, denoting by their color the kind of news, to the country on the world map above ot which the news item refers. News is divided into political, religious, social, economic, scientific and miscellaneous news.

It is hoped that many will avail themselves of the opportunity now presented to show active world

ANNUAL MEETINGS MARKED BY WIDE APPEAL TO YOUTH

Dr. Foulkes Brings Unusually Vivid Characterization Of Jesus

STUDENTS PLEASED

Fifty-Sixth Annual Series Closes With Powerful Address

With the final illuminating and clarifying flourish of the master painter, Dr. William Hiram Foulkes brought to a close the fifty-sixth annual series of February Meetings on the Maryville College campus Wednesday morning, February 10.

For the previous ten days the students and friends of the college had been privileged to hear a great continued revelation of the life of Christ and its application to modern life problems. Beginning with an introduction of Jesus to the student body Dr. Foulkes carried the character study of the Christ through a progressive Biblical narration to the final discussion wherein he was shown to be able to care for the individual in any situation of life.

An interesting speaker at all times, when fired by his zeal for moral uplift and the desire to make Christ the personal Savior of every student Dr. Foulkes became one capable of obtaining and holding the interest of every listener. Concise phrases, clear logic and an unimpeachable personal interest placed his talks in the forefront of every hearer's consciousness.

Following the splendid leadership of Rev. Sidney E. Stringham, the singing bid fair to surpass in beauty that of previous years. This is the eleventh consecutive series in which Rev. Stringham has had charge of the singing.

A short review of each address given by Dr. Foulkes in the eight day series follows:

In the first message of the 1932 series of February meetings, Dr. Foulkes announced his intention of introducing Jesus to the audience, and urged that it become more intimately acquainted with Him. In this message Dr. Foulkes discussed three short cuts. These were: the short cut to economic prosperity, the short cut to popularity, and the short cut to power. The reaction of Jesus to each of these situations was cited, and the audience urged to follow His example.

Jesus' supreme invitation, "Come" was the subject of Dr. Foulkes' sermon Tuesday evening. To this invitation people answer that they are too busy, that they will come tomorrow, that they have doubts, or that they have fears. The real rea-

Economist Discusses Present Chino-Japanese Situation

In accordance with the expressed wishes of many students for an authoritative discussion of the situation in the East, Dr. McMurray, head of the department of Political and Social Science, has kindly furnished the ECHO with a resume of the historical and political background of this affair—The Editor.

What is it all about?

Who is to blame?

Will it involve the United States in war?

Japan, "The Land of the Rising Sun", with the total area of her three thousand islands slightly less than that of Texas, has a populations of about eighty-six million largely concentrated in the four principal islands.

Most of the islands are small and of volcanic origin, being unfit for habitation. For two hundred years preceding the Treaty of Friendship between Japan and the United States, in 1853, Japan was a hermit nation.

Her citizens were forbidden to

QUEENER READS BEFORE SOCIETY

At the regular monthly meeting of the East Tennessee Historical Association in Knoxville, Friday night, February 5, Prof. Queener read a paper on the "Life of Gideon Blackburn" to an interested and pleased audience. The paper was a summary of the life of Blackburn and of his work among the Cherokee Indians in the eastern section of the state, since his founding of the two Indian schools and his church work kept him there for the greater part of his life. Among the many places he made his power felt was the New Providence Presbyterian Church of Maryville, where he was first minister.

Prof. Queener is an active member of the Association and was recently accorded a signal honor in being elected vice-president of the organization. In his being chosen to submit a paper, respect was paid not only to his ability as a faithful historian, but to his personality as a public speaker.

College President Views Geneva Conference Hopefully

STUDENT HEAD ATTENDS MEET

The annual Mid-Western Conference of Student Council representatives is being held February 11, 12, and 13 at the Andrew Johnson Hotel in Knoxville with Mildred MacKenzie, President of our Student Council, representing Maryville College.

This conference is attended by representatives from Ohio State, University of Chicago, Notre Dame, Northwestern, University of Cincinnati, Penn State, Davidson, Bethany, Sewanee, and Maryville who are gathered to discuss general and individual campus problems ways of strengthening the councils, and subjects which lead to a better understanding of the organization. They seek, through cooperation with the YMCA and YWCA, to build up a strong student government.

The representatives are being addressed and led in discussion by such outstanding men as Dean Hoskins, Dr. Frank Ward, and Dr. Hesler of the University of Tennessee, and Dr. C. E. Christian of Penn State.

One of the most important incidents in the world today is the meeting of the Disarmament Conference in Geneva. In order to furnish students with views based on more mature judgement the ECHO has asked President Lloyd to express his ideas as to the outcome and influence of this meeting. The following article was his response—The Editor.

The World Conference for the limitation and reduction of armaments convened in Geneva, Switzerland, on February 2. It is likely to remain in session for many months; the American delegation is equipped for nine months of work.

The beginning of the conference was quiet but rendered dramatic and serious by the clouds of war over Japan and China. The opening of the session was delayed one hour to allow time for the League of Nations Council to consider joint notes sent that day to Japan by the United States, Great Britain, Italy and France. War extras of newspapers were being sold on the

THE MEETINGS

Once again the students of Maryville College have been priviliged to participate in the historic February Meetings held annually on the campus. Once again a period of self-examination and moral uplift has been offered those individuals cognizant of the higher and more permanent things of life.

It is useless to attempt a measure of the success of this particular series for the objectives of such work are not realized in a day or a year and often times not even a generation, but it can be said with certainty that hist period has awakened a latent consciousness of moral obligation and reverence for the Diety in many here-to-fore careless minds. While there are, doubtlessly, a few students upon whom the great discussions had no visible effect, a majority were deeply moved to contemplation and self-searching. There is every possibility that many additional life workers have been added to the ranks of Christians solely through this means.

In this era of de-Personalized and mechanized education colleges the country over are prone to pass up the importance of the education of the inner self and expend their total energy in teaching only those things that have to do with secular existence. It is to the credit of Maryville that for years it has made this higher education one of its chiefest aims. iWthout abatement of interest, the February Meetings form an integral part of the college srheduie as each year rolls around. It is the most distinctively Maryvillian thing that we have. It is an almost priceless heirloom handed down to us by those far-seeing builders of this institution.

May we ever keep this traditional custom alive on the campus.

mindedness. As stated in the first editorial of the first library issue, the Bulletin is not the official publication of the local Student Volunteer Group, but is a semi-independent project, the responsibility for editorials resting upon the editorial staff and the Editor in Chief, Frank R. INTERRACIAL MEET

A study of health conditions among negroes in Knoxville revealed that the public health unit is equipped to serve negroes as efficiently as white people. One interesting fact brought to light wa that there were no negro suicides in Knoxville during 1931.

The next meeting of the commission will be held at Maryville College on Saturday, March 5. The discussion will be concerned with "The Negro in (or out of) Politics in the South."

ANNUAL MEETINGS MARKED BY WIDE APPEAL TO YOUTH

son is none of these, but it is the fact that they say "I will not." Our acceptance of this invitation lies solely in our will to come.

The theme of Dr. Foulkes' message on Wednesday morning was "The Joy of Finding the Lost". A picture of a seeking, rather than a sought, God was presented. Three cameos, stories from the Scripture, were discussed. These were the parable of the lost sheep, the parable of the lost coin, and the parable of the prodigal son.

"Curing the Incurables" was Dr. Foulkes' subject Wednesday evening. Three miracles of healing were presented from the gospel: the curing of the man possessed by a devil, a disease of the mind; the curing of a woman so long ill, a disease of the body; the raising of the dead daughter, a disease of the soul. Christ may set us free from any uncurable disease that we have if we will yield ourselves to him.

Dr. Foulkes' theme on Thursday morning was the forgiveness of sin. Distinction was made between sin, transgression, and iniquity. The fact that forgiveness costs so greatly was used to emphasize the fact that it is also free. But a forgiving attitude on our part is necessary if we are to enjoy God's forgiveness. When he forgives us, God does these things for our sins: he puts them from us as far as the East from the West; he puts them behind his back; he drowns them in the depths of the sea; he remembers them no more.

Dr. Foulkes talked on the divine judgment Thursday night as a reawarrd and as a punishment. He stressed particularly the judgment that is given for failure of parents to face the issue, one of the evidences of divine judgment being the sin that is visited upon innocent children.

"The Miracle of a Boy's Heart" was Dr. Foulkes' original way of describing, on Friday morning, the story of Jesus' feeding of the five thousand. "China is always hungry", he said, expressing not only a specific situation, but symbolizing a present world need. But it is only broken bread which will meet the need; it is only lives broken by love which will feed the world. We should not be guilty of eating our barley loaves alone. The concluding appeal was made that, upon this unknown boy, we put our name.

The theme of the talk of Friday night was the contrasted motives of Judas and Mary—Judas with his eager, grasping, greedy soul and Mary with her equally eager and prompted by a far different motive, and accompanied with sympathy, love and desire to help. The waste of the world was shown economically in the waste of human lives, socially in the waste of opportunity for helping others rise, and morally through the waste of love.

"The Body of Christ" was Dr Foulkes' subject Saturday morning. There are three attitudes one may take toward his body. One may say "My body for myself"; one may say "my body isn't big enough. Your body for me"; one may say "This is my body which is broken for you". The first is heathenism, the second is the acme of heathenism; the third is Christlike. Give your body to Christ that He may take its broken bits to feed the hungry.

The topic for the evening of February 6, was Peace and War. Two pictures of the results of the thraldom of fear in the Orient, one of the Chinaman pursued by the spirit of an ancester, and the other of children whose eyes had been seared with hot needles when they were young were presented. It was explained that the West was not without its brood of fears also. "Wherever fear stalks it carries a sword", said Dr. Foulkes, and we on to state that the shame is that to he fears of the East we have added our Western fears. We have taught the Orient to make war.

As the great hope for the situation of the world, it was said that Jesus' will to mankind is Peace, and that his will has been sealed by his blood. "The Nations of the world are arming", said Dr. Foulkes. "Jesus is saying, "Disarm. Put up your swords of pride, lust, greed, malice, and hold instead, the Cup of Sacrifice which Jesus bore into Gethsemane."

"Four Doors to the Upper Room" were revealed by Dr. Foulkes in his sermon Sunday morning at New Providence Presbyterian Church. Before the Resurrection there were two doors; the Main Street door, or the door of discipleship; the door which opened out into the night. After the Resurrection there were two other doors: one was the door of disillusionment; the other was the door which burst open.

"Peter Between Two Fires" was the theme of Sunday evening's sermon. The first fire, in the courtyard of the High Priest's house, was kindled by worldly hands in a worldly place. Beside it Peter three times denied his Lord. The other fire, near the Sea of Galilee, was kindled by hands human and divine. Beside it Peter confessed Christ three times.

Dr. Foulkes spoke on the "Miracles of the Broken and Unbroken Nets" Monday morning. Peter witnessed both miracles, not only in his experience fishing, but in his life. Peter of the broken net became Peter of the unbroken net. Are we fishing with a broken net; perhaps of prayer or of service Are we compelling Christ to fish with a broken net because we are not in our place? We may, like Peter, bring our nets to Christ.

"Obedience to the Heavenly Vision" was Dr. Foulkes' theme Monday evening. Paul, the subject of the Scripture reference, was not disobedient to the heavenly vision which came to him outside Damascus. It was the vision of a risen Christ; the vision of a Christ this side of the resurrection. When we see the face of Christ, and when we see His cross, there comes a lustre to them which impels us to be obedient to their heavenly vision.

The theme of Tuesday morning's service was "The Citadel of the Human Heart." Christ has already captured our intellects and our emotions, but they are only outposts. The citadel itself is the human will, where we fashion our destiny and determine our way. Not even God can violate a human will. All he can do is stand outside and knock. We who submit our will to him will admit him.

The difference between badge-wearers and brand-wearers was discussed Tuesday evening by Dr. Foulkes', with Paul again as the Scriptural reference. Badges, which are elaborate ornaments designed for conspicious wear in dress parades, are worn on the outside where they may call attention to themselves, and where they may be easily removed. Brands denoting ownership and security are put on underneath, and cannot be taken off. We may carry the marks of Christ deep in our hearts, and so be brand Christians instead of badge-Christians.

The subject of the sermon Wednesday morning was taken from among Paul's last words, "He is able to keep." The three questions who is able, from what, and for what is he able, were answered. It is Christ alone who is able to keep us. It is for time and eternity that he is able to keep us. But he can keep notihng we have not committed to him.

STAFF EDITOR RESIGNS

Due to the press of many extra-curricular activities and an unusually heavy schedule of studies, Robert Stevenson, staff editor of the ECHO, has tendered his resignation to the office of this paper.

Mr. Stevenson has been actively engaged in the editorial department of the ECHO almost from his entrance in Maryville College and, due td his ability, has been steadily advanced to the responsible position which he has just vacated.

OBSERVATIONS

so, but ye observer believes that the acme of Maryville's yelling power was reached on Wednesday morning when the student body took that means of expressing appreciation to Dr. Foulkes. No football player has ever received such an ovation, we believe. It characterized our religion for now and always as being decidedly a "shouting religion."

—o—

For amusement and for general enlightenment, the sophomore boys held a "Review of Reviews" over the feminine members of the student body as they were passing by in the annual hand-wringing. It gave an opporutnity to get the first draft on all popular possibilities for the May Queen and her three attendants. The review was a bit surprising, and too, disappointing, because in the entire freshman class there was no girl found who could come up to the requirements. Remember now, this is the upper two thirds. (Pardon us if we choose to wise crack on "what the lower one third looks like").

—o—

No one likes a soft-soaper. There's also a type of soaper, peculiar to itself, that the writer cannot fawncy himself falling in love with. He's the fellow who constantly infests the bathrooms in Carnegie in a spirit of self-gain, and, of course self-cleanliness which to some extent modifies his transgression. As a pastime he teaches his roommate some of the tricks . . . that is, of course if the roomie is not already accomplished. In connection with this, we take the stand that our superiors so often do, and we mention no names. . . but we do have a feeling that the "soaper" who keeps things cleaned up on the third floor might be much likened unto the young fellow who won the prize for being miss so-and-so's best student in the Golden Rule Sunday School class at Cairo, (South) Gawgia. This of course is but a personal belief, and we wish to be very careful, to in no way suggest the identity of the subject.

—o—

It must have been a paradise for "Observers" when Ruth Rainey walked into Thaw Hall wearing Tolliver's newly acquired footba sweater. The fellows on the team have had the laugh on Tolliver in a number of ways this year, but this time Tolliver was exempt from any embarrassment. The laugh was noticeably on the other side of the Tolliver family. Since that time Tolliver makes it a practice to wear his own clothes.

Sleepy White's new theme song that works just as well in basket ball as in moonshining is the new hit, "Just a Little Closer".

Ministerial Association

On Monday evening at a special meeting of the Ministerial Association the members were addressed by Dr. Foulkes on matters pertaining to religion and the ministry.

Dr. Stevenson will address the Association next Tuesday evening on the subject, "What of the Revival". The devotions are in charge of Frank Mease, and there will be committee reports by the committee chairmen.

ALPHA SIGMA ELECTS OFFICERS

The newly elected officers of Alpha Sigma literary society are Cecil Marley, president; Dan Hicks, vice-president; George Vick, recording secretary; Malverne Clopton, assistant recording secretary; Jesse Willis, program secretary; Michael Testa, assistant recording secretary; Frank Thornhill, Robert Beyer, and Robert Bieri, censors; John Eyster, editor; George Deebel, sergeant-at-arms; Reno Smith, janitor.

HIGHLANDERS LEAD CONFERENCE WITH FIVE WINS

Wrestling Team Meets Knoxville Y In Return Engagement Tongiht

SOUTHERN CHAMPIONS WILL BE OUT FOR REVENGE WHEN THROWER'S TEAM INVADES KNOX COURT FOR RETURN MATCH TONIGHT

CHATTANOOGA NEXT

Thrower Schedules Meet With Farmer Watkins' High Point College Grapplers

Coach Bob Thrower will take his wrestling team to Knoxville tonight for a return match with the Southern Y. M. C. A. champions, the Knoxville Y. M. C. A. The Maryville boys came through with a victory over the Knoxvillians in a match earlier in the season and Coach Bob Thrower is hopeful that his outfit will turn the trick again tonight.

Coach Bob will start the same team that has won the meets from the Knoxville and Chattanooga teams tonight. He will wrestle Campbell in the 115, Cross in the 125, Peacock in the 135, Boretsky in the 145, Tope in the 155, Teffeteller in the 165, Burns in the 175 and Overly in the unlimited.

In the other match with the Knoxville team, Campbell, Cross, Tope, Teffeteller, Burns and Overly came through with victories over their opponents while Peacock lost to their men. Coach Thrower has been working his men hard for the past few weeks and he hopes that his boys may again come through with wins over their men and also that Peacock and Boretsky will be able to avenge their defeats.

Chattanooga Next

Next Saturday night, the team will entertain the Chattanooga team on the local met in a return match. The Maryvillians took a decisive victory from the boys at Ross Landing last week and they should be able to repeat their performance before the home folks. The Chattanooga team offered stiffer opposition than did the Knoxville team, although the Knoxville Y defeated Chattanooga decisively.

Then Farmer's Team

The week following, Coach Farmer Watkins' team from High Point College in North Carolina will come here for a match with his former Coach's team. Farmer, as you all know, played four years of football with Coach Bob as his tutor and he also was in charge of the wrestling team during the four years that he was at Maryville. He was a fine wrestler himself, but he seldom ever took part in a match, choosing rather to coach the team and let the other boys take part in the matches.

Farmer Elaborates

In a letter to Coach Thrower, Farmer gave a line on his team and from the general atmosphere of the letter, the Maryville grapplers are in for a hot night when he brings his boys down out of the mountains. Several of his boys are football players and he compares them with Teffeteller, Overly, Burns, Tope and some of the other men who he knows will oppose his team.

From what Farmer said, the match between Teffeteller and his opponent should be a whiz. Farmer stated that his man in the 165 pound class likes his wrestling plenty rough and what could be more pleasing to Mr. Teffeteller. Teffey can also mix tihngs up considerably, Y. M. C. A. President or no.

SWEATING A PLENTY AS SCRUB CAGESTERS THRASH WHEAT

Boys Defy Weather To Harvest First Crop

Maryville College reserves basketeers thrashed Wheat Thursday night in a preliminary to the Maryville-Carson Newman game by a score of 24 to 14. This was the first of a series of games that Coach Honaker is arranging for his substitute players and through this means he hopes to get a better knowledge of the ability of his men.

The high school boys started off in brilliant fashion and for awhile it looked as if they would soundly defeat the reserves. They held a large advantage of 9 to 3 at the half way mark but the scrubs rallied in the last half and won by a comfortable margin.

The presence of Allen in the lineup made the difference in the teams in the last half. The little freshman forward seemed to put the necessary life into the team and they played a good brand of basketball during the last period. Allen accounted for eight points to lead both teams in scoring. He was given plenty of assistance by Russell, Jarnagin, Taylor, Stone, Holloway, Gwynn and Graham.

SPORT SLANTS

By BOB RULE

We had a terrible time trying to convince Coach Frosty Holt that Captain Easy White really wasn't going to play against his team Thursday night. When he was instructing his men about their defensive play, he looked around for the brilliant Maryville captain and immediatley inquired as to his whereabouts. When he was told that White had gone home and would not be in the game at all, he didn't believe it. But when play started and White was still conspicious by his absence, a faint trace of a smile crossed Mr. Holt's face.

You know, these other Coaches have just naturally come to respect this guy White in almost every branch of athletics in which Maryville is represented. On the football field, a guy can't start anywhere without having Easy grab him by the shoestrings. On the baseball field, some bird hits one down first base line that looks good for a hit and this same Easy takes it in with ease and then if they get the notion that they can outscore Maryville in basketball, White just drops a few basketballs through a few nets and —aw, what's the use going on, what I'm trying to tell you is, that guy is darn good.

Jack Nee tells a goodun on Johnny Kiser. I'm passing it on to you but don't hold me responsible. Jack says that Kiser took him out to a school affair the other night where his sister was playing in a basketball game. After the game was over, Kiser took Nee around with the intentions of giving him an introduction to the kid sister. When the process started, Kiser found himself unable to think of his sister's name and on the spur of the moment, introduced her as "Sally". Nee found out later that her name was Barbara. Oh well, Barbara sounds a lot like Sally anyway.

Maryville athletes and graduates have always been known to secure positions rather easily aiter leaving their alma mater but I think my pal, Russell Cooper, from Harriman, holds the record. Cooper came here as a freshman last year and made the varsity basketball team and a few quality credits and was unable to return to school this year. He is now working at Harriman High School as an assistant or something to the Principal. He also teaches classes, or rather keeps order, in the absence of one of the professors.

If this spring weather holds out, its going to be time for the spring tennis tournament right away. John Phay states that he is able to get wholesale prices on all tennis equipment and urges those who intend to buy anything in that line to do so immediately. (Editor's note: this is not a paid advertisement.)

Coach Honaker Finds Working Solution To His Basketball Worries While On Trip

WHITE GOES WILD

Strong V. P. I. Cadets Whipped By Determined Crew of M.C. Basketball Artists

Maryville College's Highlanders complete one of the most successful road trips last week that they have taken in many years when they returned to Maryville with five consecutive victories over strong foes. The Highlanders have lost only one game this season and that was to the Tennessee Wesleyan Bulldogs at Athens early in the season.

Beat Milligan

On the first night of the trip, the Highlanders went to Johnson City and defeated the strong Milligan College Buffaloes in one of the best college games of the year. The Maryville boys led the last year's champions throughout the game and never once was their lead threatened.

East Tennessee Teachers

On the night following, the Highlanders moved into Johnson City and played the East Tennessee Teachers off their feet and annexed their second straight, and then went to Bristol, Virginia and took the measure of the King Tornado in a fast game. Captain Easy White was the sensation of the games, scoring points almost at will.

Virginia Poly

Going on into Virginia, the Highlanders stopped at Blacksburgh and handed the V. P. I. team a decisive defeat. The Cadet team is a member of the Southern Conference and Maryville's victory gives them a high rating in Southern basketball circles. The Scots played the best basketball that they have played this year in defeating the V. P. I. team.

Then Roanoke

On the final night of the trip, the Maryvillians moved on to Salem, Virginia, and played Roanoke College, the Alma Mater of Coach Honaker and the boys from little old Maryvillians annexed their fifth consecutive decision. They showed signs of tiring under the terrific pace that they had been keeping for four days and the Roanoke team held them to the closest score of any team on the trip.

Right Combine

It was on the road trip that Coach Honaker discovered his new combination that seems to be the answer to his supplications. His team has been floundering around in a half hearted manner all year, seemingly content to play listless ball but his new combination has the coordination and speed that it takes to make a good basketball team. He now has Kiser and Overly at forwards; White at center, and Nee and Woodard at guards.

Easy White Leads South In Scoring

Recent compilation shows that Easy White, Maryville's captain and forward, has scored a record number of 171 points in the 13 basketball games that he has taken part in this year to lead the entire South in the scoring department. In eight college games, White has scored 121 points, which is 29 points better than the leader in the Southern Conference has scored. For the 13 college games, White has an average of 13 points per games and for the eight college games he has an average of 15 points.

White has been instrumental in all of Maryville's victories this year and without him the team is considerably weakened. He is the main cog in the attack both on offense and defense.

White's total is undoubtedly the highest in the South and if any college or university player in the nation has a larger number of points than his, he has not been heard of. The Maryville leader has made the majority of his points on field goals. He has registered only 19 points by the free throw route and has accounted for 76 goals from the field.

Eagles Make Desperate Bid For Victory In The Waning Stages Of Game

Maryville College's Whitele s Highlanders had a close call with Coach Frosty Holt's Fighting Eagles from Carson-Newman College Thursday night but the Maryvillians came through admirably and eked out a 23 to 22 victory over the boys from Jefferson City. The Highlanders led at the half way mark by a score of 11 to 9 but increased their lead to 20 to 9 in short order only to see the Eagles come from behind in brilliant fashion and almost carry away a victory.

The first half developed into a defensive game and both teams seemed to be afraid to really open up with offensive tactics. The Maryville boys took the lead shortly after the opening whistle, drew away but the Jefferson Citians closed the gap and the Highlanders held only a two point advantage as activities were ended by the referee at the half.

Yank Lewis, playing center in the absence of the one and only Capt. White, put the Highlanders way ahead in the early part of the third quarter with a pair of beautiful field gials from mid-court. Bob Cherry, the slender freshman, also came thru with a field goal to help the cause and before long things looked plenty rosy from a Maryville standpoint. The Scots maintained their advantage until late in the game when Wood, elongated Eagle center, returned to the game.

The Tide Turns

Wood's presence in the lineup seemed to set off the spark of the Eagle attack and the wide gap between the scores soon closed to a mere peep hole. He easily secured the tip and with his gigantic hand, which looks to be designed especially for spanking purposes, slapped the ball in the direction of his own basket and there was usually an anxious Eagle there to bid for a basket.

He Wood

With only two minutes left to play, Wood took the ball off the backboard, did a hop, skip and a jump backward, raised the ball above his head and let it go in an

DR. FOULKES SEND GREETINGS TO STUDENTS OF MARYVILLE

Dear Friends:

The February Meetings for the fifty-sixth time have come and gone, but their memory and influence will remain with us as long as life lasts, and into eternity. It has been a rare privilege for me, in the midst of a life crowded with blessings and burdens, to be the leader, with our dear friend Mr. Stringham, of these memorable meetings.

One could not escape the feeling that the years were looking down upon us, that alumni and friends around the world were praying for us, and that God's spirit was brooding over us. Surely our hearts are full of praise and gratitude as we recall the scores, yes, hundreds of those who have been led to new or renewed decisions for Christ. Some professed their faith for the first time, others confirmed former acknowledgements, many confessed a new desire to live more nobly and more unselfishly, while many others announced their life purpose to let the will of God revealed in Jesus Christ become their controlling motive. "Praise God from whom all blessings flow!" "All hail the power of Jesus' name!"

I think that among many other happy memories I shall never forget your glorious singing morning and night, nor could one ever fail to remember the beautiful prayers which were offered day after day. Your continuing courtesies and kindly greetings extended to your guest preacher have been so bountiful and constant. They will all be enshrined within my deepest experiences. At the center of it all stands the Lord Jesus, whose words and deeds we were privileged to study together. How gloriously the panorama of His loving life was unfolded before our eyes! How he searched our souls, rebuked and forgave our sins, resolved our doubts, dissipated our fears, and won our deathless allegianced If you heard His voice in the echo of the speaker's tones, no less did he see the vision of Christ in your shining and eager faces. Whether in those intimate personal interviews that crowded the days and on into the late night hours, or in the chapel exercises or in group meetings, I felt the thrill of His presence as I walked among you.

And so we are to go our way, your to your books and classes and on to the rich life of service that awaits you, and I to my church and parish. May God richly bless you one and all.

To my beloved and long-time friend President-Emeritus Wilson and the friend of today, his capable and consecrated successor President Lloyd, with all their noble associates, not forgetting my gracious hosts, Dr. and Mrs. Stevenson, with their lovely, hospitable "House in the Woods", I extend fervent good wishes which are prayers. God bless Maryville and make her an ever increasing blessing unto the ends of the earth and unto the ends of the ages.

Faithfully,
William Hiram Foulkes.

ECONOMIST DISCUSSES PRESENT CHINO-JAPANESE SITUATION

leave the country, under penalty of death, and no foreigner was allowed to cross her borders. Subsequent to the treaty, the Island Empire has had an amazing growth, rising from a weak feudal nation to one of the great powers of the world. With a rapidly increasing population and with their limited territory the Japanese faced the serious problem of finding an outlet for their surplus population and of providing more adequate means of meeting the rapidly growing threat of a dearth of the necessities of life. In their desperation they turned to Manchuria, and seemed to find there a solution of their problem.

Here they found a land, more than twice as large as Japan proper, rich in fertile fields and vast mineral resources of coking coal, iron, gold, and other minerals.

Iron and coking coal, lacking in Japan, were greatly coveted by the Japanese. Japan furnished the capital and built the Southern Manchurian Railway, leasing the land together with other vast areas used in agriculture and mining. Japanese investments in Manchuria now total about one billion dollars.

The Trans-Siberian Railway has, in recent years, brought Chinese immigrants to Manchuria at the rate of one and a half million per year. This great influx of immigrants, driven from China by civil war and famine, has brought a state of social and political disorganization hard for Manchurian (nominally Chinese) authorities to control. The Chinese outnumber the Japanese in Manchuria one hundred to one, and, because of their ability to live more cheaply, and because of greater skill in agriculture, have dispossessed many of the Japanese of their soy-bean and wheat farms. The Chinese have likewise built a competing railway, using their own capital, which has sorely reduced the income of the Japanese railroad. Add to these causes the general development of anti-Japanese feeling, with resultant bloodshed, and the raids of Chinese bandits on Japanese property in Manchuria, and we have the primary cause of Japan's belligerent attitude.

Japan, following the enlightened example which the great powers of the world have pursued, during the last seventy years, decided to make reprisals. No declaration of war has been made against China by Japan; neither has China declared war against Japan. Japan asserts that she is simply "protecting her citizens and her treaty rights". Does this phrase sound familiar?

The United States occupied Nicaragua and Haiti for professedly similar reasons, and our war-ship bombarded Greytown, Nicaragua, in 1853, completely devastating that city because the government of Nicaragua failed to protect our citizens who were doing business there. We called it "intervention". And did we not follow the same tactics in China as the Japanese are using now when we intervened during the Boxer Rebellion of 1900?

Japan does not feel that she has violated the Kellogg Pact, of which she is a signatory, for the Pact specifies aggressive warfare and she affirms that she is on the defensive. She believes she has not violated the anti-war provision of the League of Nations, for she is not technically at war—she is "making reprisals" or "intervening". Of course it is very obviously true that she is not at peace with China. Japan's attacks on Shanghai and other Chinese cities are purported to be efforts to protect her citizens and to break the Chinese economic boycott, which the Japanese regard as a hostile act aimed at ruining their nation.

It is quite unlikely that the United States will be involved in war with Japan. It would be disastrous for the United States to enter into war with Japan without the aid of other strong powers, as the strength of the Japanese army and navy and the great distance from our shores would be obstacles which we could scarcely master without the help of powerful allies. There has been no open act of violation of our rights. Furthermore, Japan will not likely take any step which might incite the United States to war, as the United States, cooperating with China, could, by using the economic boycott as a weapon, soon make Japan sue for peace. The boycott would be a far more effective weapon than force of arms.

Japan is vitally dependent upon foreign trade, exports and imports, for her continued existence, and, since her two principal markets are the United States and China it would be foolish to provoke the United States to action. The high-handed policy of the Japanese is greatly to be deplored and its continuance may lead to serious international consequences, but she has a semblance of right on her side, at least so far as international practices and licenses are concerned. In the meantime our confused world anxiously awaits Japan's next move, hoping that it will be for a peaceful settlement of her difficulties with China.

Semi-formal dinner will be served in Pearsons diningroom on Wednesday evening at 6 o'clock, according to an announcement from the management of the Boarding Club late this week. The hour of the evening meal will remain at 6 for the rest of the semester.

LEAPIN' LENAS—TERRY

Leap Year being a month and a half gone it seems only advisable that a few suggestions be offered by the inexperienced writer as to the various methods of carrying out the tradition of the girls taking the forward step and getting what they've been wanting during three years of male aggrandizement.

Pride must be cast to the four winds and to more winds if there are any, with ambition and aggressiveness, disguised to some extent, of course, taking the place of that virtuous though somewhat hindering quality known as Pride—Pride without its friend and contemporary Prejudice. A look of eagerness must be supplanted by a look of possession. Modesty must be stimulated to Modernity. Confidence must take the place of self-consciousness. If these directions are carefully followed, other things being equal, the girls will be taking the first leap in the right direction.

Leap number two consists in the accumulating of necessary supplies for the entertainment and feeding of the acquisition after he or it has been acquired. Pecuniary provisions are a necessary impediments for the success of any leaper even if a Brown Cow is the most expensive article that one can provide at times. The milk of human kindness is merely being exemplified in the purchase of that lowly cow. Begging, borrowing, and stealing are three of the most practical and prevalent methods of obtaining the wherewithal with which to do it all.

Now with the first two leaps successfully cleared, there remains yet the third and perhaps the most important leap of all. It is the problem of actually conveying to the other party the nature of the desire. Of course, he may have a premonition that something is going to happen, that he is going to be challenged, interrogated, or quizzed, but don't let him think that it is a mere request—make it a command! A senior suggests this method, "Look here, big boy, I have fifteen cents; if you want to go to the party tonight, grab a wing and hang on!" Or perhaps it can be a little more subtle and indefinite to the extent that he will experience a yearning to know more about the whole situation. Just say, "Well, I'll be seein' ya' tonight.' He'll be afraid not to go and yet won't be sure if you have really set a date. Uncertainty, they say is an important item in social success—indifference, too; don't ask him too often. Divide your attentions if enough divisions are warrantable.

These requests, or command may be oral or written. Poetry is sometimes a very convincing method of approach and the results are usually satisfactory.

In this matter of leaping a safe medium must be maintained—not a high jump, nor a broad jump—just a convenient leap. Hail to the Leaping Lenas of 1932.

COLLEGE PRESIDENT VIEWS GENEVA CONFERENCE WITH MUCH HOPE

streets. The difficulties of the disarmament task were graphically apparent. But experts point out that there was this one advantage—the situation in the far East destroyed the current illusion that disarmament is a problem concerning Europe only.

There have been several major conferences since the World War dealing with regional and partial disarmament; naval disarmament has received chief attention. The "Kellog Pact" signed in Paris by practically all the nations of the world declared war as an instrument for settling differences between nations to be an "outlaw". But this is the first world conference called to deal with the whole problem of disarmament. It was called by the League of Nations as the result of work covering five years by the League's Commission on Disarmament.

Delegates from sixty-four nations have gathered. The United States is represented by Secretary of State Stimson, High S. Gibson, Ambassador to Belgium; Senator Swanson of Virginia; Norman H. Davis, and President Mary Emma Woolley of Mt. Holyoke College in Massachusetts. Miss Woolley has the distinction of being the first woman to be appointed on a major commission by a major nation, and also of being one of the wisest and most far-seeing members of the conference. Many experts and clerks accompany each delegation.

The first month will be used for the presentation of preliminary statements by various nations. A recent news dispatch carried the strange anomoly of Japan proposing reduction of armaments in Geneva and sending reinforcements to Shanghai. Then it will take months of negotiations in commissions and full sessions.

Any effective diarmament is made difficult and complex, not only by the traditions, fears, and selfishness of peoples, but also by the fact that in modern warfare every commercial vessel, every manufacturing plant, whether steel, aluminum, or chemical are potential armaments, and every student Reserve Officers Training Camp is a potential army.

If this conference can achieve a twenty-five percent actual reduction of armament it will pave the way to a far greater reduction within the next ten years. That it will be difficult to accomplish any great progress is evident to the most superficial observed. That the world's economic back is being broken and that war is not being avoided by maintaining large armaments ought to be equally plain. That the mind of the world about war is changing and that there is a way out are facts asserted by many of the wisest leaders. And it is certain that the President of the Conference, Mr. Arthur Henderson of Great Britain, was speaking for the voiceless millions of the earth when he said in his opening address, "I refuse to contemplate even the possibility of failure."

She: You got fooled on this diamond.

He: I guess not. I know my onions.

She: Maybe—but not your carats.

CARSON-NEWMAN BASKET BALL GAME

unorthodox manner and the Highlanders were leading by only one point. Both teams then proceeded to go crazy or thereabouts and some of the wildest action that has taken place on the local hardwood in many a season took place in those last few seconds of play.

The Highlanders took the ball and decided that a straight line was the shortest distance between two points and set out in a hurry for the other end of the floor. The Eagles got it right back and could see nothing, but that basket on the other end of the room into which it was their greatest desire to deposit the ball. But their well meant efforts went for naught and the Maryville boys took the ball after quite a few shin kickings and rib punchings during which Jack Nee was ejected from the game on personal fouls.

Those "Two" Minutes

The timers whistle ended the affair after two of the longest minutes that I have ever lived through in all my life. Up to the time of Wood's basket, we all had that well known satisfied look upon our countenances but pals, it was different during those last two weeks, I mean minutes.

Incidentally, it was the Highlanders fifth consecutive victory over Conference opposition and with Mr. White back in the fold, it looks like milk and honey from now on. However, those Milligan College Buffaloes don't believe in milk and honey and they have some plans set for the Highlanders by which they mean to break Maryville's hearts when they come down for their game. Be careful Highlanders! !

REV. STRINGHAM TENDERS THANKS

This occasion offers me a splendid opportunity to thank all who have made their contribution to the success of the music of the February meetings. I heartily agree with Dr. Lloyd when he said publicly on Tuesday night that the music is no little part of such a meting. May I express my sincere appreciation to Dr. Lloyd and the leaders of the music department, Miss Hale and Miss Henry, for their leadership at the piano and with the choir, and for the wholesome spirit which has characterized our associations these eleven years. I shall always hold in fondest memories my work with such a great institution. May heaven continue to shine upon it. I should thank the student body for the eager and hearty response we are able to receive from them. The songs and hymns sung leave a lasting impression on us all. Again, I say, "Thank you, one and all."

Bob Stevenson assured the Alpha Sigma players that someone, at lest, enjoyed the play on Monday night. While he was doing that, everyone in the entire audience felt that if he wasn't he surely was fooling some eight hundred people. After Sammie Broughton left school it looked like we might have to do our own laughing. . . but after Monday night we can rest asured that Bob will take care of it for us.

No one could quite determine just why Professors Ellis and Griffitts resorted to work on the coal pile one day last week. It has been suggested that they were getting in shape for the worst in case they lost their job and have to resort to ditch digging as an enterprise. Then, too, it was proposed that perhaps the young professor's interest has changed suddenly from white diamonds to black diamonds.

Of course, there's been no one found who can use that time like it was formerly used, but John is going to get all right even if he has to take up the checker game to settle his nerves.

THETA PRESENTS FINAL MIDWINTER MONDAY EVENING

'Alison's House' Has MacKenzie In Female Lead With Mathias Opposite

NOTED PRODUCTION

Excellent Cast Afforded In Pulitzer Prize-Winner For 1931

The Pulitzer prize play for 1931 will be the presentation of Theta Epsilon literary society Monday night as the curtain rises at eight o'clock on "Alison's House", the last midwinter of the season.

The play is one of the many biographical sketches presented recently in drama. Its central figure is the poet Alison Stanhope, whose spirit, though she herself has been dead eighteen years, still pervades the house. The action is slow, and revolves around the memory of Alison, as she is revealed to be not only a great poet, but also a great woman. Deep emotions are expressed in each character as this genius is recognized after all the years as being the noblest member of the house.

The cast is headed by Mildred MacKenzie as Elsa, and Harry Mathias as Stanhope, and is supported by Lindsay Tope as Eben, Mary Lovette as Agatha, Ann Smartt as Ann, John McQueen as Knowles, Coile Quinn as Ted, Betty Hunt as Louise, Larry Somers as Hodges, Charlotte Mathis as Mrs. Hodges, and Ruby Hitch as Jennie.

FOREST SERVICE LECTURER COMES TUESDAY EVENING

Herbert N. Wheeler Will Give Illustrated Lecture On Forestry

There will be a forest lecture by Herbert N. Wheeler, Chief Lecturer of the United States Forest Service, Tuesday, February 23, at Maryville College at 6:30 p. m. This lecture, illustrated with many splendid slides, will interest all those who love nature. The entertainment is free, being sponsored by the United State Forest Service and the Tennessee Forest Service.

Mr. Wheeler, whose forestry talks are backed by many years of experience in the woods, will give what he calls a forestlogue. His talk will cover game, fish, and recreation as well as forest management.

MISS HENRY GOES TO PHILADELPHIA

Miss Clemmie Henry will leave Maryville next Friday for a short trip to Philadelphia. She will be a guest of the New Century Woman's Club of that city and will speak to the organization one evening next week.

The New Century Club is interested in general education work and makes a business of supplying loans to students. Maryville's system of student help has for some time been of special interest to organizations of that type.

FOUR MARYVILLE ALUMNI AWARDED PRINCETON HONORS

Four of the twelve fellowships and prizes awarded at Princeton Theological Seminary to graduates of 1931 were received by Maryville men. The William Henry Green fellowship in Biblical Theology was won by Wilbur Mitchell Franklin '28. The Gelston-Winthrop fellowship in Church History was awarded to Harold Gordon Harold '28, who was also the winner of the Grace Carter Erdman Prize in the English Bible. Russell Wilfred Annick was the winner of the second Archibald Alexander Hodge prize.

The fellowships entitle the winners to a year of graduate study in this country or abroad. The subject of thesis which won the Biblical Theology fellowship was the conception of "Reconciliation" in Paul's Epistles. The thesis for the Gelston-Winthrop fellowship was on "The Employment of the Old Testament in the Christian Church during the First Three Centuries", and the subject for the examination was "The Ante-Nicene Church". The other prize won by Gordon Harold was one of fifty dollars awarded to the member of the senior class who had done the best work in the English Bible during his course for the last two years at Princeton Seminary. The prize of twenty-five dollars won by Russell Wilford Annich was awarded for a thesis on an assigned subject in Systematic Theology.

Last year Maryville led the list of colleges represented at the Seminary with the number of twelve, Wheaton and Wooster following with seven. This year Wheaton College leads the list with thirteen, Maryville takes second place with ten, and Wooster follows with seven.

WASHINGTON WI'L BE HONORED AT VESPERS SUNDAY

Dr. Stevenson Will Conduct Bicentennial Program; Special Music

At the Vesper service Sunday evening Dr. Stevenson will conduct an especially-arranged service commemorating the two hundredth anniversary of the birth of George Washington. This service is one which has been prepared by Williams Chalmers Covert and Henry Van Dyke for voluntary use in all the Presbyterian Churches in the United States of America on Sun day, February 21.

Special music will be provided by the choir under the direction of Miss Frances Henry. Dr. Stevenson will address the congregation on the subject, "George Washington, the Peerless Patriot." Through the interest and kindess of Mr. Oscar Henry the platform will be decorated with flags lent to the College by the Maryville chapter of the American Legion.

The service promises to be impressive and inspiring, and a community-wide invitation is extended by the College.

ANNUAL FRED HOPE CAMPAIGN TO BE OPENED WED. 24

Reverend G. C. Beanland Will Launch Yearly Drive For Funds

FRIEND OF HOPE

Speaker To Give Illustrated Lecture Wednesday Evening

Next Wednesday, February 24, the annual Fred Hope Drive will be launched at Maryville College with the appearance of Reverend Gayle C. Beanland at the chapel exercises.

This drive is for the purpose of raising funds by student subcription for the use of Fred Hope in the Frank James Industrial School in Elat, Kamarun, West Africa. Mr. Hope is a graduate of Maryville College, class 1906, and has been engaged in giving the natives of West Africa vocational training since shortly after obtaining his degree. His daughter, Arta Grace Hope, is a member of class '34.

Rev. Beanland is a missionary who has been associated with Mr. Hope in West Africa for twenty years. Besides his lecture on Wednesday morning he will give an illustrated talk Wednesday evening at 6:45. His final lecture will be at the regular chapel exercises Thursday morning.

He is now in the United States on a furlough and will sail for Africa in a few weeks.

SENIOR COMMITTEE CONSIDERS PLAYS FOR PRESENTATION

Choice Narrowed To Two Plays Committee Hopes To Decide Soon

The committee for selecting the senior play is deliberating between A. A. Milne's "The Truth About the Blades", and James Barry's "What Every Woman Knows".

Two of the original suggestions were to present either "A Mid-Summer Night's Dream" in the ampitheatre in the woods, or three one-act plays. The final decision, however, will be on one of the two longer and more recent plays.

The members of the committee are Ann Smartt. Louise Avery, and Julius Allison.

T. T. ALEXANDER CONTEST ATTRACTS SEVEN STUDENTS

Bible Department Announces Subjects For Annual Oratorical Contest

Seven students have entered the T. T. Alexander prize oratorical contest, according to an announcement from the Bible department this week. Men are competing in the contest which is open in alternate years to men and women of the junior and senior classes.

The contestants will read their essays in chapel sometime near the middle of March. The subjects are "The Atonement", "The Meaning of the Resurrection", and "Salvation Through Faith". The prize, one hundred dollars in gold, is the handsomest prize offered at Maryville College. It is the gift of a business man who is a friend of the college, but who prefers to remain unknown and have the prize named for one of Maryville's foreign missionaries. After the contest each year the manuscripts are placed in the hands of the donor of the prize.

This contest is conducted every year under the management of the Department of Bible and Religious Education.

'GYPSY HI-LIFE' IS THEME OF BENEFIT BY U. T. SINGERS

Varied Numbers Listed On Interesting Concert Of Glee Club

HAMILTON TO SING

Former Maryville Student Is Director of Program Friday

The combined Glee Clubs of the University of Tennessee will present a musical program at Voorhees Chapel Friday evening, March. 4. This will be a benefit number for the Y.M.C.A. of Maryville College. The show is called "Gypsy Hi-Life" and follows the gypsy theme through out.

The U. T. Glee Club is under the direction of Mr. Ed Hamilton, a former student of Maryville College and an accomplished musician. Mr. Hamilton lately gave a short program at chapel here and was very well received.

The cast of the "Gypsy Hi-Life" musicale includes the best talent in the university. The show was presented at Jefferson Hall recently and was acclaimed as the best musical entertainment ever presented by the university glee clubs. The curtain rises on a gyspy camp scene and the audience is presented with a most colorful picture of thirty dusky brown gypsy maidens and twenty-five healthy gypsy rogues gathered around the camp fire in the forest. Opening with a jolly Carnival Chorus the gypsies start the day with song. This theme is carried through the entire day.

Special features of the program will be the singing of the popular "Rogues Song" by Ed Hamilton and the delightful "Gypsy Maiden I" by Miss Dorothy Armstrong. A male quartet will sing several popular songs and Miss Elizabeth Shugart will play gypsy numbers on her violin. Robert Horton, tenor, and president of the club, will sing "The Gypsy Love Song."

The University of Tennessee orchestra, composed of twenty members will also have a part on the program.

Ministerial Association

On Tuesday night Dr. Stevenson addressed the Association on the subject, "What of the Revival". He reviewed the history of the revival movement from the Bible times to the present day. The factors necessary for success in revivals are prayer, the outpouring of the spirit of God, and the presentation of the gospel truths.

Mr. George Houlan will speak informally on February 23 on the oration entitled, "The Substance of the Stewardship", with which he won first place in the Alabama Presbyterian Contest and third place in the All-Southern Contest held last year.

Dr. S. T. Wilson Celebrates Seventy-fourth Birthday

Wednesday, February 17, Dr. Wilson celebrated his 74th birthday. The students and the faculty of Maryville College sent to him through President Lloyd a letter of congratulations and good wishes. Dr. Wilson's many friends from everywhere remembered the day with gifts and cards. Last year Dr. Wilson's birthday was celebrated in Syria.

Although he is freed from the duties and burdens of the office of president, and although his health does not permit him to take an active interest in the school, Dr. Wilson is engaged in writing a book on the life of Isaac Anderson. The book has just been started, but to write it has been one of his desires for a long time—a desire that was put aside so long because of the pressure of official duties.

Popular Maryville Alumnus Will Visit Foreign Schools

ECHO STAFF HAS VACANCIES

At the present time there are some vacancies existing in the staff of the HIGHLAND ECHO. These vacancies will be filled from applications received before Wednesday, March 2.

There are five vacancies in the freshman staff and one as junior associate editor. Any persons desiring to apply for one of these places will please see Miss Wright, Miss Terry, or Mr. Hina within a few days to obtain trial assignments.

Only men and women of freshman and junior classification are eligible to fill these positions.

Mr. Gene McMurray, a Maryville alumnus, and son of Dr. and Mrs. McMurray, will leave in April for a three-month tour of outstanding European universities under the leadership of Dr. Raymond Nash, head of the Physical Training Department of New York University.

The group of which Mr. McMurray is a member will spend approximately two weeks at each of the leading universities in the various countries. During this time they will observe the different methods of teaching physical training in the foreign countries.

Among the countries which will be visited are France. Switzerland, Czechoslovakia, Germany, Finland, Denmark, and England. KEEP
KAMPUS KLEAN

It is evident to the most superficial observer that a studied and conscientious attempt to clean up the campus is being made by the college administration. In a short while much of the evil will be removed from the eye-sore that is usually called the Power House by having the delapidated retaining wall rebuilt; the coal pile, that has been more or less a landmark to students for many years, is in the process of removal; additional workers are employed about the campus picking up the paper, peels and other refuse carelessly and thoughtlessly thrown down by the students, and new cans for waste materials are now placed in advantageous places.

It is an old custom for the ECHO each year to discuss this question, but heretofore no great amount of cooperation in placing convenient receptacles was obtained from the college. This year everything that is possible is being done to really make the campus the tidy place that it should be. However, all the cans and cleaners in the world can't keep it neat unless the individual student cooperates. It is a comparatively easy thing for a student to carry those orange peels or that banana skin a few steps farther and drop it in one of the cans, whereas if each merely drops his burden in the most convenient and visible place the result is everythihng but sightly.

Let's cooperate with those responsible for this clean-up campaign and, when the campus once assumes a trim aspect, keep it that way. Watch those peels, that paper, and remember it isn't necessary to throw everything not at the moment needed, out the dormitory window.

CAN WE DISARM?

One of the most colossal tasks civilization has ever set itself is being discussed now in Geneva. Can the world disarm and live peacefully? This is the question that is ever present as the Disarmament Conference proceeds. Some say that it is possible; others say that wars have always been and must always be as long as human nature is what it is. Precedent is a great thing and a convenient answer to a knotty problem, but after contemplation of the carnage wrought in 1914 and its resultant moral decline the wisdom of predecessors is seriously questioned.

It is true that the urge for possessing more and more property seems as strong in the nation as it ever was in the individual and as long as this greedy impulse is paramount clashes between countries are inevitable. However, if this idea of a country or nation as a unit can be supplanted by the idea of the world as a unit this difficulty will be obviated.

Integration is the law of nature and social integration is as inevitable as the rising and setting of the sun. Kilpatrick, in the "Educational Review", points out this inevitability in clear and logical reasoning to the future from the past:

"Unless civilzation goes to pieces, we face an inevitable and unending process of integration. As the seven little kingdoms of Great Britain had to unite in time into the Heptarchy; as Scotland must in time unite her warring clans into one harmonious whole; as increased travel and exchange of goods and communication must make one nation of the thirteen struggling suspicious colonies; so we may say that the round world is bound to return upon itself. Let the integration continue and sooner or later the ties that bind will outgrow the forces that separate; and the separate nations of the world will realize that the united welfare of all demands the united action of all. The beginnings of formal joint may be small, but the beginning is the most difficult."

While this question is of interest to the National Fathers it is of even more interest, and more vitally, to the generation which the college student represents, for we are literally fighting for our lives. The palsied hands of the Greybeards sitting in Geneva are far too weak to clutch the cold grip of a Springfield; their watery eyes are much too filmed to squint along the highly polished barrel of an automatic; their shoulders are far too flabby to steady the gouging gee pole of a stuttering machine gun; it is the student of today who will be asked to face the withering hail of slugs from rapid fire guns, who will be asked "for the glory of their country" to surrended everything that they consider worthwhile and march spiritedly away to an unnamed grave.

"The students . . . . . are watching critically every action of this conference. Behind (its) deliberations stands staring down at us the specter of death. . . . We desire to live and live at peace . . . Organized slaughter does not settle a dispute; it merely silences an argument. We insist that for violence be substituted juridicial control by the World Court and executive action through the League of Nations."

PRESIDENT LLOYD SPEAKS IN MEET AT CINCINNATI

Special to The Echo

The Cincinnati-Maryville College Club held its annual meeting at the University Y. M. C. A. Saturday, February 13. A Committee composed of Frank Cody, President of the Club, and James M. Brown, Secretary, with the aid of Robert W. Bishop, Edgar F. Martin and L. E. Milling made the plans for the program and meeting. Invitations were sent to alumni in the three joining states—Ohio, Indiana, and Kentucky. Sixty-five reservations were made, some of which were friends and realtives of the members of the club.

Dinner was served in the club rooms of the University Y. M. C. A., of which Bob Bishop of '26 is executive secretary. Between courses, the guests were favored with a solo by Lamar Milling, class of '28 who was accompanied by Emma Snediker '27, and Ruth Gamble class of '22, who was accompanied by Vera Hall Claypoole, class of '10. Following the dinner, the group was led in song by James M. Brown, class of '26, which included "Alma Mater" and the rousing college yell "How-Wee-How".

Frank Cody, president of the club, in a very impressive way presented the guest of the evening, President, Ralph Waldo Lloyd, who talked very informally and interestingly on the "Past and the Future of Maryville." Dr. Lloyd won his way into the hearts of those who heard him for the first time and gave everyone the assurance that Maryville's future is as promising as her past was.

The nominating committee presented an orange and garnet ticket or the new officers. Results of the election were: President, James M. Brown, '26, Vie-President, Robert W. Bishop, '26, Secretary and Treasurer, Florence Black, '28. Everyone then gathered in the lobby, chatted with each other, with the president until the lights flashed, which is a well-known signal at Maryville that it is time to retire. The meeting was closed by singing "Old Maryville".

Attending the meeting were: Earl R. North, Helen Lewis, '20, Theodore C. Purdy '25, T. N. Brown, Emma Snediker '27, James M. Brown '26. Vera Hall Claypoole '10, Porter H. Turner '23, Eleanor E. Dayl, Dorothy L. Ferris '28, Mrs. Geneva M. Guernsey '28, E. Frank Cody, Mary Elizabeth Woodard, E. Philip Vogel '30, Ruth Gamble '23, D. S. Marston '27, Rev. C. E. Conrad '16, Ruth E. Caskey '27, Mrs. Winona Johnston Newton, Marguerite Caldwell, Rev. Wm. Malcolm, Dprothea Thomsen, Frances Crabill, S. A. Caldwell '91, Robert W. Bishop '26, Virginia S. Clark '25, Hilda Simerly '23, Glenn Cross, Nannie Maness '09, Lamar Milling '28, Helen M. Bowman Sherman '26, Esther Grimes '26, Edgar F. Martin '24, Florence G. Black '28, Mary Louise Black '28.

EVALUATION

By Julia Terry

I ADMIRE intellect tempered with modesty
With gentle criticisms here and there,
For then I feel my humble attempts
At something worthwhile
May someday be realized.

I LIKE a church with a spire
Which points the upward way
To groups of people who pass
throughh
The portals every Sunday morning,
As well as to the hurried weekday people
On busy streets.

I LOVE a friend whose sympathy is understanding
And whose silences at times mean more than words,
Whose eyes reveal the inmost
feelings of the heart
Whose handclasp is the bridge of soul to soul.

CLOUDS

By Julia Terry

I saw three puffy clouds float across the moon
Going northwards to the land of snow and pine, I guess
I wondered idly where their final resting place might be.
Perhaps their search was for another moon to pass by.
Lightly powdering the moon
lady's nose with cloud fluff
With the moon man looking on in grave accord.

STUDENT VOLUNTEER CONVENTION

The Maryville group of Student Volunteers is making preparations to send a delegation to the Spring Conference of the Movement in Tennessee, which is to be held at Bethel College, Mackenzie, next week-end. Members of the executive committee announced after a business meeting on Thursday evening that a free-will offering will be taken at the meeting on Sunday evening to help defray expenses of the trip.

At the last meeting of the Home Economics Club the following officers were elected:

President—Ruby Hitch
Vice President—Theona Pruett
Secretary—Lila Barr
Treasurer—Estalena Williams
Program Secretaries—Ruth Morgan, Mary Cornwall

Formal installation of these officers will take place on Friday, February 19, in the Home Economics Club room.

Plans for the future of the club include a talk by Miss Lois Wilson on home economics work in Syria, and a visit to the new Proffitt home on the Niles Ferry Road.

Nan Lagerstedt To Appear In Final Lyceum

The final lyceum program of the year will be the presentation of Miss Nan Lagerstedt at Voorhees Chapel Monday evening, February 29. Miss Lagerstedt is a character impersonator and entertainer of note and Maryville will be glad of the opportunity of hearing this accomplished artist.

Miss Lagerstedt has spent her life in preparation for her work. She studied at the Curry School of Expression in Boston and also at the Whitney School of Expression. She spent considerable time studying with private teachers of elocution in Boston. This extensive training enables her create the best program possible and to present types which are true to life.

Miss Lagerstedt is enthusiastically received wherever she appears. She has the ability to convulse people with laughter or to move them to tears quite as easly. She has toured the greater part of the United States and Canada, from coast to coast as Concert Reader and Entertainer. She has appeared at several Eastern schools. Her motto is:

"Laugh and the world laughs with you.
Weep and you weep alone."

When pathos is wanted Miss Lagerstedt can change her audience from roars of laughter to floods of tears. Her program is varied and her reportoire extensive, consisting of monologues, impersonations, and character sketches.

MARYVILLE ALUMNUS SPEAKS

Special to The Echo

Washington, D. C.—Judge Hugh McCall Tate of the Interstate Commerce Commission in Washington, D. C., will represent Maryville College, of which he is an alumnus, at the Bicenntennial Convocation of The George Washington University to be held in Constitution Hall, the auditorium of the Daughters of the American Revolution, on the evening of February 22nd.

In honoring George Washington on this occasion, representatives of colleges and universities throughout the country and the Department of Superintendents of the National Education Association, will join with the University founded in the District of Columbia in furtherance of his expressed hope, bearing his name, and dedicated to his educational ideals.

DEPTH SOUNDERS FOR AIRCRAFT

WITH the application of electricity to aircraft instruments, another chapter was written in the annals of air transportation. To-day's ship is not only swifter but safer and more dependable. Modern depth-sounding devices indicate instantly the height of the ship above the ground surface. A unique feature of General Electric's recently purchased monoplane is the almost completely electrified instrument panel.

The most recently developed instrument is the sonic altimeter, which provides a quick means of indicating changes in height above ground. Sound from an intermittently operated air whistle is directed downward. The echo is picked up in a receiving megaphone, and the sound is heard through a stethoscope. The elapsed time between the sound and the echo determines the height. Tests show that water, buildings, woods, etc., produce echoes that are different and characteristic.

Besides developing a complete system of aircraft instruments, college-trained General Electric engineers have pioneered in every electrical field—on land, on sea, and in the air.

Maryville Meets Chattanooga In Feature Wrestling Match Of The Season At Local Gym Tonight

Farmer Watkins Brings Team From High Point College Here Tuesday Night

VANDY SCHEDULED

Knoxville Y. M. C. A. Is Beaten For Second Consecutive Time; Score 38 0

Maryville College's wrestlers will meet the Chattanooga Y. M. C. A. here tonight in a return engagement with the boys from the Lookout City. The Maryvillians won the other match early in the season and Coach Bob Thrower is hopeful that they can come through with their fourth straight victory tonight. The match will start at 8:00 o'clock.

Coach Thrower will probably start the same team that has been so successful in the other three matches and they should be able to come through with their second consecutive triumph over the 'Noogans. He will again use Campbell, Cross, Peacock, Boretsky, Tope, Teffeteller, Burns, and Clifford "Znoski" Overly.

High Point Tuesday

Tuesday night the wrestlers take on a team that is totally unknown to them. They meet Coach Farmer Watkins' team from High Point College and Coach Thrower is expecting Farmer's team to be plenty tough. They are scheduled to play before the Maryville-L. M. U. basketball game and one of the largest crowds of the season should be on hand.

Word from Farmer gives out the information that several of his men are football players and he believes that the Maryville boys will have a tough time in defeating his 165 pound representative.

Vandy Scheduled

Arrangements were completed this week for the Maryville matmen to go to Nashville to meet the Vanderbilt University team. A victory over the Nashville outfit would give the locals an exceptionally high rating in the South as the Vandy grapplers are aways tough customers.

The Vanderbilt match will end one of the most extensive wrestling seasons that any Maryville team has had. This meet will complete a schedule of six matches which is more than Maryville teams have been attempting in the past years.

Knox "Y" Swamped

Last week the grapplers went to Knoxville and played the meanest trick imaginable on the Knoxville Y. M. C. A. boys. You know the Y boys are Southern Y. M. C. A. champions this year and they are in the habit of winning at least one match in every meet but the Maryville boys decided to do a good job of it and so they took seven matches out of eight on falls and Teffeteller took the other one on a time decision. The final score was, of course, 38 to 0.

BRINGS MAT TEAM HERE TUES. NIGHT

FARMER WATKINS

Ladies and gentlemen! in this corner, Robert Thomas Farmer Watkins, the fightinist, talkinist, wrestlinist little man that has even been turned out at Maryville College. Farmer in person will be here on this campus Tuesday night as chaperone for the High Point College Wrestling team when they come down out of the wild, wooly mountains of North Carolina to spend their fury on the cohorts of one Robert Thrower.

It will be a case of teacher vs pupil when Farmer and his gang of grapplers come to town. For the past four years, Mr. Thrower tutored Farmer in the art of playing center on the football team and some of the antics that Farmer used on his football opponents while at Maryville may be in evidence when his matmen take the mat against the undefeated Highlanders.

Society note: Mr. Sam King will leave for Sevierville Tuesday morning.)

SPORT SLANTS

By BOB RULE

Again we get back to that old worn out subject of "non-support." Now don't get excited, this does not concern a divorce case in any way but what I am driving at is the miserable way in which the students have been supporting the basketball team. At times it is just plain exasperating and at other times its almost pathetic.

Its exasperating when we see five scantily clad collegians playing their hearts out for a conference championship while the student body sits in a state of contentedness, perfectly willing to let the team take it on the chin of a conference opponent.

Then its pathetic when we consider the fact that Maryville College is by far the best college in the Conference, has the largest student body in the conference, and always has teams that are superior to anything in the conference, but still the students do not support the teams like the rest of the colleges do.

Milligan College, with about 300 students, simply takes the roof off the gym when the team makes its appearance on the floor for a game, and what is the result? For the past two years Milligan's basketball team has marched straight through the Smoky Mountain Conference tournament to annex two straight crowns.

Maryville right now is in a position to almost clinch the championship for this year if the students will give them the backing that they deserve. When Milligan College comes down here, they are going to be set to avenge their defeat at the hands of the Highlanders earlier in the season and if they are able to do this, they will have their third straight championship all sewed up in a bag.

And, of course, if the Highlanders can come through with a win over the big Buffaloes, they will have their best chance in years to win a conference title.

Dr. Lloyd insisted that Dr. Foulkes was hard pressed for time and all that sort of thing, but we'll still wager our last Indian Head that the most pressing engagement the great minister had was the handshaking event on last Wednesday morning.

PHILADELPHIA SIGNS BOB CHANDLER FOR BASEBALL JOB

Star Hurler Of Last Year Will Get Try-Out With Champs Of American League

Word was received here at the first of the week that Bob Chandler, who will be remembered as one of the finest athletes and finest fellows on the Hill last year, has signed a contract to play with Connie Mack's champion Philadelphia Athletics. Bob will report to the camp of the A's at Fort Myers, Florida when spring training starts in March.

Chandler came here last year from Decatur, Alabama, and his size impressed Coach Bob Thrower. The Line Coach took Chandler over and make a first rate tackle out of him and before the year was over he was one of the best men on the squad. Chandler was very nonchalant in his work and seemingly a little slow and so Thrower, the old World's Champion Nick-Namer, soon had him known as "Lightin'" all over the campus.

When baseball season rolled around he reported to Coach Honaker and the baseball wizard coach soon found that Chandler could throw a ball about as fast as his nickname would imply Coach Honaker immediately saw his possibilities and spent much time on him in developing his curves, control, and general baseball knowledge.

Chandler was not able to stay in school this year because of his father's illness, and so he was lost to the football team after he had played some fine games during the early part of the season. He returned at the beginning of the second semester but was again unable to stay and so he returned to his home, little realizing that in the near future he was to become a pupil of the smartest big league manager in professional baseball.

It is almost inevitable that Chandler will be farmed out to a minor league club at the end of spring training. He has the ability, desire, and common sense to play big time baseball, but even Babe Ruth did not become a hero in a day.

GIRLS' ATHLETICS

Mrs. Queener reports that a large number of girls are out for volley ball practice and that they are working hard for the tournament on Wednesday and Friday afternoons and Saturday night.

The final scores of the basketball tournament were: Junior-Senior 105, Sophomore 100, and Freshman 130.

An old farmer down in Tennessee was heard to say that since the recent Wrigley death the Chicago Cubs will not have such good financial backing this year, "by gum".

Carson-Newman Holds Only Win Over Highlanders In Conference Chase; Only Three More Games

Season Is Rapidly Drawing To A Close With Scotties In Position For Title

MUST BEAT MILLIGAN

Buffaloes Likely To Give Most Trouble But Other Two Must Be Watched

Maryville College's Highlanders continue to holl sway in the Smoky Mountain Conference title chase despite their defeat by the Carson-Newman Eagles last Tuesday night at Jefferson City. The Highlanders went out after their first setback of the year and conquered Tusculum and L. M. U. in rapid succession to give them a total of seven victories against one defeat.

The defeat at the hands of Carson-Newman came rather unexpectedly but the game was played on the Eagle's home court and it is much harder to win over a team when they are playing at home than it is to take them into camp when they are visiting your own court. The Carson-Newman boys played a fighting brand of heads up basketball and accomplished a feat of which they have every right to be proud. They held Captain Easy White to six points, the lowest that he has been confined to this year in a college game.

Wednesday night the Highlanders played hosts to the Tusculum College Pioneers and the Maryvillians were given plenty of trouble by the boys from the mountains at Cumberland Gap. The Scots were forced to the utmost to get the lead until late in the game when White found the basket for enough points to put his team out ahead. The final score was 31 to 23. Jack Nee played one of the best games at his guard position that he has played this year and also contributed to the Maryville cause with several points.

Friday night the boys took to the road again and played L. M. U. on the Rail Splitters' home court and again the Scotties came through with a victory. Led by Captain White and Yank Lewis, who scored 16 and 14 points respectively, the Maryvillians kept ahead throughout the game and the final whistle found them leading by a score of 43 to 32.

WORK BEGUN IN THREE LINES OF SPRING SPORTS WORK

Uniforms To Be Issued To All Comers; Honaker In Need Of Pitchers

The end of basketball season is fast approaching and this reminds us of the fact that it will soon be time for the beginning of spring sports. Baseball, track, tennis, spring football, and later, swimming. It will soon be time for all of these and students should begin to prepare for them.

Baseball and track should enjoy especially good years this season. There are several veterans back in both of these sports and Maryville should be able to put winning teams on the field in both of these sports.

The baseball team has a number of things to think about when they start work, first of all, they have a state championship to defend; second, they have the old tradition of Maryville's baseball superiority to uphold; and third, they have two games with the Knoxville Smokies, new members of the Southern League.

The track men should have only one thing in mind when they start conditioning for the season and that is the meet with L. M. U. Last year the Rail Splitters won a one-point victory over the Maryvillians and it was the first time in the history of the school that they had ever beaten Maryville. The track artists will have to settle that little score and so they should be able to go about their work in a business-like manner.

Coach Honaker has issued a personal call to every boy on the Hill and he is especially interested in each individual who wants to try out for either football, baseball or track. His appeal to the men follows:

"Spring football, baseball, and track should appeal to every boy on the Hill and we need you out. We are giving out uniforms now and every one who expects to be out for any sport this spring should start working at once.

"If you are a baseball or track man or if you have never played football but would like to try, or if you are a football man, get your football suit and start doing some work to get in condition for your sport. It makes little difference which sport you are entering, the first two weeks should be spent in

BASKETBALL TEAM IS NEEDING HELP OF STUDENT BODY

Are we inferior to Carson-Newman, Milligan, Tusculum and King College students? Do we have less true school spirit and less wholehearted interest in our basketball team than these schools? Do we intend to let our basketball team, one of the finest ever to represent Maryville College and one of the best, if not THE best in the Smoky Mountain Conference, play their home games before a band of students who are as lifeless as a Georgia negro?

The support that the boys received in the Carson-Newman and Tusculum games was nothing short of disgraceful. We had no life whatever and the team defeated these teams just because they have a basketball club that stands head and shoulders above anything that they have played against this year, and NOT because the students contributed their moral support in an honest-to-goodness way. THINK THIS OVER.

Here is a short letter from Coach Honaker, expressing the views of himself and his team on this subject. Think this over also:

"TO THE ECHO STAFF AND THE STUDENT BODY: Did it ever occur to you that Maryville gives poorer support and less enthusiasm to the basketball team than any college that we have visited this season? Well, it has to me and it has to the players. In every college we visit, the appearance of their team on the floor is a signal for enthusiastic yells, but not so at Maryville, although we are in a very tight race for a conference championship.

This is not a criticism but a very gentle reminder that we need your help."

conditioning and learning to run, so get a football suit and get out every day for an hour or more.

"We need athletes and you need the sports and we are especially in need of baseball pitchers and football linemen so if you have any desire or inclination to be either, do not hesitate to come out.

"If you hav ever pitched or think that you might be a pitcher, please come around and see me personally as I want to start you working at once."

debate against girls. We can't think that they would be enthusiastic about that. At least, we're tempted to say that they shouldn't be. Of course, if Queener wanted to give the girls a good impression of Maryville men, he couldn't have done much better, if any, and by so doing, he might manage to get a return engagement with the debaters of that school.

It might be interesting to someone (something always is) that Charlie Beale purchased his first bar of soap last week. His roommate had one come in from home. It just got to the place where Beale had to buy soap or be a clear water fish.

IGNORANCE—BEALE

We have heard that the ideal composition should begin always with a remark that "someone has said". And since we ardently desire that this brief dissertation be the crowning achievement of our lives, we beg you to please read the following remark.

Someone has said that a college should be an extremely learned place, since the freshmen bring in so much learning and the seniors carry so little away. But, contrary to the usual trend, we find no such thing. Every class brings its astonihingly high quota of miserable studes who know nothing at all about the subject in question. Each conversation inevitably strays to some subject on which one of the participants is forced to be as silent as a giraffe with the sore throat. It is whispered that even the newspapers are not authenic, some going so far as to say that, once in a long while, one can find in a newspaper like this and an article like this some traces of misinformation. In fact, one rowdy insisted on informing us that we were always in error in the little choice bits of sunshine that we endeavor to spread freely over this campus.

While on this subject of ignorance, on which we are master elucidater, head of the department, and half the pupils, 'twould be a brilliant idea to ponder on some of the varying types of the question. Beginning with one of the most familiar of all ignoramuses, let us consider the gink who, to one who is also ignornat of the subject, apparently knows everything, but to one acquainted with the matter, is as well-informed about the matter as the modern co-ed is about sidesaddles. To this type of unintelligentsia, we pay homage, for he wins the book-of-the-month prize for valor on the field of battle (namely, Court street sidewalk).

And we must not forget the dear old ladies who, in the daily meetings of the Stitch and Chatter Club, discuss everything from the Manchurian misunderstanding to the town vamp. The darlin' things really ean well, but in their minds, they have Manchuria located geographically about two hundred miles northeast of Peoria, and they discuss the town flirt in terms of the one horse shay era. And the same thing goes for Carnegie bullsessions. Never, during the long and peaceful reign of Mr. Mac, ha any other kind of authority, except a self-constituted one, arisen in his might to keep all his neighbors from slumber by his monotonous rantings on varying scientific theories.

Other varieties of ignorance are known and revered in this modern age of ours. But they are all fourth dimensional, thus preventing us from going into them. So don't be discuraged! There's even something we don't know about ignorance, our recognized calling.

GENE McMURRAY

graduate students in attendance.

Mr. McMurray will have completed by April all the requirements for his Ph. D. degree in Physical Training with the exception of the presentation of his thesis on which he has been working and which he expects to complete after his return from Europe in July.

S COLLEGIATE S
! W A P !

We have no comment worthy of making. The meetings are over, China and Japan are still sparring for a lead, we know of no scandal concerning any of the more prominent members of our society, so we'll surprise everyone and get down to work without stopping for a bit of chatter.

Over in Columbia, S. C., the state university news-sheet is starting on its twenty-fifth year and are making quite a hurra about it. That's not so long. We know a man who's that old.

We knew we were doing well to root for those female basketeers over at Lenoir-Rhyne. They not only got their team, but got a winning team. On a recent trip they won both their games, one by a 30-19 score and one by a 34-7. These women! !

See where statistics have proved that the co-ed of three years hence will be much taller, heavier, and healthier than in 1925. That's tough on the little guys. Guess they'd be for the good old days.

Carson-Newman also has annual meetings. They were finished just after ours, so they must not call them February meetings. Judging by the inspired editorial in their paper for last week, they are very important there, too.

FROSH DEBATING TEAMS SELECTED

After a prolonged seige on the night of January 30, the judges, Miss Heron, Miss Crawford, and Prof. Kiger, chose the Freshman debaters as follows:

Women's team:

Betty Brewer, Florence Hyde, Mae Martin, Grace Proffitt, Ruth Rainey, and Maria Wynn.

Men's team:

Reuben Alford, Douglas Carhart, Earle Crawford, George Hoglan, James Smith, and Newman Smith.

Honorable mention:

Ruth Hershey, Fern Metzger, Jesse Houston, and Edward Keller.

OBSERVATIONS

Wotta Name!
Some Grinds
A Few Puns
The Melody Lingers

Alias Jesse Houston wishes us to amend an error made in the last issue in the list of freshmen who made Honorable Mention on the debate team. Instead of Jesse Houston, the name should have been, Jesse Lee Von Hergleine Gates Pearson Carter. That's his christened name, of course. His parents were thinking of attaching "Robert Lewis Allison Lee" on the first part of his name, but they feared that it might make it cumbersome.

—o—

The story is told of little Tommie Duncan (usually by little Tom) of one of his numerous experiences in kangaroo courts. Tommie was the defendant in a case about the time Maryville was getting ready to play U. T., a year ago. The prosecuting attorney first asked Tom what "the big word" was. Tom, not being up to form in the activities of the college, and being a bit disturbed for the minute, told the man that he wasn't sure, but "constitutionality" was a pretty big word. Then the blows fell. Then Tom fell. . . from Grace.

—o—

Someone has said (quoting Beale) that there's lots in a name. That's especially true in a name like "Long". Incidentally there's nothing wrong with Wright.

—o—

We wonder, when we have time to wonder, how many of the students accept the statements of this column to be true. We urge you to consider the fact that the material for a great deal of our comment comes from outside sources, and our candid advice is for you to take everything with a grain of salt. Incidentally, the faculty has furnished some material for these Observations.

—o—

Grind is a word well adapted to college use and especially adapted to Maryville College. French, Greek, Chemistry, are all grinds, but the grind that grinds the hardest, the longest, and leaves the deepest impression is the one that is left by a bit of the crushed rock that is uniformally strewn over the campus in what we call walks. Without exception, one picks up at least one rock to a trip between classes, and gets one hole in his sock accordingly which often leaves enough of an impression to make a hole in the

REV. G. C. BEANLAND GUEST SPEAKER OF FRED HOPE DRIVE

Missionary To Africa Brings Interesting Account of Hope's Work

ON FURLOUGH

Great Advances Made With Bantu Negroes Of West Coast

As guest and speaker during the Fred Hope Drive this year the college entertained this week the Reverend Gayle C. Beanland, on furlough from Africa.

Mr. Beanland, who began his missionary work in 1910, and has been associated with Mr. Hope in Africa for the past twenty years, delivered three worthwhile and interesting addresses concerning the work of the missionaries in the colony of Cameroun, West Africa.

Fred Hope, who graduated from Maryville in 1906, and later received the honorary degree of LL. D. from Maryville, has, since going to Africa, been placed in charge of the Frank James Industrial School at Ebolowo. Here the natives are taught carpentry, tailoring, mechanics, leather-working, and agriculture. These natives are not the Guinea negroes brought over to the United States and sold as slaves, but are the Bantus, a higher type of people, with keen perceptions and vivid imaginations. They are responsive to school work, and under the guidance of the missionaries have learned to build real homes with which to replace their little bark huts covered with thatch; they no longer wear garments made from grass and leaves, but dress much like Europeans; they are becoming healthier through the work of American and French doctors which has solved many of the problems brought by sleeping sickness and leprosy.

When Mr. Beanland first went to Cameroun the colony was occupied and controlled by the German government. But the World War was brought out to Africa, and tribes under French officers fought those under German supervision. The close of the War found the colony under the control of the French, and the teaching of French was substituted for the teaching of German in the schools.

Cameroun, which was a land where barbarism and paganism existed, a land of no homes, no roads, a land of unclothed peple, has been transformed. The narrow paths over the hills have been changed by the French government into gravel

TESS TO TURN TABLES

Tess Frye may be just another freshman biology student calling Miss Hudson teacher at Maryville, but up at Dr. W. H. Foulkes' camp in northern New Jersey next summer Miss Hudson will be addressing her superior director in the person of her former student.

Miss Hudson's new position takes her to Camp Rose Martin, where Miss Frye is Camp Director, in the capacity of Nature Study Director. The camp is under the auspices of Dr. Foulkes' church in Newark, and accommodates fifty girls. During the summer term, which lasts for the month of August, the entire nuber of persons attending is approximately one hundred.

FOUR OF FACULTY TO ATTEND MEETING IN CHATTANOOGA

Drs. Hunter, Hussey To Read Before Philological Association

A number of the college faculty left yesterday to attend the annual meeting of the Tennessee Philological Association to be held at Chattanooga. College and university professors from all over the State are in attendance at these meetings where papers on various educational subjects are read and other educational matters discussed.

The program includes two papers to be read by two of the Maryville College faculty, Dr. E. R. Hunter and Dr. George Hussey. Dr. Hunter's paper is entitled, "Manner of Speech as a Mark of Personality in Few of Shakespeare's Characters" Dr. Hussey will read a paper on the subject "Some Variant Readings in Plato's Cratylus".

Other members of the College faculty in attendance are Miss Jessie Heron and Miss Katherine Wilkinson.

SICKNESS CLAIMS SEVERAL

Prof. Smith's Small Daughter Eats 'Mule-Kick'

A number of the faculty and students have had attacks of influenza and tonsilitis in the past week. Prof. Queener was absent for two days on account of a severe cold. Miss Jones, the school's never tiring Registrar, was away from her office on Saturday for the same reason, and Professor Smith was kept at home for several days both wth an attack of tonsilitis and with the severe illness of his little daughter, Bobbie Jean.

Two-year-old Bobbie Jean succeeded in prying off the lid of a can of Mule Kick, and sampling the contents burned her mouth and throat badly. The suffering of the baby and the anxiety of the parents was intense, but according to latest reports from Mr. Smith, the burns are healing rapidly, although the seriousness of the injury can not yet be determined.

Mattie Lou MacNab, Jean Martin, Don Fortune and Ed Keele were in the Hospital with influenza on Friday. Robert Toms also has recently recovered from an attack of the flu. The Echo wishes rapid recovery to Bobbie Jean Smith and to all the flu victims.

MISS CLEMMIE HENRY

Miss Clemmie Henry left Maryville College last Friday for a trip to Philadelphia. Miss Henry is a guest of the New Century Women's Club of that city while she is away. She addressed the club on the Student-Help Plan of Maryville College at an evening meeting this week. Miss Henry has spoken on the same subject to other organizations during this visit, appearing before bodies who are interested in education and in student loans. She will return to Maryville next week.

U. T. GLEE CLUBS GIVE PROGRAM AS Y. M. C. A. BENEFIT

Plot Centered About Gypsy Life Added Color To Concert

HAMILTON DIRECTS

Twenty-Piece Orchestra From University Aids Singers

With the overture from "The Bohemian Girl", played by a twenty-piee U. T. orchestra, the Y.M.C.A. benefit number, "Gypsy Hi-Life", began at 8 o'clock Friday evening. The concert, presented by the combined glee clubs of the University of Tennessee, was arranged and directed by Edward Hamilton, a Maryville alumnus and an accomplished musician.

The curtain rose on a morning scene in a gypsy camp where the band of thirty maidens and twenty five rogues was gathered around a forest camp fire. A "Carnival Chorus", with its expression of robust health, was the opening number. Mr. Ed Hamilton's rendition of "The Rogues' Song" and Miss Dorothy Armstrong's "Gypsy Maiden I" were the special musical features of part one.

The hilarity of the afternoon scene was interrupted, just after Mr. Hilary Whitaker's "Where My Caravan Has Rested", by the entrance into the group of two supposedly college-bred gentlemen. With a chorus of the "Gypsy Trail" the rogues welcomed the new additions to the tribe.

The evening scene, with its firelight and moonlight shadows, was featured by Miss Elizabeth Shugart, violinist. Her remarkable interpretation of Hevre Kati was the outstanding number of the entire program. The final chorus, "Gypsy Love Song", sung by the whole company, was led by the glee club president, Mr. Robert Horton.

MARYVILLE DEBATERS LOSE FIRST

Southwestern College Gets Judge's Decision

The men's varsity team of Maryville's debate squad opened the season Thursday night, March 3, with a debate with the team from Southwestern College of Memphis, Tennessee. The critic judge Mr. Miller of Knoxville College, gave the decision to the team from Southwestern, who debated the affirmative side. The debaters from Southwestern were Mr. Highsaw and Mr. Thomas, and the Maryville men were Andrew Newcomer and Robert Tripp. The speakers kept the audience interested by their fresh material and their use of current topics of discussion and their dash of humor. The rebuttal speeches were clear and ready.

Although the first debate meant defeat, the Maryville team has many opportunities to prove its debating abilities. The first two opportunities come on March 11th in the form of a debate trip to Bristol where debates are scheduled with King College and Virginia Intermont College for that day.

She—There are a lot of mistakes in my cook-book.
He—Yes, I have tasted them.

SAM HATCHER CHOSEN

Sam Hatcher, class 1931, has been appointed second alternate to West Point by Congressman O. B. Lovette. Sam is from Sevierville and is a great-great-grandson of Colonel Samuel Wear, soldier, statesman, and veteran of four wars. He was a popular student at Maryville, and acted in the positions of president of the law club and captain of the wrestling team. He has been ordered to report to Fort McPherson, Georgia, March 1, for physical examination.

DRAMATISTS TO INITIATE

The annual spring initiation of Theta Alpha Phi will begin soon, perhaps next week. Neophytes will be given several days of intensive hazing with a grand finale at the end of the week.

Those selected to Theta Alpha Phi this spring are: Betty Wilbar, Reno Smith, Larry Somers, Mary Lovette, and Lou Repass.

The Fraternity will present a play in the near future. A number of works are being considered but one has not yet been selected. Among those which are under consideration are several by Barrie, one by A. A. Milne, and others.

ALPHA SIGMA WINS CUP FOR MIDWINTERS WITH 'DAVID HARUM'

'She Stoops To Conquer' Gets Second Place On Judge's Decision

March 1.—At a meeting of the committee on selection for the Theta Alpha Phi Cup tonight a unanimous vote was cast for "David Harum" as the prize-winning midwinter of the current season. It was presented February 15 by members of the Alpha Sigma Literary Society assisted by members of the Theta Epsilon Literary Society.

The play was judged the best of the four plays presented by the literary societies from the standpoints of selection, presentation, and casting. The cup will remain in the possession of the Alpha Sigma Literary Society for one year unless it is won by that society for three successive years in which case the society will retain permanent possession of the cup.

The judges awarded second place to the Athenian midwinter, "She Stoops to Conquer". The best acting in the Bainonian midwinter "When Knighthood was in Flower", was that done by Betty Wilbar who played the leading roll of Mary Tudor. Mary Lovette as Miss Agatha gave the best portrayal in Theta's midwinter "Alison's House".

The commitee of judges consisted of Mrs. Morton, Mrs. Veech, Mr. Gauding, and Dr. Hunter.

You say that you played on the Notre Dame team? What's your name?

Jugovprsdaslavonshi.

Oh, a first string man.

All I have I owe to my fraternity", cried the frosh, as he received his latest assessment.

COLLEGE PLAYERS PLAN TO PRESENT 'THE MELTING POT'

Zangwill's Famous Play Chosen By Group of College Dramatists

COMING MARCH 28

Plot Centers About Romance Of Russian-Jew In America

Izrael Zangwill's famous play "The Melting Pot" will be the presentation of the Maryville College players on March 28. The entire cast is almost selected and practice will begin immediately under the direction of Miss Holland.

The drama, still popular in professional and amateur circles years after its first appearance, is in four acts. The story centers around a young Russian Jew, David Quixano, who has been brought to America when a boy, after having witnessed the massacre of his parents and brother and sister. There are times when the memory of the harrowing cenes he saw overcome him. He is a musician, and through his music he comes in touch with Vera Revedal, a young Russian lady, who devotes to social work in New York energies hitherto used in propaganda for revolutionary purposes. In spite of their social and religious differences, David and Vera become engaged, but when her father arrives unexpectedly from Russia, David recognizes the face and declares that he cannot mate with the daughter of the butcher who was responsible for the massacre of his parents. Eventually, however, the seas of blood which separate the lovers are negotiated, and after David has had a symphony produced with unparalleled success, he blesses the country of his adoption.

BULL-BANQUET

Plans are beng made by the senior class to hold a "bull banquet" on next Tuesday night at Reagan's Bakery.

This will be the second meeting of its kind sponsored by Class '32, the first being held last year.

While plans are not as yet completed it is thought that Professor Lagerstedt will act as toastmaster at this social gathering of the men of the senior class and the program will consist of readings, toasts, music and talks. Among the proposed numbers will be a reading by Donald Briggs, a solo by Chilton Bowles, toasts by Reno Smith and Emil Farr, a discussion of Prohibition and Anti-prohibition by Edwin and Tom Cooper, and a talk by Weldon Hina.

Pianist Of 1920 February Meetings Is Subject Of Book

Announcement has been received in the president's office of the publication of a new book that should be of particular interest to Maryville students. The book, "Richard Weber Oliver, a Challenge to American Youth", is the life of a young evangelist indirectly connected with Maryville College. An account is contained of the February Meetings of 1920, which were conducted by the Rev. Mel Trotter, with Homer Hammontree as song leader and Richard Oliver as pianist. The deep impression made upon Richard, then twenty years old, by these services, is described in the letter, quoted on pages 76, 77, which he afterwards wrote to the Student Volunteer Band. In part he said: "O Volunteers, are we so fully surrendered to God's will that whether He sends us to the foreign field or not, we are living witnesses to Him? Am I bearing much fruit by 'abiding in him' today? If not, can I expect to do His will when my student days are over? . . . I have told all my friends how much I like Maryville College, and am advertising it the best I can. As for me, I must wait until the Lord says, 'Go!' Praise God, He never fails to give that definite guidance, if we only have no will of our own to hinder Him."

At the age of sixteen Richard Oliver, a young man endowed with rare gifts of music, teaching, and personality, gave up his cherished ambition for a career of concert pianist, and devoted his life to active Christian service. His remaining fourteen years were spent in personal and public evangelism, in which fields he was a spiritual genius. His interpretations of gospel music and his presentations of gospel message reached thousands of listeners, not only directly, but over the radio. The story of this life of inspiring service is told by Richard's mother, Mrs. Lillie F. Oliver, and by excerpts from Richard's diary, letters, and songs. The scope of the book is indicated by the chapter headings, some of which are: Dawn, Musical Awakening, The Voice of God, Early Witnessing, Wider Fields, University Days, Life Investment, Trysting Place, Instant in Season, Coast to Coast, Providence, Found Faithful.

A copy of this "challenge to American Youth" is soon to be placed in the library, where it will be at the disposal of all students interested in reading about this young evangelist who was obedient unto the heavenly vision.

Picturesque Maryville Is Theme Of Workshop Paper

By Julia Terry

The following paper was one of several read by Miss Terry before The Writer's Workshop.—Ed.

Mud-covered Fords full of families, chugging down the main street, men carrying sacks of meal on their backs, women vigorously dipping snuff, squawling children crying for cheap candy, big wild west show on at the movie—Saturday afternoon in Maryville.

Maryville is set apart from most any town or city with which my limited experience has made me familiar. It is a part of my liberal education to go townwards on Saturday afternoon and make myself somewhat acquainted with conditions as they are. What possibilities or tragedy or comedy, novel or drama, and even poetry are present in that heterogeneous assembly of products of humanity.

On College Street is the barber shop and its weekly adherents and customers. On the same street near the corner or the numerous apple carts with the disinterested spectators viewing the passersby from the grounds of the Presbyterian Church. At the corner is the stone street marker which I rather unconsciously avoid yet fully expect to stumble over in my military left turn on to the busy thoroughfare. On the left of the sidewalk is the man selling candy and shoe strings. The A. and P. truck is unloading provisions and obstructing pedestrian traffic. At the drug store is the usual crowd o young specimens of masculinity in competition with those at the sandwich shop farther on. Another barber shop is filled with quantities of beards and hair in drastic need of reduction. College girls go in Walker's for chicken salad sandwiches, pecan pie, and chocolate stirs and come out with empty pocketbooks and satisfied stomachs.

The crowd becomes thicker near the corner and at the ten-cent store one has to put into practical use a few effective football plays in order to charge across the street into another crowd of men. The ten-cent store is the house of entertainment and the source of gratitude for those who have a few dimes to spend thriftily and necessarily. It is somewhat like a mail order catalog in its human appeal and multitudinous selection of attractive articles at possible prices.

Next comes the public drinking

THE TRUE SPIRIT

The BIG game of the year is now only history and although the scoreboard shows Maryville "in the red" this "contest of giants" brings to light one gratifying and wholly welcome fact—Maryville students really have an over-supply of enthusiasm and loyalty for their team.

Judging by past performances during the current basketball season one was almost justified in saying that this virtue had fled from the campus of ole Maryville. During the games that have been played on the home floor this year the students seemed literally rooted to their seats. A superb sense of self-consciousness appeared to have taken hold of each individual and to have shown the least emotion or enthusiasm or to have aided in one clamorous cheer would have served merely to make more conspicuous that student. Praying, pleading, pushing, and even prying on the part of the cheer leader was apparently so much wasted energy. A few discreetly subdued "Rahs" or perhaps a very timorous "How-ee" would invariably greet his most elaborate effort. Seemingly nothing would overthrow this state of quiescence. Recently, even the coach has had to publicly plead with the student body to rouse itself from its stupor and lend its moral support to the team.

But like the game, this is all history. No one within the radius of several city blocks on that memorable night can longer hold the view that Maryville lacks spirit. Upon very few, if any, occasions has such an aggregation of howling, cheering, yelling students been packed in the Alumni Gymnasium. Orderly disorder and complete abandon of rational decorum existed from before the game until the final second laboriously ticked out its life. Such was the volume and intensity of the noise that the referee's whistle apparently was a thing for his own amusement only.

But what was the reason for this sudden reversal of character? The answer is one fundamental to and wholly characteristic of Maryville—our habitually winning team was looking defeat in the face. While Maryville teams stay at the top of the list, their efforts are accepted in a more or less matter-of-fact way, but should they begin to lose the student body may always and invariably be counted upon to back them to the limit. Winning Highlanders may not always get the thunderous ovations often accorded the winning teams of some other colleges, but losing Scotties never lack for 100% support.

After all, isn't this a commendable virtue rather than a contemptible vice? Let's stick by our losing teams; the winners can stick by themselves.

Bob Stevenson and Larry Somers, who sit on each side of Lucille Swafford in Pearsons, seem to feel that they have much between them.

STUDENTS SAY DIS-ARM

In direct opposition to the spirit of the past it is the youth of the country that is exerting the damping influence on the belligerent exchanges of the nations today. Heretofore youth inspired by desire for action, self-assertion or perhaps glory, has been the first to call loudly for war, but today ample evidence is shown by the numerous and representative polls taken in almost every college that the student is desirous of placing a curb on the nation's war-like overtures.

This desire does not arise from a spirit of cowardice, or fear, but from a clearer conception of the futility of war and a firm belief that a neighborly feeling among the nations of the world must come of civilization is to be preserved.

No doubt can remain that the students of the country are overwhelmingly in favor of disarmament, abolition of compulsory military training in our colleges, and the substitution of comprehensive courses on international relations to supplant the present dominating spirit of nationalism with the more desirable one of internationalism.

Recently the American Legion in the neighboring city of Knoxville went on record as strongly opposed to the movement of abolishing the compulsary military training program at the University of Tennessee and as deploring greatly the spirit which actuated this movement. According to their views, this type of training is the backbone of our national defense and should it be removed our country would immediately be overrun with some great army from across the sea. They seem to forget that the world has progressed from the semi-barbaric and unhuman state existing in 1914, and also that no citizen of the world at that time can be proud of the great blot on the fair countenance of civilization acquired during the following four years.

CREDIT FOR 'BULL SESSIONS' GIVEN BY UNIV. OF WIS.

According to a recent announcement of the Experimental College of the University of Wisconsin, credits will be awarded for "bull-sessions."

Dr. Glenn Frank, president of the university, explained "bull-sessions" as " informal dormitory or fraternity house debates with subjects ranging from the desirability of red-headed sweethearts to the significance of abandoning the gold standard."

"We have felt", continues Dr. Frank, "that the conversation of college students in social rooms when the day is over is as much an index of the effectiveness or ineffectiveness of a college as the talk of the students in the classrooms."

INTERRACIAL GROUP TO DISCUSS NEGRO IN SOUTHERN POLITICS

The subject being discussed this afternoon in the meeting of the East Tennessee Students' Interracial Commission is "The Negro in Politics in the South". Maryville students, the entertaining group, are leading the discusisn.

The Interracial Commission is made up of students from four schools in East Tennessee: Knoxville College, Morristown Normal and Industrial College, the University of Tennessee, and Maryville College. Meetings are held on the first Saturday in each month, the principle of reciproal entertaining being followed. It is customary for the students on whose campus the meeting is being held to lead the discussion, but an open forum is held during the latter part of the meeting. The next meeting of the commission will be held at Morristown Normal and Industrial College on April 2.

What this Crawford woman has done to the Systematics, or rather the Library department, is something that just can't be talked about by a librarian, if you have one in your midst. Last week a new all time record was set in the library, and that included examination week. It is rumored that if there are a few more days like that, they're going to move the magazines to the second floor and let Miss Crawford have . . . . Oh, just lots of fun like the librarians have been having.

KEYHOLE KOMMENT

Perhaps no anxiety arises at the statement, but nevertheless our life is in danger. In the last issue of our scandal sheet we printed what we were sure to be cute little article with Jack Coughlin as the star actor. We made some very unkind digs about which Maryville's most Maryville minded studé called us to task. After several days of pleading on our part, he consented to permit our days to increase unhampered only on the condition that we expose his nearest rival, Lowell MacDonald. We haven't thought of any scheme to evade Mac yet, but are trusting that we shall be called to China before he acquires enough persistence to hunt us to earth. So here goes:

If some athletically inclined, plutocratic friend of the college should present us with the necessary funds with which to erect an athletic Hall of Fame on the Hill, we are sure that one would not be forced to travel far down the line ere encountering the compact hundred and ninety pounds of avoirduppois which constitutes what we know as "Captain" MacDonald. Serving as captain of the swinehide team in his third year on the varsity he returned last season to become in his first senior year one of the greatest if not the greatest of Maryville's guards. Coach Honaker was not the only person who missed Mac in the past season, his second senior year. Everyone who knew him of yore wished a hundred times that he could be allowed to lend his chain-pulling job to a lesser athlete and once again enter the old game of blood 'n thunder.

But athletics are not all the deeds done by Mac in his quasi-decade. We have first hand information that he has been in more freshman trig classes than anyone on the Hill except Dr. Knapp. A full discussion of Mac's history and past life will be mailed free on request if you will enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope and a ten dollar bill to help cover the cost of mailing.

S COLLEGIATE S ! W A P !

As we cast our puasi-illiterate glance over the pages of our contemporary scandal-sheets, we notice various queer phrases. We cannot understand them, try as we can with our limited ability. Would-be writers everywhere are casually observing that spring has come, and all such nonsense as that. After considering these ponderous concoctions from every angle, we have arrived at the brilliant conclusion that they are trying to be funny, since everyone must know that spring has been with us all winter and that if anything at all has come, it must be summer, since fall would be entirely too early and since it couldn't be winter because the depression got the best of that. After we arrived at this perfectly lucid explanation, we took a day's rest, during which time we re-read our papers, discovering that:

Over in Columbia, S. C., the boys are in an awful fix. A few weeks ago they went into a huddle and elected themselves an editor for their weekly newspaper. The publication was released a couple of times and everything seemed rosy indeed. Somebody got to excavating in the constitution (of the paper) the other day and, as a result, the Gamecock is without an editor on a charge of an illegal election. It seems that too many men on the electing board belonged to the same club, or fraternity, or something and that this is a very grave sin in the eyes of the makers of the constitution, whoever they are. Therefore they don't know what to do.

Over at Clemson College, so we hear, the "kay-dets" have become so obstreperous as to necessitate the passage of an odd bill. It requires every student wishing to attend the funeral of a dear friend to submit a permit by nine a. m. on the morning before the dance.

Totally disregarding our financial disturbance (few of us have enough money to cause a disturbance), Borotsky still manages to get the Price he wants and Davy McArthur is consistently making plenty of Proffitt.

Cambridge, Mass.
February 19, 1932.

To The Editor in Chief of the Highland Echo:

I have been a close observer of the activities of Maryville College through the medium of the HIGHLAND ECHO. Likewise, the editorials of the paper have been of interest to me. In the editorial column of the HIGHLAND ECHO for February 13, I read as follows: "In this era of de-personalized and mechanized education, colleges the country over are prone to pass up the importance of the education of the inner self and expend their total energy in teaching only those things that have to do with secular existence."

I find the statement significant in its false inclusiveness and disregard for the facts of the case. I say significant because your assertion represents a common, erroneous conception of the present-day college education in, particularly, the universities.

Although your opinion is that we are living in an era of de-personalized and mechanized education, I believe that you will find on closer examination that the men, the personalities, involved in any given course are responsible for the attractiveness and value of that course. Many students take courses or pursue certain studies because of the personalities involved. De-personalized and mechanized education is a contradiction of terms. Education, de-personalized and mechanized is not education, for true education is inextricably bound up with the personalities involved in it. The education offered by the major colleges and universities is education thus inextricably bound with the men who offer the courses. Deny this and I confront you with Professor Whitehead in philosophy, Professors Hocking and Perry, likewise in philosophy, Professor Wheeler in etymology and emerent evolution, Professor Kittridke in the study of Shakespeare, Professor Lake in the study of the English Bible, Professor Mather in geology, Dr. Weston in mycology, Professor Hooten in anthropology, and many others. These are personalities in education!

Further, you speak of the education of the inner self. It is well to realize that the inner self is mentality. When that has become clear, it should be evident that anything stimulating thought is serving to widen the scope of the inner self. One doesn't educate the inner self, but rather offers it opportunities for growth and becoming more inclusive in its apprehension of the environment. That present-day education doesn't offer such opportunities is unendeniably false. Every new point of view of life that we assume, every new field we study, be it in religion, philosophy, history, literature, or the sciences, offers a greater opportunity for the development of the so-called inner self. The majority of the educational institutions of this country by their wide scope of courses illustrate this truth. They are aware of the need of further education for such development. We need to rid ourselves of the narrowing and confining doctrines which try to and do prohibit our progress with their dogmatic truths. Ignorance consists not so much in how little we know but rather in our attitude towards what we know.

Finally, that the teachers expend their total energy in teaching only those things that have to do with secular existence has no validity in the face of the facts. Never yet have I found any professor giving his energy to teach matters having solely to do with secular existence. Professors or instructors are not automations! They are human beings with human aspirations and ideals, fired with the desire to inspire others. By far, the majority are intellectual beings who ignore secular existence and strive to develop the mental life. Do I need to cite examples? A course under Professor Whitehead in philosophy is as far removed from dealing solely with secular existence as any study could be. If you object to the use of so general a subject as philosophy for refutation of your statement, I shall suggest the most specialized study I know, mycology, a study of fungi. Dr. Weston, an outstanding mycologist of the day, would abhor the idea that his instruction was solely in behalf of secular existence. In such a study one inevitably bows his head in reverence and humility before the wonders that the world reveals. He who shuts himself up, contented with his dogmatic opinions, shuts out the life of the world and its message. Secular existence was possible in medieval times, when people had a rationalized view of the world; it is still possible for those who believe that the world can be rationalized about to afford a comfortable conclusion. It is only when you strike out beyond this stagnant and contented attitude that it becomes possible to rise above secular existence. Open your eyes and look out of all available windows, and you will find secular existence for itself impossible. This is the attitude of the majority of colleges the country over.

Respectfully,
Arthur L. Schade.

Wesley Culver is a decided addition to the color scheme of the library as well as to the rest of the campus when he appears in his blue shirt and yellow tie. The combination reminds one of a canary against a sky of blue or of a yellow expanse of turquoise sky.

Casting aside the literary aestheticism and possibly hypocritical implications, this advance note of spring colors is decidedly pleasant against the drab winter shades of black and brown.

One of the chief pleaures of rooming on third floor Baldwin is the privilege of gliding, sliding, or at times slipping on the glass skylight at the head of the front stairs.

The writer remembers during her freshman and sophomore days, the delight of running down the hall and sliding over the four or five feet of glazed surface and the necessity of coming to an abrupt stop lest an unexpected and hurried trip be made down the stairs. Even seniorific dignity must be dispensed with at times for the sake of freshmanic pleasure.

Prof.: Splendid! you need one.

NEWS OF FRIENDLY FIVES HAS GONE AROUND » » » » »

Around the chapter hearth—on the campus—in the classroom—in fact, everywhere that college men gather, you will see and hear of Friendly Five Shoes.
The reason is evident. Friendly Fives fit the needs of College Men. Their style, quality, and comfort are superior in many ways to shoes selling at a higher price. And that $5 change from a ten does come in handy for other things.
So, prove to yourself the value of Friendly Fives. Learn why they have gained such popularity. Try a pair.

Maryville Wrestling Team Closes '31 Successful Season; High Point, Vanderbilt University Are Beaten

Watkins' Team From High Point Goes Down Before Scots In Thrilling Match

OVERLY UNBEATEN

Vanderbilt Decisively Beaten In Last Meet; Team Claims State Championship

Tuesday night, there was as nice a little rumpus as one would wish to see in the Alumni gym. Don't get excited, it was only Coach Thrower's matmen showing the boys from High Point just how this thing called wrestling should be done. The Maryville grapplers got off to a good start when "Cocky" Campbell of the 115-pound class took a fall from Warlick in a little over 5 minutes. Simeon of High Point knotted the score by pinning Cross in the 125 pound class. Peacock of the 135 pound class put Maryville in the lead by putting Williams on the mat in short order. Boretsky increased the lead when he won a fall from Lee of the 145-pound class. Tope put the match in nice by pinning Robbins to the mat.

Plaster of High Point proved himself a real wrestler when he won from Teffeteller of the 165-pound class by a time advantage. This match was important as it is the first time that Teffeteller has been defeated in a college meet. Burns, "the Maryville strong man", added another scalp to his belt when he pinned Smith of the 175-pound class. Overly added the finishing touch when he won a fall from Crauer in the unlimited class. The score at the end of the meet was Maryville 30, High Point 8. This was the fifth straight victory for the Highlanderss who are putting Maryville on the map in the wrestling world.

Vandy Is Beaten

Maryville College wrestlers ended an undefeated season last Saturday night when they decisively defeated the matmen at Vanderbilt University in Nashville. This was the sixth straight victory for Coach Bob Thrower's men and they have a strong claim on the state college championship. The score was 30 to 8.

Campbell, Boretsky, Tope, Teffeteller, Peacock and Overly came through with falls to account for Maryville's 30 points while Cross, in the 125 pound division, lost a fall to the Vandy man and Burns was beaten on time to account for Vandy's eight.

Much credit is due Coach Thrower for his great success in his first year as wrestling coach. His men have met Knoxville Y. M. C. A. the Southern Champions, in two meets; Chattanooga Y. M. C. A. twice; High Point College once and Vanderbilt. Cliff Overly, wrestling in the unlimited class, has not lost a match this year.

SPORT SLANTS

By BOB RULE

Mrs. Queener is to be complimented on her work with the girls' Gym classes. The show that her girls put at the half of the L. M. U. game was certainly worth watching. They marched with the precision of West Point Cadets and I have heard considerable favorable comment from John Public. And too, it was worth walking a mile just to see all of those attractive girls assembled in one group. You know, Maryville's a good place to go to school.

I dropped in at the Gym after the disastrous fracas with Milligan Friday night and one look at the Senior basketball team made me feel rather downcast. I looked around; there was Calloway, all-conference tackle; Tolliver, an all-conference guard; Ferguson, an all-conference center; and Emil Farr, an all-conference manager, if they pick all-conference managers.

There they were, Seniors, all of them, the backbone of the best football team that ever represented Maryville College, and to think that they will not be around when Mr. Honaker calls the roll next year does not make me think of any glorious victories over Carson-Newman, Lenoir Rhyne, Milligan, Wesleyan or any of the others who have bowed to the ground while the great Calloway sped by, well protected by interference formed by these other men.

It's a tough bite for Coach Honaker to chew but the thing that we are going to have to do is to just get behind the team next year and talk football in terms of victories and believe in the boys and they will certainly come through with a season's record of which we will not be ashamed.

I believe that Jack Nee has been one of the most under-rated basketball players in the Smoky Mountain Conference this season. Few people have been realizing that the flashy Maryville guard is one of the big reasons that the Highlanders have kept very near the top, in this basketball business. Recently Jack's playing has been so brilliantly outstanding that he could not go unnoticed and I hear more comment about that boy's playing now than about the war or depression. You could play on my basetball team, Jack, if I had a basketball team.

Scotties Whip Rail Splitters From Lincoln Memorial, 40-27

Highlanders Show Best Attack Of Season In Trampling Rail Splitters For Second Time

The Highanders put away one more conference opponent Tuesday night when they won their second consecutive victory over Coach Alexander's Rail Splitters from Lincoln Memorial University, way up in the Cumberland Mountains. The Highlanders had a commanding lead throughout the game and held a 40 to 27 advantage at the end.

It was one of the classiest Maryville teams that has ever worn the abbreviated toggery that defeated L. M. U. Tuesday night. In the early periods of the game, the Scots passed the ball so fast that they actually had the visitors looking for it at times and the boys were working entirely as a unit.

Many crip shots resulted from the beautiful, unselfish pass work and at the end of the first half the Maryvillians held a 23 to 16 advantage. During the first half, not a man on the Maryville team scored more than six points but they all had almost an equal amount.

The entire squad played basketball almost in the manner that Mr. Honaker desires that it should be played. They did everything that a good basketball team should do and the relief of Cherry, Overly, Mann, and Stone proved that the team's ability is not confined to the first five men.

The Highlanders played a consistent game throughout the entire contest and the boys from Harrogate just simply could not cope with their speed and skill. Coach Alexander employed every method in his basketball bag of tricks to check the onslaught of the fast stepping Scots but it was to no avail.

Miss Gamble: "Why is it wrong to kill a man and not wrong to kill a mosquito?"

Laura Jean Workizer: "Because a mosquito can't feel."

Miss Gamble: "How do you know that it can't feel?"

L.J.W.: "Because it doesn't have room enough."

Another disadvantage of being illiterate is that jurymen's fees are small.

BASEBALL AND CINDER PATH CANDIDATES OUT FOR DUTY

Baseballers Have Good Chance To Win Another State; Many Veterans Back For Track Team

The call has been issued to baseball and track men for practices and every day finds a large number of likely candidates in both of these sports working out in an effort to get into condition. Prospects are exceedingly bright for winning their second straight state championship in baseball are very bright.

The only worry for Coach Honaker over his baseballers is his pitching staff. Every member of last year's varsity mound corps was lost and the Maryville mentor will have a tough assignment in trying to replace Chandler and Stidham. Stidham was lost through graduation and Chandler has signed up with the champion Philadelphia Athletics.

Teffeteller, White, Kiser, Nee, West, Woodard, Hurst and Russell are back from last year's team and these men should form a nucleus around which a formidable team can be built. Nee and Kiser played quite a bit last year in relief roles and they should be able to make the grade this year. Jack is a short stop and Kiser is a second baseman. However, Nee may be used at second this year and Kiser may see service on the mound. The latter spent his summer months last year pitching on an amateur team at Friendsville and he gained quite a bit of valuable experience.

Russell has one of the best throwing arms on the team and is also a dangerous hitter. He has the earmarks of a first class outfielder and he will undoubtedly be stationed in one of the gardens when the umpire first announces "play ball". Cecil Stone, a freshman, has a good high school and amateur record and he will make a strong bid for a varsity job in the out field.

A host of veterans are back to try out for the track team and Coach Bob Thrower should put one of his best teams on the field this year. He has Captain Dip Felknor, Richardson, Byar, Moore, Hitch, Paul, Wood, Burns, Bratschie, Russell Woodard, and Calloway. The return of Speedy Mann should add strength in the distance runs.

Buffaloes Carry Title Away In Most Thrilling Hardwood Game Seen Here In Several Seasons

Team Toys With Bristol Boys And Bring Season To Close In Brilliant Fashion

JACK NEE STARS

Scots Have Record Of Ten Wins, Two Defeats In Smoky Conference

Maryville College's Highlanders ended one of the most successful basketball seasons in years last Monday night when they toyed with the King College Tornado throughout the game and won an 46 to 21 victory. The Maryvillians took the lead from the first whistle and never once during the entire contest did the boys from Bristol threaten to overtake them.

Jack Nee started immediately after the opening whistle and gave one of the neatest exhibitions of goal shooting that has been put on here this year. During the first half Jack took several long shots from just past the center line and never once did he fail to hit the bottom of the basket. He also had three foul shots in his list of attempts and all of these were made to count for the home cause. He had 15 points at the rest period and a consciousness of not having missed a shot of any kind during the first half.

Easy White closed his college career on the hardwood in glamorous fashion. He scored only seven points but the great Maryville captain played one of the greatest offensive and defensive games of his career. His passing was positively unbeatable and he hawked the ball as he has never done before. Time and again he was open for sure shots but nearly always he chose to pass to one of his fast breaking mates.

The victory over King gives the Maryvillians a record of 10 victories and two defeats in the conference and they have lost only three games all year. Their other defeat came at the hands of the Tennessee Wesleyan Bulldogs at Athens.

Entire Maryville Team Plays Heroic Ball But Milligan Wins By 43 to 41

WHITE BRILLIANT

Roark and Randolph, Forwards, Crush Maryville's Tilte Hopes In Wild Game

Milligan College Buffaloes clinched the championship of the Smoky Mountain Conference last night when they defeated the Maryville College Highlanders in one of the most nerve wracking basketball games ever played in this section. The final score was 43 to 41.

The Highlanders took a slight lead immediately after the first whistle when Kiser and White dropped the all through the net but the Buffaloes came right back and Roark, diminutive blonde forward, put the Buffaloes back in the ball game. There was never more than three points difference in the score during the first half and the Buffaloes held a two point advantage at the rest period.

During the last half of the game the excitement was so intense that both teams made numerous errors. The Buffs first had the lead but the fighting Highlanders always managed to come right back with the tying basket. The score was tied not less than five times during the last period.

Near the last of the game the Buffaloes drew away to a five point advantage, the largest that either team commanded during the entire fracas, but Captain Easy White came through with two beautiful baskets to put the Maryvillians within one point of the fast stepping Buffs.

The score remained with a one point difference until the last six seconds of play when Lew Taylor sank a foul shot to increase the advantage to two points as the game ended.

Before old General Depression goes too far he might reflect on what happened to Napoleon.

Miss Nan Lagerstedt Honoree Of Many Beautiful Receptions

Miss Nan Lagerstedth, nationally known reader and impersonator, and sister of Prof. Lagerstedt of the Maryville College Modern Language Department has been visiting her brother here for the past week.

A sparkling round of parties, dinners, and receptions has been given in honor of the well-known visitor. Miss Lagerstedt gave a recital in Voorhees Chapel Monday evening her program being the last presentation of the Maryville College Lyceum Committee. The recital was hailed as one of the best entertainments ever presented at Maryville.

Following the recital a reception was held in Baldwin Parlors. This affair was attended by about one hundred fifty students and faculty members. Tuesday afternoon Mrs. Veech and Mrs. Honaker entertained Miss Lagerstedt, Mrs. Lloyd and the Maryville College expression teachers with a tea at Druid Hills. In the evening Miss Brown, Miss Meiselwitz, and Miss Frances Henry gave a birthday party at the Practice House in Miss Lagerstedt's honor.

Wednesday evening Mrs. Robert Pflanze entertained Mr. and Miss Lagerstedt at dinner. Thursday evening Mr. Lagerstedt's Sunday School Class gave a party at the home of Dr. McCulloch. At 3:30 Friday afternoon Miss Lagerstedt gave a program for the children at the orphanage. Miss Green entertained with a dinner at Walker's Friday evening. The week of entertainment will be closed by a party Saturday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Drinnen.

S. V. GROUP HEAR MISSIONARY FROM PERSIAN FIELD

Rev. William Miller Discusses Missionary Work As Life-Calling

"Not one of us is fit to be a missionary", said Rev. William Miller in address to the Student Volunteer group of Maryville College on Tuesday afternoon. Mr. Miller was on the campus Monday afternoon and all day Tuesday. He is a missionary to Persia, who is spending his furlough year as one of the traveling secretaries of the Student Volunteer Movement.

On Tuesday morning Mr. Miller spoke to the student body at the chapel hour. "If you were lost in the desert and one of your companions found the way, but didn't tell you, what would you think of him?" he asked. "If a man is a Christian he must be missionary." Travelers need four things, continued the missionary, a road, light, food, and water. Christ has said to His followers: "I am the way", "I am the light of the world", "I am the bread of life", and "I give living water."

In the speech to the Student Volunteers Mr. Miller emphasized three facts which should be kept in mind about the missionary enterprise. First, God has given to the world in Christianity an unique religion—unique in that it is the only religion of love, and in that no other religion has in it the idea contained in the Resurrection, which is that the leader of that religion is a living Being.

In the second place, Christians should remember that mere deeds are not enough. No one can live such a glorious life that he can do the most effective service through doing alone. Even Christ didn't make disciples when He merely lived in Nazareth.

Christians should also remember that the need is urgent. If Christianity is for all people, Christians must make haste, lest some pass beyond the brief span of life before they have been reached. "The Evangelization of the World in this Generation" was the purpose for which the Student Volunteer Movement was founded.

PROFFITT'S GIVES PARTY

Proffitt's Ready-to-Wear Departments had a Spring Announcement Party Thursday afternoon for the college girls. Mr. Storey welcomed the students and introduced Mrs. Lee, buyer of ready-to-wear on the balcony. This was followed by the presentation of prizes which afforded much fun and plenty of excitement.

The following received prizes:

Ruth Solomon received a fine fitted case; Estelene Williams received a pair of boudoir slippers; Sallie Hacker recieved a beautiful pair of Humming Bird hose; Hazel Hale received an attractive Geaney Perfumer.

A similar party was held for the college men in the men's department Friday afternoon. Cheers were given to the following boys who received prizes:

Phil Sorce received an $18.50 wrist watch; Burton Toms received a Broadcloth shirt; Leland Shanon, Jack Overly and John McQueen each received a Hicksok belt buckle engraved with "M" and seal in college colors.

RADIO PROGRAM

On Saturday, March 12, the hour of 10:15 p. m. will be devoted to the recognition of all Presbyterian student work in America. At this time, over KDKA in Pittsburgh, greetings of cheer, encouragement, and appreciation will be broadcast from the Board of Christian Education. The speakers of the hour will be the president of the Board and former Moderator of General Assembly, Dr. Hugh Thomson Kerr; and the General Secretary, Dr. William Chalmers Covert. These two men were guests and speakers at Maryville College last October during the inauguration of President Lloyd, and their personality and ability are well known here. Through them, in this broadcast the voice of Christian Education will be carried to all college and university centers throughout the United States.

SOPHOMORES WIN VOLLEY BALL TOURNAMENT

The Sophomores won the volley ball tournament Saturday night when they beat the Freshmen 16 to 33. Both teams had plenty of pep and played good volley ball. Wayland and Yennie starred for the Sophomores.

Freshmen	Sophomores
Thorson	Wynn
Davenport	Farlee
Hast	Wayland
Berchette	Yennie
Souders	Dick
Hatfield	Little
Mynatt	Wilson
Cromer	Hassell
Davis	Schoeller

Subs: Johnson, Proffitt, Gillingham, Cooper, Webb.

The final scores of all the games were: Freshmen, 43; Junior-Seniors 48; and Sophomores 63.

This week baseball practice has been held for all classes. Mrs. Queener says there is a prospect for three good teams. The tournament will be held on Monday, March 7, Wednesday the 9th and Friday the 11th. All games will be in the afternoon.

The Freshmen won the basket ball tournament, and the Sophomores both the soccer and volley ball. Much interest will be shown in the baseball tournament because it is the last of the four major tournaments of the year.

Word has just been received rom eye witnesses that the president of the Student Council has a vocation other than that of participating in the dance of the seven veils and leading the student body a merry chase. Her latest desire is to be a Red Cross nurse in the Chinese War. Four of her friends, in a genuine endeavor to help her realize this noteworthy ambition provided her with the necessary accoutrements, all unbeknownst to her, and almost sent her on her way.

The impedimenta included such articles as boots, slicker, surnamed "trench coat" for local color; overnight bag which could be used overseas as well, and full of what-nots; a hat of unspeakable dimensions for the purpose of withholding the Chinese sun from an American complexion; a white band with a red cross as official insignia with which to capture her hair during a Chinese monsoon, typhoon, or any ordinary kind of wind storm with the appropriate Chinese appelation.

However, one of the feminine members of the Pearsons National Guard prohibited her leaving the premises, and so the aspiring Red Cross nurse is still awaiting her overseas call.

PICTURESQUE MARYVILLE IS THEME OF WORKSHOP PAPER

fountain originally white but now better left undescribed. Farther on is the bakery with its enticing smells, the popcorn machine, Luke's Lunch, and the Palace. Ah, the delight of theatre goers who enjoy shooting, lassoing, and rough riding every Saturday afternoon but the bane of everybody else's existence.

At the furniture store is the set of scales with its too-frank face, revealing numbers of dimensions large and disappointing when certain stimuli are applied. The taxi stand and the bus terminal usually have some rather uninterested-looking parasites in the vicinity.

At the bank corner is always the same group of men eyeing in a rather appraising manner the people who pass their scrutiny. Some are in overalls, some chew tobacco, some talk loudly in unconvincing terms, some lounge against the face brick, and others seem to gaze rather distractedly at whatever comes within easy range of their idle gaze.

At the department store corner, the entrance way is always filled with actual or would-be shoppers and multitudes of small children ready to be stepped on, in fact, challenging such activity. There is the usual amount of snuff-dippers, apple eaters, and college students.

There is scarcely any possibility of crossing the street with machines, cars, and automobiles and Fords, and also horses and wagons streaming up and down the street, left turning, right turning, seemingly regardless of pedestrian traffic and pedestrian limitations and frailties, but occasionally a brave jay-walker dares himself somewhat impulsively to take the forward steps, and reaches the other side of the street with safety and without breath.

Among the people I have noticed particularly are young couples in town for the general hubbub and also, perhaps, to purchase a pink dress with green trimmings and a string of glass beads, or a purple and green striped necktie to wear with the brown suit. There are the members of the older generation swapping stories, and laughing vociferously at a dust-covered yarn and slapping their well-patched knees in attempts to emphasize the general feeling of weekly hilarity. The blind singer who whangs at a guitar is in evidence at these Saturday festivals and adds to the noise and confusion of the Blount County metropolis.

The Girl Scouts or the foreign missionary societies are usually having bake goods and candy sales in the entrance-way of one of the department stores and their appealing entreaties and unappealing goods are sometimes rewarded by a benevolent Girl Scout mother or an ardent church member.

Crowded stores, well-worn dimes handed over counters in exchange for gumdrops and peanuts, phonograph records featuring the "Hit of the Week" or mournful mountain ballads, warning horns of impatient traffic, people—all kinds— everywhere—Saturday afternoon in Maryville.

SEVEN S. V. MEMBERS GO TO CONFERENCE

Frank Neff Elected State Treasurer

Seven students of Maryville College went to McKenzie, Tennessee, last week-end to attend the spring conference of the Tennessee state union of the Student Volunteer Movement. The conference was held n the campus of Bethel College and lasted from Friday afternoon through Sunday afternoon.

Leaders at the conference included Rev. William Miller, missionary to Persia who was on the Maryville campus last week, John Minter of Duke University, who was also here for a short time last week, Dr. Guy Sarvis, of the Vanderbilt University department of political and social sciences, Darby Fulton of the Presbyterian U. S. Board of Foreign Missions.

At the close of the international banquet held Saturday evening in the dining hall of Bethel College, officers for the coming year were elected. Frank Neff of Maryville College was chosen state treasurer.

The members of the local Student Volunteer group at the conference were Katherine Smith, Vera Wood, Mary Branche, Joe Hacker, Roberta Robison and Dorothy Casseres. Frank Clark represented the Young Men's Christian Association.

NINETEEN MEN TAKE 'GROOMS COURSE'

The Home Economics Department offers a very interesting course in Home Economics for Men, or as it is more commonly known, "the Grooms' Course". This is offered during the second semester of each year and is non-credit. It is open to juniors and seniors. Miss Gertrude Meiselwitz is the teacher.

There are nineteen men enrolled in the course this semester. The chief purpose of the course is for general culture. It proposes to give some knowledge of and practice in hostship, training in the proper way to carve, and information as to social etiquette in general. Food selection for both normal and special diets, and a simple knowledge of cookery is also an aim of the course.

The selection of proper clothes, both as to material and color, will be discussed by Miss Meisewitz. The men in the course will be taught to distinguish between style and fad, and also how to wear the proper clothes at the proper time and place.

This course is very valuable from both a social and a cultural standpoint.

Letter:

Answer:

Yes, and the third time you go they will throw dirt all over you.

foot to. Some of the rock has found its way into the interior of Tiny Water's shoes, and there it learns what crushed rock really is.

—o—

You won't comment on our tendencies to appear blind because we've failed to observe some of the recent changes that have been in progress here and there over the campus. We've seen them all right, but we have been rather bewildered by the suddenness of such undertakings and have been a bit hesitant to commenting in the customary way. There are things to be done, and since we all like to see that, it seems that the most appropriate thing to do would be to give three rousing cheers, or sump'n, to Mr. Black (providing they don't rouse him before seven in the morning).

—o—

The four years of college work have been ended for Ed Raney, but the Melody lingers on.

—o—

Two of the most "likely" looking twins on the campus are found in the personages of Julia and Mary Rink. It is a good thing that they can remember their own names, or most any number of any kind of situation might result. It's strangely revealing that they are not only twins physically, but mentally, as well. When the semester totals were taken it was found that each had the same number of cuts in her classes (they both take the same course), and that each one of them scored indentically the same grades. Each of the twins took six subjects so they could balance up things as evenly as possible, for thereby they could make just as many Cs as Bs and still keep things on a "twin ship" basis.

—o—

Freshman debate tryouts usually bring out something that can touch even an Englishman's sense of humor. Miss Heron, after a careful survey of all errors, or inconsistencies (which includes mixed metaphors), pinned her winning badge on the frosh who would insist on referring to the "suffering agricultural belt." Anyone who is acquainted with farm conditions, we'll agree, knows that it is not the belt that suffers. . . . . the suffering is closer home. . . . it is more vital . . . . it is that immediate vicinity . . . just under the belt.

—o—

Bob Stevenson, after an eventful year of wine, women and song—not including the wine and song—has come to that place where one must make a decision. He has at last come to realize that he can't do everything. The ECHO, as a staff, regrets to lose Bob. . . someone will have to write his articles. But, that's all right. . .. that's only a small item. We might say, for Bob's benefit, that he has a clear record on the paper. It is known definitely that in all of Bob's contact with this paper he has never written an Observation.

SENIOR 'BULL-BANQUET' IS OCCASION OF MERRIMENT FOR FORTY MARYVILLE MEN

Annual Good-Fellowship Dinner Enjoyed By Both Classmen and Visitors

HELD AT REAGAN'S

Professor Lagerstedt, As Toastmaster, Keeps Group In High Spirits

Forty men responded uproariously to the call of the banquet goddess last Wednesday evening when the men of the senior class held their annual "Bull-Banquet" in the dining hall of Reagan's Bakery. Besides a large number of the seniors many underclassmen were present as guests.

Toasts, jokes and wise cracks flew thick and fast as many perfectos were consumed by the satisfied and affable group. While the announced program constituted a great part of the entertainment, it was by no means the sole source of diversion. Tom Cooper, being the hero of the evening, ably upheld his reputation for dry humor and naivte.

Professor Lagerstedt, as toastmaster, had a suitable joke for every occasion and carried the program along with unusual smoothness. Weldn Hina, introduced as "the Big-Bull of the Highland Echo", spoke humorously on the general subject "Food", Donald Briggs gave one of his inimitable Jewish characterizations, and Reno Smith gave a toast to "women" in general.

Tom and Ed Cooper undertook to discuss the prohibition question, Blundon Ferguson added his toast to the program and Reno Smith gave several selections on the harmonica. Group singing was led by Mr. Smith, after which the real fireworks of the evening, in the form of a round-table battle of jokes, began.

Through the courtesy of the Palace Theatre the group was entertained after the banquet at the movie.

MARYVILLE DEBATE TEAM WINS OVER TUSCULUM FRIDAY

Negative Team Lose Two Meets At King, Virginia Intermont

Maryville debate team, Benjamin Groves and Arthur Lazell, defeated the Tusculum team, Robert Bray and Clifton Lawrence, at Maryville Friday night. Prof. Tresidder of the University of Tennessee acted as critic judge and Prof. Davis presided.

Maryville's negative team, composed of Fred Kirchner and Robert Stevenson, debated at King College, Bristol in the evening and Virginia Intermont College in the afternoon, losing both debates.

During the coming week, three debates are scheduled:

Monday night, March 14, Andrew Newcomer and Robert Tripp will meet a team from Teachers College of Johnson City, and Robert Stevenson and Charles Beale go to Johnson City.

Friday night, March 18, Maryville girls debate with Milligan College with Edith McDuffie and Ercelle Hunter at Maryville and Carrie Lou Tweed and Lucille Swafford at Milligan College.

ECHO STAFF ADDS SIX NEW MEMBERS

Miss Roberta Robison was elected to the position of Staff Editor of the HIGHLAND ECHO recently made vacant by the resignation of Robert Stevenson, at a meeting of the Committee on Selection for the HIGHLAND ECHO Friday afternoon. Miss Robison has been a member of the staff of this publication since her freshman year. The junior member vacancy created by the elevation of Miss Robison was filled by the election of Leslie Webb, who is a junior.

The following Freshman Apprentices were chosen: Leland Shanor, Violet Webb, Barbara Whitmore, George Hoglan, and Theron Alexander.

WOMEN'S 'M' CLUB TO MAKE HIKE UP CHIMNEYS IN APRIL

March 9—At a meeting of the Women's M Club tonight it was decided that the April meeting would be held in the form of a hike up the Chimneys, a tentative date being set for April 9. This will be the second hike of the year and the members are anticipating the event with a great deal of pleasure.

The program for the March meeting consisted of the presentation and the discussion of various corrective exercises, as well as some minor business details. "The Future of Physical Education for Women" will be the topic discussed at the May meeting which will be the last meeting of the year.

DR. STEVENSON ILL WITH SEVERE COLD AT 'HOME IN WOODS'

Dr. Stevenson has been suffering from a severe cold for the past week which has kept him in bed part of the time. His condition is part of the time. However his condition is much improved now.

In spite of the fact that he was not able to deliver his sermon Wednesday morning, he fulfilled his task by sending his complete manuscript for Dr. Lloyd to read.

Seniors Choose Barrie's Play, 'What Every Woman Knows' As Class Benefit Presentation

J. M. Barrie's "What Every Woman Knows" has been chosen as the senior class play to be presented the Tuesday night of graduation week. The committee, consisting of Louise Avery, Junius Allison, Ann Smartt, and George Osborne, has met and read many plays in an attempt to select a play best suited to the talent of the senior class.

The group met with Mrs. West in casting the play, and after due deliberation and discussion a tentative cast has been selected. There is no definite lead in the play although there are about four or five major roles. The play is a comedy dealing with an English family in which the three brothers are desirious of getting their thirty five year old sister married. Many humorous complications arise before and after the arranged marriage.

Mrs. West will coach the play, though play practice will not begin for several weeks. Future announcements will be made concerning the casting of the play when definite decisions have been made.

FOUR STUDENTS GET TULSA TRIP FOR P. K. D. CONVENTION

Many Debates Sceduled For Teams On Way To Oklahoma City

On Saturday, March 5, the Pi Kappa Delta oratorical contest was held in the Y.W.C.A. auditorium. Mildred MacKenzie and Robert Stevenson as winners of the contests will represent Maryville College in the National Convetion to be held at Tulsa, Oklahoma from March 28 to April 1.

On Thursday, March 10, the contest for extemporaneous speech was held and Elizabeth Duncan and Benjamin Groves are consequently the representatives for extemporaneous speech at the Convention.

Mildred MacKenzie and Elizabeth Duncan will go to the Convention as the Maryville women's debate team as well as the oratory and extemporous speech representatives and Robert Stevenson and Benjamin Groves represent us in the same manner.

The debaters and Prof. Queener leave Maryville on March 23, debating schools on the way to and from Tulsa. The schedule for the proposed trip is as follows:

March 23, debate for men and for women with Berea College at Berea.

March 24, dual debate with Centre Cllege, Danville, Kentucky.

March 25—single debate with McKendree College at Lebanon, Illinois, for men.

March 26, single debate with Missouri State Teachers College of Springfield, Missouri, for men.

On the return trip the boys debate April 3, College of the Ozarks at Clarksville, Arkansas.

April 4, single debate with Southwestern College at Memphis, Tennessee.

Mr. E. W. Hall, formerly connected with the college as Bible instructor and music teacher, will address the Ministerial Association at the regular meeting on March 15 at 6:40 p. m. Mr. Hall is at present minister of several churches in this section. He will speak on "Opportunities in the Country Church".

At the last meeting it was announced that the annual banquet this year will be held April 14.

STUDENT COUNCIL PLANS COURTESY PROGRAM HERE

Annual Movement Intended To Aid Social Standard Of School

During the coming week special emphasis will be placed on courtesy and dining room etiquette, under the sponsorship of the Student Council. Posters will be placed in the dining room and in other prominent places on the campus. Old students will remember that a period during each school year is devoted to courtesy and etiquette as special projects of either the Student Council or through the Home Economics Department. However, instead of devoting time in chapel for talks and demonstrations, the Student Council has decided that through posters and announcements in the Highland Echo, the appeal will be made this year.

While it seems unnecessary to bring such matters as these before the student body, there are times when special stress on social conventions is not out of place. People in general are likely to become careless in their habits and a casual checking up of such activities is often beneficial, and will cause more attention to be placed on the fundamental activities of social etiquette.

Saturday, March 12—

Dr. Lloyd left Maryville this morning for Middlepoint, Ohio, where he is scheduled to speak tonight at a banquet of the County Young People's Conference. Tomorrow morning he will preside in a religious service and he is to be the chief speaker at the closing service of the conference which will be held Sunday afternoon.

After the conference, Dr. Lloyd will go to Cleveland, Ohio, for a short stay. From there he is to continue his trip, going to Chicago, where he will remain but a short time, returning to Maryville by te latter part of next week.

FAMOUS JEWISH DRAMA, 'THE MELTING POT,' TO BE NEXT PRESENTATION OF PLAYERS

Plot of Zangwill's Play Built About Life of Young Russian-Jew

HOLLAND DIRECTS

Culver To Assume Male Lead; Female Lead Taken By Betty Wilbar

The romance of a Russian Jew in America is the theme of "The Melting Pot", which will be presented by the College Players in Voorhees Chapel on March 28. The play is a revival of Israel Zangwill's famous drama, which was written in 1908.

Zangwill was an outstanding personality in the Jewish world, as well as in the world of English Letters. He wrote both novels and plays, but he was greater as a playwright than as a novelist. Some of his dramas have been extensively played both in English and in Yiddish.

Zangwill did admirable work in light comedy and in serious plays. "The Melting Pot" is an example of his more serious work. It depicts the union of two antagonistic Russian classes, the lordly aristocrat and the humble peasant, under the fusing influence of the New World's largest city.

The cast of "The Melting Pot" seems unusually well chosen. The part of the young Russian Jew, David Quixano, who is struggling to forget the tragedy which disrupted his family in the Old World, will be taken by Wesley Culver.

The part of Vera Revedal, daughter of an aristocratic Russian family, who has come to New York as a social worker, will be taken by Elizabeth Wilbar. Prof. Lagerstedt will interpret the part of a German orchestra conductor. Other members of the cast are Marjorie Jones, Reno Smith, Michael Testa, and Roberta Robison. Miss Holland is directing the play.

Bainonian's program this evening will be 'A Long-fellow Evening", featuring selections from "Evangeline", "Hiawatha", and special Indian music.

Do you play the game according to Hoyle or according to Post?

ANTHEMS WILL BE GIVEN BY VESPER CHOIR ON EASTER

'Open Our Eyes', By MacFarland Featured In Place Of Usual Cantata

The Vesper Choir of Maryville College has been working for several weeks on the special music which will be presented at the Easter Service in Voorhees Chapel on Mrach 27. The program will consist of an Easter address by Dr. Stevenson and the special music by the choir.

Instead of a cantata the choir this year will present selected Easter anthems and special numbers. The most interesting part of the musical program will be the singing of the Easter anthem "Open Our Eyes", by Macfarland. Other selections will be the Benedictus, from "St. Cecilia Mass" by Gounod, and excerpts from the cantatas "A Pageant of the Resurrection" and "The Resurrection and the Life."

A special quartet, with soprano obligato, and an octette, will provide additional numbers for the program.

You can throw a line but don't throw water.

WOMEN'S GLEE CLUB WILL BROADCAST

'The Trend of Modern Drama' Discussed At Faculty Club

Mrs. Nita Eckles West, head of the department of expression of Maryville College, presented a paper on "The Trend of Modern Drama" at the last meeting of the Faculty Club.

In speaking of the present, Mrs. West wrote that "we are living now in the midst of the greatest period of dramatic creativity, a period more vast and varied, more widespread, and more versatile than any other great period."

In her discussion of modern drama, the author divided her work into five phases: the biographical play, the metaphysicall play, the folk play, the sociological play, and the revival of old plays in new ways.

These were her definitions: "Biography is a record of life; folk lore's source is derived from the common life of the people: the metaphysical affords a serious discussion of the mysteries of life, and with the sociological play deals with the associated life of humanity. These form four comparatively new and untrod paths that are luring the dramatist of today.

Among the biographical plays cited were Besier's "Barretts of Wimpole Street", Susan Glaspell's "Alison's House", Drinkwater's "Abraham Lincoln", and Louis Parker's "Disraeli". The success of these plays is attributed to "the recent vogue for biography as a

SENIORS SET DATE LAST OPEN PARTY

Final Entertainment Will Be Held March 22

It was announced at a meeting of the senior class held last Wednesday morning that the final open party of the class '32 will be held on March 22nd. Arrangements have not been completed and no information regarding either the theme of the party or the place could be obtained.

Other business brought before the meeting was a report by the senior play committee regarding the choice of a play to be produced later in the season, a report concerning the type and price of the class invitations, and the decision of the class that one semester's dues will be necessary before eligibility to attend the party may be obtained.

MINOR SPORTS GETS LARGER M'S

At the request of the Athletic Board of Control made to the student body last Wednesday morning, the letters awarded to students for proficiency in the minor sports were standardized as a 5-inch block "M". Heretofore these letters have been smaller, being 4 inches in size.

THREE INITIATED BY HI-TRAILERS

Boretsky, Tope, Webb Take Hard Trail To Membership

A siege of freak costumes and onerous activities for Leslie Webb, Steve Boretsky and John Tope came to an end Mnday night when the three quaking neophytes were at last safely within the body of the Pi Upsilon, or Hi-Trailer, fraternity.

For the past week these three candidates had been the laughing stock of the campus, bedecked in all the gorgeous hues of the circus clown; the drab denim of the farmer, or the habiliments of gentlemen until, according to one report, they were seriously weighing the idea of self-destruction.

TOPE ELECTED WRESTLER'S CAPT.

At a recent meeting of the wrestling team John Tope was elected captain for the season 1933.

Tope has made an enviable record this year, having won every match which he has entered. He is high score man, having entered six matches and won a total of 28 points.

Writers Interest Centers On General Subject 'Dogs'

By Julia Terry

There are dogs, excuses for dogs, and even four-footed animals somewhat libelously given the highly respectable name of a dog. I shall not discuss these in the order named.

Four-footed animals given the honorable name of dog are those four-legged insectival creations known as rat-terriers, toy-terriers which have no excuse for living except to cause genuine dog-lovers great deal of annoyance and quantities of utter disgust. They usually assume a superiority which is entirely unbecoming their limited size and scope, and they emit most unbecoming and unnatural explosives known in real dogs as darks.

Their expressions are always too pert and too supercilious to arouse anything but antagonism and later pity for the animals.

They are lead around on chains, ropes, or ribbons, but never manage to hang themselves; they only get everybody else mixed up in the extraneous paraphernalia.

They usually have ears like pink tissue paper, eyes like old fashioned shoe buttons, legs like jackstraws, and a tail like a piece of spaghetti. The body resembles a camaflouged frankfurter. They are dumb animals in the true sense of the word.

Excuses for dogs, or the second category to which I have alluded rather hastily are those animals

A WEEK FOR COURTESY

Today marks the beginning of a movement that is rapidly becoming an annual custom on the Hill-Courtesy Week. With a a pro.ound belief that college students need to learn many things not taught in ordinary class books and feeling that the social standards here may be improved by the observation of the common rules of social contact, the Student Council again sponsors this move for more courtesy on the part of each student.

This movement is not solely for use in the dining hall or in the class room but for use in every contact that one student has with another. It is as applicable to the "bull-session" in a dormitory as in the formal gathering o. a mixed party. One polite student so changes the aspect of a group meeting that a different atmosphere is noticable the moment that student joins the gathering. Courtesy makes for educational exchange of ideas and sympathetic understanding; it is that quality that marks the gentleman from the mere man.

May we take this movement seriously and profit by the mutual observation of the common rules of conduct.

ANOTHER APPRECIATION

It is one of the curious quirks of human nature that we do not appreciate the things with which we are familiar; the things we come in contact with frequently, but rather take them as a matter o. course. Such seems to be the general attitude of the men in Carnegie Hall toward the proctor.

While it is true that some recognize the worthy qualities of Mr. McCurry, a few of the newer students have not yet considered his position carefully enough to form an honest and correct opinion. To the older student, almost without exception, Mr. Mac is a friend and always gets a kind word. They know that he is not the tyrant that some expect to find when entering school; they realize that he is solely responsible for the conduct of the dormitory and that he would be excusable should he enforce even more stringent rules.

It is true that he might create rules for conduct within the hall much more burdensome than exists at the present. He could ask for complete quietness during hours supposed to be given to study; he might curtail or even prohibit altogether, visiting; when lights go out he might go down each hallway stopping conversation in the rooms and commanding all lights to be extinguished or he might make himself odious and extremely unpopular by "shh-hh-hh"ing at every little cough or sneeze after 10:30, but he doesn't. He places the men of the dormitory on an adult plane. He recognizes that each is a responsible individual, that each is capable of knowing and doing what is right for himself and the group without his "paternal" attention. He feels that each student is his personal friend and offers him as much liberty and freedom of action as that student is capable of using without abusing.

It is the recognition of these comradely overtures and friendly considerations that makes the men who have spent the greatest time here have a feeling of friendship for him rather than an attitude of criticism. To know Mr. Mac is to appreciate him and few sessions are held in the dormitory wherein his name is mentioned that he does not get a good word.

Should a marriage become monotonous?

Edwin R. Guthrie, professor of psychology at the University of Washington, Seattle, believes that it should. In a recent talk on "The Psychology of the Family", he said, "The mutual adjustments of habits makes for monotony, which in turn, makes for permanence of martial life. In this way the husband and wife form the necessary stimulus to each other for habits o. affectionate behavior which result in permanence and a monotony which is not to be lamented."

According to Professor Guthrie, practically all we do is a result of habit, and nine-tenths of the nervous breakdowns come from conflicts with our habits.

'I am firmly convinced that the child of 16 or 17 should get away from home in order to break habits of dependence on the parents formed in early childhood", he said. 'The child who has a domineering parent who makes all his decisions for him will never gain self-reliance.

"Where there is a very selfish member of the family", he added, "you will find a very unselfish member."—Washington Daily.

The Highland Echo Staff has instituted into its meetings a new feature which consists of a careful criticism of each article in the preceding paper. Each article is criticized either by its writer, or by anybody on the staff, taking into consideration the finer points of newspaper writing. Any ideas for the improvement of the Echo as a college paper are submitted.

The new system has been proposed by the editor, who is making an effort to make the work on the Echo instructive instead of pure drudgery. Each of the writers on the staff has become interested in these meetings, and a concerted effort is being made to make the paper more o. a real college publication.

THE LITTLE CHURCH

One of the most significant factors in the life of a Christian is assurance. We should know why we live as we do. We should be able to answer without equivocation, and never guess in such an important matter as life.

Too many of the things that we would be sure of are built on custom or what we are, in the last analysis, guessing to be true. We should make our lives a matter of certainty; indeed, in this day of homage to intelligence, a matter of science.

Dr. Foulkes told us that "most of our doubts were borrowed from someone else and that we had no moral right to a doubt of any kind unless we had arrived at it through our own process of reasoning."

How true this is. We should think independently and act independently as far as is possible, but be ever ready to lend a hand to a good cause. Phillips Brooks was one of the most outstanding thinkers of modern times and he was pre-eminently an independent thinker. The story is told that one Sunday morning a man from the streets of New York happened into his church and after hearing his sermon went forward and said to Reverend Brooks, "I could believe in God by just looking into your face". Assurance—a thing we should all seek—our living.

She: It's very kind of you to ask me to dance.

He: Don't mention it. This is a charity ball.—Lenoir Rhynean.

OBSERVATIONS

Too Much Boy
Bob's English Accent
"Culture" . . . . ?
Bovine Romance

The fellow who was talking about our being shifted four hundred miles south has recently gone into hibernation on the south side of Carnegie Hall. In fact, the greater part of Carnegie spent the greater part of the last few days on "The Sunny Side of The Street".

—o—

We're told of the sky-town boys who were masticulating some of the vile weed and expectorating on the roof of the Dean's house, just three stories down. The result was a controversy between the fourth floor representatives and a first floor representative who was promptly informed that it wasn nice to "bring up" such things (he brought some of the spittle up on his overcoat) because "spit" is a hard word.

—o—

A complaint has been made : the effect that this column carries too much information about boys, and not enough about the fair sex. Strangely enough, the complaint was voiced by a girl. We wish to apologize by giving four reasons for our weakness. . . . they are:

1. The girls live in girls dormitories;
2. The column is written by a boy;
3. It rings true as "Observations";
4. There's an efficient night-watchman.

—o—

Bob Stevenson's accent-uation has become decidedly off form. He went with a freshman for the express purpose of hearing her English accent and found, after what we would call a crude investigation, that Ruby Smith is to the English accent as Margaret Taylor is to X—X marks the spot where Bob stood when he learned the identity of the other unknown.

—o—

George Brown, who knows all and sees nothing, is an interesting fellow while he assimilates the knowledge that is poured into his receiving ear by one of his friends. He can be in the midst of two or seven typewriters, all going full speed ahead, and still he gets the desired knowledge. The secret of his intelligence may lie in his method of rubbing his hair constantly while hearing his "message". His method, which is extremely individualistic, is called, for want of a better term "rubbing it in."

—o—

Larry Somers has never discerned just why Dr. Hunter placed the question mark after the title of one of his outlines in Systematic Discourse. The subject was "Why I Became Cultured". The question mark followed immediately the word "cultured".

—o—

This reminds us of that statement made by Cecil Marley in one of his immortal four speeches made in Systematics a few years ago. Marley expounded that great truth of his in which he so firmly believes. . .that "To a city boy, a Cow is but a cow, but to a country boy she's Romance. Marley's been acting rather queer. . . Maybe he's in love.

—o—

All the surrounding country of Maryville has suffered great losses this year in the canine ranks. The dogs have made Maryville College their congregating place. In the library, in the chapel, in the class room . . ask for a dog and he'll be given unto you; try to get rid of him, and he'll bark at your heels. . . . . unless you turn around and then he'll want to shake hands. It might be desirable that some good hearted alumnus start a home for lost dogs and employ some of the presumptuous freshmen to be carefakers. Then Maryville would be a doggone good school.

—o—

Steve Boretsky says the little woman can go down in value to quite an extent but the Price will still remain as dear as ever.

KEYHOLE COMMENT

There comes a time in the life of all men, so Dame Rumor hath it, when all of them are tempted, each according to his individual tastes. Some yield, some resist and are promtply termed pansies, or, if they are politicians, other names not quite so flowery. Although we have not yet reached that age of reason commonly called manhood, we have already been tempted. Not wishing to be known by the epithet, "pansy", nor by the name of politician, we have yielded.

Our temptation, of which we seem to be so ashamed, forces us to depart from a principle pounded into us since our first childhood. It consists in the betrayal of a neighbor, one of the most heinus crimes known in the lexicon of our ancestors. Perhaps we might be forgiven if the neighbor in question were a troublesome or a pesky soul. But he is a paragon o. what the man in the next room should be. He never plays his phonograph at the wrong hours nor with undue amounts of publicity. He plays neither a musical instrument nor a saxophone. He has an enviable amount of neckties, shaving soap, toothpaste, and other articles which others generally are, as the French so eloquently put it, "sans". And yet, here wee are publishing his name where all can see who are unfamiliar enough with this column to be lured into wasting time in its perusal. His name is Homer E. McCann; his home Washington, D. C.

Since Brother McCann has been gracing the various pews in the Voorhees Chapel, he has, needless to say, performed quite a few deeds, and garnered unto himself quite a few honors, among which are the editorship of the Chilhowean, membership in the Y cabinet and other Y offices, biology assistantship, and many others which are worthy of mention, but which are too numerous to dwell upon. This year, Homer receives his academic degree from the college, but he has long since proved himself a true Maryvillian by his admitted proficiency in the art of moonshine. We have first hand dope that he has the school championship for speedy action.

The Tope brothers, like all Carnegie men, have a certain aversion for Mr. McCurry, that really needs no special explanation. Neither does Lynn's action need to be explained when he came walking down the hall one day and saw his brother holding a man who was in the act of extracting a light bulb from the socket. In an effort to disconcert "the boys", Lynn reported that "Mac's Comin' " but the report did not have the expected effect, and really the joke was decidedly on the Lynn part of the Tope family, for the man whom Johnny held was no other than Mr. McCurry in person.

Just now—about Easter—when some students are getting broke in well with the new girl-friend they are beginning to see the necessity of breaking off relations—a process which is generally called "breaking up". It is just as well for those who are just getting broke in to break off soon. . . . . at least that sounds like the best policy. . . or we'll all be broke after the traditional dozen of roses has been paid for.

—o—

A rolling stone gathers nothing but momentum and a rolling missile on the fourth floor of Carnegie doesn't do that much. Some of the fellows of that air habitation must be members of the great body of Holy Rollers. As soon as they find a thing that will roll they stand in the hall, look both ways for the proctor, then let lose with whatever happens to be the most handy. These handy things range from croquet balls and steel balls to hair tonic bottles. Occasionally a man gets a close shave, but that's only part of the game. If he gets hit, that's a loss, but the perpetrator seldom gets penalized. It's a game of "throw I win, hit you lose", a game better classified as pure unadulterated, grade-school nonsense.

Discourtesy indicates disrespect.

Are you a 'dining-room desperado?

MARGINAL NOTES

JUNIUS ALLISON

Last Poems, by A. E. Housman, New York: Henry Holt and Co. 1922. 79 pp. $1.50.

On my desk is a little thin volume which is due at the library tomorrow. It is Housman's Last Poems (we wish the title were wrong). Every one remembers Shropshire Lad. These two small books are very much alike.

In these short laments in Last Poems, we find futility without bitterness and despair without resentment. "Oh hard is the bed they have made him." Every line carries beauty, dignity and peacefulness despite the theme of death which runs throughout the book. Some one has said, "Only a confirmed optimist" should read these poems—but not so. We all must read them. Maybe they won't make us happy—we may brood and think. They may haunt and tug at us when we finish reading, but get the book, for "The living are the living

And dead the dead will stay,
And I will sort with comrades,
That face the beam of day."

Several new amendments were made to the National Football rules by the National Rules Committee. The most important of the six new rules are the ones concerning the kick-off and about the ball becoming dead when any part of the runner, other than his hands and feet, touches the ground.

Much criticism has been dished out to the Rules Committee on account of these new rules. But their chief weapon of defense is the fact that a terribly large number of men were killed last year in football and that they are trying to make the game safer for the players. The new rule concerning the kick-off, states that a team may now either place kick, punt or drop kick the ball on the kickoff at the start of the game or after touchdowns.

Fans everywhere are crying that they are taking all of the thrills out of the game and that in the near future, the grand old game of football will be a tame affair. However, it is still possible for dashing young men to thrill vast audiences by his daring exploits, even though some of his old tricks will not be possible under the new rules.

Eight Grapplers Earn Covered Awards; John Tope Is Elected Captain

SEVERAL GRADUATE

Basketball Outlook For Next Year Is Anything But Discouraging.

At a meeting of the Athletic Board of Control last Tuesday night, eight members of the wrestling squad and seven basetball players were granted letters and sweaters for their services rendered during the season just closed. Joe Myers, wrestling manager, and Blundon Ferguson, basketball manager, were also awarded letters.

White, Woodard, Nee, Kiser, Overly, Lewis and Mann are the basketball men who will be given their letters in basketball. These men composed one of the best basketball teams that has represented Maryville in several years and they fully deserve their awards. Only White and Mann of this group will be lost to the team and prospects for a winning team next year are not at all discouraging.

The wrestling team enjoyed by far the most successful season that any team has had since the sport was adopted here. They had seven matches with strong foes and they came through every single one of them with the victory under their suspenders. They have established themselves as the best team in the state, college or university, and their claim to supremacy in Tennessee has not been disputed.

Campbell, Cross, Peacock, Boretsky, Overly, Teffeteller, Burns and Overly, the members of the varsity team, were the letter winners. A number of these men will be lost through graduation but interest in wrestling is so widespread that a formidable grappling team is assured next year. John Tope, of the 155 pound class, will, succeed Cliff Overly, the heavyweight, as captain.

Page Mr. O. Henry. Here's irony. At the University of Alabama, a student received thirteen B's and one F for work during a quarter. The single failure was a psychological course. "How to Study"—Ring Tum Phi.

WEATHERMAN HALTS TRACKMEN

But Spec Moore Defys Elements And Continues to Make Daily Jaunts

Inclement weather has put a noticeable crimp in the activities of the 1932 track squad and Coach Bob Thrower will be forced to keep the reins drawn tight on his cohorts until John Weatherman assumes a more agreeable attitude.

The cinder pathmen have, as one man, adopted a grudge against the weatherman for his ungentlemanlike behavior. They have been waiting anxiously for some time to get down to real work and then just as soon as Coach Bob issued the initial summons, spring suddenly became winter again.

However, some of the boys have decided to completely defy the weather andd are going right ahead with their work. "Spec" Moore, especially, is taking his daily rounds in an effort to get ready for his best year on Mr. Thrower's team. He has been in training, so some of the boys say, since the start of football practice in the fall and if he doesn't run the sox off some of his opponents in the distance jaunts this year, something is radically wrong with the laws of —whatever governs distance jaunts.

The meets with Lincoln Memorial University and the University of Tennessee are foremost in the minds of the tracksters. It is always the ambition of the track team to win over the Vols and so far as the boys from Lincoln Memorial are concerned—well you remember what happened last year.

Bob: What becomes of a basketball player when his eyesight begins to fail?

Sleeply: They make a referee out of him.

A bread-thrower may become a bread-liner.

SOUTHERN LEAGUE CLUB FIRST BASEBALL OPPONENT

Knoxville Pitcher Will Hurl For Highlanders In Opening Game

Maryville College's baseballers will open their 1932 schedule March 26 when they play the Knoxville Smokies, new member of the Southern League, in Knoxville. The Highlanders will play another game with the Knoxville club at a later date.

Maryville baseball teams have always commanded the respect of Knoxville baseball managers and fans and even though the Knoxville team this year is in a Class A League, they are expecting a hard game with the Mayrvillians.

Due to the shortage of pitchers in the Maryville camp, Coach Honaker has asked the Knoxville management to lend him a hurler for the game and the opposing Moguls have given their consent. The Maryville team has not yet been able to work-out on the field but have been going through their chores in the Gym and they will not be in first class shape for the game.

Joe Woodard and Tom West will be closely watched by the Knoxville manager and owners. It is understood that the Knoxville men think favorably of these two stars and they would like to get them under contract before they are grabbed by some faster club.

However, Woodard and West have not signed any contracts with the Smokies or any club and it is a certainty that they will use the utmost care in attaching their names to a contract.

Students at the University of Kansas are allowed by the student council to petition for the changing or the removal of any text-book they dislike. This idea affords them an opportunity to secure some modern knowledge in some classes—The Crimson-White.

Courtesy is to do and say

SPORT SLANTS

By BOB RULE

(Note: Being confined by a light touch of "flu" for the past few days, I decided to follow the precedent of another Typewriter punisher and interview myself.)

Q.—If you were granted the privilege of making one change in the college administration, what would it be?

A.—To make moonshining a three hour course.

--s--

Q.—Who, in your estimation, is most proficient in this line?

A.—The chemistry department.

--s--

Q.—Who do you think will play the tackle positions next year?

A.—That's what Mr. Thrower would like to know.

--s--

Q.—Who is your ideal football player?

A.—Lea Calloway.

--s--

Q.—Who will take Captain Calloway's place next year?

A.—Nobody

--s--

Q.—What do you think of Carson-Newman's chance to defeat Maryville next year?

A.—About as much chance as a one-legged man at a square dance.

--s--

Q.—Could you imagine some incident that would give you a bigger laff than you have ever had?

A.—Yes. Seeing Coach Honaker give Miss Heron five laps around the track for missing football practice.

--s--

Q.—What do you think is the greatest individual feat ever accomplished at Maryville?

A.—Lowell McDonald passing Trig.

--s--

Q.—What do you think of big husky guys who always knock the football team but never go out for the sport?

A.—I don't use profanity.

--s--

Q.—Who do you think will have the best line in the conference next year?

A.—Byar and Kipp.

--s--

Q.—But I was speaking of the football conference.

A.—Their line will go in any kind of a conference.

--s--

Q.—Do you think that Maryville can win the conference championship in football next year?

A.—Can a duck swim?

--s--

Q.—How many quality credits have you?

A.—This thing has gone far enough.

Yank Lewis Is Elected Captain Of Next Year's Basketball Team

Flash From Springfield Gets Honor At Banquet Given By Coach Honaker

SUCCEEDS WHITE

Yankee Was "Holy Terror" In High School Days, Report From Springfield Says

Yank Lewis, diminutive forward, was elected captain of next year's basketball team at a banquet given by Coach Honaker in honor of the team last night. Lewis will be a senior next year and he has been a member of the squad for the past three years.

Yank hails from Springfield, Tennessee, and reports from that section of the state have it that he was a holy terror on the hardwood in his high school days. He played on the Springfield High School team and was considered the best basketball player ever turned out at that school.

Upon entering Maryville, Lewis took up basketball again as his specialty and before many weeks of practice had passed in his freshman year, he was dubbed "Dead-eye". His ability to hit the bottom of the basket with unbelievable frequency immediately caught the eye of Coach Honaker and he has seen plenty of varsity service during the past three years.

Next year, his last, should easily be Yank's best. He showed the goods this season that it takes to make a first class performer and he is being counted on to take a large share of the scoring burden when the Highlanders start their quest of additional basketball honors next year.

SOPHOMORE GIRLS VICTORS

Sophomores Play Freshman Team Tonight; Title To Be Awarded On Points

The sophomore volley ball team defeated the Junior-Senior outfit last week in a fast game by a score of 30 to 17. This was the second game of the season and the teams will continue play throughout the coming few weeks.

The championship will be awarded in volley-ball, as in basketball, on the basis of points scored. The teams are, at present, in a close race for the championship and some fast games are expected before the title is awarded.

The Freshmen will play the sophomores tonight and this game should carry plenty of excitement.

Line-ups for the Sophs-Junior-Senior game follows:

Sophomres	Juniors-Seniors
Hassel	Gamble
Farlee	Purviance
Carter	Ross
Whaylen	Hodges
Yennie	McCarmel
Dick	Hale
Wynn	Kitts
Wilson	Swacick
Schoeller	Macval

Substitutes for Sophs: Little. For Junior-Senior: Less.

BASKETBALL BANQUET

Last night the men's basketball squad was entertained at a banquet given by Coach Honaker at his home on Court Street. At six thirty o'clock the following men arrived at the Honakers' for an evening of pleasure and the business of electing a captain for next year: White, Woodard, Nee, Kiser, Overly, Lewis, Mann, Cherry, Taylor, Holloway, Russell, Stone, Allen, Jarnagin, Gwynn, Ferguson, manager, and Graham, assistant manager.

After the dinner, prepared under the direction of Mrs. Honaker, who is not only a gracious hostess, but also an accomplished culinary adviser, the squad was entertained with several games. The captain-elect, chosen by the men, is Yankee Lewis.

Louise Cline at library desk: Have you a House and Garden?

Kirchner: Careful, Kipp, this is Leap Year.

Mildred MasKenzie: That's the most tactful approach to the question I've ever met.

"Hey, we're going to give the bride a shower. Are you in on it?"

"Sure. I'll bring the soap."

BASEBALL STARTS TREK BACK TOWARD PROMINENCE, SAYS COACH L. S. HONAKER

(By Bob Rule)

According to Coach Lombe Scott Honaker, Maryville's wizard baseball mentor, the diamond sport will soon be back to a popular position in the program of athletics in several of the colleges and universities in the Southland.

A sharp upturn in baseball interest is already noticable especially in the smaller colleges and the Maryville coach believes that before many more years have passed, the larger universities will again turn at least part of their attention to the diamond.

Coach Honaker bases his prediction on the fact that Maryville's 1932 baseball schedule is already filled whereas the slate last year was not completed until after the playing season was well under way. About 20 games are already scheduled for the Maryvillians and some of the teams with which he has been negotiating will have to be dropped in order to finish the season before the close of school in June.

Doubtless, one reason for the easiness with which the schedule was arranged is due to Maryville's reputation on the baseball field. It is an admitted fact that Maryville baseball teams have established themselves in a commanding position in the South and more men have gone out from this school into professinal baseball than from any other school, regardless of size or classification, in the South.

But Coach Honaker does not believe that Maryville's reputation alone is responsible for the complete schedule. Only recently, Lincoln Memorial University announced that they would again be represented on the diamond. This announcement is especially pleasing to the Maryville director and he has high hopes that in the very near future more of the Smoky Mountain Conference schools will put out baseball teams.

With the addition of L. M. U., there are now only three schools in the Smoky Loop represented by baseball teams. These are Maryville, East Tennessee Teachers and the aforementioned. In years gone by, Carson-Newman put baseball teams on the field that compared favorably with Maryville's and it seems as if they could again produce strong outfits in this branch of sports.

Maryville's schedule this year will possibly consist of teams from several different section of the State, Last year the Highlanders won an undisputed State championship while playing a shedule which did not cover a large amount of territory but Coach Honaker hopes to spread Maryville's prestige over all sections of the state.

With the return of a goodly number of veterans and the arrival of a number of likely looking new men, prospects for this year's team are exceedingly bright. The only draw-back at present is a very noticably dearth of dependable hurlers. The varsity mound staff last year was entirely taken by graduation and Coach Honaker will be forced to take what men he has and develop them into winning moundsmen. It's a safe bet that he will do it.

Conscientiously create courtesy.

Lipstick is merely something to give a new flavor to an old passtime.

THIRTY MARYVILLE STUDENTS ATTEND LECTURE AT U. T.

'Audible Light' Is Subject Of Talk Before A I. E. E. Meeting Thursday

About thirty students of Maryville College attended the lecture given by Mr. Taylor, Electrical Engineer from the General Electric Research Laboratories, Schenectady, N. Y., in the Engineering Building of the University of Tennessee last Thursday evening.

Mr. Taylor brought a very interesting and novel lecture on "Audible Light". This is one of the newer fields of physics to be explored, and is of especial interest to students majoring in that subject. According to one student, she, "heard light and saw sound" when Mr. Taylor played on a light wave and talked on a beam of light. Also, by the use of an ordinary fishing rod he was able to obtain music from the air. After the lecture Mr. Taylor answered questions asked him by those present.

The lecture was delivered as part of the program of the University of Tennessee chapter of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers.

WRITERS INTEREST CENTERS ON GENERAL SUBJECT 'DOGS'

which are slightly larger than the above-characterized unmentionables but which are still the pets of the idle rich and receive their daily baths. They are usually of fluffy whiteness, have sharp teeth and snap. They are toys to be played with and are objects to which one can attach a pedigree and a Chinese name.

This category of excuses does not arouse so much antagonism for a true dog-lover as do those of the first class. Their main faults lie in their unfaithfulness, their ability to whine, their disobedience, their receptiveness of flattery bestowed upon them or at times almost thrust upon them by their fond owners.

They usually have pink ribbons tied around their necks and shed hair on everybody with whom they come in contact, especially in an automobile, the seats of which always resemble a fur-lined coat. Ridiculous names always accompany these animals and some of them bear up bravely. These dogs are inconvenient, in the way, pampered, too large to be placed in the non-dog category and not characteristically virile enough to be placed in the genuine dog class.

They are like the frivolous high school girls who, in their careless, flaunting actions, endeavor to prove to a sometimes too-credulous world the advantages or IT. These excuses are in a direct proportion to a real dog as an Austin is to a real automobile.

The class o. real dogs includes such specimens as German police, wire-haired fox terriers, bull dogs, and other dogs of masculine temperament and abilities. Real dogs have intelligent faces, use foresight, respond to their masters, do not snap, and ignore baby talk. They are reliable and trustworthy. They will fight when necessary and sometimes unnecessarily, and may come out with a torn ear or a bloody nose but still their spirits are up and they appear to be planning a return attack. They are triumphant even in defeat.

Real dogs have convincing barks but do not howl at night unless it is to compete with the meowing of the neighbor's cat. Real dogs should be allowed in all parts of the house and not be kept in the cellar.

They will play but will play manfully and not childishly. They are good watch dogs but they do not take too much for granted or make too many false assumptions. A real dog is a companion and seems to have a peculiar insight into the feelings and activities of his master—in fact, challenging the heretofore unsurped place of women's intuition.

A real dog actually occupies a place in human society and human society should exclude their entrance into dog pounds and prohibit their need of licenses. The other categories should have double license fees appended to the undesirables making up the classifactions and should be put into the most uncomfortable dog jail on any slight misdemeanor.

THE LONG, LONG TRAIL

The following excerpts, taken from the addresses of Dr. Foulkes, are representative of the spirit of the meetings.

The invitation of Christ is to a feast, not a fast.

Religion is not man seeking reality, but reality seeking man.

There is no divine coercion; there is divine constraint.

The father brought his prodigal son home with love.

Sin is missing the mark.

Christ's period of ministry was not as long as our college career.

Jesus organized the five thousand so they would not become a mob.

Are you guilty of eating your barley bread alone?

Only broken lives can feed the world; lives broken by love.

There is a difference between human and divine mathematics.

There is a waste of love; when an alabaster box is broken over bruised feet.

In every area of life Marys have gone.

What better creed can we have than, "O Master, I give my body to be broken for the hungry."

To know Christ made Peter of the broken net a Peter of the unbroken net.

Do we compel Christ to fish with a broken net?

"They see the Resurrection", Quo Vadis.

Not even God can violate a human will.

Christ has already captured the outposts of our citadel.

Paul was the little man who was to turn the world upside down because he was branded.

"Paul brings us on the way of life, and turns us over slaves to Jesus Christ.', Albert Sweitzer.

"Are we going to add to the confusion of this already greatly perplexed world?" Such was the question put before the student body of the College in chapel Tuesday morning by J. J. Ray, a member of the faculty of the Y. M. C. A. Graduate School of Nashville.

Speaking on the subject "Helping Adults Find themselves" Mr. Ray stated that "if one is to have a life of happiness and abundance he must have a continuation of graduate training, a firm conviction of what one desires to do in later life and a life philosophy". Mr. Ray contended that since the students were soon to complete their College training they must have these three things in order to insure a life of comfort and peace.

Five students frm the College, all of whom are daughters of missionaries in foreign countries, addressed a large audience at the Kirkwood Presbyterian Church of Knoxville last Sunday evening at the regular worship service. The girls were dressed in costumes native to their own country and gave short and very interesting accounts of native life and of the work that is being carried on by the missionaries in the foreign fields.

The students who spoke at the service were Dorothy Casseres of Costa Rica, Arta Grace Hope of Africa, Lorena May Dunlap of Philippine Islands, Elinor Wynn, of Korea, and Jean Warren of Japan.

Don't cramp courtesy.

Next Wednesday evening at 7:05 o'clock three students of the expression department of the college will read over WNOX, Knoxville.

Miss Lucy Ann Voorhees will read "Betty at the Baseball Game", a humorous sketch; Miss Ellen Hitch will read "In de Mawnin'" a negro characterization; and Miss Lois Wallace will read "The Story of Old Glory", a dramatic poem.

Create campus courtesy.

Co-eds at Millsaps College in Jackson, Miss., have decided that the ideal college man must be:

A man who shoots a flattering line—without laughing.

A man who tells funny jokes—only once.

A man who won't believe just anything—unless you want him to.

A man who keeps you guessing—for a while.

A man who sings love songs in your ear—and can carry a tune.

A man who is totally indifferent towards girls—except you.—Los Angeles Collegian.

Courteously carry on.

The latest novelty in census and statistic taking is the counting of Brown Cow sticks that lie discarded along the Court Street sidewalk from town to the Hill and also from the Hill to town.

Georga Burk, Red Jones, and Norma Spilatore are the census takers and the high limits in numerical statistics which they reached indicate successful futures in accounting—accountin g for just what is not known, however. On one side were 163 remains of Brown Cows while the graveyard on the other side of the walk supplied the remains of 147 of the lowly creatures.

University Professor Says Slang Not Harming Schools

(Boston U. News)

Slang, as it is conceived by representatives of the English departments of two of the Boston University colleges, is no great inane evil which is undermining our language and relegating standard English words to a class with the dodo and the bustle, but, on the contrary, it is a useful and colorful means of expression which has a legitimate place in everyday conversation.

Nor is the use of slang any more prevalent today than it was in grandma's day. Its individual words and phrases may change from age to age but slang, like Tennyson's highly-publicized river, goes on forever.

Prof. George M. Sneath of C. L. A. and Prof. Roy J. Honeywell of C. B. A., both agree that slang was as popular in their college days as it is today, and that so long as it does not hamper a person's ability to speak correct English in public, it does no especial harm. Even the scholarly precincts of the university English offices are admittedly dens of slang upon occasion.

College students may use slang but they are seldom the originators of it, according to Professor Sneath. The fields and arenas of sport and the stage are the chief breeding places of slang, he believes, and such slang phrases as do originate in a college are likely to be provincial and remain peculiar to that one institution.

Professor Honeywell attributes a larger proportion of popular slang words to a shady birth than does Professor Sneath. Such phrases are often adopted by the general public with little knowledge of the connotations which they originally carried, he says.

Five Acres Placed Under Cultivation This Year; Will Expand Tract Later

Plan To Furnish Vegetables For Pearsons; Work For Men

PROFFITT IN CHARGE

New Project Made Possible By Donation of $500.00 By Friend

With Mr. Proffitt in actual charge, and Mrs. McMurray and Mr. Black on his committee, the college truck farm project is fast becoming a reality. The two worthy objects of the farm are to furnish work for the boys and vegetables for the boarding club.

Already beets, radishes, lettuce, and mustard, have been planted in the early garden which is located directly back of Dr. Lloyd's home. The later garden will be nearer the College Woods, in what is now a barley field. Five or six acres will be planted this year and if the farm is successful there are plans for expansion.

The summer vegetables are to be canned for use in the dining hall next fall. Mrs. McMurray hopes there will be "lots of nice tomatoes and beans" when school opens in September. "Really good beans", she added with a smile.

The Truck Farm came about in an interesting way last fall when Mr. J. B. Burrows, a friend of the college, was visiting here. He voiced hearty approval of the College Maid Shop but inquired what similar arrangement was made for the boys. Later when he went to lunch in Pearsons he was prompted to ask where the vegetables came from. The two questions "clicked", and as a result Mr. Burrows advanced five hundred dollars for the initial expense of starting the College Gardens.

They are fast becoming a realization and are expected soon to be self-supporting.

'THE TREND OF MODERN DRAMA' DISCUSSED AT FACULTY CLUB

form of literature together with popular interest in psychology."

Outstanding metaphysical plays are "Berkely Square" by Balderston, "Hotel Universe" by Phillip Barry, and "Death Takes a Holiday", translated from the Italian by Walt Ferris.

"Green Pstures", as an example of folklore, was represented as being the best known play of that type and "conceded by many critics to be the most notable piece of drama which the theatre has been given in many years."

As sociological plays showing "thoughtful studies of our methods of prison conduct and corrective punishment," Mrs. West selected "Justice", by John Galsworthy, "Criminal Code", by Flavin, and "The Last Mile", by Wexley. She calls them "portraits of disturbed citizens impressed by the inadequacies and injustices of their country's laws."

As characteristic of the revival of old plays, reference was made to Norman Bel Geddes' presentation of "Hamlet" on a modern stage. The paper contained constructive and destructive criticism taken from recent critics of the modernized version of the drama.

At the end of this study of the drama there were appended these words: "To the true artist, common life is a marvel. True art is always discovering the marvel in all that does not seem to be marvelous at all, because art is not imitation but vision."

From the bells, bells, bells, bells,
Bells, bells, bells,
From the singling and the tinging of the bells.

—And so was the new era of bell-ringing ushered into Pearsons Hall. Alarm clocks, knives, forks, plates, glasses, all joined in the celebration of the recent change which came into effect in the dining hall. a change which has come after a happy absence of some four years. It won't be long now until there will be a bell ringing three times a day at which time we shall be allowed to, or made to, brush our teeth. We're not only ruled to death. . . . we're belled to death. . . . what this college needs is not bells, but Belles.

There is the little tale circulating about the campus concerning the Somers-Parr combination. Somers, being a pretty hot guy, you know, is always ready to please the little queen of hearts. All of his faculties accordingly work together for the Parr value. You can imagine Larry's feeling, if you've ever gone with a Mississippi woman, when she looked up (or down) into Larry's eyes, with those great big black ones of hers and uttered the astoundable fact that "she had never seen a snow". Larry's first impulse was to try the latest psychology on the weather man, but it failed to work. He then tried to think of some way to make it snow. . . .but that was to no avail.

About that time a fellow from Meridian casually remarked in Larry's presence that in Meridian there had been three large snows last winter. Of course, that nicked the polish of Dot's perfect finish. We don't know whether we call this method "line-feeding"" or not, but if it is, the line has several hooks on it, and it seems that Larry got rather definitely hooked.

We're real low on news. . . . or should we say "dirt". Dr. Hunter hasn't had his car stolen lately, Dr. McMurray hasn't beaten his wife up for several weeks, it's been too cold for Miss Heron to be out scouting for any of the major league clubs, and Julia Terry and Charlie Beale have both threatened the death of the Observationist if anything appears about the telephone calls of Julia, or the mysterious tongue twisters of little Chuck. They'd probably rather tell about them in personal interviews.

—o—

When we're low on news we think back of the time we were in college and were associating with those of the present administration while they were in their youth. Dr. Orr had one weakness that he has got over, it was rather imperative that he should, we think, for he had a specialty of moonshining. It is said that it was the courageous Dr. Orr,

REGISTRATION FOR NEXT TERM CLASSES HELD DURING MAY

System Expected To Decrease Confusion In First Week Of Term

According to an announcement made in chapel, registration for next term classes will be made sometime during the first or second week in May. This change is to expedite matters and to lessen complications of registration that are always present at the fall registration. More attention can thus be paid to incoming freshmen next September and the necessity of making changes in schedule after formal registration will be avoided to a greater extent than now is possible.

Freshmen will also indicate their choice of major and minor subjects at this time in May so that their future schedules may be temporarily planned, and that less chances for complications may arise in the junior and senior years.

More detailed announcements in these changes will be made at a later date.

WORK ON COLLEGE PLAYERS DRAMA IS PROGRESSING

Acquiring Finish Typical Of Productions Of This Group

Rehearsals for "The Melting Pot" which will be presented Monday evening, March 28, by the College Players, are gradually acquiring the finish that is indicative of productions undertaken by this organization.

"The Melting Pot" is the second play this year presented by the College Players, and the choice of the cast promises a most entertaining and worthwhile piece of work. Miss Holland is directing the play in which Wesley Culver and Betty Wilbar have the leading roles in the characters of David Quixano, a young Russian Jew, who has great musical talent, and Vera Rebedal. a Russian woman devoting her time to social work in New York.

The difficulty of reconcilation between the oppressed Jews and the domineering Russians, the rather fateful love affair between David and Vera, the working out of David's musical masterpiece, the comedy of the German orchestra conductor as characterized by Professor Lagerstedt, and the final conquering of love over the former hatred of Jew for Russian, combine to make an attractive and convincing play.

"The Melting Pot" was written by Izrael Zangwill and the present version is somewhat of a revision for the drama first produced in 1908. The conditions presented in the play are analagous to many of the present day complications in New York and in other large cities of comopolitan nature.

Other College Players who have roles in the production are Marjorie Jones, Michael Testa, Reno Smith, and Roberta Robison. Lucy Ann Vorhees is stage manager. The usual price of thirty-five cents will be charged.

POPULAR FACULTY MEMBER HAS 72ND BIRTHDAY TUESDAY

'Daddy Knapp', Loved Professor of Mathematics, Honored At Dinner

LOVER OF BIRDS

Celebrates Occasion Quietly By Meeting All His Classes

Professor George Allan Knapp celebrated his seventy-second birthday last week, on March 15th. There was more of duty, and less of celebration, however, for Dr. Knapp, as he met his classes in the usual manner. The real celebration took ploce today at noon in the form of a "feed" held at Reagan's bakery. The meal was put on by his assistants in the Book Room and the Post Office.

Dr. Knapp has been a very popular professor at Maryville College since he came here from Hamilton College in 1914. He is recognized as being one of the greatest mathematicians of this time, and he is revered in his personal relationships with a host of friends that he has gained in Maryville. Upon coming to Maryville, he was made head of the department of mathematics, and he has been with the college in that capacity since that time. After coming here, he was awarded the honorary degree of Doctor of Literature by the college. He was sought for by a number of larger colleges when he decided to come to Maryville, a decision which has meant a great deal to the prestige of this school.

During Docotor Knapp's stay in Maryville he has made a great number of lasting friendships. He has acquired the nickname "Daddy" for his generous fellowship, and his kindness with the students. Dr. Wilson and Dr. Kapp have been very close friends in their relationships in connection with the college.

MANY STUDENTS TO HEAR LECTURES OF FAMOUS SCIENTISTS

Two Noted Men Will Address Science Group of U. T. Coming Week

Plans are being made whereby many students will be enabled to attend the lectures offered by two nationally known scientists in Knoxville during the coming week. The first of these lectures will be held Tuesday evening, March 22, and the second, Saturday evening, March 26, in Chemistry Building at the University of Tennessee.

Dr. L. V. Redman, president of the American Chemical Society, will speak on Tuesday evening at eight o'clock on the subject, "Economic Value of Research." Dr. Redman, besides his connection with the chemical society, is president of Redmanol Products Corp., manufacturers of rubber products. The greater part of Dr. Redman's work has been in the synthesizing of the plastics and his lecture will describe some of the advances of this branch of chemistry made by research.

Saturday evening at eight o'clock Dr. H. C. Sherman, Mitchell, Professor of Chemistry at Columbia University, will discuss the "Recent Advances in the Chemistry of Food Nutrition." It is agreed by the great scientists of the country that Dr. Sherman is probably the foremost authority on the chemistry of food nutrition and any statements he may make will carry the weight of full and accepted authority.

These two authorities appear under the auspices of the East Tennessee Division of the American Chemical Society.

Wesley Y. Culver Winner Of T. T. Alexander Prize Given Through Bible Department

Defeats Frank R. Neff, Jr., In Final Contest Friday Morning

SEVEN ENTERED

'The Resurrection' Subject Of Interesting, Well-Written Oration

March 18—At the annual T. T. Alexander Oratorical Contest held in chapel this morning, Wesley Youngs Culver of the Class of 1933 was announced the winner of the prize of one hundred dollars in gold which he will receive at the anual presentation of college awards during graduation week. His subject was "The Resurrection". Frank R. Neff of the Class of 1933 was the other contestant, his subject being "Salvation Through Faith."

Mr Culver developed his subject in three ways, considering the Resurrection as to its proo., its nature, and its meaning. The proof of the Resurrection can be seen in the life of Jesus, in the gospel records of the risen Christ, through the changes wrought in the disciples, and in the fact that the enemies of Christ did not produce the body after its burial. The discussion of the nature of the Resurrection centered about the fact that the body raised was not the same as the one buried, especial emphasis being placed on the material and the spiritual aspects of the Resurrection.

In his third point, the meaning of the Resurrection, Mr. Culver illustrated his discussion by showing that the risen Christ is the source of salvation, that He is the son of God, that He is instrumental in effecting justification, and that the denial of the Resurrection would necessitate another religion. He introduced the main discussion with a direct Biblical presentation and closed the oration with a few verses from Paul. Mr. Culver's manner of presentation was most pleasing and forceful.

Mr. Neff spoke on the subject "Salvation Through Faith", presenting the need of justification necessary for the realization of faith, and salvation through faith through the redemption wrought by Christ on Calvary. Man cannot have self-trust alone, and material justification in itself is not sufficient for salvation. Faith is an element in realizing salvation. In the redemption wrought on Calvary, Christ atoned for the sins of man. He became righteousness, He made us partakers of the divine nature ourselves, and He made faith the only method of salvation. The living faith is seen by God in our hearts, and is seen by men in our works. It is man's responsibility to show himself as a witness to the Redemption. Both orations were well-managed and articulated.

The judges were Rev. Z. B. Randall of the Southern Methodist Church; Rev. E. W. Hall, formerly of Maryville College; and Mr. Harry H. Gauding of Maryville High School.

GIRLS GYM CLASSES PROVIDED WITH NEW LOCKER FACILITIES

Swimming Pool Building To Be Used By Women As Dressing Room

An important addition in the facilities for women's gym classes will be made early next week when the dressing room and showers in the swimming pool building are opened for their use. For sometime a movement has been underway to provide this convenience for the girls and a number of plans have been suggested. This plan was judged to be the best of all suggested solutions and it was decided to put it into effect immediately.

There are twelve showers in the dressing rooms of the swimming pool which were not being used because of the dangerous condition of the main part of the building. The rooks containing the showers, however, were judged to be perfectly safe and will be used as a temporary solution to the problem of providing a dressing room for girls.

Girls have been caused considerable discomfort in the past by the lack of such equipment and doubtless will welcome the innovation. They are required to take gym, and many of them have had to wear uncomfortable gym clothes to class because the dormitories are too far from the gymnasium to permit changing between classes.

The hallway leading from the main part of the swimming pool to Bartlett Hall will be equipped with lockers and used as a dressing room. The showers are in a room adjoining this hallway. A door will be cut in the side of the hall toward the Alumni Gym and a path made for the girls to pass back and forth. The doors leading into the main part of the swimming pool will be locked so that no one can go into the dangerous part of the building.

M. C. LOAN PLAN ADOPTED BY CLUB

Miss Clemmie Henry, student-help secretary of Maryville College, was given an opportunity two weeks ago to aid in the reorganization of the student loan activities of the New Century Club of Philadelphia, Pa.

Miss Henry was asked to make the trip north in order that she might give the loan administrators of the Century Club a chance to understand more fully the manner in which Maryville College gives aid to its students.

Changes in loans made by the Philadelphia Club will be based upon the Maryville system which, they believe, has proved quite successful.

During her trip Miss Henry had the opportunity of meeting a group of thirty or forty Maryville College alumni, some of whom are attending Princeton Theological Seminary.

Senior Party To Be 'Depressionistic' In Theme: Final Open Event Current Season

The date of the senior open party has been changed from Tuesday night, March 22, to Thursday night, March 24. According to the program chairman, Georga Burk, the theme of the party will be "Depressionistic" and the numbers of the program will be carried out in true depression manner.

Among those who will perform are Dan Hicks and Carrie Lou Tweed in a rag doll dance, Byar and Kipp in a depression stunt, a chorus of "down and outers" and other song and dance numbers.

Thaw Hall will be the scene of the party where seniors and their invited friends will enjoy the last get together of the Class of '32.

Debaters Split Honors With Visiting Teams During Past Week- Take One, Lose One

Monday night, March 14. Robert Tripp and Andrew Newcomer upheld the debating honor of Maryville at home by winning a debate from Teachers College representatives, William Cox and Robert Hickey, while Robert Stevenson and Benjamin Groves debated at Teachers College at Johnson City. Prof. Kiger presided and Prof. Myers of the Economics Department of the University of Tennessee, acted as critic judge.

Thursday afternoon a single, non decision debate was held at Maryville with Davidson College of Davidson, North Carolina, with William Rule and J. H. McKinnon as visitors and Robert Steveneon and Benjamin Groves as home team.

The second debate for women was held Friday night with Erecelle Hunter and Edith McDuffie. Maryville team, and Miss Shirley and Miss Helsenbeck representing Milligan College. Miss Gamble presided and the critic judge, Prof. Tresidder of University of Tennessee decided in favor of Milligan College.

March 22nd. a Maryville team composed of Charles Beale and Fred Kirchner will meet Akron University of Akron, Ohio, in a radio debate from WNOX at 3:45. March 23 a double-header debate will be held with Berea College. The women will debate in the afternoon and the men in the evening.

March 24, Maryville women debate Asheville Normal School of Asheville, North Carolina.

LIFE WORK ADVISER INTERVIEWS GIRLS

Presbyterian Board Member Led Devotions Friday

For three days of the past week Miss Katherine Johnston, associate director of the Department of Life Work of the Presbyterian Church Board of Christian Education, has been talking with the girls on the campus as to life work with regard to general vocational guidance.

Miss Johnston has her regular work in New York and also travels to different college campuses speaking to the girls who are interested in discussing problems pertinent to life work. She led the devotions in the chapel service Friday morning, and left Friday afternoon to continue her work in other parts of Tennessee.

SENIOR INVITATIONS MAY BE ORDERED NOW

Tooled Covers Show Anderson Tower In Relief

The seniors have chosen invitations to their commencement exercises which are somewhat different from those of last year. The covers, which are of black leather, are designed with a reproduction of the tower on Anderson Hall, tooled in leather on a silver background. The contents are similar to those of previous years, with the exception that a page has been inserted containing a list of the graduates in the special departments. There is a less expensive copy of the invitations which is published with card board covers.

Maryville Students Leave Wednesdaay For P.K.D. Convention At Tulsa, Okla.

Professor Queener and the Maryville College debate teams will leave on Wednesday, March 23, for a two weeks trip to Tulsa, Oklahoma. Mildred MacKenzie and Elizabeth Duncan compose the women's team and the men's team is made up of Robert Stevenson and Benjamin Groves. The debaters will travel in Professor Queener's car and plan to reach Tulsa in about four days, debating each evening at various colleges along the route.

The trip takes the group through six states, beginning in Kentucky, touching in turn Illinois, Missouri, Oklahoma, and on the return trip Arkansas.

The Pi Kappa Delta Convention is a national meeting and includes all the chapters in the United States approximately 130. Tulsa belongs to the debaters during their stay there. Hotels are giving reduced rates and railroads are offering round trip tickets for one and a half fares. More than one hundred and twenty contest rooms are scattered throughout the city for the use of the schools.

Our debaters also go prepared oratorically and extemporaneously. Mildred MacKenzie's oration is entitled "The Instruction of Adversity", and Robert Stevenson's is "The Universal Crime."

The extemporaneous speech contest for women is on the subject "Modern Advertising". The man's subject in this contest will be "Post Political Campaigns."

Why does Mr. Lagerstedt carry a crooked-handled umbrella all the time? Come to the Chapel on March 28, and find out.

WHERE IS THE FAULT?

A very unfortunate though entirely natural demonstration was witnessed in the dining hall Tuesday evening: unfortunate in that it should occur just at the beginning of Courtesy Week and that it should take exactly that quasi-malevolent mode of expression and entirely natural in that it was the result of a series of oppressive, childish and entirely unnecessary dining hall regulations.

Of course the question of whether these regulations are right or wrong may be debated but it is not likely that five hundred judgments, even though they are student judgments, should be wrong.

Naturally any person of even near adulthood resents being treated as though he were an irresponsible infant. True, most of the regulations are aimed at correcting very real and existing troubles, but may not the fundamental causes of these offending practices better be removed than to try to curb and redirect refractory tendencies? Perhaps the cause of it all lies in the fact that the student has never had the opportunity of "being and acting his age" and of developing a naturally and easily courteous deportment in the dining hall. It is just possible that he senses, on his first day in the dining hall, the fact that he is expected to toss bread whenever the opportunity arises and that if accidentally and unfortunately caught to be led abjectly to a table nearer the front where he can take his meals under the guiding and parental eye of the faculty. Perhaps student opinion, the one deterrent of the naturally refractory, has never had the opportunity of developing, through a sense of responsibility in each individual for decorous dining hall conduct, into a power for guiding and moulding our group conduct.

Whether in play, work, the class room, or in our social contacts a man attempts to do that which is expected of him. This leads one to believe that if some practical plan can be put into operation whereby each student is made to realize that he is expected to bring his culture to the dining hall, it is yet possible that gentlemen may be evolved from the unruly recalcitrants.

A VALUABLE ADDITION

A much needed addition to the facilities for women's gymnasium classes and other athletic events engaged in by women is being made.

To within the past four years neither men nor women had any of the conveniences almost essential to a satisfactory physical training program that might, with a serious mind, be called conveniences. Adequate showers and lockers worthy of the name were unknown to the Maryville athletes previous to 1929. Then the men received many new aids and the women were let to do the best they could with no facilities for preparing for classes after their exercise.

The placing of lockers in the swimming pool building and the opportunity to use the showers comes as a valuable contribution to the women of the school. Hereafter it will not be necessary for them to wear their more or less uncomfortable gym clothes throughout the day to classes for lack of opportunity to change. Mrs. Queener, director of women's athletics, is to be commended for her consideration of the women and for her perseverance in getting through this additional help for her classes.

OBSERVATIONS

who put moonshining on the respectable basis that it is on now. He's one of the originators of some of the artful tactics that are now employed. Not being moonshiners, but merely observers, we can't go into detail. A few years later he developed even more courage. . . he got married. But this sort of program was not that of our Dean and Head of the English Department, Dr. Hunter. His program was that of the student. Many nights while the fellows were out having a good time Dr. Hunter was buried in a book, maybe two or three, while his "date" was pacing the floor in Pearsons or Baldwin, wondering "why Eddie doesn't come." Along about 8:30 Mr. Hunter's son would have to lift his eyes from his book, then he'd see his girl's picture on the table, and suddenly he could picture his little woman as she stormed away "just waiting" his arrival. This, they say, is the occasion for Dr. Hunter's becoming a debater. He would debate whether it was best to leave now, and get the consequences when he had reached the dormitory, or wait until morning and meet his girl in public and face her after the new had worn off. Generally the debates were non-decision. . . .that is for Dr. Hunter . . .but the girl did the deciding. She decided to let Dr. Hunter study in peace henceforth.

Several people mentioned something about the good appearance of the first page of the Echo last week. We can't help agreeing with them, and really we felt pleased. It might have been worse, yea, verily, it might have been much worse. . . they might have put us on the sport page.

If you don't know who Professor Queener is, why he's the fellow who takes his debate team on trips so he can get something to eat. Nobody told us that, but when we hear that Queener was still eating biscuits after Tom Duncan, Charlie Beale, and Bob Stevenson, had finished with their dessert, we let our own hoss-sense be our guide. We're told that Mrs. Queener has fits of ecstasy when the Queeners drive north to New York because they at last enter "God's Country". On the way back to Tennessee, the history prof has great difficuly in keeping from wrecking the Chevrolet in his elation over the fact that he's back in "God's Country." They're probably both right, but we can't help wishing that they'd take a trip West sometime and learn what God's country ought to be like.

Two members of the senior class have had a distinct honor forced upon them by having thier places in the dining room changed from their regular table to the junior faculty table. It was an occasion of great sadness that their contemporaries, not to mention their friends, saw them leave, but these companions realize that to the victors belong the spoils, that excellence must be rewarded; and so with great condescension on their part the victims (whichever they may be) have advanced. Perhaps this progress is just another indication of privileges belonging to seniors of honor rank, and most of us of the common herd consider it a rank privilege, indeed.

Miss Jeanette Thompson, of Oklahoma A. and M., has the honor of being the first R. O. T. C. girl colonel to turn her uniform because she thinks that she was being used to glorify war.

S COLLEGIATE S

In our continual punishment of our news-nose, we have arrived at various and sundry strange conclusions—some based on our rather flexible philosophy, others on plain facts. One of these gems of mental gesticulation, which we wish to pass on to our fellow-loafers is that, no matter what strange things one woman does, a group of women can completely squash their most hearty efforts at wierdness. If you don't believe, bear with me yet a while. .

Co-eds at Stephens College were recently asked to express their relative opinions as to choice of pastime. The first peculiar circumstances resulting was that the women meekly complied; the second, that 69 different avocations were forthcoming, in which hobbies ranging from astronomy to bicycling were championed; the third, that moonshining, sometimes and some places known as "dates", ran sixty-ninth, to finish as the last also-ran. Whuttacollege!

The Junior-Senior banquet, dropped from the schedule at Clemson College because of embarrassing economic conditions in the country at large as well as in the surrounding vicinity, has been restored after reconsideration. 'S a good idea. All college students should have at least one good feed a year under the auspices of the Alma Mater.

Down at Tuscaloosa, the home town of the University of Alabama, the studes (and steweds) have started a local chapter of a very local fraternity. It is composed of collegians who have failed to make the grade necessary for eligibility to a Greek letter frat. Needless to say, its membership is very exclusive, even if the name is somewhat unusual. It is known as Flunk Dammit Flunk. Perhaps clubs of this type would be a good substitute for literary societies.

KEYHOLE KOMMENT

At last the time has come in our more or less ordered existence when we achieve yet another of our cherished ambitions—that of announcing to whomever it may concern, and to a few whom it does not concern that we are about to sing a swan-song. Of course much more pleasure would be afforded us if we could actually untangle our vocal chords to the extent of really mimicking this most beautiful of feathered fowl; indeed, we would be somewhat more elated if the so-called swan-song were our own. As it is, we are given deepest of joys by the opportunity, even though it must be not our glorification, but that of the class of '32. With this issue we come to the end of our series of senior slander and allow the graduating ones to rest in peace for the remainder of the year.

It is with regret that we cease our search for facts and near facts concerning the members of our highest classmates, for this search has brought us much interesting information. For instance, we find that next fall brings Coach Honaker the worries of the new rules combined with the absence of eight senior lettermen. Basketball will be minus the services of two seniors, wrestling four, baseball four, and track two.

Besides the departure of athletes, Maryville loses outstanding members of other fields. The dramatic roster will suffer a decrease; the glee clubs, the Student Council, and many other groups will turn up next fall with great apertures in their ranks, because of departed seniors. In short, their going leaves places difficult indeed to be filled.

Thus we lay aside the deeds of another senior class— everyone breathes easier—including the seniors and Ye Humble Scribe.

All no work and no play makes Jack—and plenty of it.—Carolina Gamecock.

MARGINAL NOTES

JUNIUS ALLISON

FIRST PERSON SINGULAR,
By W. Somerset Maugham
New York: Doubleday Doran $2.50

Don't think that it was egotism that caused us to read First Person Singular this week. The book has an attractive binding—and, too, do you remember reading "Twelfth Night" and finding "Dost thou, because thou art virturous, think there shall be no more cakes and ale"? Well, this is a long way around to say that Maugham's Cakes and Ale paved the way for our reading these six short stories told in first person. However, they are not new tales—Some of them have been written several years.

The titles of the stories go from "Virtue" to "Impulse", but never do we find this man Maugham pointing the way of convention unless he is smiling. His first story is a satire on blind virtue. The section called "The Human Element" is particularly well written. You will think about Humphrey Carruthers and Betty after the book is closed.

Maugham has a queer way of bringing a point almost to the reader; then in this careful manner, he rounds-up a lot of details. Suddenly with several short, terse sentences, he pounces upon the point and the story is over.

All of Maugham's characters are full and convincing. In First Person Singular, one meets people—individuals, not a Mr. Jones and a friend John. The author does not take folk out of life as they are, but he uses them as a foundation to which he attaches his own fancies. He says, "Nothing is so unsafe as to put into a novel a person drawn line by line from life." Somerset Maugham knows people, but he also knows what makes a good story.

ALUMNUS FINISHES CHOIR SCHOOL WORK

In a recent letter received by Mrs. McMurray from Dr. John Finley Williamson of the Westminster Choir School, mention was made of the coming graduation of Walter Buchanan, a Maryville alumnus, who has completed his choir work at the Choir school.

Mr. Williamson says, "Mr. Buchanan graduates this year and is doing very fine work. We are pleased with him."

Mr. Buchanan is one of several Maryville alumni who are in attendance at the Choir school.

THE LITTLE CHURCH

"Christ our Passover is sacrificed for us: therefore let us keep the feast; not with the old leaven of malice and wickedness; but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth."—1 Cor. 5:7.

Lent is an old and honored fast among the Christian churches, some of them claiming their observance of a short fast during Holy Week as early as the third century. After the Reformation the laws for the keeping of Lent lost some of their medieval rigor, but the period preceding Easter is still set apart in many religious bodies as a time for sacrifice and self-denial.

It is peculiarly fitting that such a period of dedication be observed at this season. The root word for "Lent" originally meant "spring", the time of a beginning of new life in nature. Although the meaning of Lent has been restricted to religion, the original idea is a worthy ideal for the spiritual life—a time for consecration and re-consecration. Into the midst of an unhappy, chaotic world comes spring, bringing joy and inspiration. With it comes, in lovely symbolism and appropriateness, the Resurrection of Christ, imparting to all men the peace of His love and the aggressiveness of His young manhood.

Now is a time for the casting off of old habits and the commencement of a new spiritual growth. In contemplation of the supreme Sacrifice we catch a vision of the abundant life of unselfish service which Jesus taught His disciples to believe is the most worthy and most satisfying life. Now, if ever, comes naturally the exquisite experience of being in tune with the great Father-heart of God and His eager longing to give the best to Hiss children. Now is the time for lifting up real joy our own hearts for His blessing.

"The day of Resurrection! Earth tell it out abroad:
The Passover of gladness, the Passover of God.
From death to life eternal, from this world to the sky,
Our Christ hath brought us over with hymns of victory."

East Tennessee Teachers Will Oppose Highlanders In Opening Track Tussle Of 1932 Schedule

Coach Thrower Schedules Five Meets For Team And More May Be Added

SEVERAL NEWCOMERS

Several Men Turn In Good Times In Dashes; Old Men Back For All Places

In spite of bad weather, Coach Bob Thrower has been whipping his boys into shape for the coming track season. Up until last Tuesday, the cinder path aspirants have had to work out in the gymnasium, but for the last few days, they have been working out on the field. Not much has been done on the field events, but Coach Thrower is in hopes of getting suitable weather to start tsoon.

With sixteen lettermen back this season, Maryville has an especially bright outlook in track. There are lettermen back in every event, but there is need for more field men. Madison Byar and Smiley Richardson are expected to do great things this year in the dashes, but will have to work for their places. Capt. Dip Felknor and Smiley Richardson should make many points for the team in the hurdles before the season is very far gone. Harry Wood and Otis Paul are turning in good time the 440. Jim Hitch will run the half mile again this year and it is expected that he will come through in great shape. With Speedy Mann back, "Spec" Moore will have to put out his best to win his berth. Speedy, as you know holds two records here, and is out to lower them, while "Spec" Moore will no doubt do his best to take them from him.

Pairings Are Made For Spring Tourney

Meet Will Start As Soon As Courts Are In Shape

The spring tennis tournament has been announced and will get under way immediately. Fourteen racqueteers are entered in the tournament and a schedule of play has been made up. The following persons will meet in the preliminaries: Cooper and Dickens, Otto and Clopton, Knisely and Hurst, Landrum and McQueen, Gillingham and Bradbury, and Lampe and Warman. Two seeded players, Fischbach and Phay, each drew a bye. As soon as the courts are in condition and the weather is suitable, the preliminary matches will be played.

The results of the tournament will largely determine who will make the tennis squad. The winner of the tournament automatically becomes the first man on the team. The other high men in the tournament play each other to determine their relative ability. In this way, eight men are selected for the squad. The five best men are members of the team. Manager Phay is busy now arranging the schedule for the coming season. Several strong teams have been booked already and final arrangements are being made with some of the others. It is probable that the Highlanders will take a trip into Georgia.

In the past the team has been hindered because the tennis courts were in poor condition. This year, however, Mr. Brown, Mr. Black, and Dr. Lloyd are going to see to it that this difficulty is removed. Dr. Lloyd is himself an ardent tennis player and patron of the sport. Thus with good courts, good tennis material, and a good coach Maryville should be well represented.

Fischbach and Phay are favored to be the tournament finalists. The team will have been selected by the first of April and practice will commence under the able direction of Coach Smith.

Tournament players will miss Wilson and C. B. Stanberry, two good players who were entered in the fall tournament. Stanberry, a freshman, finished in first place last fall and his tennis ability would have done much to strengthen the team.

SPORT SLANTS

By BOB RULE

Something should be done about this guy Ray Russell. As you all remember, he is the guy that strolled out on the track one day last year and threw the javelin to a new college record the first time he ever had his hands on it, and he is also the hombre that played quite a bit of football for Mr. Thrower as an understudy to the great Blundon Ferguson. He was captain of the scrub basketball team and occupied a prominent place on the baseball bench.

Now here's what HAS happened: This same Russell has acquired the notion from some source or other that he is a pretty darn good athlete. But here's what IS happening: during baseall practice he is spending all of his time telling the rest of the boys how high his batting average is going to be instead of taking his share of the conditioning work and the immediate danger is that he won't be in shape when the first game of the season rolls around. He will take a bat, face an imaginary pitcher, wait an imaginary pitch and then clout a very much imaginary home run.

However, Rusell is about as serious in his antics as is this article and we should see and hear plenty of him before this 21 game bgseball schedule is completed.

Maryville has another Stone coming on. He is Cecil Stone from Vestal, of which Knoxville is a suburb, and he seems destined to make a name for himself on the baseball field. The last Stone that played baseball for Maryville College will long be remembered. He is at present the most consistent member of the Detroit baseball club in the American League and some day will rank among baseball's immortals.

This other Stone is of no relation to the former Maryville star but he has the makings of a fine baseball performer. He is a well built youngster, weighing around 180 pounds, and is exceptionally fast on the bases. He is a good hitter, a classy fielder and seems to know quite a bit of baseball. Here's hoping he makes good in a big way.

We can register no kick about this year's baseball schedule, which was recently released by Coach Honaker. The slate calls for 21 games, among which are four with Vanderilt. Vandy will come here for the first two games and then the Maryville boys will go to Nashville for a pair of return engagements. There are also several games arranged with some of Maryville College's biggest rivals.

Coach Honaker released a 21 game baseball schedule for the Highlanders and the slate is one of the most attractive ever arranged for a Maryville team. Two games will be played here with Vanderbilt and many other strong teams will show on the home lot.

Veteran Team Will Take Field For Maryville But Chances To Defeat Smokies Are Very Slim

Freshman Girls Show Class In Baseball

Sophs. and Jr.-Sr. Teams Bow Before Fast Stepping Girls Of Insignificant Rank

The baseball tournament of three games was one of the most interesting of the year. Although some of the players were sick, their places were filled and all three games showed good coaching and playing.

Track will be the next sport for girls out for the point system, and after that Mrs. Queener will give instruction in archery to any girls who are interested.

The first baseball games were played on Monday, March 14th. The freshmen ran up a score of 22 to the 11 points srored by the juniors and Seniors. The line-up for the game was as follows:

Juniors-Seniors	Freshmen
Ruth McCampbell captain	Jane Paynter captain
Gamble	Davis
Ross	Conover
Kitts	Gillingham
Johnson	Mynatt
Purviance	Davenport
Swacick	Malphus
McCray	Sauders

Subs: Hyde, Small

The second game between the sophomores and freshmen was played on Wednesday, March 16th. The score was close at the end of each inning, and the game ended with the freshmen having a one point lead. The score was 13 to 12.

The line-up:

Sophs.	Freshmen
Blanche Wilson (act. captain)	Jane Paynter (captain)
Yennie	Davis
D. Woodward	Hatfield
Dick	Conover
Woods	Gillingham
Schoeller	Mynatt
J. Woodard	Small
Winn	Malphus
Carter	Dunlap
Trotter	Souders

Knoxville Hurlers To Work On Mound For Scots In Opening Game

FASTEST OPPOSITION

Smokies Offer Fastest Club Ever Played By A Maryville Team

Maryville College Highlanders open the 1932 baseball season next Saturday afternoon when they take on the Knoxville Smokies Southern League Club at Smithson Stadium. It will be the first game of the year for both teams and the Maryville boys hope to make a creditable showing against the Knoxvillians.

Coach Honaker will put a veteran aggregation on the field against the Knoxbille Club but he can hardly hope to come out ahead due to the fact that the opposition will be the fasest ever encountered by a Maryville baseball team. Maryville teams have always played the Knoxville team while it was a member of the South Atlantic League but now that they have stepped into faster company, they are considerably out the Maryville team's class.

Coach Honaker will have several old men in the lineup when his team takes the field next week. He will have the veteran Ralph Teffeteller behind the bat; Easy White on first base; Tom West at short; Joe Woodard on third, and Lincoln Hurst in the outfield. These men are practically assured of their places and several of last year's reserves are almost certain to land berths.

Jack Nee should be stationed on second and Ray Russell should patrol one of the outer gardens. Cecil Stone, a freshman with quite a reputation in Amateur circles, is making a bid for the other outfield position and it will be no great surprise if the Knoxville boy is given a chance to show off before the home folks next Saturday.

The only worry at present is the noticable shortage of pitchers. Johnny Kiser should develop into a varsity moundsman after spending last summer hurling for the ole home town team at Friendsville but he probably won't be called upon to face the hard hitting Knoxville team next Saturday. The Knoxville Club has consented to lend Coach Honaker three pitchers for the game and so the Maryville mentor will have little to worry about in this department.

New Type of College For Non-Professional Men Advocated By Oberlin President

Believing that the present type of college does not fit the needs o. non-professional men and women, President Wilkins of Oberlin College recommended a new type of college to the Association of American Colleges at the annual meeting in Cincinnati.

President Wilkins believes that college should train such people for five fields of social living—home life, the field of earning, citizenship, leisure, and the field of philosophy and religion. "Training for successful living in these five fields", said President Wilkins, involves training in health, in what may be called the general mental tools (English, logic, etc.), instruction and some type of experience in each of the five fields, and the encouragement of social-mindedness. A college course carefully designed for this purpose could be completed in three years."

Professor Wilkins further proposed that the existing colleges, which do not, in the four-year courses now offered, fill the needs of either professional or non-professional students, be changed in two ways. In the first place, the first two years should be devoted to much the same type of work as the proposed General College in preparation for community living. The other change would be to make the remainder of the college course definitely pre-professional, probably to the extent of the development of a fifth year of work continuing the junior and senior years' work and leading to the master's degree. This development, thinks Dr. Wilkins, would tend to increase the number of students who would remain to round out their professional training in a fifth year.

GLEE CLUB TRIO TO BROADCAST FROM WNOX

On Monday evening, March 21st, at 7 o'clock, the trio of the Women's Glee Club will present a radio program over station WNOX. Ann Smartt, Norma Spilatore, and Naomi Willingham, have been heard over the radio at the Glee Club presentations, but this will be their initial broadcast as a trio.

The program will consist of the following numbers:

Flower of Dreams—Clokey
A Bird Land Symphony—Kieserling
Sweet Miss Mary—Neidlinger
Sarita (Spanish Serenade)—Burton

ILLUSTRATED TALK AT PRE-MED CLUB

Last Thursday evening the Pre-Medical Club was entertained by Dr. Dean and Mrs. Dean, who are at the head of the School of Dentistry and Research at the University of Tennessee in Memphis. The illustrated lecture presented moving pictures and slides which showed views of the buildings and modern equipment which this branch of the University now possesses.

The local club was very fortunate in securing Dr. Dean and his wife, who were in Knoxville demonstrating some of their research work.

TYPICAL LETTERS—TERRY

Freshman

March 19, 1929.

Dear Mama and Papa:

It's March and I hope it will soon be June. I can't wait to get home and see you all and Lollie. Is Lollie all right? I haven't heard from her for a week, but I guess she heard about Mamie. I happened to mention Mamie in my last letter. Lollie is always jealous of me but I guess she'll get over it.

I am going out for track and I have to practice every afternoon. It's hard work but the coach says if I stick it out I might hold the string for the relay race when I'm a senior. He jokes a lot, and I laughed when he said it, but then I wished I hadn't. I'll send you my picture in my roommate's track suit, but don't tell anybody it isn't mine.

I have to study trig. You oughta be glad you aren't taking it.

Your loving son,
Hiram A. Jones.

Sophomore

March 19, 1930.

Hello, hello, hello, most esteemed progenitors:

Your prodigy welcomes the spring of the year, for in that delectable season a young man's fancy lightly turns to what a young woman has been thinking about all year.

Casting no aspersions on the assemblage of females at this most noteworthy and traditional institution I wish to say that it has been with no great difficulty that I have deemed it my duty to honor Betty with my moonshining capabilities. Mamie's a back number. Disillusioned Lollie ascribes an occasional epistle, but I procrastinate in my R. S. V. P.'s, and then once in a while decide to give her a break.

I'm tracking this year and am a third stringer. Coach can't see my potentialities and possibilities. Love isn't the only phenomenon that is blind, and the Coach has been married for ten years.

Pardon me while I prepare an address for my systematic discourse class. I shall enlighten my classmates on the stupendous subject, "Doe a House Burn Up or Down?"

Your inofficious offspring,
H. A. Jones, Esquire.

Junior

March, [illegible]

Dear Mother and Dad:

Spring's here again and I am glad.
You oughta be down here. It's not half bad.

I've been writing poetry lately and Helen thinks it's pretty good stuff. I do too, but I'm not sure about the English prof. I did not let him read the most personal poems. He wouldn't understand. Helen's a wonderful girl and I think what a fool I've been to believe that I was in love with Mamie and Betty. Lollie writes now and then, and I write her, but most of my time is taken up with my poetic tendencies. I think I'll change my major to English—if I were sure about the prof.

Coach is finally realizing I'm not so bad and is trying me out for sub on the relay team. You can't keep a good man down.

Gotta psych test tomorrow and I guess I'd better study about reflexes and emotions. It's stuff you've known about all your life with a lot of technical names tacked on.

Love,
Hiram.

Senior

March 19, 1932.

Dear Folks:

Spring makes me realize how close Commencement is, but I'm too busy to think much about it now.

How is Lollie? She's not such a bad sport after all. By the way, Helen is engaged to a boy in her home town—not that I care, though.

I've made the track team and Coach is giving us tough workouts every day.

I need $3 for invitations and $5 for class dues so that I can go to the junior-senior banquet. Anything you can do in aiding me in this desperate situation will be greatly appreciated.

Ethics tomorrow, so I'll have to put out some studying.

Things looked very busy at the offices of Solomon and Cohen. For three days the partners had been poring over the books and feverishly adding up columns of figures. Then, at the end of it all, a wail of despair escaped the lips of Mr. Solomon:

"Ach, Cohen", he cried, "vot a waste. Ve have given the bookkeeper a week's holiday and his books are all right, after all."

Business Girl Is Best Mate

R. G. Bell Says Women With Business Experience Make Better Wives Eventually

"Other things being equal, I must say a girl who has had experience in business could enter into the partnership of marriage somewhat better than one who has not had such experience", stated R. G. Bell, a member of the University Vocational Guidance committee and, incidentally, a married man.

Mr. Bell was the only one of three faculty members who were interviewed who would make a statement as to whether the business girl made th ebetter wife or not.

"Being a married man" said Professor Robert Sumwalt, "I prefer not to be quoted on so delicate a subject."

Professor Joseph Stokes refused to e interviewed for quite a different reason. "I have not had much experience with either a wife or wibes, so I do not feel qualified ti expound any opinions on the matter."

With enthusiasm, Mr. Bell continued his discourse. "Success in the marriage relationship depends upon the ability with which both parties can understand each other ann enter into a give-and-take relationship with a spirit of sportsmanship."

Mr. Bell thinks that a girl who has had business experience is better fitted for the marriage vows than one who has led the sheltered life. He also declares that this statement should be modified by an application of the old adage, "It takes the exception to make the rule."

With a Shabian smile, "On the other hand, a business career makes marriage come later in life and it is not so easy for mature people to change their mode of living, And besides, look at all the time they waste."

TRACK

Freshmen seem to be taking a great interest in track this year, and there are several who have drawn the coaches' attention already. Milling and Jim Shaw have promise of making Paul and Wood step to hold their prestige in the 440. Milling, besides being a good runner, should come through in the high jump. It is reported that he jumps well over 5 feet and, under Bob Thrower's tutelage, he should worry Bratschie and Felknor quite a little. Willocks, state miler champion last year in high school, is expected to give Spec and Speedy no end of worry. Bill Simms and Cleveland have been toying with the discus, and are expected to develop into good tossers before the season opens.

Coach Thrower has already secured five meets for his proteges, and is trying to arrange for two more. Our first meet is April 8 with the Teachers. The meets with U. T. and L. M. U. head the list in the minds of our boys. The meet with L. M. U. should be especailly good as the one point defeat of last year has left a decidedly nasty taste in the mouths of our veterans. The meet with U. T. should furnish plenty of thrills as it has always been one of the teams greatest ambitions to defeat the Vols.

POPULAR FACULTY MEMBER HAS 72ND BIRTHDAY TUESDAY

Dr. Kapp's hobby is birds, and one of his practices is to go into the woods with students to study the birds, and to learn their habits, and their identities. Many students have taken this opportunity of associating with "Daddy" Knapp and of getting closer acquainted with birds. Another of Dr. Knapp's specialties is astronomy which comprises, not only an interest for him, but an interesting course which is under his supervision.

As teacher, book room manager, and in numerous other respects he is much revered by his friends on the campus. Those who work with him, and those who work under him, have learned to appreciate his fellowship and his value as a friend. It is these closer friends, his students, and all other students on the campus, as well as a host of outsiders who are wishing for Dr. Knapp many more happy birthdays.

OBSERVATIONS

Scotty's Married
Paxton The Caveman
Mrs. Snodgrass
The Grabiel Men

When we speak of saving, we think of Frank Thornbill who gave himself a complete shave without a razor blade. Of course, it didn't matter, he had only fuzz as it was, and he didn't know the difference until his roommate reported the absence of the blade after trying to use the razor.

—o—

His roommate isn't Scottie Thompson, but we do know a good one on the little Scotchman. In a careless moment Scottie beame engaged. . . . He heard of a woman on a hunger strike. After the hunger strike the woman started eating heavy and became fat. Scottie, seeing the danger tried to break the engagement, but she is so fat he can't get the ring. . . he's going to have to marry her to save his ring.

—o—

She has her "assetie" value however. Everytime Scottie shaves he goes to see her instead of powdering himself. She's a heavy drinker. Scottie isn't. Everytime he drinks the bottle has to be tipped.

—o—

Our curiosity gets the best of us sometimes. For example, we were wondering the other day how it would seem to be a mouse and watch Bob Paxton play caveman.

—o—

We've been speaking of powder, and of saving money, which reminds us again that we must get stocked up in cosmetics. There's a ten percent tax due on such articles, and we, at Maryville, know—Oh, what a difference a few cents makes!

—o—

Someone asked us to comment on the food that has been served recently. We'll wait until next week. . someone was using the dictionary. . and that's not a joke. This makes us think of the bell that's rung at dinner. . . wonder if they still ring it. . . or if.

—o—

These moonshiners are having their share of trouble, says Edith Kitts. . . . some matron is always trying to take all the boy out of life.

—o—

Mrs. Snodgrass was trying to recall what it was the boys wore around their necks before moonshining was instituted.

—o—

Not wisecracking at our debaters, but at our opponents, naturally, we're ready to say that, after hearing all of the arguments this year, we're convinced that a number of them are sound. .. . merely sound.

—o—

Well, if it's darkest just before the dawn a number of us should be happy in the way of finances. . . And oh, boy, how we hope for a clear dawn. . . making it a clear way ahead.

—o—

Florence Grabiel is the little freshman (that word "little" just seems to fit there when we speak of the students who were so well represented last Friday) who came to school with a real motive. She signed up for both of the romance languages. . . she's ne of these women with a motto. . . "Every man for herself."

—o—

If you can't find it in the dictionary, the atlas, or the Encyclopedia Brittannica don't be discouraged. Ask Bob Toms.

—o—

Lots of girls on this campus look good enough to eat. . . and they do eat. (This is the discovery of a romeo who took his girl to the Passion Play this week).

—o—

One girl came here from the old home town after being fired from Woolworth's because she couldn't remember the prices. We won't mention her name.

—o—

There's a lot of talk about absent minded professors but we've not yet heard of the one who forgot to flunk anyone.

KNOXVILLE WOMEN HEAR LLOYD SPEAK ON 'PIONEER WOMAN'

Optimist Club of Knoxville Addressed On The Need of 'Poise' In World.

Dr. Ralph W. Lloyd, president of Maryville College, spoke Tuesday night at the all-nation banquet of the Knoxville Y. W. C. A. on the "Spirit of the Pioneer Woman."

"One of the outstanding facts about the progress of the human race is that of the contribution of the pioneer", said Dr. Lloyd.

"The development of new countries and the advance into new phases of professions is accompanied by the hardy spirit of the pioneer.

"Today, in our fairly well developed civilization, however, we must watch carefully or the changed conditions will prevent the development of the hardy spirit."

Dr. Lloyd then gave four qualities to be found in the spirit of the pioneer, which he calls the compensation for our present life. These are:

"First, vision— ability to see something beyond.

"Second, faith—confidence something can be done.

"Third, courage—ability to venture, to stand against hardships.

"Fourth, self-denial— denying oneself one thing in order to get others.

"Women have a certain idealism, centered around these qualities, which often leads them to strive for higher achievements. Man is not always activated in the same way."

In addressing the Optimist Club of Knoxville, Thursday night, Dr. Lloyd stressed the fact that one of the most pressing problems of today is to achieve poise and stability in the midst of the "unsettled conditions of the world".

"We must achieve poise in the face of new knowledge in the world, knowledge that in the last two decades has revealed the complexity of the universe; in the face of the turbulent social order in which we live, characterized by the upheavels in China, Italy, Germany, and our own country; in the face of our personal circumstances, so that we might not be swayed by the confusion around us.

"The way to ahieve this poise is to enlargen our horizons. One of the functions of religion is to help in this. Dogmatism, arrogance, and nervous prostration will thereby be avoided to a great extent."

"The first day out was perfectly lovely", said the young lady just back from abroad. "The water was as smooth as glass, and simply gorgeous. But the second day was rough and—er— decidedly disgorgeous."

MARYVILLE TEAMS WIN NOTHING AT P. K. D. CONVENTION

Women Reach Semi-Finals But Are Then Eliminated; Men Lose Earlier

Tulsa, Okla., April 2—Maryville College debate teams, Maryville, Tennessee, left here this morning for Clarksville, Mo., on their way home. The women's team, after reaching the semi-finals of the Pi Kappa Delta national convention wa eliminated earlier in the tournament.

No one of the Maryville entries in the oratorical or extempore speaking contests were able to take any awards.

Maryville College defeated Cumberland University, here, Friday night in a debate on resolved, "that Congress shall enact legislation providing for the centralized control of industry."

Robert Tripp and Arthur Lazell upheld the negative for Maryville, while Leo Lamberson and Garland Jennings debated affirmatively for Cumberland.

Prof. Argus Tresidder, debate coach at U. T., was critic judge. Prof. E. W. Davis, of Maryville was chairman.

Early telegrams from Verton M. Queener, Maryville's debate coach, have carried the information that out of fifty-eight entries in the women's debate contest, forty-four were eliminated with Maryville still among the list of contestants.

The men's team, according to reports received by Mrs. Verton M. Queener, was forced out of competition after the fifth round. However, there is no definite information concerning the progress of either the oratorical or extempore contestants for Maryville.

On their home trip, Maryville will meet the College of the Ozarks, Clarksville, Mo., Southwestern, of Memphis, and Cumberland University, Lebanon. The teams arrive in Maryville on Thursday.

It takes years to acquire wisdom, but a man can make a fool of himself between two ticks of the clock.

STRING ENSEMBLE PLAYED SATURDAY IN COLLEGE CHAPEL

Twilight Concert Program April 19 Will Include Many Numbers

The string ensemble, presented Saturday evening in Voorhees Chapel, was the first of two concerts to be presented by the Music Department. The Twilight concert will be presented the afternoon of April 19.

The string ensemble gave an "Hour of Ensemble Music". It was the first appearance of the ensemble as a separate program.

Among the numbers played during the evening were Rimsky-Korsakov's "Song of India"; "Intermezzo", from Cavalier-Rusticana; "Sextet" from Lucia; and Coburn's "Two Guitars" and "Dark Eyes".

The features were a trio composed of Miss Eleanor Henry, Miss Mildred Haaris, and Miss Mildred Butcher; a violin solo by Miss Eleanor Henry; an a reading by Miss Lois Wallace.

The members of the ensemble were Miss Eleanor Henry, first violin; Miss Dorothy Narvan, second violin; Miss Barbara Lyle, third violin; Miss Helen Crowder, fourth violin; Miss Mildred Harris, cello; and Miss Mildred Butcher, piano.

The Twilight Concert is sponsored each year by the Chilhowee Club. It consists of numbers by members of the Music Department, with analytical comments by Miss Hale. All the clubs of Maryvile, the Tuesday Morning Music Club and the Music Study Club of Knoxville, and others interested in music are to be guests at this affair.

One of the interesting features of the concert will be the premier of a six piano ensemble. This ensemble has been at work under the direction of Miss Hale and will present two numbers, "Whims", by Shumann; and a Scherzo, by Mandelsohn.

Other numbers will be Bach's "Taccato and Fugue", as an example of early music; and Listz' "Polanaise", played by Mrs. Martha Burchfield; an interesting broup of ultra-modern numbers called "Once Upon A Time" by Roy Lamont Smith, a prominent Southern composer, played by Miss Garnet Manges; and the lase movement of Saint-Saens' "G Minor Concerto", played by Miss Margaret Melody, assisted by Miss Manges.

"Ladies' Night" will be the theme of the annual banquet of the Ministerial Association, on Thursday evening, April 14. Miss Mary Kellar will act as toastmistress and the program will be presented by the women guests. Acording to Harry Wood, president of the Association, the leap-year idea will be used throughout the evening.

Town Women Elected Y. W. C. A. Advisory Board Members For First Time In Its History

New Chairman Selected For 1932-1933 Cabinet Functions

CLINE HEADING

Men and Women "Y" Groups To Picture Blue Ridge April 16

Three new members have been elected to the Y. W. C. A. Advisory Board, taking the places of three whose two-year terms expired in March of this year.

For the first time in the history of the Y. W. C. A. town women have been elected to membership on the Board. Mrs. H. C. Wright, and Mrs. Otto Pflanze, both of whom are prominent in club work and other community undertakings, and who are interested in the College, are the recently-elected town representateves. Professor K. R. Lagerstedet whose interest in the students has been demonstrated during his two years here is the third new member of the Advisory Board.

The Cabinet this year is meeting every two weeks at which time the varioous problems of the local organization are discussed in detail and plans are made for the many unudertakings of the Y. W. C. A.

For the year 1932-1933, Louise Cline has charge of the devotional part of the programs and is assisted by Elizabeth Duncan and Mary Katherine Mize as program chairmen; Norma Spilatore as music chairman; Dorothy Casseres as devotion chairman; and Phillis Dexter in charge of world fellowship.

Social service work is directed by Helen Thompson. Serving with her are Theresa Frey and Violet Webb in cahrge of work at the mission, and Florence Grabiel and Dolores Burchette attending to the work at the orphanage.

The business division of the Y. W. C. A. is in charge of Ruth Brocious who has assisting her Ruth Farlee and Lorena Dunlap for the "Y" store, Willimae Renegar as benefit chairman, and Lila Barr as publicity chairman.

One of the most active divisions of the Y. W. C. A. activities is the social division headed by Ellen Macrae. Serving with her are Eleanor Johnson, athletic chairman; Nathalia Wright and Frances Massey, social chairmen; and Mildred Purviance, lyceum chairman

Various plans and activities sponsored by the college organization are under way and announcements will be made later concerning them.

According to Ralph Teffeteller, president of the Maryville "Y", the YWCA and the YMCA will, in the April 16 issue of The Highland Echo, give some idea of what Blue Ridge, N. C. looks like. The Southern YWCA and YMCA conference will be held there this summer.

GOETHE'S LIFE REVIEWED BY R. K. LAGERSTEDT

German Placed With Great Authors of World Wide Reputation

'FAUST' CITED

University Life, Emotional Life, And Political Life Marked

May we all remember this date and especially the year 1932. We people in the United States are celebrating this year the bi-centennial of the birth of the father of our country. We should also remember that during this whole year the life, memories, and works of Johann Wolfgang Goethe are being honored because 1932 is the centennial of his death. Goethe, who vies with Schiller as being Germany's greatest classical writer, is not only a German writer, but is one who has appealed to all nations, nationalities, and creeds, and therefore becomes an international writer. Oh! how sweet the name of Goethe sounds! How hallowed and sublime must it always remain with a few great satellites of world literature! Homer, Virgil, Dante, Shakespeare! To your names, immortals, we must add the name of Johann Wolfgang Goethe.

In this short article I have not the space to tell you about his childhood in the old city of Frankfurt-am-Main, his early university life at Leipzig and Strassbourg, his many love affairs with Katchen Schonkopf, Friedricke Brion, Charlotte Buff, Lili Schonemann, Frau von Stein, Minna Herzlieb, and many others, his period of great literary and political activity at Weimar with Herder, Lessing, and Schiller, and his varied interests and documents about botany, physiology, and optics.

Goethe is foremost a lyric poet and ranks with Heinrich Heine as one of the greatest in Germany. Nevertheless, he wrote several novels, one of the most important being "Wilhelmeister" and also a nuumber of plays, a few of which are "Egmont", "Tasso", "Iphigenia" and the greatest of all "Faust", which took Goethe a lifetime to write because his ideas about Faust, who represents Humanity, changed as he himself matured in experiences and in spirit.

The Faust legend was an old one which grew during the middle ages. We all know the story of the learned Dr. Faustus who sold his soul to the Devil for a period of twenty years and then was taken by the Devil. Undoubtedly there was a real man by the name of Faustus who lived in Wurtemberg in Germany. Melancthon, Luther, and other men of the Reformation speak of Dr. Faustus in Wittemberg and they often thought that they saw the Devil or one of his cohorts in person.

When we go to the Wartburg castle today and see where Luther translated the Bible, we are shown a place on the wall at which Luther threw a bottle of ink at some devil who annoyed him while he was translating the bible.

The original story of Faust was published in 1587 and later many other editions appeared. From one of these editions Marlowe got material for his Faust story. While Goethe was writing his Faust about thirty other stories and plays on Faust appeared in Germany. That shows how popular the story was even in the eighteenth century however, no one has dealth with the theme as Goethe did. Goethe's Faust is a drama of the Life of Man.

WORLD TRAVELER TO VISIT CAMPUS

John Nevin Sayre To Speak On Color Line Problem

According to an announcement from the East Tennessee Students' Interracial Commision, John Nevin Sayse will be on Maryville campus April 6. He will speak to those interested in interracial problems.

Mr. Sayre is executive secretary of the Fellowship of Reconciliation and has recently visited ten European countries in which he was in contact with groups of the Fellowship of Reconiliation. Mr Sayre has been to Europe seven times since the World war, and around the world twice in the last fourteen years.

Mr. Sayre is president of the magazines, "The World Tomorrow", vice-chairman of the Committee on Militarism in Education, and a member of the National Committee on the Churches and World Peace.

Further announcement of the time and place of meetings will be made from the chapel platform.

THE FOOL

He looks like that shelled soldier with the remembering eyes
Who watches the orgies of the victory dance.
And thinks of the last shot and peace.
He looks like that satin-clad woman in the shiny limousine
Who holds her head high,
Away from the odor of the gutters where the cars wheels pass.
He looks like that big negro carrying trays of restaurant food
Who does not remember the tom-toms and the voo-doos
And the creeping Congo.

He comes from the cradle, endlessly rocking,
Where the overgrown children are crowded.
He comes from the garrett, forever in shadow,
Where one prism of light cuts the gloom.
He comes from the crucible, eternally seething,
Where the melting ore sputters in agony.

He is the soldier, the woman, the negro.
He is war, society, race.
He is going he dares not dream where.
But he is the great creation on its way.
He is going, he knows not how, toward the veiled face
Which stands just ahead and mocks him.
When he comes close the veil will be snatched off,
And the face will laugh louder than ever.
For it will be the greatest joke of all.

CORRECT THE FAULT!

Justifiable complaints from a student body are often nullified by the activities of a few selfish minded students. This is not a new situation, but when it occurs during a period such as Maryville College is now passing through, it is about time that the mass protected itself from the actions of the minority.

Any sensibly-minded person should be able to realize that whatever benefits might be secured from the college administration are obstructed when privileges are openly overstepped and property unnecessarily destroyed.

The problem of smoking is a debatable one and has no place here. However, if people are going to break rules, wouldn't it be much better for them to break the rules and do a clean job of getting away with it?

There is no practicable way of accurately determining upon whom responsibility devolves in the case of misbehavior. Therefore, we have the rational tendency to hold everyone responsible, since a correction must be made.

Our philosophy is that if you are going to do bad, do it, and either reap the fruits of your own daring or so arrange matters that others will not have to bear the burden of cost.

No college faculty looks upon the granting of favors with acquiescence after cigarettes have been found in recitation rooms the day after the night before; nor does it appreciate the destruction of dormitory fixtures, no matter what the personal provocation might be.

CAMPUS PROSPECTS

The walk leading to Pearsons Hall certainly has taken on a real Easter appearance. The addition of grass has added immesurably to that particular part of the campus.

The disappearance of coal piles down at the power plant; the enclosing of the incinerator; and the new cinder path being laid down up to the fountain are all decided improvements.

The parking space, the wider turn in the road leading to Thaw as it turns away from Bartlett are all indications of what Maryville campus will look like to those returning in 1932.

It's worth striving for and keeping, if some people could only get that through their heads.

APRIL FOOLS OR. . . .

The actions one sees are so varying in degree of intensity that it is hard to make up the mind as to whether this month is ushered in by an April Fooling day, or by a day for April Fools.

HEARD FROM AN ORCHESTRA SEAT

"The Melting Pot", a play in four acts, by Israel Zangwill, directed by Wilhelmina Holland, sponsored by College Players.

Mendel Quixano - - Reno Smith
Katheleen O'Reilly - Marjorie Jones
Frau Quixano - Roberta Robison
Vera Revendal - - Elizabeth Wilbar
David Quixano - - Wesley Culver
Quincy Davenport, Jr. - - - - Michael Testa
Herr Pappelmeister - - - - - Kenneth Lagerstedt
Baron Revendal - - Cecil Marley
Baroness Reevndal - Roberta Robison
Settlement Servant - - - Lucy Ann Voorhees

We are inclined to agree with the cataloguers who list "The Melting Pot" as "a thrilling melodrama", but we must also agree with the majority of those who saw the production Thursday evening, that it was the best presented play here this year. The story of the play, which concerns chiefly a young Russian Jew who has idealistic ideas about America, "God's crucible", was probably more thrilling to theatre goers in the early part of the century, when the play was first produced, than it is to audiences today, more accustomed to the theme of the play. Nevertheless, the stage management, the directing, and the acting were very creditably done.

Like the play, a major part of the acting was "out of the museum of melodrama." Wesley Culver, as the hero, David Quixano, presented a well polished interpretation of a rather difficult part. He carried the heoviest portion of the burden of acting. Second place goes to Mr. K. R. Lagerstedt, who was excellent in the comic role of Herr Pappelmeister, a German orchestra director.

Reno Smith was clearly miscast as Mennel Quixano, an elderly Jewish piano teacher. Elizabeth Wilbar gave a good interprettion of her part as a settlement worker. The other parts were fairly well done, most of them starting out much more strongly than they ended.

Willamara Minton is to be congratulated on her work as scenic artist. Florence Grabiel's very interesting between-act music is also worthy of commendatory mention.

THE LITTLE CHURCH

The fourth commandment was not the arbitrary decree of a self-conceited God who wished to assure Himself of the gratifying praises of enslaved votaries during one-seventh of the waking hours of their lives. It was rather the wise provision of an omniscient Father for the health and sanity of His children.

For from a purely physiological standpoint, scientists tell us, it is necessary that the human machine be relieved from the train of routine at least one day out of the week. It is also worthwhile to remember, in this connection, that among faiths which do not embrace the Sabbatical priniple there are a great number of religious feasts and holidays. These feasts, occurring at frequent intervals in the course of the year, afford the same opportunity for relaxation presented to Jews and Christians once every week. Ceaseless toil the year round is, in the end, poor economy.

But there is a deeper reason for the Sabbath than the obvious need for physical rest. Men must worship, or their spirits die. Their thoughts must turn upward from the vicious circle of economic pursuit or their minds grow dizzy and finally become insane, while their souls shrivel and shrink. Hence, we are to keep the Sabbath and keep it holy. It is to be filled with those occupations which are purging, ennobling, and inspiring.

And our worship need not all be in the repeating of liturgies. The Son of man "did good" on the Sabbath. Certainly, when a man refuses to do that which is constructive to human happiness, he breaks the spirit of the day which he may claim to be observing circumspectly.

If rest and worship were essential to leisure-living men who dwelt all their lives under the sun and the stars in the groves, which were God's first temples, how much more necessary is it that modern man, caught in the whirl of his own machinery, prisoner in houses made by his own hand, should pause to avail himself of the opportunities of Sunday.

LAMAR WINDOW HIGHLY VALUED

Stained Glass Window Was Built At $500 Cost

The memorial window in the rear wall of the post office, which was remodeled a few weeks ago should be of interest to Maryville students.

The window, a memorial to Professor T. J. Lamar, was installed shortly after his death by his brothers and sisters at the expense of five hundred dollars is increasing in value as the years pass, not only on account of its significance as a lasting memorial, but also as a remarkable piece of design and execution in ornamental glass work.

Mr. G. P. Palmer, from Knoxville who spent several days on the campus working on the window, bases his authority on this subject on a lifetime of study and work in the United States and Mexico, and it is his opinion that "the window will compare highly with any window in the United States." He followed this statement with a remark about a similar window which sold in New York several monhs ago for one hundred and thirty-five thousand dollars.

The estimate of the value of the Lamar window lies largely on the elements of its construction. The glass used in the design includes pieces of old Roman, antique, ondoyant, opulescent, Venetian, beveled, one piece of alligator, and a few pieces of fine pot mettle. Of these the most valuable is the Venetian glass.

Of additional value are the jewels with which the design is studded. The figures which are of the ascension, are all hand painted, and then burned into the glass. This process makes a more permanent and finished creation, and so requires a higher grade of glass and a longer time for completion.

The separate pieces of glass, numbering in the thousands, are held together by strips of solid lead, and united in one large design by taps and pads, fastened at intervals. The work of remodeling on the Lamar window consisted largely in replacing these lead strips to strengthen the whole window.

Mr. Palmer's early experience led him into old Mexico, where he became interested in the cathedral and monastary glass windows, the rich coloring in the old glass added to his fascination, and since then his profession has been directed in this field of art. He travels over the United States, visiting many colleges and universities, in his work of strengthening the construction and bringing out the faded tints in old glass windows.

AWAY FROM THE COLLEGE HILL

So. California and Tennessee

Led by the "Daily Trojan" of the University o fSouthern California, students of that school have voted that a Socialist occupy the White House this fall. But at the University of Tennessee, the editor of the Orange and Black states that the suden body of the University has as real a loyalty to God and country as has the American Legion. Neither of these opinions prove very much, because some Socialistic principles could be made entirely compatible with the American Legion ideals and the administration of the White House.

Clemson

Looking at the Clemson publication, "The Tiger", one is impressed by the vivid orange-like color of the paper, and the lack of sense in the news stories. No wonder professional newspapermen scoff at the idea of college and universities being able to turn out newspaper-

MUSIC DEPARTMENT PLANS COMMUNITY RECITAL FOR MAY

National Music Week Recitals Slated For Chapel; Ruth Henry Plays

The Music Department of Maryville College is preparing for a period of intense activity durng the remainder of this semester. Plans are under way for the celebration of National Music Week during the week beginning May 1.

The celebration will be under the direction of the Music Department. Miss Laura B. Hale, head of the department, is arranging several numbers which will be presented at the chapel services music week.

She is also arranging for a number of programs to be presented in Marypille and in neighboring communities by the Maryville Music Club, of which she is president. A detailed announcement concerning these programs will be made later.

Another outstanding feature of the spring music program will be a graduate recital by Miss Ruth Henry on the evening of May .

Miss Henry's ability as a musician has long been recognized by the students of the college and by the people of the community. She has appeared to advantage both at the college and in the community. Those interested in music will be looking forward to her program with real interest.

Miss Henry's recital will include numbers representative of early medieval, and modern music.

Miss Laura B. Hale has received the honor of being elected a candidate from the Maryville Music Club to the meeting of the State Federation of Music Clubs to be held in Cleveland, Tennessee, April 6, 7, and 8.

THE ART OF CONVERSATION

Asked what his institution did for the thousands of young people who passed their four years there, a professor at one of the largest Eastern universities in the country replied ater some deliberation, "We turn out, as far as I can see, a low-grade standardized product, like Ford cars, with just about as much thinking capacity." This may have been unduly pessimistic, but that it was generally true may be proved by listening in on the conversations one hears about him on the campus.

Interspersed with vapid slang-terms and the latest current expressions, the talk of most collegians is sadly lacking in all that would be expected of a university man, an intelligent, well-educated, cultured individual. Whatever knowledge of a worthwhile nature that he may have inadvertently assimilated, the student tries most earnestly to conceal under this guise in order to escape the stigma of being designated as "high-hat" or "intellectual snob" by those who themselves adhere religiously to the collegiate standard for topics of conversation.

And if the subject matter of the conversation of students is to be taken as a criterion, it would indicate that the idea of a university as a place where students obtain a grounding in the best thought of the day, learn how to use their faculties, and as a place where they receive mental training has never reached realzation.

Yet at the other extreme are those who indulge in talk that is smart and burnished and sounds like a meeting of a literary club. Discusison of modish books, plays, and ideas is brought up with astounding solemnity which robs the conversation of all naturalness and ease. As grimly serious about the topics they take up as the average student with his flippant and uninteresting conversation, they do not derive the proper satisfaction and pleasure from this weighty talk if one is to judge from the schematic manner in which they tackle their subjects.

To steer a mid-way course between the foolish and funereal types of conversation is what students who are university students in every sense of the word should drive at. Good conversation is certainly one of the most delightful forms of leisure.

Good conversation is something between solemnity and absurdity.

Mississippi

The verdict of co-eds at the University of Mississippi on professional men has placed doctors at the head of the list with lawyers close behind. Newspapermen were "unkindly ignored". It would seem that some people are very nearsighted.

MARGINAL NOTES

JUNIUS ALLISON

A stranger came by Boar's Head Tavern (ed. note—in Carnegie Hall) last week. We heard him mention literature so we stopped to listen. The other wayfarers were laughing and talking about drops of water, loaves of bread and Thaw, but for some reason they listened to the stranger. We took the following notes on his discussion:

"Novelty" is the word that characterizes contemporary writing . . . It is not the novels dealing with the new psychology and psendometaphysics that will live; they are only sensational . . . Writers who are concentrating upon sex as a subject, will be forgotten. If they would use sex as a médium for expression of their art, as Hawthorn did in "Scarlet Letter", their efforts might be worthy.

Not only do we need new ideas, but we must give attention to form. It is the combination of excellence of form with the soundness of substance that makes a good book. . . J. B. Priestly and Willa Cather are doing work that posterity will not put aside.

We are too close to innovations such as "Hotel Universe", "The Waves", and "Mourning Becomes Electra" to judge them. If this age has added much to literature, it is in the field of biography.

"I'll stop again when I'm going this way", the would-be critic said he left.

COLLEGE EDITORS ADVOCATE REPEAL

30 Collegiate Journalists Condemn Prohibition; 3 Vote Dry Ticket

Chapel Hill, N. C. (NSFA)—The college editors of the United States have repudiated almost unanimously the prohibition of intoxicants by the government. Results of the University of North Carolina poll indicate that thirty, of thirty-four editors voting, favor repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act. Three were in favor of retaining these acts. The editor of the Daily Nebraska replied that he favored neither repeal nor retention.

A. C. Aslakson, editor of the Minnesota Daily and the most outspoken of the voters in the poll, offered this comment: "I am definitely opposed to prohibition. I believe it has led to the vicious use of alcohol by our American youth. What's the use of asking if prohibition has been enforced? Neither is it enforceable."

GREAT BARTHELMESS PICTURE NEXT WEEK

In "Alias the Doctor", the First National and Vitaphone picture which opens at the Palace Theatre Monday and Tuesday next, Richard Barthelmess, comes with what may be ranked as his finest portrayal. He plays a brilliant young surgeon who undergoes shame and imprisonment to shield a worthless foster brother.

It is a story of tremendous sweep and power, of thwarted love, supreme sacrifice and devotion.

Playing in support of Mr. Barthelmess is an unusually strong cast headed by Marian Marsh.

While heavily dramatic, there is a lighter vein in the story, the happy go-lucky medical student days, which is highly entertaining and acts as a foil to set off the more tense moments of the stark drama.

The theme evolves about the character of two boys, foster brothers—one of whom cares only for the frivolous things of life, while the other accepts all the duties and responsibilities, carrying out the obligations placed on him, even to the sacrifice of his love and his honor.

The young men, in turn, are governed by a mother's overpowering ambition to get away from small farm life by making great names for her sons in the outside world—

Track Season Will Be Ushered In Friday Afternoon As T. P. I. Sends Outfit Against Scotties

Spec Moore Continues To Run Mile In Good Time; Hitch Runs High

OTIS PAUL ILL

Richardson and Byar Will Take Care of Dashes; Felknor Pole Vaults

(By Leland Shanor)

With the opening of the track season but one week away, Coach Bob Thrower is working his men hard daily in an effort to get them in condition. Tennessee Polytechnic Institute, from Cookeville, Tenn., will furnish the opposition on the first meet.

Track is just coming into its own and this year should be one of the most interesting in the history of the school. Five hard meets have been schedulued for the team and every one of them should prove to be interesting. Since taking charge of the track team, Coach Bob Thrower has seen his men defeated but one time. This defeat was at the hands of L. M. U. last season by a score of 59 to 58.

In the past, too little attention has been centered on track and when the timer fires his gun next Friday, the entire student body should be lined up on the track to cheer their favorites to victory. In this manner, the studuent body could show their appreciation to Coach Bob Thrower for the wonderful work that he has done in track.

Tryouts for next week's meet were held Friday and today but the times were not available. The entire squad has been working hard for some time and they should be in first class shape when the first race is started next week. Spec Moore, Speedy Mann and Jim Hitch are turning in good times in the mile and the team should be strong in this department. Hitch is still showing the way in the half mile but hisrunning mate has not been selected as yet.

The progress in the 440 has been slightly hampered by the illness of Otis Paul, last year's best bet in this race. Some very good material has been brought to light in Milling and Steve Boretsky. These two boys have been stepping along at a nice pace and they may give Paul some trouble before Coach Bob selects his starters.

Richardson and Byar will probably carry the colors in the dashes again this year and Captain Dip Felknor and Bratschie will do the pole vaulting. Very little can be told about the other events until, after the time trials are over.

The schedule follows:
April 8—T.P.I.—Here
April 14—Tennessee—There
April 23—Center—Here
April 30—Emory and Henry—There
May 7—L. M. U.—There

SCHEDULE GIRL TRACK TRYOUTS

Points Will Be Awarded For Work On Cinder Path

Field day for all girls out for track will be held April 8. This meet will be an examination for girls trying for points, but girls may take part who are not working for a letter or a monogram.

Track has proved to be one of the most interesting sports of the year. A large number of girls from all classes have reported every Monday, Wednesday and Friday, for practice. Much time has been spent on sprinting, the shot put, and the high jump.

The broad jump, throwing a baseball, and a basketball will be other features of the meet.

The hypothesis of "Your sins of the past shall haunt you", is especially brought home to J. M. Clopton, an ambitious sophomore when he attends chemistry class. If he ever has anything more to do with cows, they will chase him instead of his being the pursuer.

Prof. Griffitts: How many in this class have done outside reading this week?

Class: (Dead Silence).

The Professor: Surely somebody has done some. Miss Small, what have you read?

Ann Small: — — ? ? ? ? Well,—er—a—Professor, I have red hair.

SPORT SLANTS

By BOB RULE

Sometime in the dim past, if my memory serves me rightly, the conducter of the observations column took a decided sock at this department. Now I am not sure just whether the said conducter had malice in his heart or whether he thought he was being funny.

If you remember, he was thanking his stars that his column was not put on the sport page. Well, pals, it's just as broad as it's redheaded and I kinda like that old axiom about "what's sauce for the goose is strawberry shortcake for Aunt Minerva's William Green Hill". In a mild way, may I suggest that from now on the editor-in-chief put the observations column on the FIFTH page.

They tell a good one on Lowell McDonald. I don't know for sure just who is responsible for it but I think that Millard Tolliver had something to do with it. Anyway, there is a rumor going round that a freshman girl, upon seeing the star in the letter on Mac's football sweater, wanted to know if the former all-conference guard was majoring in astronomy.

An Associated Press dispatch from Fort Myers, Fla., where the Philadelphia Athletics are training, carried the rather unexpected news of Bob Chandler's release from that club. Chandler is now a free agent and he is at liberty to do as he wishes in a baseball way. He was released from all connections with the Philadelphia club and he may either sign with another club or he may return to Maryville College and finish his school days here.

I, for one, would like to see Chandler come back to Maryville and finish up his college work, as well as his athletic career. His signing with the A's will in no way affect his athletic standing here and he would be eligible for football next year.

With three years more under Coach Honaker's tutelage, Chandler should make one of the best diamond performers ever turned out here. I wonder if Coach Bob Thrower would welcome the return of a tackle of Chandler's calibre?

Some of Coach Honaker's pitching worries should be cared for by big Jim Holloway. He has been working out every day since baseball season started and each time looks more like a winning hurler.

Holoway seems to know what this pitching business is all about and is already handling himself in a pleasing manner. He is a dangerous hitter and in case an extra outfielder should be needed, he could patrol the gardens.

Customer: What's wrong with these eggs?

Waitress: How should I know? I only laid the table.

FALL TENNIS TOURNEY ADVANCES INTO SEMI-FINALS

Ferguson Shows Surprising Form And Looms As Strong Contender

Play in the men's Fall tennis tournament is nearing the semi-final stage and several hard fought battles are expected in the next few days when play is resumed. George Fischback, seeded No. 1 man in the meet, has already advanced to the semi-finals and he is expected to come out one of the finalists, needing only to dispose of the winner of the Gillingham-Landrum match.

The first round of play held several fast matches. The surprise of this round came when Blundon Ferguson entered the tourney late and was paired with John Phay, who had been seeded No. 2 man. Ferguson displayed a brand of tennis that was a surprise to everyone and he decicively defeated Phay, 6-1, 6-1. He will meet Dickens in his second round match and Coach Smith predicts that he will go a long way before he is eliminated.

The second round matches should pack plenty thrills. The Ferguson-Dickens match should command plenty of interest because of the fact that Ferguson was practically unheard of in tennis circles prior to the start of the meet. Otto will meet Hurst in another match that will be a humdinger; Landrum will meet Gillingham for the privilege of playing Fischback. The winner of the Ferguson-Dickens match will meet the winner of the Otto-Hurst match in the other bracke.

The results of the matches played thus far follow:

Ferguson defeated Phay, 6-1, 6-1.
Dickens defeated Cooper, 8-6, 7-5.
Landrum defeated McQueen, 6-2, 7-5.
Gillingham defeated Bradbury, 6-2, 6-3.
Lampe defeated Warman, 7-5, 8-6.
Otto defeated Clopton.
Hurst defeated Knisley
Fischback brew a bye.

Second round—Fischback defeated Lampe, 6-2, 6-0.

An old reaction was stated in a new way this week by Newman Smith, another promising freshman chemist. His discovery was that mixing alcohol with gasoline loosened the nut behind the steering-wheel.

Scots Drop Initial Baseball Game of Season At Knoxville As Smokies Triumph By 10 to 1

SCOTS OPEN COLLEGE BASEBALL SEASON WEDNESDAY

Hiwassee College Offers First Opposition For Highlanders; Play Smokies Thursday

Maryville College baseballers take on two more foes next week when they pay Hiwassee College Wednesday afternoon and then go to Knoxville for the second game with the Smokies. The Highlanders will be out for a victory when they take on the boys from Madisonville, but they can hardly hope to win over the Knoxville Club.

Hiwassee should offer plenty opposition for the local boys and the Scots wil have to hustle to carry away the victory. The Maryvillians came out victorious last season in two games with Hiwassee but they were extended to the very limit on both occasions.

Wednesday's game will afford Coach Honaker a chance to get his first glimpse at his pitchers in action. They did not work last week against Knoxville due to the fact that the Knoxville club loaned Coach Honaker two hurlers for the game but Wednesday will be a different matter entirely and the hurlers will have to show their best.

Jim Holloway is developing into a dependable looking hurler and from all indications, he will be the backbone of the pitching staff this year. He has shown a peasing amount of control, speed and curves in practice and he seems to have what it takes to make a varsity performer. Coach Honaker also has Doc Duff, Johnny Kiser, and Lincoln Hurst with which to work. It is very likely that several of these men will work against Hiwassee.

The game with the Smokies will be similar to the other one. The Knoxville management will again let Coach Honaker have two of their best hurlers for the game and Coach Honaker believes that his men will be in shape to give the Southern Leaguers a much better game than they did in the last meeting. The entire team has greatly improved both in hitting and fielding and they are beginning to look more like a Maryville College baseball team.

Team Shows Up Well On Both Offense And Defense But Several Mistakes Are Made

OUTFIELD O. K.

Team Destined For Great Season If Pitching Staff Produces Goods

Maryville College Highlanders opened the 1932 baseball season last Saturday afternoon when they were defeated by the Knoxville Smokies Southern League club by a score of 10 to 1. The Maryville boys put up a fine scrap against the Knoxvillians but they were up against the fastest oppositione ever encountered by a Maryville club and they had little chance for a victory.

The opening game brought to light a number of encouraging and discouraging things. First of all, the Maryville team can hit. Second, some of the new men who were injected into the line-up by Coach Honaker showed the stuff that it takes to make varsity performers. And then, the Maryville team should be about as strong defensively as any that we have had in a number of years.

The infield, with Woodard, West and White forming the backbone, looms to be one of the best that Coach Honaker has put on the field in a long time. The outfield, with only experienced men, should pack as much punch as the innerworks as was shown by the way that the boys played against the Knoxvillians.

Lincoln Hurst, the only veteran in the gardens, Ray Russell and Cecil Stone composed the outer-defense and they patrolled the pastures as Mr. Honaker deems that pastures should be patrolled for Maryville College teams. This trio showed up exceedingly well in taking ground balls, fly balls or any other kind of ball that came their way. They also hit well.

Teffeteller worked behind the bat without having been out for practice but a short time and the way that he handled the hurlers was indeed encouraging. He seems to be in for his best year in his last season and the team seems to be well fortified in this department.

The only chief source of worry is the pitching staff. Coach Honaker has uncovered one or two men who should be able to hurl in the approved manner before many games have past but at present it doesn't look like there will be any no-hit-no-run games pitched for the Highlanders this season.

It used to be wine, women, and song, but now it's rum, racket and radio.

'A Student, a Psychologist, Plus One Small Hairy Dog'

1. The Student

She was enrolled Marjorie—in my class book, though that was not her name. I think that from the first I had somehow associated her with Walter Scott's Marjorie Fleming.

Her cheeks were pink,—very pink, on the chilly days when I met her, in slicker and tam, coming back across the campus after a hurried trip down town in the rain. Her eyes were a grayed blue and her hair framed her face in soft, silky waves of Roman gold. The thin, small smear of clear scarlet on her upper lip, instead of giving the impression of dash and crudity that lip-stick often does, intrigued me somehow. It made her look, not the flapper, nor the up-to-date college student she really was but rather a whimsical, contradictory child masquerading in grown-up garments and being very sedate and wise, even while she went on believing in fairies and Santa Claus. Yet I am sure that she read Bernard Shaw!

"Did you see the Saturday Evening Times Review?" she asked me one morning as she came into my ten o'clock class; and she handed me a single sheet of note-book paper written closely in her precise characteristic hand. "I thought you would like this. So I copied it out for you. It is from the John Mistletoe series."

Swiftly, while my class assembled, my eyes sped across and down the sheet, a smile of delight tugging at the corners of my mouth and eyes as I read one of Christopher Morley's clever whimsicalities:

The Small Hairy Dog

"There was a small hairy dog that suffered greatly from heat. So much that for his comfort his curators often put a small electric fan on the floor. This was highly relished by the small hairy dog, who sat as close to it as possible, turning himself leisurely this way and that to cool. He sat so close to the whirr, however, that when his custodians left the room they always turned off the current for fear he might damage himself.

One very warm afternoon they left the dog inside while they went abroad on some errands. The fan was on the floor as usual, but not running. While they were absent, came one of these magically sudden changes of temperature that New York sometimes enjoys in summer. The wind shifted to the north, heavy torrid air blew away, a cool breeze came rippling in over window sills, sweeping through the apartment. When they returned the small hairy dog was sitting alongside the motionless fan, pleased and turning himself to and fro to enjoy the draught.

From time to time new winds will blow, but there will always be some people very like the small hairy dog. They will believe the fan is doing it."

An electric fan! What a futile thing it is in an emergency.

Swift as thought, I was re-living an experience in a sick room—an upper room, stifling an airless at the close of an unusually hot day; the weak and restless patient on the bed gasping with asthma; doors open, curtains pulled back to let in any vagrant breeze; heavy heat crowding close from houses on every side. Anxiously we waited for a cloud "no bigger than a man's hand."

Then somebody brought an electric fan.

Round and round it whirred with a cooling sound as of rain! Round and round, and hope starred. Round and round, and for a few moments, lulled by the illusion of rain, the patient sept. Round and round and round with frantic energy! But half an hour later, save for that one small circle of motion, the room was still stifling, and the base of the machine was suite hot. The fan had not even cooled itself!

Memory shifts to New York on such another still and stifling day as only sea-level locations seem to suffer—sticky, muggy; heat, heavy with a weight of depression, making one feel wilted and worthless, filling life with discouragement and foreboding. Kipling has described it in his stories of the plains of India, particularly in the one called "At the End of the Passage." Of course, it is never quite so bad as that in New York. But faith, it is enough!

Then somewhere, far off, something happens.

Perhaps a trade wind cuts across the doldrums and lifts their damp and heated air to cool at far heights and drift away to the north, setting arctic air currents circling down to fill the space.

Perhaps stray icebergs floating from far above Nova Scotia have been swept into the Gulf Stream on its way to the Irish coast, causing fogs and rain, and a cool sea breeze sweeping down into New York Bay.

Perhaps far out on the pathless Pacific some changes in atmospheric pressure have sent currents swirling half-round the world to cool a small hairy dog, and bring new energy and courage to a milion men and women

Who knows all the infinite details of the movement of molecules, atoms, ions—what you will—that sent that steady cooling breeze across the harbor and up the Hudson into that heated room?

Perhaps a small, hairy dog might be excused for thinking it but the movement of a machine.

Yet there are certain scientists—

The Psychologist

I first saw him fifteen years ago. He was just reaching the height of his greatness then—not yet forty, fresh from college lecture rooms and laboratories, fresh from the years he had spent with monkeys and white rats in his behavioristic researches. His personality had for me then, what his pictured face has for me still, something evil and animal about it, something, I fancied, of the leer and grin of the two apes with which he had practically lived, day and night, for more than a year. Young, brilliant, beginning to be famous, he was beginning, too to be unable to believe in anything but mechanisms. Was he because of that, beginning to be unable to steer his own life aright? Or was that due, as we so often say, to some "moral break-up following the Great War"?

Who knows? Now he is an advertect for many thousand dollars a year!

But it was not .

"Just for a handful of silver he left us."

I think of the deft sureness and clearness and dogmatism of his work, of the crass materialism and extravagance of his later pronouncements. Then I think of William James with whom he might once have contended for the title of "the great American psychologist."——James, who could always see through any particular bit of experimentation to whole reaches of philosophic truth beyond; James, who was no less accurate a scientist because he refused to be a materialist; James, whose work has lived through a quarter of a century of revolution in psychology since his death, while Watson is personally discredited and his conclusions questioned within his own generation.

"Ah, but a man's reach should exceed his grasp!"

Slowly before my eyes fades out Christopher Morley's pen picture of the fan, and I see not "the kingdoms of the world in a moment of time", but something more colossal and wonderful. I seem to find myself looking far out into interstellar spaces and seeing the steady, rhythmic sweep of the solar system, the vast cosmic swirl of world currents and world events, the subtler, more elusive and intricate, more awesome and inexpicable play and inter-play of human forces of thought and personality and will. And complacent and smug in the foreground of the picture not facing all the majestic sweep and swirl, yet bending to get the benefit of it, I see the small hairy dog, wearing now the sardonic face of the psychologist, the psychologist grinning and turning, and believing the "fan is doing it."

MISS JONES HONORED

Miss Anna J. Jones was honored with a birthday party given by Mrs. Stevenson at "The House in the Woods", Tuesday evening of the past week. Professor and Mrs. Davis, Miss Ruth Weese, and the student members of the office force were present and enjoyed a delightful evening of games and refreshments.

INFLUENZA HITS MEMBERS OF COLLEGE FACULTY

Dr E. R. Hunter, Dr. J. H. McMurray, and Mrs. Jane B. S. Alexander, members of Maryville College faculty, were each ill during the past week with touches of influenza.

Dr. Hunter did not meet his classes the latter part of last week; Dr. McMurray was confined to his home during the entirety of this week, and Mrs. Alexander was out of school from Monday to Friday.

STUDENT LOAN PROBLEM WILL BE REVIEWED

Analysis of College Bulletin Shows Large Amounts Of Money Owed

Miss Clemmie Henry, secretary for student loans, is making an attempt to find which, of two methods of meeting indebtedness, is desired by individual students and graduates.

Those students and graduates whose notes the college loan fund holds may redeem the notes upon paying in full the sum called for by the note, either by partial payments or one payment covering the compete amount.

However, Miss Henry points out that the present tendency is to agree to pay at several spaced intervals and then, when the agreement cannot be adhered to, to avoid making any mention of the inability to meet the terms of the loan.

"It would be more advantageous to both myself and the student if, when he could not pay, he would tell us so and give us a chance to make an extension in the time when the money is to be returned to the college.

"Waiting until one is able to make some type of a payment means that those administering the student loan fund cannot foresee when money lent will be returned. It is essential that we are able to do this because of the nature of our lending facilities."

The two phases of the student loan fund mentioned by Miss Henry are the Endowed Fund and the Rotating Fund. Part of the former consists of $2,000, the basis of the fund, the income from which may only be used for aiding seniors and juniors.

Money gifts made to the college and placed in the Endowed Fund must remain there. The income from the total amount in the fund is used for making loans. By virtue of an agreement, a declaration of trust into which the college enters with the endower, only a sum of money equivalent to the interest on the gift may be used for loans. Thus, if here is $20,000 in the Endowed Fund in a year, no more than $1,200 may be given in loans during the year.

The Rotating Fund consists of outright gifts to the college. The only restriction on making loans from this source is that only a sum of money equal to the fund may be utilized for lending purposes. Interest on the Endowed Fund may be added to this second fund.

Neither of these two funds, says Miss Henry, is at present sufficient to meet the needs of Maryville College students. She adds, however, that this school year, the first in which the general practice of making loans to freshmen and sophomores has been adopted, has been marked by conscientious attempts of all students to meet the requirements of the loans.

Ed. note—It may be mentioned that the Liberal Arts College Bulletin, in analyzing the effect of the depression on colleges in the United States, has these figures to show concerning colleges with registrations between 400 and 1,000, and colleges of the South:

PLAN INTERRACIAL PROBLEM MEETING

Morristown, April 2—Plans for a one-day conference on interracial problems were made at the monthly meeting of the East Tennessee Students' Interracial Commission, which was held this afternoon at Morristown College. Details of the arrangements will be announced later in The Highland Echo.

The subject for the afternoon was "The Negro in Inventions". The discussion was led by the Morristown group and was followed by an open frum.

A large delegation of Maryville College students were at the meeting.

GOETHE'S LIFE REVIEWED BY R. K. LAGERSTEDT

Goethe first became interested in the Faust story in 1768 after he returned home from Leipzig and was quite ill. He perhaps wrote the opening prologue in 1773 and more in 1774 and 1775. Finally in 1790 the Faust Fragment appeared. In 1797 "the Dedication" and "the Prologuue in Heaven" were written. In 1808 Part I of Faust was completed and in 1831, a year before Goethe's death, Part II was ready. Thus, a whole lifetime was necessary for the writing of Goethe's Faust.

All who have not read Faust should at least read Part I. We have it in a number of good translations, the best one in rhymed verse in English perhaps being the one by Bayard Taylor, a Philadelphian, puublished by Houghton Mifflin Company. At the end of Part I Gretchen is saved, but Faust is not saved until the end of Part II when he has done a great many noble deeds for humanity.

The following are some important lines from the Bayard Taylor translation:

(The Faust-theme in a nutshell)

1. "A good man, through obscurest aspiration,
Has still an instinct of the one true way.'

(Faust speaking to Wagner)

"One impuluse art thou conscious of, at best.
O, never seek to know the other!
Two souls, alas! reside within my breast,
And each withdraws from, and repels, its brother.
One with tenacious organs holds in love
And clinging lust the world in its embraces;
The other strongly sweeps, this dust alone,
Into the higher ancestral spaces."

(Margaret at spinning wheel)

My peace is gone,
My heart is sore,
I never shall find it
Ah nevermore!

German translation:

Meine Ruh ist nin
Mein Herz ist schiver
Ich finde sie nimmer
Und nimmer mehr.

Oh! may we all resolve to refresh our memories this year with the life of Goethe, some of his writings and especially his Faust drama, both Parts I and II but especially Part I.

$2500 IS DUE ON 1932 CHILHOWEAN

The 1932 Chilhowean is finished, and the book is now being prepared for publication.

There are yet $2500 due on the annual from various school organizatins according to A. J. Newcomer, business manager. Only the college including the athletic association, and two clubs have paid for their space in this year's book.

Copies of the annual will be here and ready for distribution by May 2, but Mr. Newcomer states that they cannot be distributed until all bills have been paid. As soon as this money has been turned in he says the books will be given out.

COLLEGE ASSOCIATION MEETING ATTENDED BY DR. R. W. LLOYD

Dr. Ralph W. Lloyd journeyed to Nashville last week to represent Maryville College at the thirteenth annual meeting of the Tennessee College Association at Vanderbilt University.

On his return trip he spoke in Chattanooga Thursday and Friday evenings at the pre-Easter services of the Northside Presbyterian Church.

He spoke in Maryville at the pre-Easter services of the First Methodist Episcopal Church on Monday and Tuesday of the same week.

W. Y. CULVER DELIVERS ORATION AT SOUTHERN METHODIST CHURCH

Wesley Y. Culver, winner of the T. T. Alexander Oratorical contest held at Maryville College March 18, deivered his oration, "The Resurrection", before the congregation of the Southern Methodist Church of Maryville, Easter Sunday morning. The Rev. Z. B. Randall is pastor of the church.

MISS MOLLY GIVES SENIOR GIRLS PARTY

On Saturday evening Miss "Molly" entertained the senior girls with a party in a variated form of a treasure hunt, which ended in Pearsons Parlor where games, contests, and refreshments were enjoyed.

Each senior girl had received an invitation with an anonymous signature directing her to go to Memorial where further directions would be given.

After the various directions were received by the guests from ghost-like figures, a general trek was made to Pearsons Parlor where the evening was passed in the various forms of entertainment, and the anonymous sender of the invitations was revealed to be Miss "Molly".

"Rare Fossils Found in Capitol Walls" reads a headline in the New York American. We ask you, was that the human thing to print?—Pathfinder.

MARYVILLE Y. M. C. A. ENTERTAINED BY U. T.

Maryville College's Y. M. C. A. was entertained by the "Y" group of the University of Tennessee, Tuesday night, at a banquet given at the university, in Knoxville.

Paul Horton, president of the U. T. "Y" welcomed the Highlanders and then turned the program over to Maryville.

Those who entertained were: John Phay, cornet solos; Edward Keeler, saw music; Dan Hicks, tap dancing; George Thompson, readings from Burns and Anderson; James Crothers, piano selections; James Magee and Arthur Kaufman, and William Hannah and Harry Wood, comedy sketches; Vagabond Quartet; and Reno Smith, harmonica melodies.

If you think you are really important in the world, try sticking a finger into a basin of water, pull it out, and see how large a hole you leave behind.

Mountain Hike Wednesday

VOLUME 17 — THE HIGHLAND ECHO, MARYVILLE, TENNESSEE, APRIL 16, 1932 — NUMBER TWENTY-ONE

NEW CURRICULUM TO GO INTO EFFECT NEXT FALL

OBSERVATIONS

Signs of The Times
Lloyd 'Lliteration
Variety The Secret
Bob's Western Oil

Your observer is unusually happy his anticipation or possibly in is realization of the return of good times. A letter came from home last week. . . . and it was written on stationery.

—o—

It's about like Allison says in regard to George Brown. If George ever goes to the dogs, it's a fact that someone will lead him there.

—o—

What a trip that was for Dr. Lloyd across New York. Cats are out of it—for Dr. Lloyd narrowly escaped being killed ten times. He was probably scared to death a number of times watching that ice cream cone smoke. But his trip wasn't all excitement. There was the time when he was seated under the still starlit sky singing. We're wondering what alliterative contrivance Dr. Stevenson will come back with to meet that.

—o—

The first shall be last, and the last shall be first—and some won't be trusted at all. That's the way with these chaperones. We have it from reliable authority that the last chaperone arriving on the fall hike was signed up months ahead for the spring hike which comes due this Wednesday.

—o—

Things are becoming less complicated on each "hike". It used to be that everyone went to the same place. Then there were three places, and now there are five. Variety is the secret of successful mountain hikes, evidently. Of course, . . . the next qestion is—what is a successful mountain hike?

—o—

In the meantime—while we're waiting for the big event—the girls can bear in mind that when Miss Mollie says to act like a lady she means an old fashioned lady.

—o—

From an observer's viewpoint it appears that politics (we won't use the adjective) enters into the election of May Queen attendants as well as Y.M.C.A. officers. We cast no aspersions toward our worthy beauties. The aspersions have been cast at us for our efforts. As far as all the observers on this paper are concerned, any of the attendants, including the Queen herself, are all O. K.

—o—

We've been asked to comment on the haranging activities that took place in the president's office last week—those things that were started and continued by those of our student body who feel that THEY should have an understanding. We ache to speak, but because of certain deficiencies we feel that we pass the opportunity of making those comments to someone with a better control of the English Language.

—o—

Bob Stevenson has found definitely that absence makes the heart grow fonder for somebody else. Tulsa is to Bob's popularity as oil is to water. He must have got mixed up with too much of this oil among the oil fields of the west. We're going to keep mum about the particulars of this by request of. . well who did you think would request it?

—o—

It's going to be a happy time for our freshmen. They soon will be sophomores. In a few weeks the only real freshmen will be those superiors of ours now, who will be genuine apprentices. . . . so we've been told. The really unfortunate thing about our advancing freshman class is the realization that all of them won't advance. . . for everyone knows that some people just can't help being freshmen.

ROBISON TO EDIT ECHO APRIL 30TH

In accordance with the custom of the Highland Echo wherin each staff editor and each junior associate editor edits one issue of the paper each year, Roberta Robison, staff editor, will have charge of the publication for the issue on April 30th.

There will be no Echo until that date.

TWILIGHT RECITAL NEXT TUESDAY ONE OF YEAR'S BEST PRESENTATIONS

Annual Concert of Chilhowee Club Under Direction of Miss Hale

Rehearsals are continuing for the annual Twilight Concert which is to be given in Voorhees Chapel at four o'clock on Tuesday afternoon, April 19. Students in the music department, members of Maryville and Knoxville clubs, together with other invited guests, will have the pleasure of listening to an artistically arranged program of music. The Maryville music department will be represented in particular by Garnet Manges and Margaret Melody.

Much of the interest in the program centers about the group of three numbers for an ensemble of six pianos. The members of this ensemble are Margaret Cragan, Carrie Pearson, Beulah Duggan, Grace Proffitt, William Crothers and James Crothers.

The Twilight Concert is the program for the April meeting of the Chilhowee Club, one of the two literary organizations of Maryville. Miss Hale, as a member of Chilhowee, has for a number of years been asked to furnish this program, and it has become a means of relating the organizations of Maryville and Knoxville, as well as of giving pleasure to guests who are invited to attend.

Glee Singers Present Annual Spring Concert

Dixie Vagabond Quartet Featured In Popular Numbers

The Glee Singers of Maryville College will present their annual spring concert in Voorhees Chapel Monday evening, May 2. The program will consist of numbers by the chorus and the Dixie Vagabond quartet, with special numbers by Miss Eleanor Henry and Mr. Chilton Bowles.

The Dixie Vagabond Quartet dates its fame back to 1928 when Jack Cotton and Walter Courtenay were leading glee singers and the quartet travelled all through East Tennessee. The Dixie Vagabonds of 1932 are Chilly Bowles, Don Briggs, Wesley Culver, and Bob Wallace.

Among the numbers to be presented by the chorus are "O Italia" from Lucia, by Donnizetti; "Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes", an old English air; and "Trees", by Joyce Kilmer. Other songs of a lighter vein will also be included on the program. Most of the selections by the quartet will be taken from the popluar music of the day.

Miss Eleanor Henry will play, as a violin solo, "Meditation", from Massenet's Thais, with humming accompaniment by the chorus. Mr. Chilton Bowles, tenor soloist, will sing the famous "Serenade" by Shubert.

The Glee Singers are under the direction of Miss Frances Henry. Miss Susan Howard will play the accompaniments, Mr. Robert Overly is president of the organization.

ANNUAL BLUE RIDGE CONFERENCE WILL BE THIRD WEEK IN JUNE

"Building The South of Tomorrow" Is Theme For Y. M. C. A.

With the theme "Building the South of Tomorrow", the annual Student Conference of the Southern Y. M. C. A. will meet in Blue Ridge from June 15 to 25. This announcement and other Blue Ridge information of interest to Y. M. C. A. members, is contained in a Blue Ridge Bulletin recently received by Ralph Teffeteller, president of the local organization. Information about the Y.W.C.A. Conference, which meets from June 6 to 16, will be announced later.

The opening address of the Y. M. C. A. conference will be delivered on the theme subject by President Frank P. Graham of the University of North Carolina. The ten-day program is further supported by equally able men. The fraternity discussion group will be led by Dean Floyd Field of Georgia Tech and the Reverend Thomas H. Wright of the National Council of the Episcopal Church. Bible study classes will be conducted by Dean Frank C. Foster of Tusculum College, Professor W. W. Burton of Clemson College, Dean George Noel Mayhew of Vanderbilt University, and Joe Brown Love of the Wesley Foundation of the Methdist Church. Dean E. L. Cloyd of North Carolina State College will be the lecturer on vocational guidance and personal adjustment.

The daily schedule of the conference is designed for each afternoon to be devoted entirely to recreation. The facilities provided make it possible for the delegates to play golf or tennis, swim, ride horseback, or browse in the library, as well as hike, climb, and explore the many points of interest near the scene of the conference.

Since Blue Ridge was established by the Blue Ridge Association twenty-one years ago, sixty thousand people have been on the grounds for inspiration and training. The majority of this number have been students and faculty representatives from the colleges of the South. It has become the Mecca of students who have come under its spell of profound influence. Through the grandeur of the scenery, the contagion of great world leaders, and the fellowship of the cosmopolitan group, the delegates come to feel a blessing like the strength of the cosmic ray, which comes from the great inter-stellar spaces.

Further testimony of the worth of the conference was given at a recent meeting of the Blue Ridge Planning Committee when a student of Emory University summed up his Blue Ridge experience in three points: widening of horizons to make him literally a citizen of the world, deepening of his spiritual life, and giving him helpful material to be used on his campus in the next year's work. Another college man reported: "It's better than a glorified 'bull session'; Blue Ridge is worth half a year in college, and there aren't any exams at the end."

MARYVILLE HONORED At NATIONAL CONVENTION OF P. K. D. IN TULSA

Lexington, Kentucky, Favored As City For 1934 Meet

The close of the 1932 debate season here brings with it the fact that Maryville College has definitely proved itself a school which can offer stiff opposition to all members of Pi Kappa Delta national forensic fraternity.

When it became known at Tulsa that the Maryville women's team of Elizabeth Duncan and Mildred MacKenzie had entered the semi-finals in women's debating, congratulations were offered to the Maryville delegation from schools all over the country.

Maryville was the only representative from this section of the United States to advance as far in any part of the convention.

Verton M. Queener, Maryville debate coach, points to the record of former Highlander forensic teams as illustrating the fact that the success of Maryville in competition has steadily improved.

The men's team was not as successful as the women, but Miss Duncan gained further laurels for the squad when she was placed in the upper bracket of two extempore speaking contests. Miss MacKenzie received a first-place vote in one of her two try-outs in oratory, and thus received special distinction.

The team ranking at the convention places the Maryville women in either sixth or seventh place, according to Mr. Queener.

The next national Pi Kappa Delta convention may be held in 1934 in Lexington, Ky. The Kentucky provincial convention in 1933, may also be held there. It was through the efforts of Maryville's debate coach, who is governor of the Kentucky province of Pi Kappa Delta, that an advisory vote of the national convention was in favor of Lexington for the 1934 meet.

This means that Maryville College will be able to send a complete delegation to each convention, and will favor the chances of greater Highlander achievements in both contests.

At the Tulsa convention, each member of the Maryville squad was forced to do double duty; to debate against at least five teams, and to prepare extempore speeches or give orations.

Before the teams reached the convention they debated against Berea college in a decision and non decision contest; against Centre College in a non-decision debate; against McKendree College, of Lebanon, Ill., in a non-decision; and against Missouri State Teachers College, of Springfield, Mo., in a decision debate. These contests were engaged in on four successive days and included over 1,000 miles in traveling.

On the way home the team debated against the College of the Ozarks, of Clarksville, Ark., Southwestern university of Memphis, and Cumberland university of Lebanon, Tenn., in three non-decision debates.

Mr. Queener expects that D. H.

When You And I Were Young—Julia Terry

Although in spring a young woman's fancy may lightly turn to thoughts of love, a little girl's fancy seriously turns to thoughts of low shoes, socks, and the discarding of long underwear. At least, that was the way of it when I was a youngster and ate licorice whips that cost a penny a piece.

While my mother would exclaim over the arrival of the first bluebird; I would exclaim over my new half socks that I was permitted to wear, and the fact that I was also allowed to cut off the end of the clothes line for use as a jumping rope.

School, of course, became exceedingly irksome and I longed for recess and the hours after school. Yes, tree climbing was, and still is upon certain private occasions, one of my favorite outdoor sports.

Jumping rope, was of course, a favorite sport, as well as a favorite exercise. Endurance contests rivaling the dance marathons of the present day occupied my time, and often I would go home exhausted, but a happy victor or a determined-to-win loser.

Roller skating was my favorite sport—when my bicycle had a flat tire. I was perhaps unduly attracted to roller skating when I was in the seventh grade because I had a "beau" and belonged to a skating club; but an early assertion of my

New Courses Are Scheduled As Graduation Requirements Change

DEGREE OF B. S. IN HOME ECONOMICS OFFERED

Plans For Honors Work Provide Credit For Students Doing Work Outside Class

The following statement, issued directly from the office of the Dean, contains detailed and authoritative information about the new college curricul um which will become effective next fall.

The 1932 issue of the catalog is now in the hands of the printer. When it appears it will contain complete statements regarding the changes which will become operative next September in the curriculum of the College.

The Committee on Curriculum Study and Revision, consisting of Dean Hunter, Chairman, Dr. Orr, Registrar Jones, and Miss Gamble, with President Lloyd sitting in in an advisory capacity, has been at work since October, 1930. Their recommendations, received, discussed, and adopted by the Executive Council of the Faculty and the Administrative Committee of the Directors, make up the body of the changes and additions in the curricular requirements of the College.

When Effective

These changes beocme fully effective for the class graduating in 1936. The provisions of the new curriculum will, however, be applied to students at present enrolled in the College in so far as they are not to the disadvantage of the student. For example, a requirement of the old curriculum dropped from the new will not be enforced for the students now enrolled who have not met it.

Graduation Requirements

Bible: Ten hours, as heretofore, but distributed, four hours in freshman year, three hours each in sophomore and junior years.

English: Twelve hours, distributed, six hours freshman English; six hours in sophomore year; three hours Systematic Discourse, three hours English Literature.

History: Six hours, a survey course in European and American History open to freshmen or sophomores. To be taken by freshmen who choose it as their fifth subject, otherwise to be taken in the sophomore year.

Foreign Language: Twelve hours if taken in one language begun in college, or if taken in two languages continued from high school with as much as two years of high school work in each.

Science: Fourteen or sixteen hours The beginning science courses, except Chemistry 111-112, will be given in units of four credit hours a semester, four hours of laboratry practice and two hours of lecture and quiz a week. The distribution of the requirement will be the same as heretofore, a year each in two sciences. If Chemistry 111-112 (six hours) is taken, the requirement will be fourteen hours; otherwise it will be sixteen.

Psychology: Three hours. The former requirement of six hours is reduced. The required course will be taken in the junior year and will be known as General Psychology.

Philosophy: Six hours. The courses in Ethics and The Grounds of Christian Belief, as heretofore, required of seniors, except that the order of the courses will be reversed, Ethics being offered in the first semester.

The Changes

It will be observed that the allotment of requirements involves increases and decreases in specific departments.

The increases are in the addition of three hours to the requirement in English and the increase in hours in Science from twelve to fourteen or sixteen.

The decreases are in the requirement in foreign language, in the reduction of the Psychology requirement, and in the omission of the three hour requirement in Mathematics.

ANN SMARTT WILL LEAD MAY DAY PROCESSION AS QUEEN OF FESTIVAL

Children's Search For Blue Bird of Happiness Is Theme Of Pageant

The May Day procession will be led by Queen Ann Smartt, according to vote of the senior class Thursday morning. Her attendants will be Margaret Penland, Opal Johnson, and Avaleen Hogan. The names of the king and the other three escorts have not yet been disclosed.

The May Day program will be held in the college woods on May 2. The student council is considering a location in a different part of the woods, and this year the prgram may be held in the natural ampitheatre over by the House in the Woods.

Plans are completed and a program of whimsy and appeal is promised. The pageant plot will center around the story of the search for the Blue Bird of Happiness. A little boy and his sister obtain permission from the queen to look through her realm, and in this process they consult Rip Van Winkle, the Three Bears, Peter Pan, Alice in Wonderland, and many other sympathetic friends.

Mrs. Queener has started directing our dances, and they, as features of the program, will lend artistic touches in both chorus and solo parts.

Theta Alpha Phi Will Stage "Outward Bound"

Harry Gauding To Take Lead In Drama of Death

"Something rather extraordinary happened last night. A play about death caught the attention of a New York audience, enlisted its sympathy, amused it, and ended by stirring it to very considerable depths of human pity and mortal terror." So writes John Corbin in the New York Times of "Outward Bound", the play selected by Theta Alpha Phi for production on May 5.

"Outward Bound" is one of the many metaphysical plays which have recently attracted all Broadway as the brightest and most extraordinary lights of the theatrical season. Among the galaxy of these metaphysical plays are such innovations as "Berkley Square", "Hotel Universe", and "Death Takes a Holiday."

Harry Gauding is cast as the leading character in the role of Tom Prior, a young liquor addict. Larry Somers, as Scrubby, is the pilot of the ominous vessel. Mrs. Nellie Morton as Ann, and Chilly Bowles, as Henry, are the two lovers. Dorothy McCulloch is Mrs. Clivedon-Banks, whose dignity is distrubed by each advent of the vigorously Irish Mrs. Midget, played by Mary Lovette. The Reverend William Duke is interpreted by Reno Smith. Don Briggs is "Mr. Lingley, or Lingley Limited". George Osborne, as the Reverend Frank Thomson, takes the role of the mysterious examiner. Larry Somers and Betty Wilbar are the stage managers.

A FEW RADICAL THOUGHTS

"I like radical people", a student said the other day. So say we all, if the radical be a Robespierre or a Luther. We admire the reactionary flame if it burn toward an increased purpose; we recognize that revolutions precede reforms. But we recognize a difference between the vision that impels a leader toward the beckoning Uptopia, and the ilare of ego that chafes a rebel to kick against apparent pricks.

The first type of reactionary acts in the cause of the millenium; the second type acts to justify his conditioned reflex to an imagined ill. There are few geniuses born to set free a people; there are many rebels bound to interpret sane conservativeness as the slave driver's yoke.

We recognize a difference also between the situation which demands a leader, and that which encourages rebels. There must be something greatly wrong—an injustice or an oppression—for a situation to breed a great radical—and these occasions come rarely. More often the situation has a number of petty annoyances which are to be overcome by sane, slow guidance. Here the rebels mistake the slow movement for stagnation, and their own momentary zeal for inspired leadership.

All reform is not reactionary. Slow progress has the advantage of being sounder, saner, and safer than the long strides of revolt. The need in the situation of slow improvement is not young reds, but long heads.

We are fortunate to have the safe guidance provided by our sane leaders. It is well for us, as students educated to recognize the significance of the past, to realize the difference between a great evil, which needs a great reformer; and a little restriction, which needs a sane leader followed by loyal sympathizers, not little rebels.

AN APPRECIATION

We enjoyed the chapel services last Saturday and yesterday. In our opinion the purpose of a morning chapel is akin to that of an early mass. It is to provide a few moments in which we may integrate our thoughts and aims for the day, and center them around a definite purpose.

We felt that the quiet and the soft music not only provided a morning inspiration, but also filled a need for a short time of communion and resolve.

We wish to express our appreciation to those members of the faculty and student body who made the prgrams possible. We hope that more services like these may be planned for occasional substitution in our customary procedure.

THE WORLD TODAY

Hopes for a peaceful Germany were made more promising by the German election held last week when Paul Von Hindenburg, eighty four year old warrior, won the election from his nearest rival, Hitler, by a majority of 6,000,000 votes.

At a youth mass meeting held in Washington last Sunday, representatives of the Youth of America went on record as favoring peaceful cooperation in place of war. This report was given to Secretary Stimson on the eve of his departure for Geneva to attend the disarmament Conference. It is one of the most remarkable stands ever taken by the youth of a country in an international way.

Sir James Jeans, speaking from London over the Columbia network, announced that he considers Copernicus, Newton, Darwin, Einstein, the discovery of electricity, and the discovery of the expanse of the universe as the six outstanding landmarks of science in the last 6,000 years.

Al Smith will accept the democratic election, denying assertions from California that his Catholicism destroys his chances of election. He denounced the propaganda that he is a "Stalking horse" for Governor Roosevelt.

Large areas of Argentina, Chile and Uruguay were smothered this week by ashes and gases from volcanoes of the South American Andes. Oxygen tubes have been asked for to relieve the difficulties made in breathing. Flames were spouted in the direction of Santiago and Buenos Aires.

Dr. Hussey Reads At Faculty Club

Dr. George B. Hussey is the author of the paper on "The Progress of Philology in America during the Last Quarter Century" which was read before the last meeting of the faculty club.

In part Dr. Hussey said "Philology, in the wider sense, is the delineation of the whole or of some one phase of by-gone civilization. It aims thus to influence the present by all that is best and worthiest in the past. In a narrower sense philology comprises the study of alphabets, inscriptions, manuscripts, inflection and derivation of words, syntax, rhetoric, and the criticism of literature."

In connection with the relation of modern and ancient writers, Dr. Hussey discussed the representative writers in Greek, Latin, Italian, Spanish, French, German, and English, and named particularly Homer, Cicero, Dante, Voltaire, Goethe, and Chaucer.

Girls "M" Club Makes Progress

The Chimneys will be the goal of the Women's "M" Club when the members of this organization take their spring hike on Saturday, April 30. The date had originally been set for April 9 but because of various complications the date has been changed.

This hike will be the second attended by the club since its organization in September of last year. Heretofore, the "M" Club has been a group of both men and women athletes who have earned their "M's", but in the fall of last year, the women decided to organize a group of their own. Throughout the year monthly meetings have been held, at which times various pertinent discussusions relating to athletics have been taken up, and one definite project has been put into operation.

At the beginning of the year a great need for women's lockers was recognized and the club set about obtaining temporary equipment to aid in the situation. A committee was sent to see Mr. Black soon after Christmas, and after various consultations the problem was solved by the maintenance of the lockers in the swimming pool building. Improvements have been made so that the situation is not so acute as it was when the girls were forced to run over the campus during their gym days, in the unattractive and inadequate gymnasium suit.

Because of its successful first year, the Women's "M" Club will carry on permanently as an organization separate from the Men's "M" Club and will consider as its projects many worthwhile athletic improvements.

The Prayer of An Introvert

God, oh give me trees upon a slant,
A grove of gleaming beaches and an oak,
A shining stream to flow near by the place,
A stream with silver fairies and emerald elves
Within its grassy banks and ponderous pools—
—Its pools containing clouds and sky and trees.
Oh, God, I have not asked so much of life
Before.
Now I pray a lovely house,
A Steinway grand, and shelves and shelves of books.
Oh God, I want a gift for making great
Imperious poems and tiny gossamer poems.
Please have no crowds of people here with charms,
And overbearing ways, and sneers and smiles,
But only friends of mine, devoted friends,
If there can be such in this whirling world.

"The Barretts of Wimpole Street" by Rudolf Besier. Boston: Little, Brown, and Co. 1931. $2.00.

Can you imagine the words the great Robert Browning and Elizabeth Barrett used in their ardent romance? Such a thing Rudolf Besier has attempted in his "The Barretts of Wimpole Street."

We had been skeptical about the dramatization of the rendezvous of these two poets, and our fears were not allayed by the reading of this five-act comedy. The Browning who steps briskly into the sick room of Elizabeth Barrett is not the poet we know through his "Ring and the Book" and "Andrea del Sarto". One critic has said that Browning would not have loved the Elizabeth Mr. Besier has created, and that Elizabeth would not have loved the Robert Browning the playwright has conceived.

It must be remembered that this is drama and not biography, but when one attempts to put on the stage the life of characters as great as the Brownings, he must confine himself to their personalities.

The play is simple in construction and is easily read. The tension and oppression of the Barrett home is relieved several times by humor. The outstanding instance of this is between Elizabeth and Browning, when he is asked to interpret a line in his "Sordello". He replies, "Well, Miss Barrett—when that passage was written only God and Robert Browning understood it. Now only God understands it."

—Junius Allison.

THE LITTLE CHURCH

The increasing alertness of thoughtful people is giving considerable trouble to militarists.

One of the favorite arguments for war has grown out of the convincing theory of the survival of the fittest. The war lords tell us that the result of an intensified struggle for existence should be of real benefit to the race because the weaklings are killed off. But are they? War is notoriously not a respector of persons. And at the first sign of danger a call is issued for the most perfect specimens of manhood in the nation. The weak, mentally deficient, and socially unfit are left at home to propagate their kind.

Another defense for war used by militarists who pose as being scientific is that man has been psychologically proved a beligerent animal. Ignore for a moment the fact that authorities on the study of the human mind are not agreed upon that thesis, and you still can remind your military-minded friend that modern fighting—in which the soldiers in the field are mere pawns on a chess board—does not afford a natural expression for the alleged "combative instinct".

In a recent issue of a popular periodical, H. G. Wells had this to say about man and his affairs: "It will soon be decided whether Homo Sapiens is a mentally defective creature of fear, greed, habit, impulse, and dull ambition, hopelessly divided against himself, or whether he is a sane animal, capable of acting fearlessly in the presence of facts which challenge him so imperatively.

"It will soon be decided whether Homo can pass as sane and worthy of a future, or whether he is a demented tragedy, incapable of managing his own affairs, and doomed to rapid progress through violence and disorder to complete self-destruction.

"These are not empty phrases. They are charged with the accumulating anxieties, frustrations, and sufferings of nineteen millions of human beings."

Union Presbytery Meets At College

Dr. Clifford E. Barbour, Knoxville minister who has been the guest of Maryville College at various occasions, was elected moderator of the Union of Presbytery at its regular spring session held in Thaw Hall, April 12 and 13.

The Rev. Theron Alexander, father of Theron Alexander, a freshman here, and new pastor of the Park City Presbyterian Church of Knoxville, also spoke during the session.

Dr. E. L. Orr, brother of Dr. H. E. Orr of the Maryville College faculty, and synodical secretary of the Synod of Tennessee, addressed the session on Wednesday. He pointed out that all boards of the Presbyterian Church of America had balanced their budgets during the past year, and gave as reasons the age and strength of the church and its resources.

The Rev. E W Hall, formerly of Maryville College faculty, served as a temporary clerk for the session. Dr. J. M. Alexander, D. D., also of Maryville, was elected alternate commissioner, by the Presbytery, to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church. The Rev. W. R. Dawson, of the Fort Sanders Presbyterian Church of Knoxville, was elected commissioner.

FROM OTHER HILLS

A professor of psychology at Boston university has abolished all note-taking in his courses. His reason for taking the step was his contention that in note-taking the hand is subtsituted for the brain, and in the end offers a poor and incomplete reproduction of the lecture.

Hamlin university, the oldest college in Minnesota, no longer requires students to have credits for graduation. When they are able to pass a comprehensive examination, they receive their diplomas.

A survey conducted among the seniors of Ripon College, Wisconsin, revealed strong social and economic convictions. Over ninety per cent believe marriage, the church, and the home indispensible to society, companionate marriage having been voted from consideration by sixty-seven per cent. They do not believe in class distinction nor in the equal distribution of wealth. They favor democracy in government, and the golden rule in society.

T. H. Black, editor of the New Orleans Loyola University "Maroon", received diverse comments on his plea for students to aid in the unemployment of relief work by contributing one cent each meal for the establishment of soup kitchens. Citadel's Bull Dog, taking note of the fact that the "mite boxes" there have failed, turns its attention to the prospect of Sunday movies as benefits for the unfortunate. But the Daily Tar Heel, University of North Carolina, while recognizing the excellent spirit behind the Loyola suggestion, questions whether soup alone would sustain the twelve million unemployed.

Al Duff Is New Y. M. C. A. President

Alexander P. Duff, of Boat, Ky., was elected president of the Y. M. C. A. for 1932-1933 Tuesday night. The election was held in Bartlett Hall with several hundred men participating.

Lloyd Robert Overly, of Greensburg, Pa., was elected vice-president; John Tope, of Moultrie, Ohio, treasurer; and Steve Boretsky, of Scottdale, Penn., secretary.

The election of secretary had to be held after the chapel services on Wednesday due to the fact that a sufficient majority could not be secured by either candidate during the balloting on Tuesday night.

Mr. Duff selected the following men as members of his cabinet: Fred Kirchner and Frank Neff, "M" book; Donald Briggs and Earle Crawford, Lyceum course; Fred Kirchner, Frank Neff, James Smith, Warren Warmen, and Andrew Newcomer, Religious and Social activities; Clifton Moore, Joe Woodard and David McArthur, athletic committee; Harry Mathias and Willi[illegible] Hannah, music committee; Ha[illegible] Wood and Leslie Webb, publicity; and George Vick, missions.

"ELECTRIC BULLETS"

THE result of exhaustive wind-tunnel tests of conventional trolley car models revealed that at speeds of 70 and 80 miles per hour, 70 per cent of the total power was consumed in overcoming air resistance. Streamlining saves approximately 20 per cent of the power.

When the Philadelphia and Western Railway Company decided to replace its cars with faster and more efficient equipment, it chose "electric bullets"—new streamlined cars—each powered by 4 G-E 100-hp. motors. The cars, constructed of aluminum alloy, with tapered noses and tails, are much lighter in weight and capable of greater operating efficiency.

In developing transportation apparatus, college-trained General Electric engineers have conducted extensive tests to improve operating conditions. On land, on sea, and in the air, to-day's equipment is safer, swifter, more dependable, and more comfortable.

Highlanders Win Five Of Eight Earley Season Games

Tracksters Impressive In Big Victory Over Tennessee Poly In Opening Fracas Of Season

Team In Knoxville Today For Meet With U. T. Volunteers

DEPEND ON MOORE

Entire Team Shows Class In Trampling T. P. I. By 99 to 32 Score

This afternoon when the Highlanders take the cinder path against U. T., Maryville will present one of the best teams that they have had in years. Coach Thrower will have his men in the best of condition for this meet. Tennessee is expected to shine in the field events, but Maryville should have a good chance on the track.

Our track team showed much promise in the meet last Saturday against T. P. I. Despite the mud, a good group of students turned out to cheer their favorites on to victory.

Byar showed good form in both of the dashes, winning first in both the 220 and the 100 yard sprints. He covered the 100 yard in 10.2 seconds to make the best time that he has ever made in a meet. He should give Clark a good race this afternoon in the dashes over at U. T. if nothing happens. Wood and Paul, both of Maryville, had a close race in the 440, Wood winning by a hair's breadth. Hitch, Willocks, Moore, and Mann all came through with either firsts or seconds in the distance runs, Spec especially showed a lot of endurance and form by taking first in both the mile and two mile and also running on the relay team.

Sullivan of T. P. I. was the individual star of the day, taking firsts in both the hurdles and seconds in the 100 yard dash and the high jump. He also took third in the broad jump for a total of 17 of his team's points.

The Highlanders took all but one first in the field events. Cleveland and Calloway took the discus throw, Cleveland tossing it 102 feet 3 1-2 inches. Milling took first in the high jump with 5 feet, 7 inches, while T. P. I. took second. Calloway and Overly took first and second respectively in the shot put. Felknor took first in the pole vault with Bratschie taking second. Russell took first in the javelin with a throw of 163 feet. T.P.I. took their only first in the field events when Binns took the broad jump. Milling took second in this event to score 3 more points for his team.

The meet was easily taken by our Scots by a score of 99-32. There is another meet here next Saturday, Maryville meeting Centre College. This will be the last chance to see our team at home this season for the next two meets are held away. A large crowd should turn out to see this meet.

Last week, when the local aspirants to the Tennessee Delta orden of Theta Alpha Phi were animating the campus in varied ways, Larry Somers, characterized by bathrobe, slippers, and candle, took occasion to remark to one of his professors that he, like Diogenes, was engaged in hunting for an honest man. The challenged faculty members who was Professor Davis, replied with equal self-possession: "If I told you what I think of you you would think you had found him."

Mildred MacKenzie (describing her trip to Tulsa): And I got so fat!

Railroad Signals

The code of signals, uniform on all railroads, is: Two blasts (train standing), proceed; two blasts (train running), stop; three blasts (train standing), back up; three blasts (train running), stop next station; four blasts (train standing), test brakes; four blasts (train running), decrease speed; five blasts (train running), increase speed; six blasts (train running) turn off steam; seven blasts (train running), send more steam; eight blasts (train running), brakes out of order.

SPORT SLANTS

By BOB RULE

When the Highlanders dropped two games to the Knoxville Smokies by big scores, quite a bit of gossip was heard over the campus about Maryville's chances of enjoying another successful season on the diamond. And, I guess, there were several good reasons for this gossip because the Highlander looked every thing but a smart ball club in these two games.

Their base running was entetraining to say the least. Their fieldins was below the standard Maryville level and their hitting was not indicative of dynamite, or anything.

One big reason for the Scots' poor shwing in the early season games, I believe, was the absence of Tom West. Johnny Kizer has carried on in his position in great style but Kizer is needed elsewhere and Tom West is needed, sorely needed, at short.

Wooard, West and White have played together in the Maryville infield for the past two years and tearing an old combination apart hardly ever does a ball club any good. You all well know that West has been offered contracts by more than one major league team and to take a potential big leaguer out of a college infield is something like removing a cylinder from a four cylinder motor.

Johnny Kizer can pitch and Mr. Honaker needs pitchers, so I've heard. And so if that internal ankle of West's will ever heal, it looks as if the baseball team will be supplied with the spark that will make the difference in a pippin good ball club and a very mediocre one. I may be right or I may be wrong, anyway—them's my sentiments.

If Mr. Thrower knows his track, and I think Mr. Thrower knows his track, the coming race between Spec Moore and Kidney of L. M. U. is going to be worth walking to Harrogate to see. Who doubts that Spec is one of the greatest distance men that Maryville has ever produced? And who won't admit that this Kidney boy is highly capable of running somebody's sox off? I say, if Mr. Thrower knows his tracksters, this mile and two mile race at Harrogate will be a battle of the century. Two bits on Spec!

Walter Pippert deserves a word or three for the way that he handled himself in the first game with Appalachian. Pippert made his first journey to the mound in college baseball and he surely made those heavy hitting boys from Carolina look bad with his slow ball. That double and that triple that he hit didn't look so bad either.

WHITE IS ELECTED BASEBALL CAPTAIN

Gains Post Over Three Men To Become Leader In Two Major Sports

Easy White was elected baseball captain for the season of 1932 by his team mates last week before the first game with Hiwassee College. White was elected over Lincoln Hurst, an outfielder, Tom West, short stop and Joe Woodard, third baseman.

White, a nephew of John Stone, the greatest baseball player ever turned out at Maryville, who is at present batting in the clean up position for the Detroit Tigers in the American League, was also captain of this year's basketball team and his election to the baseball captaincy was met with much favor.

White has played first base for the past two years and he seems to improve every year he plays, both in hitting and fielding. At present, he is near the top in the hitting department and he should be one of the best hitters on the team before the year is over.

Easy is a senior and this, of course, will be his last season on the Maryville diamond. He will be mised equally as much on the football and basketball teams next year as he will be in baseball.

Team Loses Twice To Smokies But Other Teams Are Beaten; Vanderbilt Coming Next Week

Vestal Is Swamped In Two Games As Pitching Improves

HOME RUNS ABOUND

Woodard, Russell and Stone Club Out Five Circuit Smashes In Game

Maryville's baseballers more than held their own during the past two weeks in games with professional and amateur clubs, and the showing that the Maryville boys made against fast opposition indicates that they are going to be plenty tough for college teams to beat.

The Knoxville Smokies, members of the Southern Association, gave the Highlanders the worst defeat they have suffered in several years when they won the last of a two game series by a score of 21 to 2. The Maryville pitchers, working in their first game, were hit all over the lot by the slugging Knoxville outfit.

The Highlanders came back strong and took two games from Vestal, members of the City League in Knoxville. A ninth inning rally, featured by an out-of-the-park smash by Easy White, won the first game for the Scots by a score of 12 to 10. The Highlanders slammed out a total of 15 base hits during the game.

Yesterday afternoon the Highlanders gave as pretty an exhibition of hitting as you will see in any man's league. They completely swamped the Vestal team and five home runs by the Highlanders were chiefly responsible for the swamping. Woodard homered on his first two trips to the plate and Russell, a fly chaser extraordinary, refused to be outdone and gathered two circuit smashes in consecutive times at bat. The final score was 18 to 5.

Cecil Stone, the Vestal flasher, showed off in front of the home town boys in a real big way by garnering four hits in five trips to the platter. He climaxed his day with a terrific smash in the ninth inning that came to a halt in the vicinity of the big oak tree in center field. Stone rounded the bases before the Vestal outfielder had retreived the ball.

Jim Holloway continues to establish himself as Coach Honaker's leading moundsman. He took the hillock against the Vestalites yesterday afternoon and held them to five widely scattered hits during the six innings that he worked.

Appalachian Teachers Only College Team To Grab Win Over Scots

HOLLOWAY PRODUCES

Games With Vandy Will Throw Light On 1932 State Championship

Maryville College's baseball team is off to another good year and from the looks of things at present this season should be "just another Maryville year" on the diamond.

The Highlanders have played four college games this year and they have come out on top in three of them. They defeated Hiwassee College from Madisonville in the opening college game of the year by a score of 10-5. Appalachian State College from Boone, N. C. came here Monday and Tuesday for a two day series and managed to leave with an even break. They trampled the Highlanders by a score of 10 to 6 in the game Monday but the Scotties came back Tuesday loaded for bear and clubbed out an 11 to 1 victory.

The pitching of Jim Holloway was the feature of the second game with Appalachian. Holloway was the first Maryville pitcher to pitch a complete game this year and his performance against the Carolinians was very encouraging. He was given good support by his mates both in the field and at the plate.

The Maryvillians went to Madisonville Thursday afternoon for a return game with Hiwassee and again Coach Honaker's boys hit the ball hard and often to gain the decision. However, the Scots waited until late in the game to explode their dynamite. Going into the eighth inning trailing by a score of 2 to 0, the boys blasted the offerings of Youell, Hiwassee hurler, all over the lot and the end of the game found them in possession of a 14 to 4 decision.

The greatest attraction of the current season will be offered next Friday and Saturday when Vanderbilt University comes for a pair of games with Coach Honaker's outfit. Vanderbilt, famous for their football teams, always puts a winning baseball team on the diamond and the series next week should go a long ways to determine just who will have the best team in the state this year.

Last season the Highlanders claimed the State championship and the Vanderbilt team was the only outfit in Tennessee that was able to compare favorably with them.

NEW CURRICULUM

Majors and Minors

The definitions of the terms "major" and "minor" have not been changed, but the time of election of major and minors has been changed from the end of the sophomore year to the end of the freshman year. Also the distinction between the minors—the calling of one of them a "prescribed" minor—has been dropped. Under the new organization, both minors are prescribed in the sense that each department lists in the forth-coming catalog the minors which are acceptable with a major in that department, for example, students majoring in Chemistry will elect minors from among Biology, Physics, Mathematics, and Education.

In keeping with the change in time of choosing major and minor subjects, the library stack permit privilege will be extended to sophomores as well as to juniors and seniirs.

Physical Examination

At the time of opening next fall all students will be given a physical examination under the direction of the Physical Training department assisted by local physicians employed for the purpose. The objective aimed at in this examination is the better correlation of the physical training work with the actual physical needs of the individual student.

New Courses

The number of new courses is not large. It is the belief of the committee that we are following a sound practice in not scattering our offerings over a highly varied field of courses, but rather in concentrating on quality in a more restricted list of course offerings.

Some new courses, however, have been added.

By 1933-1934 it will be possible for a student to do major work in Physics. For the coming year the course offerings in this department will be expanded. The present courses, four three-hour courses, will be combined in two four-hour courses as the first year of Physics, and a second year of Physics, two three-hour courses in advance of any now offered, will be given. Then in 1933-1934 a third year of Physics will be offered thus rounding out a full major sequence for the department.

In the Latin department we are offering for the first time college work in Beginning Latin. This will be a year course of six hours. The Latin department is recommending a year of Greek for students majoring in Latin. In the case of such students the single year of Greek will be counted for credit.

In the English department the required sophomore course in literature will be a three-hour course, called "English Literary Masterpieces", which will emphasize content and methods of study of literature rather than the facts about the literature and authors.

Sudents who elect to major or minor in English will be required to take beside this another three-hour course called "The Facts of English Literary History". A new course in The English Novel will be given in the second semester. The course in the teaching of English, heretofore a two-hour course, will be a three-hour course.

In the Bible Department, the freshman course will be a two-semester course, two hours each semester. One semester will be the Historical Geography of Bible Lands, the other The Life of Christ as presented in the synoptic gospels.

In the Mathematics department a full year of freshman Mathematics will be offered: first semester, Plane Trigonometry; second semester, Analytic Geometry. These courses are prerequisite to work in Physics as well as to advanced Mathematics. The course in college Algebra, formerly a two-hour course throughout the year will now be a three-hour second-semester course.

A new organization of the work in Political and Social Science is effected. Instead of providing a major over this whole field the department now specifies separate major sequences in Economics, Political Science, and Sociology. Two new courses are to be offered for the coming year, a course in International Relations for the Political Science sequence, and a course in the Economic History of the United States which may count either as Economics or History. The course in American Government will be reduced from six to four hours, and the course in The Principles of Sociology will be expanded from four to six.

Home Economics Degree

Students majoring in Home Economics, meeting the general graduation requirements of the College together with the requirements of the Home Economics deparment for the major, will be graduated with the degree of Bachelor of Science in Home Economics (B.S. in H.E.) Three major sequences are provided by the Department: General Home Economics, Clothing, Foods. The full details of requirements by years and of articulation with the general requirements for graduation would overburden this article.

New courses in Home Economics are: a two-hour lecture course in Physiolgy, a one-hour course for seniors taking the clothing major similar to the Practice House course for General Home Economics and Foods majors. A course for students nt majoring in Home Economics, a clothing course to parallel the present "Brides" course in Foods, will be given.

New Course Numbers

A new system of course numbering will be instituted. Freshman courses will have numbers in the "100" group; sophomore courses will have numbers in the "200" group, and junior and senior courses will bear "300" numbers. Thus, former Chemistry 1 and 2 will be Chemistry 101-102; former English 1, Systematic Discourse, will be English 201; and former Psychology 1 will be Psychology 301. Odd numbers are, as a rule, first semester courses; even numbers designate second-semester courses.

Honors Work

In keeping with wide-spread and profitable practice in a large number of leading colleges, Maryville proposes to undertake some form of Honors Work for superior students who wish to enter upon it. The plans for this are still in the making, but some general idea of it can be given here. Students who qualify for it by virtue of exceptional grade records and proved qualities of mind and reliability of work habits may undertake work independent of class work and instead of class work in perhaps one fifth of a full schedule. This work will be directed by an instructor in the student's major department. Students doing Honors Work will probably be freed from the requirements of class atendance, routine assignments, and tests and examinations in courses in their major department. A comprehensive examination will be required of Honors students in the major subject a few weeks before the end of the senior year. Admission to Honors work will probably be granted at the middle of the junior year.

Fuller announcements regarding Honors Work will be forthcoming before the close of the present session.

Registration for 1932-1933

Plans are being made for registering the student for classes for the coming year before the close of school. Class schedules will be arranged and his student's schedule card issued him when he makes a deposit of $10 on tuition for next year. This deposit may be sent in during the summer up to August 15th. After that date, if the deposit has not come in, the student's enrollment in classes will be cancelled.

It is hoped as a resut, not only that tiresome waiting in line may be avoided but also that every one may be better able to plan his work for the coming year.

Students who do not make this early registration who return in September will not only have to undergo the inconvenience of waiting in line, but also will have to take what is left in the way of places on class rolls.

DR. STEVENSON IN PITTSBURG

Dr. and Mrs. Stevenson and Mrs. Lloyd left Thursday morning, April 7, for a ten-day motor trip to Pittsburgh. Mrs. Stevenson will be present for the birthday anniversary of her sister there, and Mrs. Lloyd will visit her sister who also lives in Pittsburgh.

CHURCH ELECTS COLLEGE PROFESSORS

At an annual election held by the New Providence Presbyterian Church last week, Dr. George A. Knapp was elected an elder, Professor George J. Howell and Mr. Ernest Brown were elected deacons, and Mr. F. L. Proffitt was made a trustee.

LEE HALL, BLUE RIDGE, N. C.

WHAT BLUE RIDGE MEANS TO ME

RALPH TEFFETELLER

As I write I see rising before me Lee Hall, in all its stately majesty. Sometimes I see it flooded in moonlight, and sometimes quiet in the rays of sunset. I see a number of friends moving about on the porch of Lee Hall, and on the green campus. Some of them are hiking up a nearby mountain where they gaze from its height across the valleys, wondering at God's handiwork. I see the heart-shaped Lake Laurel at the foot of the mounain, its laughing waters caught by the breeze which sweeps down from the mountain fastnesses. These pictures and many other come to my mind when I think of Blue Ridge.

As you approach Blue Ridge grounds by the winding forest road, your attention is focused on the luxuriant growth of the forest, all decorated by the bright patches of rhodendron. Then suddenly you are gazing at Lee Hall, as it rises from the hills, guarded from behind by the same old faithful High Top, and flanked on each side by the mountains in all their strength and beauty. Approaching, you notice the green of the campus, and the neatness of the buildings. As you gain the porch of the Hall, you turn to gaze in the opposite direction.

And there is presented to you an added feature of the setting with which Blue Ridge is so richly endowed. It is indeed a rare treat to see, from the porch of Lee Hall, the panorama of mountain and valley, in the late afternoon when the shaows are lengthening, or in the early morning when the mists are rising. From there you watch the Seven Sisters in stately progression toward the haughty pinnacle, and see the irregular crags piercing the sky. This is a part of Blue Ridge.

As you mingle with the students of your own age and make contact with the leaders at Blue Ridge, you acquire a finer sense of appreciation for the place. As a result of these experiences you will gain more depth, perspective, finesse, and independence. I have found that at Blue Ridge one learns to admire those people who have a definite purpose in life, and to abhor the carelessness of these drifters who have none. Blue Ridge emphasizes the fact that purpose makes life coherent and harmonious.

I am heart and soul for Blue Ridge, because of all it has done for me and all it offers you. I wish to make a direct appeal to each man and woman on the campus to consider a trip to Blue Ridge during his college career. If you will go there in a receptive and appreciative attitude, you will be amazed at the complete rejuvenation of your spiritual life, overjoyed at discoveries in human relationships, and awed by the superb beauty of God's handiwork.

WHEN YOU AND I WERE YOUNG

independence caused us to part—and I had my bicycle repaired. I took one long bicycle trip and wore out both tires so that both the machine and the bicycle days were gone. Anyway, I was about to enter high school and I came to the conclusion one day that I must put away my childish things because I was going downtown to school.

Before that time of attempted sophistacation, I spent my nights, when it didn't become dark until 8:30, playing hide-and-go-seek, run-sheepy-run, cheese-it, or cops-and robbers, until my parents and other parents in the neighborhood would decide in my behalf as well as in their own that it was time for me to go to bed.

Why these various activities were more enjoyable in the spring than in any other season is somewhat of a mystery, but I do know that they all constituted very satisfactory spring tonics which otherwise might have been administered and taken in a much more disagreeable way.

Dr. Lloyd Plans Trip

Dr. Lloyd will leave Maryville on Thursday morning, April 21, to begin a series of speaking engagements which extend through the end of the month.

From April 22 to April 24 he will be in Ossian, Indiana, where he will give the high school commencement address on Thursday morning, April 22, and preach in the First Presbyterian Church on Sunday morning, April 24. Dr. Lloyd supplied this pulpit during his course at McCormick Seminary in Chicago.

He will return to Maryville on Tuesday and on April 29 will address the Karnes High School in Knoxville. On April 30 and May 1 at Montvale Springs he will deliver three addresses to groups of University of Tennessee students.

Dr. Lloyd's engagements for the past week included an address before the Civitan Club in Knoxville on April 15.

PI KAPPA DELTA

Hopkins, national president of Pi Kappa Delta, will bring his Heidelberg college debating teams, of Tiffin, Ohio, to Lexington next year, before the provincial contest starts, for a pre-season tournament.

Other work reflecting upon the place of importance Maryville College holds in Pi Kappa Delta is that Mr. Queener was secretary of the charter committee which granted admission into the fraternity of eleven schools including East Tennessee State Teachers College, of Johnson City, and Asheville Normal School, of Asheville, N. C.

NEOPHYTES

Maryville inmates were exceptionally fortunate this spring in having April fool day extended to a full week.

Surprise was forthcoming, however when the fraternity neglected to have Reno Smith and Betty Wilbar do a Jack and Jill episode. This slight was attributed to Smitty's inability to commandeer a bucket.

Prof. Queener In Asheville

Verton M. Queener, debate coach of Maryville College, led a discussion on "Debate Plans, Methods, and Strategy" at a meeting of the Southern Association of Teachers of Speech, held at the George Vanderbilt hotel in Asheville, N. C. yesterday.

In the morning, Mr. Queener attended a meeting of the newly organized Tennessee Association of Teachers of Speech in the Vanderbilt hotel. Argus Tressidder, debate coach of the University of Tennessee, who has been critic-judge for several Maryville debates, is first vice-president of the association.

At the close of the Southern Association meeting Mr. and Mrs. Queener, their son George, and Miss Elizabeth Duncan, Maryville College junior, went to Montreat, N. C., to spend the week-end at Miss Duncan's home.

Y. W. C. A. Gets New Suite Of Rooms

The new suite of rooms for the Y.W.C.A. is now in process of construction. The Stidham apartment, underneath the Practice House, has been assigned to the use of the girls, and remodelling work was begun last Tuesday. The rooms will be completed in a few weeks, and the Y. W. C. A. interior decorators will have them ready for occupancy next fall.

The project is being financed by the Y.W.C.A. and the college, with Dr. Lloyd a generous donor. The Y. W. C. A. building fund was drawn upon for this purpose, so making possible this substitution for a separate Y.W.C.A. building.

After the remodeling, the apartment will be composed of four rooms, two large ones which can be thrown together for Sunday meetings; and two small ones, one for the cabinet meetings, and one for use as a kitchen. The present porch is to be glassed in, and the steps will be changed to make a double entrance to the Y. W. C. A. and the Practice House.

The present Y. W. C. A. reading room, at the extreme west end of Thaw, will be converted into a class room.

The new housing project for the Y.W.C.A. is only one of many goals toward which the new cabinet is working. Each week is being devoted to some special plan. This week had two objectives. One was the collecting of old clothes in each girls' dormitory for distribution amng the poor. The other was the reception, on Tuesday afternoon, for the new advisory board. The hour was from 4:00 to 5:30, and over a hundred girls attended. Music was furnished by a stringed trio, and a vocal duet.

Next week the Y.W.C.A. program will be devoted to the objective of cleaning the Y. W. C. A. reading room, and putting it in order for spring.

Plans are under way now for two joint meetings with the U. T. Y.W.C.A. On Thursday night, April 28, a representative group of Maryville members will go to Knoxville and furnish the evening's program, and the first part of May the U. T. organization will come to Maryville with a program.

The cabinet meets twice a month, on Snday afternoon, and in these meetings the plans of each department are discussed, and objectives are agreed upon for the entire organization.

BANQUET

The annual round of spring banquets got officially under way on Thursday evening, April fourteenth when the Ministerial Association gathered in Science Hall for their spread. Under the direction of the Home Ec department, the affair was executed in a most pleasing fashion, the food and other necessary decorations being of the first water. The theme of the evening was along the line of leap year and was well managed.

OBSERVATIONS

BREAD-LUGGERS
THE VICK LINE
DISCOVERY OF DOC

Spring is here, and the freshmen and the freshmanlike upper-classmen are making sure to pick all of the tulips as soon as they come out.

—o—

Quite a number of scandalous tales were told concerning the head of the German department and the president of the student council after, or during, the mountain hike last week. Passers-by said that the scene in the Hussey-coached group looked like a case of confiscation on the part of Miss MacKenzie. We don't like to talk about scenes, nor even to think of them, but we'd like to get a picture of Dr. Hussey when he first became conscious of the advancing time while he was quietly whiling the hours away out in the great open spaces. From all indications, it's a fact that as a chaperone for a mountain hike, Dr. Hussey makes a good chaperone for a mountain hike.

—o—

People who like storms should have Maryville suggested to them as a place for a permanent residence, provided that they would locate a reasonable distance from Pistol creek. The rivulet took possession of Maryville's lowlands last week including Dr. McMurray's customary hang-out, the city park. As inviduals, in Carnegie, we don't mind storms, and we don't mind people who like storms but something should be done to cramp the style of Brownie's plice dog. If any one sleeps through thunder, it does not mean a thing, because the canine of the back yard is sure to come around in the pinches and wake the heavy sleepers.

—o—

Discoveries are often made in different fields (as where a hawk discovers a field mouse) such as science, geology, etc. but the latest development on the Hill has been made in the field of anthropology. Our particulars, it appears, are John Smerznak, commonly known by his gym teacher as "Smeareye", and the woman in the cese. We calmly glided past John's room one day in a mood of utter unexpectancy and were surprised, even bewildered, to read on the door of the Ansonia boy's room the glaring, startling wrds—DISCOVERED BY A DEBUTANTE.

—o—

A little of irony must have been connected with Fritz Cromer's mountain hike last week. The night before Fritz practiced hiking by strolling from Vestal to Maryville in a

PI KAPPA DELTA TO INITIATE TEN NEW MEMBERS MAY 11

President Lloyd Will Be Taken Into Fraternity At Anniversary

The tenth anniversary celebration and initiation of Pi Kappa Delta at Maryville College will be held May 11 in Voorhees Chapel. The Tennessee Alpha chapter of Pi Kappa Delta is at Maryville.

This will be the first time that anyone outside the honorary fraternity will have the opportunity of seeing the initiation. This year several hundred guests wil be invited to the proceedngs, and the reception to be held in the lower rooms of the chapel after the ceremonies.

Dr. Edwin R. Hunter, member of the fraternity and former debate coach at Maryville College will address the gathering on "Ten Years of Pi Kappa Delta at Maryville College." Verton M. Queener, present Maryville debate coach, will act as master of ceremonies and will make the welcoming address.

Dr. Ralph W. Lloyd, president of Maryville College, will be inducted as honorary member of the chapter, and it is hoped that his presence will give added prestige and importance to debating at Maryville College. Dr. Lloyd has shown himself to be a patron of debating dur-

Crooks Presented By Community Concerts

A number of students and two teachers of the Maryville College music department attended the concert given by Richard Crooks, tenor, in Knoxville Tuesday evening. With a classical program of varied selections Mr. Crooks enchanted his audience, so that in spite of the generosity of his encores they were reluctant to let him go. In an enthusiastic report of the concert one Knoxville newspaper said: "It was the most wonderful bel canto singing heard on Knoxville during the past decade."

GLEE SINGERS TO PRESENT PROGRAM ON MONDAY NIGHT

Dixie Vagabond Quartette To Sing Popular Numbers; Pat Henry To Play

The Glee Singers have been working hard for several weeks polishing up the numbers to be used in the annual Spring Concert. The program this year will not consist of comic opera, as in former years, but will be composed of a pleasing variety of chorus, quartet, and sperial numbers, ranging from the light, humorous, "Funiculi Finucula" to the noble and inspiring "Italia" from the popular opera "Lucia d'Lammermoor", by Donnizetti.

Miss Eleanor Henry, popular violinist, will appear as soloist, with a background of male voices humming the accompaniment. She will play "Meditation' from Thais by Jules Massenet, one of the most beautiful, yet simple and unassuming pieces ever writen for the violin.

"Chilly" Bowles will appear on a Maryville stage for the last time as a student. He will sing two selections, ideally suited to his fine tenor voice, "Serenade" by Franz Schubert and "Song of Songs" by Moya.

Popular songs by the Dixie Vagabond Quartette will complete the program. Such songs as "I Love a Parade", "St. Louis Blues", "You're the One", and many others will be sung.

PLAY OF DRAMATIC FRATERNITY TO BE SENIORS BENEFIT

Theta Alpha Phi Will Present 'Outward Bound' On Friday, May 6

"Touched with a most extraordinary imagination. Among the most interesting and moving things which have happened in the theatre while we were present." This is what Heywood Broun has to say in the New York World concerning "Outward Bound," E. W. Osborn, in the New York Evening Sun calls it the "real news of the dramatic season".

"Outward Bound", which will be presented by Theta Alpha Phi on Friday, May 6, is a play concerning death, Sutton Vane, the dramatist, is one of the few writers who have handled this subject successfully. The play has gone through fourteen editions; it took London by storm,

QUEENER TO OFFER PUBLIC SPEAKING COURSE NEXT YEAR

Organized As Society, Class Will Have Debates, Orations

This course is to be organized and carried on as a society. It is designed to teach by actual experience, those who want training in public speech. A speaker's bureau will be maintained by the society which will secure engagements for qualified members to speak before lunching clubs, organizations and societies of various kinds. One day each week the group will meet as a class for a lecture on principles and criticism on past performances. The regular society meeting to be held each Tuesday evening from seven to eight-thirty o'clock. At the regular meeting a teacher will serve as critic but the program will be arranged and carried out by teachers and students. Programs are designed to be interesting and instructive. Prequisite, sopohomore standing. Two hours credit each semester for the first year's work. All students representing the college in public speech will be chosen from this society, or class.

How It Would Work

In the evening meeting the class will be conducted in the same manner as a literary society. The form-

ONE DAY MEET OF INTERRACIAL GROUP TO CONCLUDE YEAR

Second Yearly Conference Will Be Held At Knoxville, May 14th

Dr. Charles Johnson, whose report of the work of the League of Nations committee to Liberia has recently been published, will be one of the principle speakers at the second one-day conference of the East Tennessee Student's Interracial Commission. Dr. Johnson is at present connected with Fiske University.

The conference will be held on May 14 on the campus of Knoxville College. It will be attended by students from Maryville College, Knoxville College, Morristown College, and the University of Tennessee.

Dr. Johnson has been asked to deliver an address on the slavery situation in Liberia. He will also lead a discussion of vocational guidance for negro students. The problem will first be presented by Eugene Johnson of Knoxville College in a short speech, "All Dressed Up and No Place to Go."

Mr. Howard Kester, Southern Secretary of the Fellowship of Reconciliation, will follow the introductory speech of Naomi Freeman, also of Knoxville College, entitled "The Church We Have" with a discussion of "The Church We Need" in solving the race problem. In addition to this, Mr. Kester will have charge of a forum on "What Communism Offers the Laboring Man". Roberta Robison will express a student's view, "Face to Face with Communism".

The day's program will be concluded by the installation ceremony for the new officers of the Interracial Commission. They are: Clarence West, Knoxville College, president; Jesse Carter, Maryville College vice-president, and Alameda Ford, Knoxville College, secretary.

Students of Maryville College who wish to attend the conference should consult with Phyllis Dexter or Joe Hacker, immediately.

LAW HAS NOT FAILED, DECLARES PHILLIPS IN CHAPEL SPEECH

Says Aim of Anti-Saloon Is Education To Law Observance

In a short but impressive address in chapel on Wednesday morning Dr. John H. Phillips, assistant secretary of the Anti-Saloon League in Knoxville, declared that the present outcry against Prohibition is biased "propaganda". With even partial enforcement, he said, the United States is a hundred per cent better off than it was in pre-prohibition days.

Dr. Phillips quoted from Fisher, of Yale, in support of his argument that there is not one-tenth as much liquor being sold now as there was before the war. He also quoted from a questionaire answered by college presidents and other leading educators to the effect that students are not drinking today one third as much as they formerly did.

"The Association Against the Enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment," Dr. Phillips later told an Echo reporter, "is one of the most powerful organizations in the country. It is supported by multimillionaires who subscribe annually $50,000 to $100,000 each for a term of years. The time for which they

NEW AMPITHEATRE TO BE SCENE OF ANNUAL MAY DAY FESTIVAL "THE CHILDREN'S BLUE BIRD"

Queen Ann To Be Crowned In Pageant Planned By Nathalia Wright

The annual May Day fete on Monday, May 2, at 2:30, will be the initial use of the natural amphitheater in the College Woods. The new location near the House in the Woods has been a project of the Student Council for this year, and it is now being realized as the scene for this year's spring festival.

Brownie and his henchmen have been at work for the last few days clearing away the undergrowth and making the ground smooth for the dances. The spot is an ideal location for the annual woodland holiday.

The May procession will be led by Queen Anne Smartt and King Emil Farr, and the attendants will be Margaret Penland and Allen Amesbury; Opal Johnson and Yankee Lewis; Avaleen Hogan and Ellwood Jarnagin.

"The Children's Blue Bird" is the theme for the program which Nathalia Wright has arranged, and the plot of the pageant is adapted from Madame Maurice Materlinck's book of that title. Over fifty persons are active on the program. Such characters as Rip Van Winkle and the Pied Piper will be noteworthy. Rip, as interpreted by Reeder Carson, has all the traditional sleep of his 20-year nap in his voice, but the drawls who enter with him are far from being sommonbulent as they dance a "Frolic of the Brownies".

Another feature of the program is Kitty Hodges in the role of Frances Hodgson Bunnett's Little Lord Fauntleroy. She rolls her own when it comes to a hoop.

Mrs. Queener has devted her time and abilities for the past few weeks to directing the dances, and they are excellent products of the department. One of the featured dances, done by Mary Cooper and Betty Brewer is the artistic and difficult Indian Love Call, the tragic story of a warrior and his lovely Indian maiden. Other dances, arranged both for solo and group work, will be special features of the afternoon's entertainment.

COMMITTEE ELECTS NEW ECHO STAFF FOR YEAR 1932-33

Editor-In-Chief To Be Chosen By Next Year's Staff At May Meeting

At the meeting of the Committee on Selection for the Staff of the Highland Echo held late yesterday the staff of tme publication for the year 1932-1933 was chosen.

The four Staff Editors elected were Arthur Lazell, Conrad Quenelle, Nathalia Wright, and Roberta Robison. Lazell and Quenelle had their first experience on the staff this year, Miss Wright was elected during her sophomore year. Miss Robisn first saw service as a Freshman Apprentice.

Geraldine Smith, Richard Orr, and Charles Beale were promoted to the positions of Junior Associate Editors. All of them have been on the staff since their freshman year.

The Sophomore Cubs next year will be Violet Webb, Dorothy Nethery, Robert Rule, Grace Proffitt, Theron Alexander, and Alys Scroggy.

The new staff will meet at 7:00 o'clock on Monday evening, May 16, in the staff room to elect an Editor-in-Chief from among the Staff Editors.

The Committee on Selection for the Staff of the Highland Echo is a joint committee which consists of four representatives from the faculty, four members of the Student Council, and four members of the Highland Echo staff.

Hitch Has Lead In Annual Senior Play

Rehearsals of "What Every Woman Knows", senior play, have been begun under the direction of Mrs. Nita Eckles West.

"What Every Woman Knows" is a four-act comedy with the scene of the action laid in England. It abounds in dry humor and with Robert Wallace as John Shand, and Ruby Hitch as Maggie Wylie, in the leading roles, supported by Ann Smartt, as Miss Sybil; Louise Avery, as Miss Comtesse, the aunt of Miss Sybil; Cecil Marley, Hadley Webb, and Homer McCann as the Wylie brothers; and Junius Allison, as Mr. Venables, it should be a decidedly worthwhile play.

Mr. Arthur Lazell represented Maryville College in the East Tennessee division of the Tennessee Oratorical Contest held at the University of Chattanooga, April 21, and won second place, on the subject of the American Press.

THIS MODERN ADVERTISING

By Julia Terry

The necessity of the funny sheets in the newspapers of the present day is fast waning. One needs only glance at any periodical in order to receive the proper stimuli for the adequate and satisfying production of no un-certain guffaws.

The other day I was looking through the "Universal Monthly", a magazine of cosmopolitan scope and full of American ideas, noticing particularly the advertisements with their appropriate and inappropriate ballyhoo, and I wondered just what class of human beings were employed in the various advertising departments.

Pepsodent still employs the same piece of film in its advertisements which it started several years ago. Another toothpaste advertisement of laugh-producing qualities is that illustrating a girl going through various facial contortions in demonstrating the three-day effect of dental applications. These applications are numbered Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and I've often wondered how the girl looked the other four days of the week.

The latest advertisement for the Ipana Company presents debutante and, beside her the picture of a laborer with the following words, "She lives on Park Avenue, He only works there. Pink Tooth Brush doesn't care Who you are! Even truck drivers have it." Either the credulous public must buy Listerine Toothpaste, save three dollars a year, and have "Pink Tooth brsh; or it must buy Ipana Toothpaste, lose three dollars a year, but have no pink tooth brush. What a subject for varsity debate.

One of the latest means of advertising is that done by a lotion company depicting a woman in the background and her hands greatly enlarged in the foregrund. The appealing sentence heads the advertisement, "Are Domestic Hands a Badge of Marriage?" And underneath is a new unpsychological statement regarding the inferiority complex, explaining that the picture "is a photographic representation of inferiority complex caused by Domestic Hands". Tragedy! The poor girl has been married only since June and already she has a complex—but why place the blame on her pair of hands?

The "Universal Monthly" also presents numerous other advertise-

ON FALLING IN LOVE

By Charles Gillander

Every day you see the foolish young things, Oswald. They cannot blame it on the moonlight, for on the Maryville campus they are craziest near mid-day. Somebody told them about love. It sounded good to them. They had to try it out. Now, the way to fall in love in Maryville, Oswald, is this:

Look around, say in the dining hall, for a person of the fainting sex with whom you would like to have your friends see you. Take a deep breath. Walk up to this person and ask if she knows what the next biology quiz will cover. The fullness of the explanation will let you know whether she is warm or chilly. For she will know by your inattention to her biology announcement as well as by the way you are fidgeting that you are going to ask her to moonshine after dinner. If she seems in a hurry to be elsewhere, confine your inquiries to scientific subjects. Upon an encouraging sign of any sort, stop all circumlocution. The moment has arrived for the main issue to be presented. If she answers "No," consider yourself fortunate, for she really isn't what you want anyway. If she says "yes", then you are ready to start falling in love.

As the two of you walk away from Pearsons to find a corner behind Thaw, don't neglect to take her hand. Swing it and skip with her to get completely back to kindergarten days. If you don't take her hand, she will think you cold and distant. And no woman likes a cold, distant man. There is too much likelyhood of his sanity.

Find the corner Miss Molly is least likely to see. Wonder if your girl would care to sit and talk. Every woman likes to sit and talk where Miss Molly cannot watch her. There you first learn that her middle name is Hortense and that her baby brother back in Slickville cries terribly when he swallows thumbtacks. While she is talking, admire her teeth, her lips, her chin. Rave about the way she drawls adjectives like "lovely" and "darling".

But above all, don't forget her eyes. I remember once I overlooked the eyes of a girl I moonshined with in Cleveland. Later I made the remark to her by letter that I was unable to forget her dark eyes' splendor. When I asked the fellow who introduced us why she didn't answer, he told me that her eyes were grey. The way you gaze will show her that you have a strong personality.

Another thing: Keep squeezing her hand and twisting her fingers. The more you hurt her, the better she will know that you are vital, primi-

OUR JIM CROW CIVILIZATION

Crowded quarters in trains, no Pullman accommodations at any price; dirty, cheap hotels; disrespectful taxi-drivers—these are a few of the things with which a negro contends when he travels south of the Mason-Dixon Line.

And if he stays at home he is not much better off. The most disagreeable jobs in the field of manual labor are reserved for the negro. His children get what educotion they can in inferior public schools and more often even than among the poorer white people must go to work early to help keep a roof over their heads.

In his artistic and intellectual life the negro is condescended to by the white person. Frightfully high-brow members of women's clubs go in for "the folk art." Seldom is the negro recognized as a human personality and treated with the respect due him because he is o personality.

Unjust discrimination is practiced even by those agencies which profess to minister to the most crying needs of men. A recent survey of East Tennessee revealed the appallng inadequacy of hospitalization. This was not true for only charity cases but it was also shown that white physicians are in many cases not permitted to bring their own paying negro patients into hospitals. Worse still, there are few institutions in this part of the country where negroes may serve internships or take nurses' training. Neglected by the whites, they are prohibited from helping themselves.

Is it not time for the South to abandon the antiguated ideals of Mr. Jim Crow? Is it not time that we tempered prejudice with justice? If we must maintain the double system of education—a system of doubtful economy—should we not at least abolish the double standard of education? When shall we judge the creative efforts of negro artists and literary men on their merits as art and literature? When will America become not only the home of the brave but also the land of the free?

THEY SHALL NOT PASS

—unnoticed:

The devoted diligence of Nez Hamrick in her position of Y. W. C. A. president; the new sociology course in Human Relations; the efficiency displayed by the college business manager; the delinquency of the twenty-six organizations who owe bills to the Chilhowean;

The student ultimatum delivered by James F. Green at the Geneva Conference; the evils of an economic order which brings about conditions like the present; child labor; the protest against militarism and unjust discrimination of the Fellowship of Reconciliation; the agitation of the Allied Youth Movement for law enforcement—

They shall not pass unnoticed and they can not pass without leaving their mark on the world. Every movement which is in opposition to the ultimate good of the group is doomed to failure, be it ever so popular for the day. And every activity which is consistent with the true progress of mankind contributes eventually to the sum total of human happiness.

Chilhowee Gives Twilight Concert

Members of the Chilhowee Club and their guests were treated to a delightful hour of recital music at the Twilight Concert in Voorhees Chapel Tuesday afternoon, April 19. The concert is an annual affair of the Chilhowee Club. It is arranged and directed by Miss Laura B. Hale, head of the Maryville College Music Department and a member of the club. This recital ranks in musical importance next to the Horowitz concert last February, and Maryville and Knoxville music lovers are grateful to the Chilhowee Club for the privilege of hearing this splendid program.

One of the most interesting features of the program was a group of three numbers played by an ensemble of six pianos. These numbers were very beautifully performed, and the work of the ensemble reflects much credit on the members and their director.

Mrs. Martha Burchfield's masterful interpretation of a Rubinstein Polanaise, and Mr. Frank Neff's organ rendition of Bach's Tocatta and Fugue also were prominent numbers on the program. Miss Garnet Manges contributed a strain of the ultra-modern in her presentation of Roy Lamont Smith's musical fairy story, "Once Upon a Time". The program was brought to a brilliant close by the third movement of Saint-Saens' B minor concerto, played by Miss Margaret Melody, with orchestral accompaniment on the second piano by Miss Garnet Manges.

Much enjoyment and understanding was added to the concert by Miss Hale's comments and explanations.

PUBLIC SPEAKING CLASS

al program will consist of a debate, and an extemporaneous speech each week, and an oration at least once a month. In each meeting, as many as ten people will give a brief extemporaneous speech. The programs for the meetings will be organized and posted at least one month ahead of the date on which they are to be given.

The number in the class will be necessarily limited to about thirty students. Training will be given in methods of judging debates, both as a critic judge and as one of a committee of judges.

Debaters, varsity and freshman particularly, are desired as members of the class, but anyone who would be interested in the work and would have time for it should see Professor Queener as soon as possible.

OBSERVATIONS

one way non-stop. Whether he and his partner couldn't get a ride, or refused a ride is not known definitely, but Fritz, we are sure, had plenty of reason not to do much hiking the next day. The accompanist on the adventure was no other than our own Tommie Cooper.

—o—

If you think this column throws a line, you're just not acquainted with all of our students. If you don't know George Vick, you don't know what a real line thrower is like. We admit that Charley Beale of Cairo, and little Artie Lazelle of New York University are quite the latest, but Vick of North Carolina gives everyone a back seat. Our best advice to everyone except Gawge's girl is for no one to get hooked on any of his well handled lines.

—o—

If you're left handed and you eat in the dining hall, your fault (if it is a fault) will soon be corrected. Miss Darby sits at the left of the exit, and bread is therefore carried in the right hand. That's true of butter, old lady and pea soup—but we never had a longing for pea soup. We'd suggest that Miss Darby appoint a spy on the other side of the room so that we might get accustomed to using our pockets.

—o—

At a recent chapel meeting after an accident in Knoxville, injuring one of our students, the condition of the injured person was told explicitly from the chapel platform. It was desirable on the part of the students, especially the boys, to have this information, and it was greatly appreciated. The fact alone that the faculty is interested in the students to that extent makes this place a much more pleasant place to live and helps to create a desirable relationship between the students and the faculty.

—o—

Phil Sorce says that the return of Prof. Queener to the hermitage at Nashville should be likened unto a visit of a Mohammedan to Mecca. It was claimed to be the high-light of the trip to Tulsa. Queener, of course, had to censor all of the papers that were read on the trip; and then, he sat with Mr. Hoover looking over his right shoulder. . . . wonder what the president would think. He'd probably send Mr. Queener a subscription to the KNOXVILLE TIMES.

If being branded for life is an unhappy experience, we'd suggest, using our advisory capacity (wrongly, if you please) that people should not bring anything of the sort upon themselves. We're of the humble opinion that any man who can appreciate a woman with golden locks which must be dyed has a strong liking for artificiality, or has rather, a strong constitution. After seeing a few of the examples around on the campus, we can hope that such a movement won't be a real fad. . . . and that it will die. It looks like, dying hair is a quick way of jumping from the frying pan into the fire. . . . and the sad part of it is the fact that the fires won't die down right away.

THE LITTLE CHURCH

LASTING GREATNESS
by Charles W. Muir

Is it wrong for us as individuals to seek greatness? Christ would have each of His followers to seek it. But, what does He mean by being great? The answer is clearly given in Matt. 20:26-28 where Jesus says, "Whosoever will be great among you, let him be your minister (servant); and whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant (literally-slave); even as the Son of Man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give His life a ransom for many." At first sight this seems to be almost opposite to our own conception of the nature of greatness. Most people are apt to consider that those possessing power, wealth, position, and high station are the persons who should rightfully be deemed great, and often fail to consider the means by which these places were obtained. Which principle has more faithfully stood the test of time?

Consider the great men whose memories have lingered long after their deaths. Almost without exception they are those who have worked for the good of all rather than for themselves. The deeds of the men make them live down to us. What would Washington be without his vital leadership in the critical period of the Revolution; Lincoln, without his promotion of the abolition of involuntary servitude which resulted in the unifying and strengthening of our entire country; Morse, without his great invention, which revolutionized our methods of communication; Edison, without his many wonderful inventions which all benefit from daily; or Livingstone, apart from his work as a great pioneering missionary and his explorations in Africa? The answers are obvious, and the great fundamental ethical principle is clinched which declares that the duty and aim of every individual should be, not his own good primarily, but the greatest good to the greatest number. Does this differ greatly in substance from the Bible teaching? No, not at all.

Let us, therefore, determine more and more to be great as Jesus would have us be—a striving which will unconsciously cause us to lose sight of ourselves as we become enveloped in the service of our fellow men for His sake and the advancement of His kingdom. The accompanying satisfaction and joy will more than reward us, no matter where life takes us or what demands it may make of us.

Open Forum, the Highland Echo:

For the past year there has been existing on Maryville campus a parasite group of numskulls who have less sense than idiots. This group has not only acted as a gang, but the individuals have operated separately causing trouble and expense to both the administration and the student body.

To list the numerous misdeeds of this parasite group is not necessary, for every student is aware of each revolting action. Their deeds go from the actual destruction of college property to the childish acts of blowing light fuses from midnight escapades violating even civil law to the disturbance of students by unspeakable language and brutish behavior.

So far the actions of this group have not been abated. The administration, because of the lack of support from loyal students, has been unable to meet the situation. Are there no students on this campus who believe that this free reign of idiots has gone far enough? If there are, then show some assertion of privileges and rights granted you?

Let us band together to show this group that they are a detriment o tMaryville College, and that their presence is not desired on the campus as long as they insist on acting as low, groveling beasts!

Writing and talking brings no results, but action will. Why should we wait longer? Let us act now!

NATIONAL MUSIC WEEK WILL BE CELEBRATED IN TOWN, COLLEGE

Six-Piano Ensemble Will Play In Chapel, Hamilton Asked To Sing

The week of May 2 will be celebrated throughout the nation as National Music Week. This is an institution that has been established n the country for the purpose of encouraging interest in the best music. Everywhere this movement is being met with encouragement. Music clubs and public schools colleges, and universities, are setting aside this week for programs of general musical interest.

The celebration in Maryville is under the auspices of the different clubs and organizations and the Maryville College Music Department. The opening feature of the week will be a program by the well known organist, Mr. Frank Nelson of Knoxville. This recital has been arranged by the Tuesday Club of Maryville in honor of its deceased members. It will be played on the organ of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Maryville Sunday afternoon.

This program will be followed by others throughout the week. On Thursday night the Maryville Music Club will have a program appropriate to the occasion. This will be the last meeting of the club year and officers will be installed. Miss Hale has arranged for programs to be given in chapel on certain mornings. Mr. Edward Hamilton, director of music at the University of Tennessee, will present a program on one of these mornings. On other mornings numbers will be presented by the six piano ensemble, by the Vesper Choir, and others.

A man came running into the station at 2:45 shouting: "What time does the three o'clock train leave?"

"There's the woman I'm laying for", clucked the old hen as the farmer's wife passed by.

MARYVILLE GIRLS TO ATTEND PLAY DAY AT MURFREESBORO

Highlanders Defy Driving Rain To Trample Centre Tracksters

Moore, Felknor and Hitch Lead Scots To Big Win; Final Score 77 to 35

HASARA CENTRE STAR

Centre Strongest In Field Events; Maryville Is Best On Track

Coach Bob Thrower's tracksters splashed through the mud and rain last Saturday afternoon to trample a game Centre College team under foot by a score of 77 to 35. The Maryville boys made a clean sweep of almost all of the important events and won handily.

However, it fell to Hasara, Centre star, to be the sensation of the meet. He outdistanced Byar in both of the dashes and won the broad jump without a struggle. He accounted for 15 of his team's points and had they had another man of his calibre, they would have given the Scots a close run for their money.

The Centre team was especially strong in the field evnts. They placed both first and second in the shot put and took first in the discus throw. Calloway placed second in the discus and Russell and Woodard took first and second respectively in the javelin. Felknor and Bratschie tied for first in the pole vault.

Jim Hitch again proved that he is a sort of Jack-of-all-trades and master of all when he ran first in the 440. He barely nosed out Otis Paul, who has not yet fully recovered from his attack of flu. In running the half mile, Hitch came from behind and passed Willocks on the straight-away and won out by a few feet. His time in the half was 2:10.

Spec Mooré and Speedy Mann turned in firsts and seconds respectfully in the mile and two mile. These two men are making it hard for anyone to place at all in the distance runs.

Hasara led in the scoring department for the day by taking firsts in the two dashes and broad jump to account for 15 points. He was closely followed by Moore, Hitch and Capt. Felknr, all of Maryville.

TENNIS TEAM CHOSEN AS TOURNAMENT NEARS END

Girls Are Selected After Third Round Of Play Is Completed

Members of the college women's tennis team were selected yesterday afternoon following the third round of the annual spring tournament. Several of the favorites came through as expected and some of them were defeated by unheralded players.

In the third round, Mary Gillingham defeated Miss Swafford in a fast match; Mary Cooper won over Miss Cannol rather handily; Kitty Hodges defeated Mollie Little; Jane Mitchell, a newcomer into the ranks, won over Lorraine Yennie.

The winners in the third round were declared members of the team after their impressive victories. They are: Miss Gillingham, Miss Cooper, Miss Hodges, Miss Mitchell and Miss Johnson. These girls will be paired against each other in the fourth round and the tourney will be completed.

One fourth round match has already been played and the remainder of them will be played in the next few days. Jane Mitchell displayed a surprising amount of tennis skill in defeating Mary Cooper, one of the favorites and one of the finalists in the fall meet. Jane won the first set 8-6 but Miss Cooper came back in the next one to even the match by winning by 6-4.

The third and deciding set was won by Miss Mitchell after Cooper had forced her for 14 games, before losing, again by 8-6. Miss Mitchell will play Eleanor Johnson in her next match for the right to oppose Kitty Hodges in the finals. Kitty reached the finals by taking straight sets from Mary Gillingham, 8-6, 6-2. The finals will be played one day next week.

RECORDS FALL AS SCOTS LOSE TO U. T.

College records fell thick and fast last week while the Highlanders were bowing to the University of Tennessee track team in one of the closest meets in many years. The Highlanders led throughout the meet until the final event—the mile relay—and the Vols' victory in this event gave them a close 60 to 57 victory.

Spec Moore ran the mile as it has never been run by a Maryville College athlete and the result was a new college record. Spec shattered the old record and established 10 minute, 8.6 seconds for future stars to shoot at. Jim Hitch ran the half mile in 2 minutes, 4.6 seconds to set a new college record.

Ray Russell, who never saw a javelin until he came to school here last year, broke his own mark with a heave of 173 feet. The old mark was 171 feet.

SPORT SLANTS

By BOB RULE

One of the newspapers in Detroit, Michigan has introduced a nice feature column wherein they tell of the early life of the members of the Detroit American League team. I am in receipt of a clipping of one of these features through the courtesy of a friend in Detroit and could you guess who the young man that was featured in this particular clipping is? Yes, that's right, it is John Stone.

The column is captioned "How They Started" and it starts out by saying that: "Johnny Stone was still battling for his bachelor of arts degree at Marysville (notice the misplaced "s") College, Tennessee, when Billy Doyle, Tiger scout, signed him to a contract. That was in 1927 and when Johnny pocketed his sheepskin in 1928, he joined the Evansville club. He bounced over to Toronto in 1929 for three months and then sailed into Detroit where he has been outfielding ever since."

Then Stone told his own story to the Detroit scribe and of course it was printed also. This from Johnny: "There ain't no starting baseball in Tennessee, it's just the natural thing for kids to do, and we did it. I went in for other sports, getting four letters in football at Marysville (I'll bet Johnny said M-a-r-y-v-i-l-l-e) and I also threw the javelin on the track team, but baseball offered the most fun and extra money in the summer, so I just naturally followed it".

This little contribution was written by some guy named "Purcell". Well, Percy, that was a very good little spread that you gave our favorite son but I found one objection to it. The picture that you used along with this story does not show the Johnny Stone, from Marysville, that I know. That picture showed a slim faced, frail looking righ

RACQUETEERS ROUTED REGULARLY ON ROAD RUN

Lose To Georgia Tech, Emory Univ. On Successive Days; Phay Wins

A greatly inexperienced Maryville College tennis team is taking it on the chin with surprising regularity in their matches with other colleges and universities. The squad will return today from a disastrous trip through Georgia.

Unlike Sherman, the Highlanders failed to march through Georgia. Their first meet was with Chattanooga University, which after all is practically in the state of Georgia, and the Scots were beaten by 4 to 2. Johnny Phay came through with the only singles victory and then paired with Hurst to win the only doubles match.

Georgia Tech made merry at the expense of the boys from Maryville Wednesday afternoon when they took everything but their racquets and won by 6 to 0. Everybody got beat. (There's nothing else to say about a match like that.)

Thursday afternoon, the Highlanders met Emory University in Atlanta and did some better than in the match with Tech but lost again by 4 to 2. Boykin defeated Fischbach, 6-2, 7-5; Polites defeated Phay, 6-0, 6-4; Ferguson gave McDaniels a battle but lost by 6-4, 3-6, 7-5; Mullin defeated Hurst in two straight love sets, 6-0, 6-0.

Earlier in the season, the team lost to U. T. by 6-1 and then defeated Carson-Newman at Jefferson City by a score of 4-3.

The remainder of the schedule follows:

May 7—Tennessee—Here
May 13—Kentucky—Here
May 14—Wesleyan—Here
May 17—Tusculum—There
May 20—Tusculum—Here

What Happened To Highlanders? Kidnapped? Lost? Arrested?

By Bob Rule

Show me the guy that said that the Maryville studes weren't interested in baseball! Show me the bozo that chirped that the majority of the studes cared not whether the team won or lost! Show me the hick that gossiped to the effect that these same studes weren't personally interested in the baseball future of some of our star performers! Show him to me, I say. I'll tell Mr. Lloyd on him.

We are all aware of the fact that the team left for Cumberland mountains one day this week for the purpose of playing L. M. U. and since the day of their belated taking-off, nary a word was heard from them. There was a rumor circulating Friday morning that the boys went out for a walk when they arrived in Harrogate, strolled across the Kentucky line and were nabbed and jailed.

The rumor has it that the entire group was taken to be just another band of students on one of those "research" trips and so the whole shebang was landed in the bean barn. (Now, now, I'm not talking about Pearsons).

The interesting part of the rumor concerned Coach Honaker and Joe Woodard. They say (now don't ask me "who says?") that Joe and Coach were the only two that gained their release. Joe looked so utterly harmless that they took him for a farmer (who was that said: "they weren't far wrong") and set him free. They thought that Coach was a school boy that was following the baseballers around just through curiosity and so, bless Pete, he went free with Joe.

But gosh, I've wandered entirely from my subject. Let's see, I was looking for the campus critic wasn't I? Well, here's why I want to see him: Since the team dropped off into seeming oblivion and no word was heard concerning the outcome of the games, not less than 1200 students have been heard to inquire about the welfare of the team.

"Have you heard who won the game yesterday?" "Did we win over L. M. U. Thursday?" "Have you heard whether or not Joe hit any home runs?", "Did Hollway pitch the full game?" That's just a very few of the questions that were fired at everyone who looked as if he might know something about it. I'm telling you, Oscar, that's a good sign.

Mrs. Queener Takes Four Athletes To Second Annual Meet For Women

Kitts, Gamble, Yennie and McCampbell Represent Maryville

On May the sixth Mrs. Queener and four girls will go to Murfreesboro to take part in a play day for women interested in sports all over the state of Tennessee. Mary Gamble, Ruth McCampbell, Edith Kitts, and Lorraine Yennie are the girls chosen to make the trip. The Middle Tennessee State Teachers College will entertain the girls who will come for an evening of welcome on the sixth and stay through the next day of sports and social activities.

The idea of a play day comes from several western colleges which found that play days were much more satisfactory and enjoyable than inter-collegiate competition. The triangular play day between Mills, Stanford, and the University of California was the first such day, and this form of athletic sports has entirely taken the place of varsity competition. As a result, colleges all over the United States are duplicating their program as a sounder and more satisfactory method of athletics for women.

A play day is a day when girls from several schools meet and play with rather than against each other. Early in the morning the teams are drawn so that girls from different schools compose one team. In this way any rivalry between schools is prevented and in its place a feeling of comradeship and good will is felt. During the day the teams play basket ball, base ball, tennis, and volley ball; they also take part in archery contests, track meets, relays, and stunt programs. At noon there is a luncheon with toasts and speeches by women prominent in athletics.

Last year the play day was at the University of Tennessee, and because it was so near about twenty girls were able to go. No girl who has taken part in a play day can forget the feeling of comradeship it brings between girls from different colleges.

VANDY DEFEATS SCOTS TO TAKE LEAD IN STATE RACE

Hitting of Julian Foster Spells Disaster For Maryville Team

Maryville College's Highlanders slipped up on the first step of their march to another state championship in baseball when they were defeated last week by the terrible Commodores from Vanderbilt University. The score was 12 to 9.

Vandy took an early lead but the Highlanders came up with a terrific batting attack to tie the score in the fourth canto and then added three more in the next frame to go three up but they saw their hopes blasted by one Julian Foster, of football fame, who did everything in the way of hitting that a nice boy shouldn't do.

Foster's home run in the first with two mates on board accounted for Vandy's early lead and again in the sixth he stepped across the plate when Holloway attempted to issue him a free ticket to first base, and banged out another long distance wallop. Then to add insult to injury he clouted another four ply blow in the final stanza, again with the bases inhabited, and it was all over but the shouting. So was the shouting, for that matter.

The Maryville boys will get another chance at the slugging Commodores later on in the season when they go to Nashville for a return two-day series. If the Maryville boys can come through with victories on both days, they will be ahead of the Commodores in the standing.

SCOTTIES WIN THREE GAMES ON ROAD TRIPS

The Highlanders returned this morning from their mysterious mission to the Cumberland Mountains. Despite fears for their safety and rumors that they had lost themselves somewhere in the mountains, the boys brought back news of three straight triumphs.

The Maryvillians defeated L. M. U. in a pair of games by scores of 11 to 6 and 11 to 8. They moved to Johnson City after their two wins and took another one at the expense of East Tennessee Teachers. The Highlanders were trailing at the beginning of the ninth by 10 to 7 but four runs put them ahead.

The Teachers knotted the count in their part of the ninth, both teams scored two each in the tenth and the Scots won the game in the eleventh when Hurst scampered across. Joe Woodard was forced to be absent from the team during the last two games due to very important business in Kentucky.

Seniors To Be Allowed Honors Work Next Year

Miss Lois Wilson Speaks On Syria

The Student Volunteer Group will be the guests of Miss Lois Wilson at her home on Sunday afternoon, May 1st. The main feature of the afternoon is to be a talk by Miss Wilson on the new building of the Sidon School for Girls of which she is principal. The occasion of hearing about the work in Syria from one so closely connected with Maryville, and from one so recently returned, has been looked forward to since early fall. The Student Volunteers consider being Miss Wilson's guests a great privilege.

This special gathering will take the place of the regular meeting of the group in the evening. On Sunday evening, May 8, at the accustomed time, the Group's advisor, Mr. Louis A. Black, will lead in a discussion on "The True Basis for Christian Missions". Very profitable group discussions and addresses have made up the weekly programs of the Student Volunteer Group this year. Attendance at each meeting has averaged fifty.

THIS MODERN ADVERTISING

ments, for, of, and by cigarettes, telephones, chewing gum, and the like.

Cigarette advertisements are usually entertaining because they display pretty girls at any one of whom the reader gazes and then realizes that she must be there for a purpose. The advertisement says she is the cream of the crop, and there in the lower right hand corner is the package of cigarettes which must also be the cream of the crop. Movie actresses apparently have much to do with the selling of cigarettes and it behooves the company to get the picture and the indorsement of the best box-office attraction.

A popular chewing gum company is now presenting penny facials, demonstrated by a girl who doesn't need facials. In the first picture she is shown with a siren look in her eyes, chinning herself on her knuckles and supposed to be chewing twenty-five times. She is beautifying her face. The picture below that one shows her patting her cheeks and looking pensively to the right, chewing twenty-five more times. The third picture portrays her gazing soulfully to the left, her hands gracefully placed on her cheeks chewing first on one side of the face and then transferring the well-worked-on piece of glorified chicle to the other side of the face. If the operations were visibly portrayed the advertisement would be much more effective and would look more like a chewing gum advertisement rather than a beauty cream representation.

The telephone advertisement showing a smiling young man being awakened at midnight by a call is about as ludicrous as the slendor girl reducing. Imagine a man smiling into a telephone after being awakened, even though the telephone is at his elbow. The designer of the picture did have enough practicality and reality to draw the young man's hair in a slightly disarranged condition rather than having it evenly stacombed to his Apollo-like head. But the point is, feature that man smiling!

Bus advertisements compose some of the most enticingly misleading of all the advertisements in the "Universal Monthly". It behooves disillusioned college students to tell the bitter truth to a credulous bus unridden world. Beautiful secluded northern lakes are pictured beside old Spanish sun-baked missions as if one need only ride and see instead of ride and suffer. If the country believes literally these advertisements it will go to the dogs if not to the Greyhounds.

These are only a few of the many advertisements in the popular "Universal Monthly" which appealed to my somewhat common sense of humor, but I repeat or rather ask the question to a responsive world, Why buy a funny paper?

A traveler went to the [illegible] and asked, "How long [illegible] here?"

tive. Why, man, you've got to be primitive. As a weak, intellectual student, you cannot thrill a woman. Don't you know that? No, the Neanderthal Man would not stand a better chance than you. You are better looking. Yes, with your face and tactics, you'd be irresistible to women. True enough, but you wanted to fall in love, didn't you? If you have the desire to fall in love, you don't show much common sense in the first place. For romance, common sense isn't cnsidered much of a sacrifice. I'm telling you, you have to be lacking in the top story to be properly in love.

Who? Kathleen? Say, what's the idea of bringing her name into this? The understanding between Kathleen and me is different. Much different! Sure, I hold her hand. What of it? That helps our understanding, a sacred thing. I'm telling you.

hand hitter, and the Johnny Stone that I know is built like the northeast side of a brick bungalow and swings from the awkward side of the platter.

Now, Percy, don't think that I'm trg to criticize your work or anything of the sort, cause I know that things like that just will happen once in a while in spite of the dickens, but go get that cut that you ran with the story of Stone and see if you won't agree with me that it is a picture of Roy Johnson, the Tigers' SECOND best outfielder, and NOT of a picture of Johnathan T. Stone, of the Mulberry Bend, Tennessee Stones.

If there were a law against heart breaking, I know somebody that I would have prosecuted. (Now, don't get excited, this ain't a love story) I am speaking of this guy Julian Foster, that did the first baseing for Vanderbilt last week. 'Course Jim Holloway didn't know that the big ox could hit 'em a mile at first but it took exactly one inning for us all to learn that he could flatten that old ball and so from then on, Holloway handled him more carefully.

Holloway decided that the cheapest way out would be to give him a free ticket to first base. Well, you know, the rest as well as I do. Mr. Foster refused to accept charity and stepped across the platter and smacked two more round-trip blows. In this day of—oh, what was that new word that I learned to use in place of depression—well anyway, in this day scarcity or famine (take your choice), Mr. Foster is the first guy that I have seen refuse something that was free.

STALEY—GOYNE

The marriage of Miss Mignonne Goyne to Mr. Alwyn Staley, both of Maryville, was beautifully solemnized Friday morning at the home of the bride's parents on Washington Avenue in the presence of the families and a few intimae friends. Rev. William Patton Stevenson performed the ceremony.

The bride, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. Goyne, was a student at Maryville College in 1930. She was a member of Theta Epsilon Literary Society and was quite popular among the students.

A host of friend in the college extend their good wishes to the couple.

ROBERT E. SPEER INVITED TO SPEAK AT BLUE RIDGE

Beginning on June 17 and continuing through June 26 the regional conference of the Southern student Young Men's Christian Association will be held on the conference grounds at Blue Ridge, North Carolina. A number of the men of Maryville College hope to attend.

The theme of this year's meeting is "Building the South of Tomorrow". In the development of this theme platform speakers will address the whole delegation, discussion groups will be held, and Bible study will be offered. Campus education in interracial relations, in industry, and in Chrstian internationalism are to be discussed by some of the leading minds of the South.

The fellowship of recreation is always stressed at Blue Ridge, where the entire afternoon is devotde to organized sports, hikes, excursions, swimming, boating, and rest.

Among the speakers who have been invited are Dr. M. Ashby Jones, David R. Porter, Paul Harris and Dr. Robert E. Speer.

"Before Prohibition days," he continued, "it cost the government three times as much to take care of the wreckage caused by drink as was received into the treasury in revenues. The cost of poor houses, insane asylums, and penal institutions necessitated more than balanced the license fees collected."

Dr. Phillips outlined the campaign of the Anti-Saloon League as being essentially a program of education. He says that the League is the only organization through which the church can fight back. It is nationwide in its scope and has headquarters at Washington, where it can keep in close touch with the political situation.

"Law observance and law enforcement are the ultimate goals of the League," he concluded.

The initiation ceremonies will be carried out by Elizabeth Duncan, president of the chapter; Mary Lovette, vice-president; Benjamin Groves, secretary-treasurer; and Mary John Metcalf, scribe.

The formal ritual of national Pi Kappa Delta will be used. Although none of it is secret, the process of initiation is extremely solemn and inspiring, according to Miss Duncan.

Those who are to be taken into the fraternity are: Mildred MacKenzie, Edith McDuffie, Carrie Lou Tweed, Ercelle Hunter, Lucille Swafford, Robert Stevenson, Arthur Lazell, Andrew Newcomer, Fred Kirchner.

T. A. P. PLAY MAY 6

and created a sensation when it played in New York with Alfred Lunt taking the lead.

It is a play of philosophical soundings and indicates that the author must have an unusual understanding of and insight into the minds of the various types of people represented. The effects produced, through both staging and characterization, are decidedly thought-provoking. However, because of its imaginative foundation it must not be taken too seriously, for it it is just one man's conception of death, and the death ship as it is outward bound.

The leading role of Tom Prior is taken by Harry Gauding, whose dramatic abilities have been demonstrated on the Maryville stage many times before. He is also managing the play. The nominal pilot and keeper of the bar to which Tom is a regular visitor, is portrayed by Larry Somers who also assumes duties as stage manager assisted by Betty Wilbar.

Mrs. Nellie Morton and Chilton Bowles have the roles of the young lovers, Ann and Henry. Mrs. Cliveden-Banks, a woman who thinks particularly well of herself, is characterized by Dorothy McCulloch. The central object of her disgust is little Mrs. Midget of the cockney dialect, whose part is played by Mary Lovette. Reno Smith takes the part of the Reverend William Duke, and Don Briggs plays the role of the pompous Mr. Lingley, whose outstanding characteristics are similar to those of Mrs. Cliveden-Banks. The role of the Reverend Frank Thomson, the examiner of the passengers, is taken by George Osborne.

The play, as are all Theta Alpha Phi projects, promises to be one of the outstanding productions of the year. It is being offered as the senior class benefit and the cost is thirty-five cents. The play will begin at eight o'clock, Friday, May 6, in the Chapel.

Maryville Y.M.C.A. Entertain U.T.

Maryville Y. M. C. A. will entertain the University of Tennessee "Y" on May 2, with a banquet to be given at the New Providence Presbyterian Church in Maryville. After the dinner, entertainment will be furnished by the Tennessee "Y" me.

This affair is part of the reciprocal agreement existing between the two school associations. Several weeks ago the Maryville men were guests of the Tennessee men at a similar affair in Knoxville and entertained afterwards.

Two weeks ago a group of Maryville Y. M. C. A. fellows were guests at a banquet given by the Y. M. C. A. Men's club at the Central "Y" in Knoxville.

The club, composed of forty-five to fifty men, is ranked as the strongest in the entire South, according to Ralph Teffeteller, president of the Highlander "Y".

Those who went from here to the Men's banquet are: Harry Wood, William Hannah, James McGhee, James Smith, Ed Keeler, and Ralph Teffeteller.

Students Will Be Exempt From Routine Work In Field Of Major Study

Recommendatons Of Committee Are Approved

The following recommendations were submitted by the Committee on Proposed Honors Work to the Executive Council of the Faculty at their meeting on Thursday and were adopted to become effective for the coming year:

Who Is Eligible?

Seniors who qualify under the following conditions:

Application must be made to the head of the department in which the student is doing major work and through him, if he recommends the candidate, to the Faculty Committee on Honors Work.

In general the applicant should show a grade average of "C" or above in courses outside his major field and a grade average of "B" in courses taken in his major subject.

The candidate should have already exhibited initiative and genuine interest in relation to the work already done in college.

How Much Work?

For each student doing Honors Work, time equivalent to that given to one three or four-hour course a semester for his last two semesters.

Each department will specify the actual amunt of work to be done by each student.

What Sort of Work?

The emphasis in Honors Work may be chiefly on method or chiefly on the broadening of the students knowledge, or it may be divided with approximate evenness between the two.

The objective of the work, whether it is preparation for research or whether it aims at fuller knowledge of materials, should be discussed and clearly formulated by the student and his supervisor at the beginning of their work together.

Honors Work will involve mastering of the library as a working tool of the student.

What relation to other Work?

The Honors student is exempted from the requirements of courses he is taking in his major subject, including attendance on classes, routine assignments ad tests, and final examinations.

What Form for the Results?

The form for the results of the Honors Work of each student is to be that agreed upon by him and his supervisor and approved by the Faculty Committee on Honors Work.

The program of work for each student is to be placed before the Faculty Committee on Honors Work for their consideration not later than the end of the third week of each semester.

A copy of the results of each student's Honors Work is to be kept in the College Library.

Each Honors student will take a comprehensive examination in his major subject about four weeks befre the date of his prospective graduation. This examination is to be gven by his supervisor in conjunction with one or more instructors from this or another institution as may seem wise and expedient.

Who Directs It?

The work of each Honors student is to be supervised by an instructor in the student's major department as designated by the head of the department. This supervisor may associate with himself other instructors in his own or related departments as may be wished.

Reasonably close supervision is to be given each student. At least once a week conference should be held concerning progress.

What is the Faculty Honors Work Committee?

A standing committee of the Faculty on Honors Work should be appointed by the President, representative of the fields of Natural Science, Social Science, Language and Literature, and Philosophy.

This committee is to have general supervision of Honors Work, taking as its principal functions:

1. To pass upon recommendations of candidates for Honors Work.
2. To inspect and pass upon programs of Honors Work as submitted by supervising instructors.
3. To receive at mid-semester a report of each Honors student's progress and at the end of the seemster to pass upon the recommendations of the supervisor regarding the student's work.
4. To receive at the end of the year the report and recommendation of the stuednt's comprehensive examination and finally to pass upon his claims to graduation with honors.

What Reward for Honors Work?

The student who satisfies his supervisor and the Faculty Honors Work Committee that his Honors Work has been of high excellence will be published as Graduated with High (or Special) Honors in (Major Subject)

The student whose owrk for honors is acceptablbe but below high excellence will be published as Graduated with Honors in (Major Subject)

The student whose first semester of Honors Work is below honor quality will be disqualified from continuance of Honors study. The student whose second seemster of Honrs wrk is below honor quality, but is of average quality will be graduated without honors provided the general requirements of the curriculum are otherwise met.

Senior Hoboes Hold Convention

Monday night the members of the senior class exhibited hoboical tendencies, and braving the wind and rain, rode in trucks to the Hitch home on Walland Pike for a hobo convention.

The high mucky-muck of the hoboes, Virginia Crider, divided her followers into four clans who competed in various kinds of contests of sense and nonsense. The clan, Hobokums, took first place, while the Park Bechers took second place.

Although no prizes were given for effective costumes, it is generally agreed that Georga Burk would probably have won. Her costume consisted mainly of red bloomers which she said she wore for a purpose. Of course, there were the necessary accoutrements.

The chief jokers of the evening were Ralph Teffeteller, Reno Smith, Lea Calloway, and Bob Wallace. Even though Reno Smith pulled the biggest joke, a kind of 3-in-1, we agree with Teefie that a little bull can certainly go a long-ways—it did Monday evening.

One of the main features of the convention were the refreshments which were of unhobo proportions, for everyone had three olives on his plate, and olives don't grow on trees—except in Spain and a few other places too far away for hoboes, American hobos, to pick.

The ride home was a little less wet han the ride out, but the trucks remained covered— Georga Burk might say, for a purpose.

OBSERVATIONS

Yankee Undresses
Middle Names
Ross's Landing

You know we have a real curiosity. It almost got the best of us recently. We were wondering, while dreaming away in Bible class, what Dr. Rodgers would look like with a head of bushy black hair.

—o—

Quite a number of people come to this college from Chattanooga—formerly known, as Ross's Landing. Among these fine people is one Thelma Iles, of recent political fame, who carries the duties of secretary of the new junior class. Thelma thinks she'll invite Ross, the Rankin boy, down when school's out. If the paternal end of the house doesn't like Ross and lifts him from the threshold of the door out into the street, will that still be Ross's landing?

Just a few more months now until some of our ardent lovers will be writing an anticipatory letter to the only girl asking her to come to school one day earlier in order that they might have a "real time". Something like this—"Just think, Gertrude, no rules, no matrons, no nightwatchman, no nothing, just the realization that school will start the next day—and that should make up for the lack of a moon, if it's cloudy."

—o—

And before that time our freshmen will have advanced one step, which has one particular significance for them. . . . the fact that they won't be called freshmen anymore.

—o—

We can feel more free now to say something that has been on our chest for quite some little time. In fact it has been there since the Anit-Saloon League representative gave us a talk against prohibition. Personal observations and exaggerations have their place (such as on the left column of the front page of a college neswpaper) but as arguments for prohibition they fail to hold water. . . in fact, they leak! Maryville students are, or should be, enough of debaters that they aren't swayed by refutaions that obviously have no authenticity. In such a case that argument ceases to be refutation thereby failing to attain its purpose.

Music Department To Give Broadcast

Many Outstanding Numbers To Be Included On Program

Through the courtesy of the Tuesday Morning Music Club of Knoxville Miss Hale has been invited to direct a program of piano and vocal music to be broadcast over station WNOX on Tuesday evening, May 24th. Miss Hale will use numbers by students in her department, and Miss Frances Henry will contribute several groups of vocal selections.

Members of the Maryville Music Department have been heard frequently in programs from WNOX. This program promises to be one of the best yet presented by the department.

Among the numbers on the program will be Miss Henry's groups of soprano solos; the first movement of the G minor concerto by Saint-Saens, played by Miss Margaret Melody, with orchestral accompaniment on the second piano by Miss Garnet Manges; Rubinstein's Staccotta Octave study, played by Miss Garnet Manges; Blue Danube Arabesques, by Schultz-Evler, played by Mrs. Martha Burchfield. Other members will be announced later.

These "last Tuesday" programs are usually arranged by the Tuesday Morning Music Club, but this particular Tuesday has been given over to the Maryville program.

This is the last of a series of four papers which have been edited by the four junior members of the staff respectively. These publications were preliminary to the election of an editor for the Highland Echo for next year.

The new staff will meet in the staff office Monday evening, May 16, and elect the new editor, and the next and last issue of the Echo for this year will be produced by the new staff.

ORCHESTRA, CHORUS TO PRESENT VARIED PROGRAN MON. NITE

Selections From "Carmen" To Be Sung; Miss Butcher Is Director

A program of orchestra and chorus music will be presented in Voorhees Chapel on Monday evening, May 16. The Maryville College Orchestra, under the direction of Miss Mildred Butcher, and the large chorus of mixed voices, also directed by Miss Butcher, will appear then.

Miss Butcher and the members of these two organizations have worked hard for a number of weeks to make this program a success, and it promises to be very enjoyable.

Several of the numbers will be familiar to many people. A chorus arrangement of Saint-Saen's Swan Song, called "Lake of Dreams" will be sung with orchestra accompaniment. Selections from the well-known opera Carmen will also be presented. Among the orchestra numbers appears a group of Negro spirituals, Bandanna Sketches. The beloved Adoration by Borowski, and the popular Poet and Peasant Overture give charm and dignity to the program.

Spring Picnic For Writers Next Week

To Hold Semi-Annual Affair Near Sunshine For Student And Faculty Members

The Writers' Work Shop picnic will be held May 18 up above Sunshine, "some place between the road and the river", according to Miss Jessie Sloane Heron, in charge of arranging for the affair.

Besides providing wood-chopping and fire building exercise for Dr. E. R. Hunter and students, time will be taken out to initiate the members of the group who have not "ridden the goat". Miss Helen Gamble is in charge of preparing for this part of the outing.

This picnic is held once each semester. Members of the faculty and the student body who are members of the Work Shop are the only ones permitted to become sick and sore during this out-of-doors play.

For this half-year, Miss Gamble has hopes of presenting a long-to-be remembered celebration in honor of the neophytes. Miss Heron says that she will endeavor to arrange a picnic which will not do violence to memories of home and mother.

Jeanette Eshelman and Robert Stevenson are serving on Miss Heron's committee, while Julia Terry and Junius Allison are working with Miss Gamble.

CHILHOWEAN READY

The 1932 Chilhowean is ready for delivery and will be distributed as soon as all classes and organizations have paid their bills. The annual absolutely cannot be released until all bills are in, however, and those in charge of collecting them are urged to make a special effort to get the money in so that the books may be cleared and the annual released as soon as possible. This will be greatly appreciated by the members of the Chilhowean staff and by those students who have already paid for their annuals.

BUILDING IMPROVEMENTS

Duff Receives Congratulatory Letter From Dr. Foulkes

Part of the Vesper Service Sunday evening, May 15, will be devoted to the inauguration of the new officers of the Y. M. C. A. At that time an impressive induction ceremony will be held. President-elect Alexander Duff, and his fellow officers, Robert Overly, Steve Boretesky, and John Tope, will take their respective offices then.

The new president and his associates have been hard at work on plans for the coming year. A number of new committees will be organized and the scope of the Y. M. C. A. work will be greatly widened. One of the new committees will be called the Buildings and Grounds Committee and will have charge of the improvement and up-keep of the Y. building. Another committee will have charge of the Boy Scout work in the Battle Branch section, and will direct the play of the boys there. Mr. Theodore Burns will be chairman of this work.

In connection with the Buildings and Grounds Committee, Mr. Duff plans to go East this summer and raise money there to make possible the many improvements which have been planned for Bartlett. He has already made a number of important contacts with prominent men, which will be of great value when he begins his work. Below is printed a copy of a letter which Mr. Duff has received from Dr. William Hiram Foulkes, in which Dr. Foulkes promises to co-operate with Mr. Duff on his money raising campaign.

"My dear younger brother:

"Congratulations to the new President of the Y. M. C. A. I do not know how the Association could possibly have chosen a better one. You already know what I think about you, so I am not going to repeat it.

"I wish you would let me know when you plan to start east. You will find people are preoccupied and it is going to be hard to get money, but I am sure with your spirit you will be able to get some.

"I have to go to our General Assembly in Denver, next month, and will be gone a couple of weeks. I want to show you personal hospitality when you are here and if you will let me know when you plan to come, I will correspond with you and we can make some plans that will be of mutual interest.

"Hastily but faithfully yours,
"William Hiram Foulkes."

P. K. D. ANNIVERSARY CEREMONY HELD IN CHAPEL WEDNESDAY

Nine Students Initiated Into Local Chapter

DR. LLOYD HONORED

Two Hundred Fifty Guests Attend Ceremony

Pi Kappa Delta held its tenth anniversary celebration and initiation ceremonies Wednesday evening in Voorhees Chapel. Dean Edwin R. Hunter spoke to two hundred and fifty guests on "Ten Years of Pi Kappa Delta at Maryville College." Prof. Verton M. Queener, debate coach, was master of ceremonies. A reception followed the ceremonies.

Immediately after the initiation of the new student members of the national forensic fraternity, President Ralph W. Lloyd was made an honorary member of the chapter, which is the Tennessee Alpha chapter of Pi Kappa Delta.

Those taken into the fraternity were Mildred MacKenzie, Edith Mc Duffie, Carrie Lou Tweed, Ercelle Hunter, Lucille Swafford, Andrew Newcomer, Fred Kirchner, Robert Stevenson, and Arthur Lazell.

The initiating team was composed of Elizabeth Duncan, chapter president; Mary Lovette, vice president; Benjamin Groves, secretary-treasurer; and Mary John Metcalf, scribe.

This year was the first time that persons outside of the fraternity were permitted to see the initiation ceremonies, although, according to Miss Duncan, they are not secret. The entire program was extremely solemn, and was intended to impress the new members and the audience with the importance and dignity of the forensic order.

The election of Dr. Lloyd as an honorary member marks the bid of debating at Maryville College for a place of real importance on the school calendar, according to Prof. Queener. The president has been an interested patron of forensics, and it is hoped by members of the chapter that his presence will lend prestige and importance to oratory, debating, and extempore speaking on the Hill.

In his talk, Dr. Hunter went back to the first efforts of Maryville in debating. Six-man teams and four debates a year on as many different questions was the usual thing. "The Open Shop", "The Single Tax", "Freedom for the Philippines", and giving labor participation in industry on the basis of

Lazell Wins

Arthur Lazell, Maryville College junior, took second place in the finals of the Tennessee Oratorical Association contest held May 5 in Nashville at Vanderbilt University. Lynn Deakins, Univereity of Chattanooga sophomore, was awarded first place. Mr. Lazell's oration was entitled "The American Press".

IN DEFENSE OF MORPHEUS—Smith

The last time we dared to venture expression of our humble opinion it was on the laudable (and otherwise) characteristics of Baldwinites. We were promptly and efficiently squelched by a rather husky denizen of Carnegie, squelched to such a degree that we have not dared to think since. However, we feel that surely this Carnegian must be busy preparing for final exams and for that extended absence from our campus, that he will not bother trying to subdue another rebellion so late in the year, and we have plucked up enough courage to think again. The subject for thought is so opportune because of past performances as well as inevitable future ones, that we feel our cause is worthy and, hoping fervently for the defense of the student body, we hereby express our views with the understanding of our instructors as the aim.

Some teachers, it seems, take a fiendish delight in causing hapless members of the younger generation to fall asleep in class, and the unfortunate student usually affords amusement for the class upon being awakened. It may be rude to go to sleep but it is just as rude to make one listen when one does not want to. Who cares whether Domitian was the last of the Flavian emperors of Rome, or whether alternating current differs from a direct current, or whether the size of a frog's brain denotes anything, when a cardinal is warbling outside the window and a lazy fly is walking upside down on the ceiling and one wonders if he could be hit with a paper wad, if one had a paper wad ready. One wonders for a minute, for it isn't long until one ceases to think of anything—being lost in "sweet slumbers", usually most comfortably in the back row. Really the effort to listen to the illuminating, thought-inspiring words of the instructor would require all one's attention if one were awake and the words would be of no value at all. But, with misty blue Smoky mountains in the distance, the soothing music of nearby trees, and the melodious lullaby of the birds

CLOCK SYSTEM TO BE INSTALLED AS GIFT FROM SENIOR CLASS

Presentation To College Will Be Memorial To Dr. Barnes

As a memorial to Dr. Jasper C. Barnes Maryville College will be the recipient of an electrically-controlled clock unit, to be presented by the Class of 1932. Two of Dr. Barnes' principal interests in the College were in the establishment of a dependable and accurate time regulation system, and in the improvement of the library, In accordance with the first of these desires, and through the help of Professor Howell, the senior class voted this week to give an International Clock System to the College.

The master clock which will control the units in the various buildings and the ringing of the bells, will be placed in the treasurer's office, and different unit clocks will be added from time to time at needed places in the buildings. The clock system has many interesting and valuable features. It operates without batteries, carrying its own inherent reserve power. Each secondary unit is self-comparing automatically once an hour. It is easy to maintain. Schedules can be easily and quickly changed by the operator; Sunday schedules and the silencing of bells at night are easily arranged for by simply shifting the clips on the discs which control the time of ringing of the bells. NINETY-SIX SENIORS WILL BE GRADUATED

Majors Of Current Crop Of A. B.'s Disclosed; History Leads

To those students of the under classes who are making out prospective schedules for the year 1932-1933, and to those who are in the midst of selecting proper major and minor subjects for persual, if not for study in the years just ahead, it might be interesting to note just what the seniors have been doing in the line of academic work during their four-year stay at Maryville.

From records in the registrar's office, it seems that twenty-seven seniors are majoring in history, almost twice the number of those majoring in home economics, which is the subejct having the next highest number. Fifteen women have majored in that course devoted to the culinary arts. Next in order is English with thirteen majors—though there is no need to be superstitutious about it. Eleven seniors decided they came to Maryville for and education, and they accordingly chose the subject of education as their major. Biology, with nine majors, comes next in line, and is closely followed by mathematics with eight majors. Religious Education and French each have six majors in the respective departments. Five seniors have majored in chemistry, four in political and social science, three in Greek, two in Latin, and one each in Spanish and psychology.

Whether these seniors will go on in their respective fields of endeavor, or whether they will pass some of their extensively and intensively acquired knowledge to future generations, is not yet known, for many seniors themselves are undecided as to what the coming year will bring for them.

The following list is a compilation of the majors in the various departments:

Juniors Register During Past Week For 1932-33

NEW COURSES

Change In Time Of Signing For Classes Is Improvement

During the past three days, May 12, 13, 14, the registrar's office has been the scene of much activity, as those who aspire to the rank of seniors next fall have been arranging schedules and registering. This is the result of the spring registration program, an innovation at Maryville.

Students who intend to attend college here next semester are urged to take advantage of this opportunity to get registered this spring instead of waiting until next fall. There are two particular advantages in this. One is the avoidance of the tiresome and exasperating waiting line which must be suffered through in the fall, and the other is the choice of courses which is afforded to those who register now. Those who wait until next fall to register will have to take what is left in the way of courses.

Next week will be devoted to the registration of sophomores and freshmen. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, May 16, 17, 18, have been reserved for the sophomores, and Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, May 19, 20, 21, have been reserved for the freshmen. Members of these two classes must indicate their major and minor choices before they can register.

A number of changes have been made in requirements and courses, as indicated by the new college catalogue, which was issued Tuesday, May 10. The changes are indicative of the progress which is being made by the administration in the modernization of Maryville's curriculum.

These changes are important to those who are arranging schedules, and should be kept in mind. Some of them are: the addition of the degree of B. S. in Home Economics, which will be awarded to those who fulfill requirements in that department; the changing of some science courses from six to four hour courses; the changes in the numbering of courses; changes in the selection of minors, and numerous other changes.

Graduate Recital Will Be Presented

Three Students of Mrs. West To Receive Diplomas

A graduate recital by three students of the Expression Department will be presented in Voorhees Chapel on Saturday night, May 28. The selections for reading are all one-act plays. Lucy Anne Voorhees will read "The Flattering Word' by Kelly. Miss Voorhees was the stage manager of "The Melting Pot", and played a major role in "She Stoops to Conquer". She also has a part in the forthcoming senior production "What Every Woman Knows" by Barry.

Reno Smith will read "The Managers" by Joseph C. Lincoln. Mr. Smith has given evidence of his ability in "Peg O' My Heart", "Outward Bound", "The Melting Pot", and "David Harum" all of which have been produced during this school year.

Lou Repass will read a one-act Indian play, "Glory of the Morning", by Leonard. Students of Maryville of last year will remember she played an important role in "The Swan" and this year in "She Stoops to Conquer".

The graduating students will be assisted by Miss Marian Pflanze who will read a cutting "Money-Moon" which is a condensation of the novel of the same name, by Jeffery Farnol. Miss Pflanze's manner of reading is delightfully entertaining.

THE LAST MINUTE

This being only one and one-half weeks from final exam time, and we having taken inventory, and being greatly surprised and chagrined at the exasperating amount of work which remains on our calender, we break forth in a paroxysm of philosophy, regretting, in these last minutes, many lost or wasted minutes of the early part of the semester.

Many times has our ascent of Parnasus been interrupted by some pretty stone, some plaything along the way. We have kept Apollo and the Muses waiting while we halt to examine some delicate mountain flower, or to follow the song of a bird, or to watch some creeping thing on the ground, or on the trunk of some hoary tree. In plainer and perhaps less poetic terms, we have loitered, we have shirked our duties. We have gone astray from academic demands and strayed into the fields of pleasure and desire.

But, being human, we rationalize and concoct an explanation for our neglect. Are not the songs of the birds echoes of Terpsichorean music? Are not the playing squirrels following the example of Thalia?

Thus we excuse our indolence. We resolve that next semester we will not postpone that term paper. But when next semester arrives, we feel that we can safely predict that we will again be thanking Allah for the last minute.

ATTITUDES

The doctrines of Christian Science are such as to make their complete acceptance by educated people practically impossible, we understand. And yet it seems to us that there is one fundamental teaching of this group which all educated people, particularly those who are still in the early stages of becoming educated, would do very well to remember. This teaching has to do with the importance of "mental sets", or attitudes.

During the course of our lives we build up within ourselves, or have built up within us, attitudes of trust for one class of persons or things, an attitude of distrust toward another class; attitudes of likes and dislikes, of hates, and fears, and joys. Many times we allow ourselves to be guided by these "sets", to our own, and to other peoples', unhappiness.

Sometimes the "sets" are fixed, sometimes they are temporary rationalizations, defense against disappointment, anger, or aversion. But whatever their nature, they should be analyzed and judged on their true value before they are accepted as a guidance for action.

If we would stop and think before getting excited about some wrong, whether real or imagined as the result of a "set" or prejudice, we would perhaps be readier to cooperate with our associates, would have more confidence in our leaders, and more earnest, progress provoking thought than we could ever have as long as we rush in without giving our problems ample consideration.

Henry's Recital

Miss Ruth Henry, '34, was presented in graduate recital by Miss Laura Hale, Monday evening, May 9th. The recital was well attended and the audience was very appreciative of the well interpreted numbers. Miss Henry was assisted with her recital by Miss Norma Spilatore, soprano, who sang two groups of solos. Miss Henry is the only student in the piano department who will be graduated this spring.

The program was varied, containing numbers from the classical composers. Some of the outstanding numbers were Listz's Liebestraume No. 3; Leschetjzky's Intermezzo in Octaves; Brahms' Rhapsody G minor, and the well known first movement of the Mendelssohn G minor concerto. In this last number the orchestral part on the second piano was played by Miss Mildred MacKenzie.

The entire program showed the results of hard and earnest work, and Miss Henry is to be congratulated on her success.

S COLLEGIATE S ! W A P !

The females out at Ohio State University have resolved themselves into two separate and distinct groups, divided as to the type of beauty and manner of goings-on. The masterful, he-woman, type of co-ed is designated as a Yang, while the dainty clinging-vine is definately a Yin. These names are taken from the Chinese by some of the Buckeye dress designers.

The men at Stanford are rising up against the age-old co-ed manner of raising grades. It seems that the gals in Stanford are the characteristic California beauties and that the good old profs are perfectly willing to hand out a few passing grades in exchange for a few smiles, etc. (meaning whatever you like). We think the boys are not mad, just riled at seeing the lady friends flirting with the profs.

Down at Mexico's ag school in Chapingo, the studes have gone on a strike as a result of institution of new methods of study. Huh! We know of several studes who'd go on a strike at introduction of any method of study.

Election cigars are being stocked at most of the nation's educational dispensaries. For its spring—and spring means end of one more year—which in turn means vacation—leading to opening of a new year—bringing need of more officers—so spring means elections—and elections mean cigars—in other schools.

KIRCHNER READS MOST BOOKS

At the end of each school year the library estimates the number of books that have been used, and makes a check on the number of books taken out by each student, paying particular attention to those students who take a large number of books out for home reading.

Students who have taken thirty or more books from the library before May 10 are:

Fred Kirchner 77; Margaret Melody 59; Ruth Boyd 56; Junius Allison 46; Jesse Carter 44; Zelma Acton 42; Donald Harris 42; Homer McCann 41; Conrad Quenelle 41; Pat Henry 40; Julia Terry 37; Robert Overly 34; Evelyn Meek 33; Bud Mattingley 32; C. Wissler 32; M. Froneberger 31; Lois Blessing 30; Clarence Bratschie 30; Nina B. Coulter 30; Ruth McCampbell 30; Lucy Anne Voorhees 30.

Do you realize that Spec Moore and Ray Russell only need to take first places in the A. A. U. meet at Memphis, go to Boston and repeat their performances and then join your Uncle Samuel's Olympic team? That's all very simple and clear and if these boys will just step out and do that very thing then Maryville will be marked with a large cross on the map of your Uncle's United States, to say nothing of what it would do for Loudon, Tennessee and that little town in Pennsylvania.

THE LITTLE CHURCH

SURRENDERING TO CHRIST
By Charles W. Muir

On the morning Dr. Barr, Professor at the Chicago Theological Seminary, spoke to us in chapel he challenged us to be real "men and women of God". At that time he made a clear distinction between merely being a Christian and being a strong, dependable, spiritually filled person whose actions are positive and progressive for good, and not just passively being swished about by every turn and twist of the current. To really bring God into our lives the way that was mentioned leads us once again to face the question of surrendering to Christ fully and completely.

It is surprising how many Christians consider it almost dangerous to surrender fully to Jesus Christ. Apparently they think that if they do "let go and let God" have His way in their lives He will take some advantage of their submission to His will. Yet, how shallow and biased we are in judging God to be a Person like that. If God wants to take advantage of us He can easily do it regardless of any objections we may raise. But, He won't do this because it is not in accordance with His plan. The only advantage God will ever take of the individual who does surrender himself to Him will be to bring greater blessings and fulfill more desires than that person ever thought possible. And, this isn't just idle musing, for it has never failed to work. Many who doubt it do so simply because they have never tried it.

Jacob gives us a good example of many a typical Christian o. today. For many years he held off from surrendering to God,—and they were weary, unsatisfying years even though he was blessed with temporal prosperity. Finally he was brought face to face with the issue by a great crisis, and decided to turn his life and all he had over to God for care and keeping. Immediately new blessings began for Jacob. The feared meeting with Esau turned out to be a joyful reunion rather than the avengement of preceding wrongs Jacob had committed against his brother. God certainly must have been back of this sudden change in Esau. Jacob's surrender to God thus appears to be one of the governing factors which led to the unexpectedly pleasant results which followed. In all the rest of his life Jacob never regretted nor attempted to retract this decision he had made on the way between Haran and Canaan.

God has promised to "work all things together for good" to those who will really obey and love Him as He desires. In times like this what more do we want than such a promise as this? After conforming to His wishes He abundantly fills us anew with His spirit. "And the fruits of the spirit are—joy and peace". It is always safe to surrender to Jesus Christ. The real danger lies in our failing to surrender.

MARGINAL NOTES
JUNIUS ALLISON

The Waves, by Virginia Woolf, New York: Harcourt, Brace and Company $2.50.

Of the many innovations in the field of literature since the World War, the works of Virginia Woolf are the most pronounced departure from the usual type of writing. Since the Great War the moralizing element in novels has been forgotten or ignored, and books without morals, without plots, and without heroes have become popular, but nowhere can we find a parallel for The Waves. The six characters who tell—in monologues—their stories from childhood to middle age, are almost phantoms seen in a circuling mist. Mrs. Woolf was well known as the writer of The Voyage Out and Mrs. Dalloway before the publication of The Waves. This, however, is considered her masterpiece: its writing is more sustained and less hesitating than her previous work.

The Waves is now in respect to both style and content. The author has found expression for her poetic soul in the creation of three men and three women who trace their lives from idealistic childhood to cynical maturity. The writing is in present tense and is all poetic prose. The stories are motivated by a series of pictures. The words run smoothly like harmonies of sound. If there is any halting in the expression it is caused by the excess use of 'ing' words.

The conception of the novel as a whole is very simple. It is the "thinking out loud" of six characters as they pass significant periods in life. The life of Bernard—the most loquacious of the—six can be taken as representing the theme of the book. At first "The sun has not yet risen", and he is innocent as he skips to school. As the sun goes higher and the green waves sweep across the beach, Bernard grows older. Part of his idealism remain with him as he enters college, but there he begins to question "this living". He doubts the value of the whole affair. Finally, as the sun sinks, he reaches middle age where idealism has no place. No longer does he rise at dawn to see the purple drops in cabbage leaves, nor does he lie at night watching the leaves hide the stars; but he hears the butcher call; remembers the milk must be stood in the shade lest it sour. He grows cynical. His friend Percival dies, but still "The butcher delivers the meat next door; two old men stuble along the pavement; sparrows alight".

Virginia Woolf's philosophy is a pessimistic one. What's the meaning of all this living? Bernard blows two rings of smoke—one passes through the other—What's the purpose of it all? There is bitter irony in the words of Bernard when he exclaims, "Life is good. Life is pleasant: something is always happening: Monday follows Sunday —Tuesday after Monday and Wednesday after Tuesday."

There is one fear that holds the characters in The Waves—The moment in which they live will soon be over. There is a fight against Time and all six characters bow to passing Time, but partial victory is gained in the keeping of their identty. The ever quest of the suggestive makes a scheme of fancy very striking and fresh. One is always aware of the ceaseless rythm in the six minds, and the sometimes insane contemplation of self. As the sun sinks, we find Bernard an unhappy man, feeling the monotony of life, yes crying, "Against you will I fling myself, unvanquished and unyielding, O Death".

Mrs. Woolf has created a piece of art. It is an adventure, but it is beautiful and lasting.

Juniors Victorious In Baseball Fracas

The Juniors came through the final game in the inter-class baseball tournament yesterday afternoon with a 19 to 7 victory over the omnipotent Seniors. Never before in the history of inter-class baseball meet has a high and mighty Senior team, Lowell McDonald, Pee Wee Overly and all, been so completely humiliated.

The Seniors gained the right to meet the Juniors by humbling the Sophomores and the Juniors gained the same distinction by whipping the freshmen. The scores don't matter.

The seniors arrayed a contingent of football heroes on the field yesterday afternoon with the idea of making the Juniors submit as a matter of respect but the Juniors were respectable and they completely ignored Lea Calloway's prowess as a half back, Tolliver's ability as a guard and Overly's prestige gained through tackling tactics.

The Junior victory means more points toward the inter-class championship trophy, which is being awarded through the courtesy of somebody or other.

"ELECTRIC BULLETS"

THE result of exhaustive wind-tunnel tests of conventional trolley car models revealed that at speeds of 70 and 80 miles per hour, 70 per cent of the total power was consumed in overcoming air resistance. Streamlining saves approximately 20 per cent of the power.

When the Philadelphia and Western Railway Company decided to replace its cars with faster and more efficient equipment, it chose "electric bullets"—new streamlined cars—each powered by 4 G-E 100-hp. motors. The cars, constructed of aluminum alloy, with tapered noses and tails, are much lighter in weight and capable of greater operating efficiency.

In developing transportation apparatus, college-trained General Electric engineers have conducted extensive tests to improve operating conditions. On land, on sea, and in the air, to-day's equipment is safer, swifter, more dependable, and more comfortable.

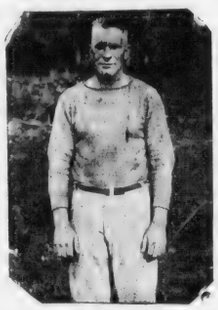
Baseballers Return Home After Disastrous Road Journey Thru Tennessee; Three Games Lost

Vanderbilt Takes Pair of Games; Cumberland Also Wins



Maryville College's baseballers returned last night after a disastrous road trip through Middle Tennessee on which they won only one game and lost three. The Scots were practically eliminated from the race for the state championship by the Vanderbilt Commodores, who came through with a pair of wins.

The trip started off successfully when the men of Honaker took a 10 inning decision from Tennessee Poly, at Cookeville, Tenn., by a score of 6 to 5. Lincoln Hurst turned in one of the best pitching performances of the year when he held the slugging T. P. I. boys to five scattered hits.

Moving on to Nashville, the Highlanders dropped the first game to Vanderbilt by 18 to 5 when the defense and offense cracked to pieces. Vanderbilt scored a large number of their runs on errors but they hit the ball hard throughout the game and would have probably won had Maryville played air-tight ball.

On the second day, the defense was a little better but the Maryville boys failed miserably at the plate and the Commodores walked off with a 9 to 3 victory. These two wins practically clinched the state title for Vandy.

Apparently disheartened by their two set-backs at the hands of Vanderbilt, the Maryvillians moved to Lebanon and dropped the final game to Cumberland University by 7 to 3. The hitting was again considerably weaker than usual but Coach Honaker hopes that the boys will return to form and take the remaining games on the schedule.

COACH BOB THROWER

Here is Coach Bob Thrower, the man behind the scenes, who is responsible for Maryville's remarkable success on the track this year. Thrower's team was defeated but once during the season, and that by the University of Tennessee, and by a scant three point margin. He has developed some of the best track men that have ever run under the orange and garnet.

In entering Spec Moore and Ray Russell in the Olympics trials next week, Thrower will be extending Maryville's track reputation to parts of the South where it is practically unknown. If these men come through in their events, his reputation as a track mentor should soar sky high.

Kentucky Defeats Scot Tennis Team

Maryville Team Wins Only One Match

Kentucky State racquet wielders took the Maryville team into camp yesterday afternoon in a long match. The final score was 8 to 1. The boys from the Blue Grass took five out of six singles matches and three straight doubles.

Blundon Ferguson was the only Maryville man to come through with an individual victory. He defeated Klein in two straight sets, 6-2, 6-2. He then paired with John Phay in the doubles but lost to Farquhar and Wilson.

The results follow:

Fischback (M) lost to Farquhar (K) 2-6, 6-3, 7-5.

Ferguson (M) won over Klein (K) 6-2, 6-2.

Phay (M) lost to Wilson (K) 6-0, 6-3.

Gillingham (M) lost to Braden (K) 6-2, 7-5.

Hurst (M) lost to Howard (K) 6-4, 2-6, 6-4.

Lampe (M) lost to Bishop (K) 6-3, 6-2.

Ferguson and Phay (M) lost to Farquhar and Wilson (K), 6-1, 6-0.

Fischback and Gillingham (M) lost to Klein and Braden (K) 6-3, 6-4

Lampe and Hurst (M) lost to Howard and Bishop (K).

SPORT SLANTS

By BOB RULE

Action pictures of the track meet with L. M. U. last week showed that Coach Bob Thrower's boys treated the Rail Splitters very badly. One picture especially, showed Spec Moore finishing 125 yards ahead of one Mr. Kidney in the two mile and another showed Jim Hitch breaking the tape a step or so in front of Vaughn, L. M. U.'s great half-miler. From the expression on Vaughn's face, he had just about spent his fury when the finish line was reached, while Jim Hitch looked as if he were just warming up for the start.

The Highlanders failed to stop Vanderbilt in either of the two games but there is one thing that the boys can be more or less proud of, and that is the fact that one Julian Foster, who if I remember correctly, blasted three of Holloway's pitchers for circuit smashes in the game here, was completely tamed. I noticed the box score of the last game and Mr. Foster had one bingle to show for five journeys to the platter. Now that doesn't look so good for a guy who is supposed to be a potential big leaguer adn who is supposed to hit any kind of pitching, does it?

Several people have asked why Joe Woodard did not play in the last two games on the three-day road trip last week. Well, here's why: Joe was on a bumming expedition last summer, or sometime, and the guy with whom he was riding had a serious accident. A trial resulted and Joe was the star witness and it happened that this trial came up when the Highlanders were up at L. M. U., so Joe was called upon to swear 'to tell the truth, the holy truth and everything but the truth". So, pals, that's why Joe didn't knock a baseball or three out of the park against L. M. U. and the East Tennessee Teachers.

Did you know that the Knoxville Smokies, a member of the Southern League, one of the fastest Class "A" circuits in the country, have their eyes on three of Mr. Honaker's baseball players? But after all, that's nothing new. There's faster clubs than the Smokies that have had their eyes on Tom West and Joe Woodard ever since they came to Maryville. Well, evidently the Knoxvillians think that a college ball player that can hit Southern League pitching in his Freshman year is a pretty good prospect because they are pretty well sold on Cecil Stone. Stone, if you remember, was the only Maryville man to hit consistently against the Smokies in the two games.

"An old-fashioned girl blushed when she was ashamed. . . a modern girl is ashamed when she blushes."

HIGHLANDERS END TRACK SEASON BY DEFEATING L. M. U.

Thrower's Men Take First Places Almost At Will In Big Victory

Maryville's track stars again proved their superiority over their greatest rivals last Saturday when completely snowed under the highly touted L.M.U. outfit by a score of 74-43.

A tall runner by the name of Moore badly defeated Kidney, the pride of Coach Alexander's heart, when he broke the tape almost 125 yards ahead of the L. M. U. runner to set a new Smoky Mountain Conference record in the two mile run. He completely shattered the old Maryville College record of 10:8.6 which he set earlier in the season when he ran the eight laps in 9:58.4. This race was without a doubt one of the best that Maryville runner has run in years.

The mighty Vaughan, the talk of most of the track fans in East Tennessee, was humbled by none other than our Jim Hitch. Hitch so completely wore out this Railsplitter star that he was almost exhausted ten yards behind the finish line. Hitch was in much better condition when he broke the tape.

Byar, the ace of our dash men, equaled the College record in the 100 yard dash when he sprinted down the straightaway in 10 seconds flat. He took firsts in both the dashes, second in the 440, and was on winning relay team to make a total of 14 1-4 points for the day.

"Finkelstein" Russell, not content with the record that he set in the javelin throw earlier in the season, tossed the stick 176 feet. The record stood at 173 feet before last Saturday.

Although he did not win first in the pole vault, Dip Felknor bettered the Maryville record by one inch when he cleared the bar at 11 feet 2 inches. Ross of L.M.U. set a new Conference record in this event when he vaulted 12 feet.

Maryville took ten out of the possible fifteen first places.

Byar of Maryville was high point man with 14 1-4 points. He was closely followed by Felknor of the Scotties and Longmire of L. M. U., each having 13 points.

The overwhelming victory over Lincoln Memorial University brought the 1932 track season to a very successful close. This has been one of the best years that a Highlander cinder path team has seen in a long time.

Brilliant Maryville Athletes Will Bid For National Honors In A. A. U. Meet Next Saturday

J. D. DAVIS

Shown above is a former Highlander with whom all of you are probably not acquainted but to the ones who have been here for several years, his face is very familiar. He is J. D. Davis, '29, one of the best all round athletes that has ever been produced at Maryville and he is on his way to great success in the coaching profession.

After graduating from Maryville, J. D. signed as Head Coach at Everett High School, in this county, and he has met with remarkable success. His team won the championship of the county in football this year and his team went to the finals in the district basketball tournament.

J. D. announced last week that he has accepted the position of Head Coach at Hickory, N. C., high school, succeeding Robert M. "Pat" Shores, another former Maryville athlete, who has accepted the job at Lenoir Rhyne College, also in Hickory.

Classes Clash In Track Meet Today

No Favorite Established In Wide Open Affair

The four classes will vie this afternoon in the first sprinter-class track meet that has been held in a long time, in which varsity men are barred. The meet will get under way shortly after noon and all events of a regular track meet will be run.

Heretofore, varsity men have been permitted to participate in the class meets and they have been of little value of the rest of the students. There is more real interest and rivalry being shown this year than has ever been shown before. It will be a wide open affair and many of the boys have been training for some time to get in shape.

So far, the betting commissioners have not named a favorite and it will be extremely difficult to decide which team to place your money on. However, Lowell McDonald, is said to have wagered a coca cola that he takes first place in the two mile and the pole vault. Pee Wee Overly is reported entered in the high jump and 440.

One freshman, whose name had not been given out to the press at a late hour last night, desired to run the relay for his class. He stated that he held the city championship in the "relay event" in Hookerville, Arkansas.

Coach Bob Thrower Sends Two Star Performers To Memphis Meet

Coach Bob Thrower announced yesterday that Spec Moore and Ray Russell, two of the most brilliant members of this year's successful track team, would be sent to the Mid-Southeastern Olympics try-outs to be held in Memphis Saturday, May 21. The meet is sponsored by the American Athletic Union and is a part of the elimination process through which members of the United States Olympic team are to be chosen. First place winners at Memphis are to be sent to Boston for the final trials, in which the winners are declared members of the U. S. team.

The historic Olympics Games, which had their beginning in Greece many centuries ago, are to be held this year in Los Angeles, California and to be chosen to represent America in these games is by far the greatest honor that an American athlete can attain. Any runner in the country is eligible for competition provided that he still has his amateur standing, duly recognized by the A. A. U.

Coach Thrower is placing a world of responsibility upon the shoulders of these men, in electing to give them a fling in the big time events. They will be carrying the hopes of hundreds of Maryville sport fans, who will be waiting anxiously for a report of their success or failure, and they should be inspired to efforts better than their best when they buckle down to business next Saturday.

Coach Thrower is sending these men to the meet on the face of their performances during the season just closed. Moore, a junior, ran the two mile this year for the first time in his life and his ability has been a source of much favorable comment everywhere that the team has shown this year.

In the meet with L. M. U. last week, Moore was pitted against Kidney, who was sent to the Southeastern trials in Tuscaloosa, Alabama, where he showed up extremely well, and the ease with which the Maryville runner won out caused the fans at Harogate to do plenty raving. Moore was about 125 yards ahead of the L. M. U. man when he broke the tape and the timers clocked him at nine minutes, fifty-eight and four tenths seconds.

This time, so far as has been heard, is the best that has been turned in by any runner in the Southland this year and with the aid of a decent track, Moore should be able to clip several seconds off this time at Memphis. The track at L. M. U. is extremely difficult to run and Coach Bob Thrower honestly believes that his protege will come through in the Regional meet next week.

Russell's performance with the javelin has been almost as remarkable as has been Moore's in the two mile. He came here last year as a fershman, having never seen a javelin before, and walked out on the track and threw the spear to a new college record. He was coached and trained by Coach Thrower all during last season and this year he

SENIOR PLAY TO BE EDUCATIONAL COMEDY

If they do not know what every woman does know, the undergraduates of Maryville College will be given an opporutnity on the evening of May 31 to find out what they should know. The members of the senior class, feeling the responsibility upon them of bequeathing knowledge, have selected an evidently obvious piece of information in the presentation of J. M. Barrie's "What Every Woman Knows".

It seems that the most convenient setting for a woman who really knows is a Scotch setting. At any rate, Ruby Hitch, who is Maggie Wylie, is a simple, homelike, bonnie lassie from the good old highlands. Her brothers, three in number, are by name and alias: Alick, Cecil Marley; David, Hadley Webb; James, Homer McCann. The last and youngest is the object of scorns and snubs from his older brothers, who ignore his efforts to claim the recognition that befits a noble Sotchman.

With the entrance of Bob Wallace, really John Shand, the interesting part of the story begins. He is the hero. He is a typical member of the great English parliament, but his oratorical sytle is devoid of the humor which the smiling Maggie knows so well.

Into this happy, if contract marriage, enters a third character, namely the Lady Sybil, or Ann Smartt. Thus the triangle is completed, and the plot, with the villianness on the stage, thickens.

For the second time this year Louise Avery steps behind the footlights clad in the ermine robes of royalty. Play-attenders will recall that Miss Avery appeared as a queen of some sort in "When Knighthood Was in Flower". In the coming production she goes under the name of the Comtesse de la Briere. Women with names like that usually pull some long strings in plays. We are betting on the Comtesse not to go back on her clan.

Cooley Combs, as Mr. Venables, the suave parliamentarian, adulterates the ointment of the hero, with a fly, at the important stage of the plot, and the outcome becomes doubtful and is surprising.

Mrs. West is directing the play, and with Lou Repass and Paul Shelton as stage managers, the production promises to be not only illuminating on a seemingly important subject, but also entertaining as one of the most delightful plays of the Maryville dramatic season.

DEFENDING MORPHEUS

chorus, if heeded, soon produce the desired enchantment and day dreams become reality in sleep.

Why must a teacher insist upon the students "synopsizing" a Spanish verb, having the tenses repeated in colorless, regular tones, holding about as much interest and expression as the tick of a clock, when the weather is warm and the night before had been exciting. Who wants to know of what hydrocarbons are made or of what value the atomic weights are or why it isn't good procedure for a chairman to take part in a group discussion. That class held at 1:10, when the teacher dictates notes in an even tone, about the uses of "shall" and "will" perhaps, makes one battle hopelessly against those waves of monotonous repetition until finally one is drowned in them and that blissful state of inactivity which follows is suddenly broken and one finds that the pen has made a long jaggel line down the page and one has missed goodness only knows how many perfectly good rules of "shall" and "will". One may look up startled and catch the sardonic expression of the dictator.

It may be that history lecture where Grant takes Richmond and Abe Lincoln gets into a bit of trouble. We'd lots rather think drowsily of those woods from which he emerged so masterfully, even though by so doing, we realize that we shall never be masterful in anything.

We do not wish to be misunderstood. We mean to make a plea for our disgraceful deficiency rather than to rebel against the wise one's teachings, but I wonder if some of these wise ones remember that young summer and mathematical formulas just don't seem to get along together. We humbly request the wise ones to cogitate before reproving the drowsy offender.

"They used to call them scenarios . . . nowadays they should call them obscenarios."

Glee Club Banquet

The annual banquet of the Maryville College Glee Singers was held in the main dining room of the Home Economics Department on Thursday evening, May 12. The banquet was attended by members of the Glee Club and their guests.

Dr. and Mrs. McMurray were special guests of the club, and Dr. McMurray was toastmaster. A very entertaining program was arranged by Wesley Culver. Some of the numbers were solos by Chilton Bowles and songs by the Dixie Vagabond quartet. Ben Groves gave a toast, and Miss Nathalia Wright gave the response. Bob Overly also gave a toast.

This banquet was the last public function of the Glee Singers for this year, and the members of the organization are looking forward to an active and successful season next year.

OBSERVATIONS

ning true to form. Everybody had left the hospital and sickness was a thing of the past when Speedy came strolling over with a bad case of measles. The latest report is to the effect that he is recovering slowly.

—o—

Getting out of paying class dues in college used to be a trick . . . . now it's a custom. It should seem to be a matter of concern when a class knows its debt definitely, has a treasurer to collect money from students who each know the specific amount, and still little is accomplished, leaving the class in debt at the end of the year. Maybe the editor of the Chilhowean thought of this before we did. . . . and more often.

—o—

Harry Mathias, better known as Mr. Mathias, tells this one on Kirchner. Rumor had it that the time was nigh when Fred should have his birthday and Harry was pressing him pretty hard to get something definite on it, regarding the date. Finally the boy from Newark blossomed out with "it isn't my birthday, kind sir, it's only my anniversary". Just like that old Kirchner, eh?

—o—

"By their fruits ye shall know them", or as Lazell says, "by their breath you shall know them." Still that might be better than knowing some people by their middle name. We were looking over some middle names, just to get some light on a few people around the college . . . This is what we found . . . . Eldon McCann, Marmaduke Somers, Theodore Boretsky, Alberta Hamrick, Robinson Neff, Sherlock Holmes Ballard, Roddenberry Beale, Lafayette McArthur, and Presbyterio Testa. This Roddenberry is one that Burbank never heard of.

—o—

All Yankee Lewis has to do now to win the fair damsel (he says she's "pretty fair") is to pop the question. He learned on May Day to step to the music and to keep possession of himself while the queen walked alongside in full array. The execution of the deciding act should be comparatively easy, however, since Yankee's recent bold advances at the life size photograph which graces the dresser in the captain's room. The picture is so much true to life that Lewis turns it around when he gets ready for bed. . . . . unless the lights have already gone out.

—o—

It must be rather a drop for the May Queen and her attendants to get out in the old college clothes after all this May Day festival with the picture taking, the flattery, etc. Most any girl, however, would be willing to stand that to have a chance of being the queen or her subordinate at the spring celebration.

—o—

That isn't all the dressing up that has taken place on the campus. The east side of Thaw Hall has taken on added improvements, both internally and externally, that give it the appearance of being the long looked for Y.W.C.A. room for which the girls have strived, lo, these many years.

—o—

Among other things that have improved in appearance is the new college catalogue. Quite an improvement, we say!

May 11—The Sophomore Class met this morning and elected officers for the coming year. Those elected are: Ross Rankin, President; Ruth Farlee, Vice-President; Thelma Iles, Secretary, and Jesse Willis, Treasurer.

"Good taste is no longer a virtue; it is a definite lack of a sense of publicity."

Inter-racial Meeting

Twenty-five Maryville College students today attended the one-day conference of the Students' Interracial Commission of East Tennessee at Knoxville College.

The day's program was built around three subjects: vocational guidance for Negro youth, what Communism offers the Southern working man, and what should be the Church's attitude toward the race problem. Dr. Charles Johnson, of Fiske University, and Howard Kester, of the Fellowship of Reconciliation, were the principle speakers.

The conference closed with the installation of the new officers of the Commission. They are Clarence West, of Knoxville College, president; Jesse Carter, of Maryville College, vice president; and Alameda Ford, of Knoxville College, secretary. Joe Hacker, of Maryville, is the retiring president.

OUTWARD BOUND

With the Theta Alpha Phi presentation of Sutton Vane's "Outward Bound", Maryville play-goers were given an introduction to the galaxy of metaphysical novelties that are claiming the attention of all Broadway. Comparable as the play is with such innovations as "Death Takes a Holiday", "Berkeley Square", and "Hotel Universe", "Outward Bound" was the initial venture of a Maryville cast into the realms of recently popular physchological and philosophical drama.

As a subtle study interpretated by amateurs, the production as a whole was a highly commendable realization of an ambitious goal. We hail with relief and a quickened faith in the sparkle of homo sapians a dramatic season which includes in its program at least one play which is not a four-act comedy of Pollyanna proportions; we consider it refreshing to attend a drama with a plot of destiny and a message or challenge. But we are inclined to agree that an amateur rendition of so deeply subtle a novelty as "Outward Bound" is likely not to recognize all the implications of plot.

The technical production of the play was excellent. The stage was good; the lighting was effective; and the technique of the actors was worthy a chapter of a national fraternity.

The acting seemed on the surface. The supernatural that was hidden away in each character was not brought to focus as being the predominent note of the play. The atmosphere of unreality which should have been evident on a vessel sailing across so unreal a stream as the River Styx was absent. Instead the seven dead passengers chatted away even as you and I. They naturally talked of the same mundane things, but there was a noticeable absence of the deeper tones of meaning which we hope will come after the advent of bier and pall.

Larry Somers, as Scrubby, submitted the best performance of the evening. He did not once leave the role of the ominous Charon of the vessel. Mr. Harry Gauding also presented convincing interpretation of his role o fTommy, the derelict drunkard. The entire cast worked as an integrated unit, but each actor missed his own big moment of the play.

As each character came to the realization of what the future life meant to him, he made the grandeur of it known, but the possibilities of this realization were not played on sufficiently for the audience to feel the eternity and the wonder of it.

The actors touched lightly, smoothly, and capably over the surface of the play, but the depp philosophical soundings which made the drama significant as a profound study were not revealed, Nor were they suggested strongly enough for the audience, accustomed to the obvious happinesses of "Peg O' My Heart" and "David Harum", to grasp.

MacKenzie Orates

Mildred MacKenzie represented Maryville College in the Tennessee state division of the Washington Bicentennial Oratorical Contest held at the University of Tennessee, last night.

Miss MacKenzie was the last of thirteen speakers entered to give her oration, which was based on the life of George Washington.

Joe Worley, of East Tennessee State Teachers College, of Johnson City, was the winner. Betty King, of Milligan College, finished second. T. D. Morris, of U. T. was third. The first two wil be entered in the regional contest later in the month.

P. K. D. INITIATES

the Proctor and Gamble plan were some of the subjects. Maryville was the fifty-eighth school to be accepted into Pi Kappa Delta. There are now 147 schools with a total membership of about 11,000.

Dr. George A. Knapp, of the mathematics department, was the instigator of the movement to secure a chapter of the honorary fraternity. When his suggestions were accepted by Dr. Hunter, Maryville soon had for itself the Tennessee Alpha chapter of Pi Kappa Delta with 12 charter members of which two were Dr. Hunter and Verton M. Queener, Maryville debate coach.

Tusculum College is one of Maryvilles oldest rivals in forensics. A former rival is Roanoke College of Virginia.

Following Maryville's admittance into P. K. D. she was represented at national conventions held in Peoria, Illinois, in 1924; Tiffin, Ohio in 1928; Wichita, Kansas in 1930; and Tulsa, Oklahoma in 1932. She has participated in the provincial conventions at Lexington, Ky. in 1929, and Danville, Ky. in 1931.

Prof. Queener, Maryville debate coach, is Kentucky province governor, of which this school is a member. There is one school from Indiana, four from Kentucky, and two from Tennessee, with another one coming, in the province.

obtained on one more circuits.

It was at first hoped that the class could afford to put a clock in Anderson tower but the expense would be too great for the present financial status of the class. However, the installation of a dependable clock system will be a great asset to the college in its daily program of schedules and ringing of bells in the various buildings.

The International Time Recording Company, located in New York, is a well-known firm and has supplied innumerable factories, universities, schools, and other buildings with clocks of various kinds and descriptions. The Maryville clock will probably be installed at the end of the current year, or be ready for operation in September.

Farmer: Why don't we pull together like our two horses do?

Wife: We could if we had only one tongue between us.

Rhodes Scholarship

Application blanks for the Rhodes Scholarships are now available to the men of the college through the Registrar's office.

Candidates for the scholarships are elected as specified in Mr. Rhodes' will on the basis of their literary and scholastic ability, their qualities of manhood, their leadership and moral force, and their physical vigor.

Further conditions of eligibility are concerned with age, citizenship, and advanced standing. The candidate must be a citizen of the United States, must be between the ages of 19 and 25, and must have completed his sophomore year in a recognized institution. His college course must have included the study of at least one modern language and either Greek or Latin, but no candidate for the Oxford degree is required to show a knowledge of Greek.

Ministerial Association

At the regular meeting of the Ministerial Association Tuesday evening, May 10, the following officers were elected for the next term: president, Philip Sorce; vice president and program secretary, Frank R. Neff; secretary and treasurer, Frank Mease; editor, Warren Warman.

Mrs. Nita Eckles West, head of the Expression Department, gave a talk on the use of expression in Bible reading. Mrs. West brought out the importance of reading the Word distinctly and giving the meaning by use of the voice. By a motion of James Howell, Mrs. West was elected to honorary membership in the Ministerial Association.

On May 17, Dr. Lester Olin will speak on "The Body as the Holy Temple". The officers for the new term will also be installed at that meeting.

Southeastern Olympics

has broken his own record on two different occasions.

Russell's best throw is 176 feet but Thrower believes that he could have tossed the stick many feet farther had he been pushed by the opposition. On one of his trials in the meet with Emory and Henry, he threw the spear very near 195 feet but stepped over the line and the throw was ruled foul. Thrower hopes that he can come through with 200 feet with a little extra work.

These two men have been consistent in their events all season. Neither has been defeated, in fact, neither has been pushed for first place. After running in the mile event against Tennessee, Moore came back and defeated Captain Goddard, of U. T. in the two mile event with many yards to spare. Russell merely tosses the stick far enough to win first place.

The boys will be accompanied to the meet with Coach Bob Thrower. They will probably leave here on Friday and return Sunday or Monday. The results of their events will be sent to Knoxville and relayed on to Maryville.

Lloyd's Schedule

Dr. Ralph W. Lloyd, Maryville's energetic and popular president, is carrying a full schedule for the remainder of the school year. He is signed up for commencement addresses or Baccalaureate services at the following high schools:

Karnes (Knox County); Decatur; Calcutta (Georgia); Townsend; Crossville; Jefferson City; New Market; Friendsville; Lenoir City; Montreat (N. Carolina); Chattanooga; Harriman.

Pete (during the Y. W. clothes-collecting campaign): You know what?

Dot: No, what?

Pete: My mother never would give old stockings to people with holes in them.

Father, did you enjoy yourself when you were a freshman at college?

Did I? Those were the happiest years of my life.

Barr Speaks

Rev. Alfred Barr, D. D., was in Maryville during last week-end and spoke twice to the college audience. Dr. Barr holds the chair of Homiletics at the Presbyterian Seminary in Chicago, the seminary which President Lloyd attended. For many years a pastor in Baltimore, he is today one of the outstanding ministers in the Presbyterian Church.

Dr. Barr's first address in Maryville was delivered at the chapel service on Saturday morning, when he spoke on the subject, "Living God." He also occupied the pulpit of New Providence Presbyterian Church on Sunday morning, and preached in the Chapel at the Vesper hour on Sunday evening.

Dr. Barr was introduced to the students as "Mrs. Lloyd's cousin."

"The heavens declare the glory of God" will be the theme of the Student Volunteer program tomorrow evening when Dr. Knapp addresses the group. Dr. Knapp will give an illustrated lecture on astronomy showing why missionaries should know something about the universe which they speak of as being the creation of God.

On Sunday evening, May 22, the program of the group will consist of a short play, "Robert and Mary" This play is built around the love story of two of the earliest missionaries to Africa, Mary Smith and her husband, Robert Moffatt. The title roles are played by Katherine Smith and Vernon Higgins. Others in the cast are Eleaonr Wynn, Mary Branche, Dorothy Nethery, Phyllis Dexter, Rosemary Shoopman, Ellen MacRae, Virginia Ross, George Thompson, Florence Hyde, Barbara Whitmore, Joe Romig, and Martha McCume.

Final Edition

VOLUME 17 — THE HIGHLAND ECHO, MARYVILLE, TENNESSEE, MAY 21, 1932 — NO. TWENTY-FOUR

OBSERVATIONS

INVITATIONS THE ANNUAL MOORE IS PRESSED

Look on the inside of the second page, take notice of the new Echo Staff members, read the editorial by all means, and (for the dormitory boys) go to McCann's room with a worthy contribution and prepare for a night of haranguing, general comment, and of course, elucidation on anything you want to learn about from the latest news on the Lindbergh baby to the pre-press dope on the coming presidenital election. You might hear one or two words spoken about our own Mr. McCurry . . . but you don't have to go to McCann's room to hear that.

—o—

We deem it our privilege to comment on our 1932 Annual. We might say a word which, if we should, would have something to do with the need of Benny Groves, Dr. McMurray, and Professor Queener to have a new picture in the annual. Some of these incoming freshman girls who, after seeing an annual, expect to major in Political Science or History, are going to have the surprise of their lives to find that Doctor McMurray isn't as young as he looks, and that Professor Queener has lost some of the curl to that beautiful flowing hair.

—o—

We can give the freshmen credit which is not related in any way to a compliment for having one page that is different. The picture of the officers looked rather like an opportunity for the student council to spend its surplus money on having pictures of the class officers taken. It might add some toward having the much desired balanced sheet.

—o—

It is always a relief to have the annuals released just before the business manager announces bankruptcy. It means one less chapel announcement each day for the remainder of the year. We don't wish to criticize . . . not much . . . but still it seems wise for a school which finds it necessary to limit the number of its sutdents, and yet has such low bills, to include on its semester college bills a request for just a few more shillings in the way of class dues. It might prevent someone from being class treasurer —a matter over which no one would care to weep.

—o—

This reminds us of the first junior "election" not long ago. We're getting into politics more and more each day, and it looks like it might continue through November 1932. After that time we can sit back in peace and tranquility under the inevitable republican administration and we can forget about politics.

—o—

Here's some recent light on the good magazines of the day. A tall, thin, supposedly well read sophomore ambled up to the library desk not long ago and filled out a slip calling for the "Scribler's magazine". That's probably a more appropriate name than the one we know.

—o—

The Hi-Trail organization was, last week, on its annual initiation campaign which does seem to stretch out into an unusually long time. We wonder sometimes just what the Hi-Trail Club means and what (how much too) it stands for. In regard to the part of our acquaintance, the initiation, we might say that it is becoming greatly saturated with boredom on the part of the onlookers. Any suggestions for a change would, or at least should, be greatly appreciated.

—o—

Angelo Narcisso (come on gang—a little pep now) is having his troubles these days. He has resolved to quit going without socks . . . and it is the best for everyone concerned. Ang had a talk with Miss Darby one noon hour which caused serious delay in his moonshine acti-

CLASS '07 REUNION WILL BE HELD HERE COMMENCEMENT WEEK

L. E. Foster, President '07, Will Speak To Group

One of the features of the gathering of the Maryville College alumni for commencement will be the twenty-fifth annual reunion of the class of 1907, June 2. The class of 1922 will also hold a reunion and banquet.

L. E. Foster, executive secretary of the Chamber of Commerce of Birmingham, Ala., and president of '07, will be the alumni speaker at the association banquet June 1.

According to Mrs. F. L. Proffitt, the oldest living alumnus will not be able to reach here. He is Dr. Calvin A. Duncan, '71, of Albuquerque, N. M. The next oldest are Dr. Samuel T. Wilson and T. N. Brown of Maryville.

Some of the '07 members who will be on the campus are F. L. Proffitt, Fred Elmore, of Lousville, Tenn.; and J. Bruce Young, Charles B. Converse, J. C. McTeer, Mrs. Pearl Clemens Hacker, and Miss Nelle Henry, all of Knoxville.

Prof. O. R. Post, of the English department of King College, Bristol, and R. C. Samsel, dean of the Law department of Lasalle Extension University of Chicago, are also members of '07.

Mrs. Proffitt says that many of the forty-eight members of 1922 are expected to be here. Local residents who belong to this class are Prof. G. D. Howell, Miss Helen Ott, Miss Jane Waller, and Mrs. Roy Fowler, each of Maryville.

Many of those who attend the graduation exercises will be representing the Maryville clubs of Cincinnati, Chicago, and New York, and the Atlantic Highlanders, comprising graduates now residents of New Jersey, eastern Pennsylvania, Connecticut, and Massachusetts.

Mrs. L. E. Foster, nee Minnie McGinley, formerly of Maryville, and a graduate of the college's voice and piano department, will

FINAL EXERCISES OF MUSIC DEPARTMENT TO BE MAY 28

Various Departments To Be Represented In Final Concert

The commencement of the Music Department on Monday night, May 31, promises to be the crowning event in the year's activities, bringing to the public the best talent of the various departments.

Some new feaures will be introduced. Two piano ensemble groups for six pianos will play. The first group will include Willimae Renegar, Mary Gillingham, Hazel Hale, Margaret Cooley, Avaleen Hogan and Beulah Duggan in the Polonaise in A major by Chopin. The second group, Margaret Cragan, Carrie Pearson, Grace Proffitt, Beulah Duggan, James Crothers, and William Crothers will play the Romance, by Sibelius.

Margaret Melody wil be the soloist for the first movement of the celebrated G minor Concerto by Saint-Saens. Garnet Manges will play a group of numbers, to include the Staccato Caprice, by Rubinstein and Etude by Forgue.

Eleanor Henry will represent the violin department by playing several numbers. The Vesper choir will give two numbers, one of these being the anthem "Great is the Lord", by Boax, which caused much favorable comment when the choir appeared in the State Federation of Music Clubs in Knoxville, with Miss Frances Henry singing the leading solo part.

Ann Smartt and Norma Spilatore will sing a group of two songs.

Miss Ruth Henry will receive her diploma, as a graduate of the piano department. Dr. Lloyd will give the talk and present the diploma of graduation. Miss Henry gave her graduation recital on May 9 and is well known on the Hill as a musician of fine musical attainments.

MAID SHOP PLANS TO FURNISH U. T. WITH GYM OUTFITS

College Of The Ozark's Girls Will Work Here; Make Westminster Robes

The College Maid Shop has recently signed the contract to furnish gym suits for the University of Tennessee. Complete suits will be made for the women, and shorts will be made for the men.

The Maid Shop has had a very successful season, according to Mrs. McMurray, manager, and at the present time is in excellent financial condition. All bills excepting the payroll have been paid through July 1, and a number of important orders are on hand. An order for over nineteen hundred garments has just been completed for the Standard Knitting Mills of Knoxville. These garments were made of a special material of corded, long staple cotton. The Shop has six weeks of advanced work already contracted for and expects to employ about fifty girls throughout the summer. Seven girls are coming from the College of the Ozarks and will work in Maryville all summer. Fourteen girls at that school have been receiving work from the Maid Shp here, and seven of them are coming to see the shop and to work here during vacation. Freshmen girls have already started work in the Shop. They are eligible to do so as soon as they have been accepted by the college.

One of the big orders to be filled is for vestments for the chapel choir of the Westminister Choir School. Dr. Williamson, director of the choir, has asked the shop to make these vestments and has made inquiries about satin and velvet vestments for the travelling choir.

Beginning Monday morning and extending until the last day of school there will be a sale of dresses and pajamas at greatly reduced prices in the Maid Shop in Thaw Hall. Students are advised to visit the shop during this sale and to take advantage of the unusual bargains which are offered.

COLLEGE CHAPTER TO INSTALL EAST TENNESSEE GROUP

Tennessee Gamma Chapter At Johnson City Enters Pi Kappa Delta

Maryville College's chapter of Pi Kappa Delta will send a team to East Tennessee State Teachers, of Johnson City, to install the newly organized Tennessee Gamma chapter there on May 24.

The State Teachers chapter was voted into the fraternity at the 1932 national convention of P. K. D., and at the request of the National Council, Prof. Verton M. Queener is taking five members of Maryville's chapter to install the twelve charter members of Tennessee Gamma.

With the complete installation of Teachers college there will be three Pi Kappa Delta chapters in this state.

The team will be composed of Prof. Queener, Elizabeth Duncan, Mary Lovette, Mary John Metcalf, Mildred Crawford, graduate members of Maryville's chapter now teaching here, and Benjamin P. Groves.

CHANGE BROADCAST OF MARYVILLE MUSICIANS

The radio program which was announced in the Echo for May 14, as going to be given Tuesday evening, May 24, has been postponed until Wednesday evening, May 25, at 8:15 p. m. according to Miss Hale, of the Maryville College Music Department, director of the program.

ROSE MEMORIAL FOR DEAN BARNES GIVEN

Students noticed the beautiful roses which were on the pulpit at chapel Tuesday morning and in the library the rest of the day and for several days following. They will be interested to know that these roses were sent to the college by Mrs. Barnes. They were a reminder of the roses which Dr. Barnes used to bring to his classroom.

RUBICONS AND WATERLOOS—Wright

Having never been characterized as an individual of militaristic tendencies, I have come to attach a peculiar significance to the two major offensives of my extreme youth. I remember still, with a return feeling of shrunken ego, my minor encounters with such vital forces as the acknowledged Amazon of the school and the recognized tyrant of the neighborhood. These affrays were entered upon with a consciousness of the enemy's supereminence and of my own inferiority. And, feeling that destiny had marked me for her own, I stood amid what I felt to be the blows of fate, powerless to attack. Needless to say, the results of these campaigns were disastrous to my self-esteem. But they inaugurated and rapidly increased in me a belief in a power of predestination that held me in its grip, but was always in league with my opponent. So his was a charmed life as well as an infallible conduct, and it was impossible for me to adopt any other attitude toward him than one of submission.

My mother did not share this metaphysical theory of mine, and her more mundane explanation identified me with a species of mild individual who cannot take his own part in a fight, and who allows himself to be trampled upon for lack of initiative to strike a few blows in self defense. This bald statement of facts did not disturb me except as it was the basis for the severe reprimands I received at home after each defeat. I had no desire, nor did I entertain the suspicion that anyone had the power to defy fate and penetrate the enemy's wall of protection; and, far from feeling trampled upon, I always congratulated myself on escaping unscathed from the foreordained ordeal. This voluntary subjugation was too much for my mother, who detected in my bowed head the beginnings of a craven spirit. And so it came about that, with a direct maternal stimulus, the two major brawls of my youth attained proportions to which I now attach a peculiar significance.

The particular bane of my existence when I was eight years old

ANNUAL COMMENCEMENT PROGRAM TO BEGIN NEXT SATURDAY AND TO CONTINUE UNTIL JUNE 2

SEVEN GRADUATES WILL TEACH AFTER JUNE GRADUATION

Many Others Hope To Teach But Are Now Without Positions

OTHERS TO SEMINARY

Medicine, Diplomacy, Nursing, Banking, Choir, Social Work Named

About ninety-six prospective alumni are filling various kinds of application blanks and receiving negative answers to optimistic questions regarding positions for the coming year. This statement does not mean, however, that all the seniors are planning to be teachers, although it does seem that the majority of them will do some kind of teaching if the necessary positions present themselves.

Blundon Ferguson has a position as coach and history teacher at Gauley Bridge, West Virginia. Jeannette Eshelman will teach the fifth grade near Creston, Ohio. Lou Repass expects to obtain a teaching position at the Washington County School, (Tenn.). Vera Wood and Lena Maye Bush have teaching positions near their homes in South Carolina and Tennessee, respectively. Blanche Moody and Mabel Hembree will teach in North Carolina.

There are a great many seniors who, while they have no immediate prospects for teaching expect to go into this profession if possible. Among these seniors are, Lynette Johnson, Janet Stanley, Mildred MacKenzie, Iva Babcock, Louise Avery, Reno Smith, Eloise Garrett, Virginia Crider, Elizabeth Hunt, Margaret Brigman, Julia Terry, and Laurence Somers.

Eleanor Henry is making plans to enter the Western Reserve School of Applied Social Sciences to start work on her M. A. degree in Sociology. Cooley Cmbs expects to enter the Medical School at the University of Louisville in preparation for an M. D. Francis Collins hopes to enter the world of business by starting in a bank.

Naomi Willingham will take work in choir directing at the Westminster Choir School, in Princeton, New Jersey. Ralph Teffeteller plans to do graduate work at the Y. M. C. A. Graduate School in Nashville. Homer McCann hopes to obtain a clerkship in the Department of Foreign Relations at Washington, D. C. in preparation for a possible future career in the foreign diplomatic service. Barbara Lyle and Beulah Duggan will enter a Presbyterian hospital in Philadelphia for their course in nurses' training. Clarence Bratschie will take seminary work at the Western Seminary in Pittsbugrh. The Edrises are going to the Louisville Seminary.

Merle Beebe will take religious education work at the Hartford School of Religious Education, Hartford, Connecticut.

While this list does not account for all the seniors it at least gives an idea to a wondering world just what some of the future alumni will be doing when Maryville opens in September.

WEST—BURNETTE

Students who were in school here last year, and who were acquainted with Bob West and Lavergne Burnette will be happy to congratulate that couple on the announcement of their marriage. The wedding took place May 7th and announcement was recently made.

Mr. West was a popular student on the Hill, and held several offices, which were left vacant by his transferral from Maryville to Cumberand University, where he has been studying law for the past year. Miss Burnette was a popular co-ed, and the many friends of this couple wish them "bon voyage".

Reverend John H. Gardner To Deliver Address At Commencement Exercises

PRIZES AWARDED

President Lloyd Will Deliver Baccalaureate Address Sunday, May 29

The one hundred and thirteenth annual commencement of Maryville College will begin formally on Saturday morning, May 28, at 8:10. The first exercise of the commencement will be the distribution of prizes and awards for 1931-32. Among these will be athletic awards, the T. T. Alexander award, and other prizes and honors.

On Sunday morning at 10:30 President Lloyd will deliver the Baccalaureate sermon and commencement week will be in full swing. Reverend John H. Gardner, Jr., pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Urbana, Illinois, will be the commencement speaker on Thursday, June 2. Mr. Gardner is a close personal friend of President Lloyd, a graduate of Hamilton College in New York, and of Presbyterian Theological Seminary, (McCormick) Chicago. For a number of years he has been pastor of a church near the campus of the University of Illinois.

The complete program for commencement week is as follows:

SATURDAY, MAY 28

8:10 a. m.—Distribution of Prizes for 1931-1932

8:00 p. m.—Graduation Exercises of the Expression Department

SUNDAY, MAY 29

10:30 a. m.—Baccalaureate Sermon by President Lloyd

7:00 p. m.—Vesper Service— Address to the Christian Associations by College Pastor Stevenson

MONDAY, MAY 30

3:00 p. m.—Reception to Seniors and their Friends and Visiting Alumni by Dr. and Mrs. Stevenson (The House in the Woods)

8:00 p. m.—Graduation Exercises of the Music Department

TUESDAY, MAY 31

3:30—Senior Class-Day Exercises

6:30 p. m.—Alumni Dinner (Pearsons Hall)

THURSDAY, JUNE 2

10:00 a. m.—Commencement Exercises—Address by The Reverend John H. Gardner, Jr., Pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, of Urbana, Illinois

WORKSHOP INITIATES SEVEN NEW MEMBERS

Members of the Writers' Work Shop journeyed to the great open spaces Wednesday afternoon for the purpose of having a picnic, and, incidently, initiating seven neophytes. The picnic was held at a beautiful spot near Sunshine.

Most of the entertainment was furnished by the new members, who very considerately volunteered to present an impromptu May Day program. Harry Wood and Mary Gamble were Mr. and Mrs. Hiawatha, Roberta Robison was the Three Bears, Charles Beale was a pirate, Margaret Melody was a Little Lord Fauntleroy, Arthur Lazell was the King of May and Rip Van Winkle, and Richard Orr was the Blue Bird.

After this impressive program the neophytes were pronounced members of the Work Shop in an effective ceremony under the direction of Miss Mary M. Kellar, chairman of the Governing Board. When this was over the members gathered around the campfire for fellowship and fun. Soon after nine o'clock the group returned to the Hill to prepare pronic things such as recitations, term papers, and other necessary evils.

Thirty Issues Per School Year by the Student Body of Maryville College.

HELLO WORLD

Greetings, from the new staff to all the readers of the Highland Echo. This is the first edition of the Echo to be published by the new staff, and the last Echo for this school year. We want to make next year a great one for the Echo in spite of Ole Man Depression and other worries.

The members of the staff want to co-operate with every one connected with the college in making the Echo a paper for everybody. We realize our responsibility, and ask the help of our associates in carrying it out successfully.

APPRECIATION

Student publications have had to struggle valiantly this year because of the depression, and the resultant reluctance of students to pay class dues and of merchants to be guided by the slogan "it pays to advertise". The annual has had an unusually hard fight, in the face of several handicaps, including the above mentioned depression. The fact that it could be published at all is due to the co-operation and help of certain faculty members.

President Lloyd and Treasurer Proffitt probably did more to alleviate the situation than any other two persons. They very graciously offered to sign a note for four hundred dollars for the senior class, thus making possible the release of the annuals. Mr. Proffitt has also signed numerous other notes and has helped wonderfully the business management of the Chilhowean.

We of the student body wish to express our deep appreciation for this help.

CUTTING CLASSES

The question of cutting classes is one of growing importance here at Maryville. The administration has made certain liberal allowances in regard to cuts, and expects that students shall take advantage of these regulations only in case of necessity. This is not the case, however, for many students seem to consider it a part of their duty to something or other to take as many cuts as possible, and some have even been heard to excuse themselves by saying that the instructor lowers the marks of those who have a perfect attendance in class. We have yet to meet an instructor who is willing to confirm this rumor.

As the semester nears its end the number of cuts is likely to increase materially as students discover that they have not taken the allotted number in each course. Those who are tempted, however, should remind themselves that the last few recitations are likely to be extremely important and one should have a very good reason for taking cuts this late in the season. We are reminded of one freshman of a former year who saved all his cuts in a certain course until the last five class meetings and then took them all in succession. He could not understand why he received an 'F' for a mark in that subject.

That is an extreme example. However no one should practice promiscuous cutting, and this is the time of year when the question should be kept in mind.

1932 CHILHOWEAN RELEASE GOING ON

The 1932 issue of the Chilhowean has been delivered by the printers and copies were distributed from the staff office this week to those students who had subscribed for the book. The staff is well pleased with the annual, and feels that it is an excellent job, in spite of the financial pressure which had to be met in order to get the book published.

The 1932 Chilhowean is dedicated to Dr. Ralph Waldo Lloyd, sixth president of Maryville College. The theme carried throughout the annual is the progress which the college has made under its different presidents from Dr. Isaac Anderon, the first, through the administration of Dr. Samuel T. Wilson, the fifth. It also looks forward to the progress which every one anticipates will be made during the administration of Dr. Lloyd.

Each of the six sections of the annual is headed by a picture of one of the presidents who have headed the college. The feature section consists of pictures of six women elected by popular vote of the students. These women are dressed in costumes representative of the different administrations. They are as follows: Miss Mildred Harris '35, representing the administration of Dr. Isaac Anderson; Miss Margaret Smith, '34, representing the administration of Dr. John G. Robinson; Miss Inez Hamrick, '33, representing the administration of Dr. Samuel Ward Boardman; Miss Dorthea Thomsen, '33, representing the administration of Dr. Peter Mason Bartlett; Miss Virginia Crider, '32, representing the administration of Dr. Samuel Tyndale Wilson; and Miss Ruth Hannah, '32, representing the administration of Dr. Ralph Waldo Lloyd.

Many new ideas have been carried out in the planning and arranging of material, and the editor and staff are to be complimented on the excellent job.

JADE POEM

By Lynette Johnson

I worship green, the hue of God's own nature,
The glistening green of wet and sparkling trees
Or shady, cooling green of darkened arbors;
The green of leaves in sunlight, golden glinted,
Or in sequestered bowers with patterned shades;
A flowing gown of green with lace of gold,
And green of heavy velvet curtains swaying;
Green in the eyes of the Titian, sweet and white,
And in the eyes of the flushing dark-haired girl;
Green of the sea when it is pale and calm,
And of the sea when it is mad in storm
And gilded with the white of foam and spray;
The green of moonlight in a summer night,
Intangible and wisped with nothingness;
Green of clouds in a sunset rare and soft,
Reflected underneath the wings of a bird,
Flying, flashing gold and green, and singing
A song, like emeralds falling on the strings
Of a golden harp inlaid with greenish jade.
I worship green, the hue of God's own nature.

Spring Registration Completed

The first annual spring registration ever held at Maryville College has been very successful. The office force feels that its task of registration for next fall has been materially lightened. The registration is advantageous to both the administration and to the students as a saver of time and trouble.

During the first three days of registration one hundred and thirty-four juniors indicated their intentions of being in school next fall by signing for regular courses. One hundred and fifty-six sophomores have registered. With freshman registration still in progress, one hundred and forty-two have been through the line. This makes a total of four hundred and thirty two, which is a large majority of all the upper classes.

THE LITTLE CHURCH

ARE YOU REALLY A CHRISTIAN?
By Charles W. Muir

To the rest of the world the United States of America is known as a Christian nation. Of course we all know that religion does not lie in a nation as such—but in the individuals that make up that country. Jeremiah taught Israel this great principle way back about 625 B. C. We, too, can learn much from his clear teachings of this essential matter of personal piety.

In similar fashion Maryville College is known as a Christian college. If the students, faculty, and administration that make up this institution are not individually Christian—how can the school itself bear out this reputation? Under such circumstances it is impossible for it to do so. Since, of course, all sincere Christians desire such a reputation to be merited to the largest degree possible—it seems quite appropriate that we briefly consider some of the factors that go to make up real Christians. In this way each of us can see whether or not he or she is fulfilling their own possible contribution.

First of all, a Christian is a person who has been converted. It may have been on a special occasion or gradually. To convert means "to turn about". A Christian has, therefore, turned around from himself into full surender to his now recognized master and friend, Jesus Christ. It is through this that the regeneration we hear about takes place in our lives and we really become "new creatures". The whole thing is started through our stepping forward "by faith"—as Paul tells us. We know that works without the regeneration of Christ through His Holy Spirit will not save anyone. But, after this has happened in anyone's life—the conduct of that person will be such that it is in accordance with the wishes of God. In order that we may see whether our conduct as Christians is doing this, let us consider five vital things that should constitute an important phase in the life of every real Christian:—

First, he will be a person who trusts in, and looks to Christ for all things; second, he will gladly confess Christ openly before all men; third, he will regularly strengthen himself by a study of the Word and by prayer; fourth, he will work for Christ whenever he is able; and, finally, in spite of prosperity or depression, joys or disappointments, he will be one who keeps pushing on faithfully and consistently toward "the prize of the high calling of God in Christ."

Many a professing Christian who faces such issues as these will see that he is utterly unworthy to be carrying the name of Jesus Christ labeled upon him. But, realizing this, the remedy is simple and sure. Let us not hesitate to take it—for in doing so, not only will the name and rating of Maryville College be raised up as never before, but the great and wonderful person of Jesus Christ will be elevated to the place where He can really show His power and glory to all people.

MARGINAL NOTES

By JULIA TERRY

"Matthias at The Door", Edwin Arlington Robinson, The Macmillan Company, New York, 1931, 99 pp., $1.75

Edwin Arlington's Robinson's latest volume, "Matthias at the Door", causes the reader, and especially the admiring reader, to wonder if Robinson has outwritten himself. That is, has the poet passed his best writing days, and is he merely struggling on, conscious or unconscious of the slipping, in an attempt to retain his mastery of human psychology and the technique of writing, that Robinsonian technique of trenchancy and cleverness of word phrase?

While his blank verse style is perfect, his words and phrases in many parts of the poem seem forced, unnatural, striving for effectiveness, and undeniably cold. Robinson is detached from his four characters; he sees them subjectively, of course, but yet there seems to be no especial friendliness between him and Matthias, Natalie, Garth, or Timberlake.

Robinson has chosen names, while perhaps not so unusual as some he has employed, are yet characteristic of his use of peculiar names. These names, however, have a rather sophisticated sound to them, and the whole poem, indeed, is sophisticated in its intellectuality, philosophy, and psychology.

The characters, although they may be too analytically drawn, are definitely and vividly portrayed; Matthias, complacent in his pride,

"Approachable, yet clearly at a distance,
Matthias was in harmony with his house,
And with all else that interested him.
He was in harmony this afternoon
Even with chaos;—"

Garth, conscious of his weaknesses and willing to die,

"I am only a lost dog.
I was too tired to bark."
"— He was alive
More with indifference than with life.

Natalie, who fears the coming years and "wishes herself extinct",

"Natalie .. saw the years coming,
And having seen more of them than were important,
Smiled at herself and wished herself extinct."

and Timberlake,

"The story of the world was in his wrinkles,"
" . . . . . I have outlived surprise—
Which is my symptom of antiquity;"

While the poem essentially concerns the lives of four people each of whom meets defeat in a different way, there is so much exposition in the matter of analytical details, both philosophical and psychological, that one tends to forget the relatively simplicity of the theme. There is present the unfortunate marriage entanglement, Matthias and Natalie being married, and Natalie and Timberlake in love with each other. Matthais, the only theist in the group must put his belief to the test when he finally realizes that Natalie's soul and love are not his but are Timberlake's, and he does make a rather admirable adaptation to the situation. Matthais says of Garth, concerning Garth's atheistic belief that Garth was " a good atheist who believed himself

And life a riot of cells and chemistry."

When Matthais comes to the door of death which is symbolically presented in the poem as a kind of physical phenomenon on the estate of Matthais, a kind of dark cave, he meets the spirit of Garth which says that Matthias must be born before he can die, meaning that he must be humble and loss his pride, for to Matthias,

"There was nowhere a more agreeable bondage
Than his was to himself; — —"
This Matthias does
"With a vast gratitude that humbled him
And warned him while he waited for the dawn."

Thus, the poem ends, leaving the reader with a sense of depression, more or less, wishing that the four people might have lived happier lives, and wondering if Matthais will really cast aside "the rich web of his complacency."

WOMEN SURPASS MEN IN SCHOLASTIC RECORDS

This is the time of the year when everyone is more or less concerned about grades, as final examinations are scheduled to begin on Thursday, May 26, and final tests are even now in progress, and term papers are due, and so on far into the night.

According to figures secured at the administrative offices, the men have cause for more concern, and the women for less, for the female of the species far excelled the male in the matter of grades for the first semester. The average number of grade points for the first semester are shown below by classes and by sexes.

Average Number of Grade Points by Classes and Sexes
First Semester 1931-1932

	Boys		Girls
	No.	Avg.	No.	Avg.
Freshmen	137	13.98	167	16.65
Sophs.	86	19.17	117	19.56
Juniors	70	21.18	64	23.68
Seniors	39	23.17	57	27.01

The superiority of the girls is further demonstrated by the division according to sex of those who made the honor roll.

This list also shows up to the advantage of the women. It is as follows: no. of seniors, 18, girls 16, boys 2; no. of juniors, 20, girls 12, boys 2; no. of juniors, 20, girls 12, boys 10; no. of freshman, 46, girls 38, boys 8; special students, 3, girls 3. Total 109, girls 81; boys 28.

In connection with the grades for the first semester it is of interest to notice their distribution in relation to the standard grading curve. The grades, according to this curve, should be as follows: A's 246; B's 985; C's 2463; D's 985; F's 246. The curve actually run: A's 270; B's 1265; C's 1638; D's 527; E's 34; and F's 193.

STUDENT VOLUNTEERS TO PRESENT PLAY

Missionary Romance Will Constitute S. V. Program

"Robert and Mary" is the title of the play which will constitute the program at Student Volunteer meeting tomorrow evening.

The play is a missionary romance, the love-story of Robert Moffatt and his sweetheart Mary Smith, who were pioneer missionaries to Africa. They later became the parents-in-law of David Livingstone. The scene of part of the play is laid in South Africa, and some of it is in the Smith home at Dunkenfield, England.

Student Volunteer meeting will be held immediately after the Y. M. C. A. installation service. Every one is invited to the play.

At a business meeting held last Thursday evening the following officers were elected for next year: Dorothy Casseres, president; Charles Muir, vice president; Marjorie Salmons, recording secretary; Elizabeth Gillis, corresponding secretary; Katherine Smith and Lorena Mae Dunlap, program secretaries. Installation of these new officers will take place on Sunday evening, May 29th, at the last meeting of the year.

Rev. and Mrs. Ansel Gillis, from the Ganado Mission to the Navajos, will visit Maryville College during commencement. They are the parents of Elizabeth Gillis, who is now president of the Student Volunteer Group.

PRE-MED ELECTS

May 19—The Pre-Medical Club met this evening in the Club room in Science Hall. After a very interesting program the following officers were elected for the coming year: president, Wesley Y. Culver; vice-president, Harvey Lowry; secretary-treasurer, Arnold Burgin; program secretary, Lindsay Tope; editor, Tillie Goodwin.

OVERLY, GROVES, AND ALEXANDER ELECTED

Robert Overly was re-elected president of the Glee Singers this week. Benjamin P. Groves was re-elected business manager, while Andrew Alexander retained his position as assistant business manager.

There are a number of people on the ether who should be under it.

"THE GREEKS HAD A WORD FOR THEM!"
XZESPIO (born with wings)
EXHIBIT A. MERCURY — EXHIBIT B. PEGASUS

In the best families (or any others for the matter) that doesn't happen nowadays. Hence the United States Air Corps offers some attractive inducements to you college students for whom it has built a $10,000,000 institution at San Antonio, Texas, where they teach you to fly and while you are learning:

Pay you a salary of $75.00 per month. Pay your living expenses.
Supply you (free of course) with snappy, tailor-made, sky blue uniforms.
Grant you the social and military privileges of potential officers.
Pay your traveling expenses from your home to the new field at San Antonio. 700 men are taken in each year. The course requires a year to complete and includes over 200 hours of solo flying. Those who stay the full year are commissioned as Lieutenants in the Air Corps Reserve.

If you don't like the training you may resign at any time. For Example: Should you stay three months and then resign you will receive $225.00 cash, your round trip expenses from your home to San Antonio, and about 50 hours of solo flying.

The service and associations of the Air Corps gives its members a very real distinction and a very noticeable breadth and poise.

If you have applied and are ready to go, we have compiled information and tips giving you inside angles and dope that will be invaluable when you arrive at the field. If you haven't applied yet then by all means get our information. We tell you the entrance procedure and certain twists that make your getting in easier and quicker. The information written by men who have been through the school covers all points from beginning to end that you are interested in knowing. This information cannot be obtained elsewhere; it is complete. Nothing else to buy. The price is $1.00 or sent C.O.D. if you desire.

SCOTS TRIM EMORY AND HENRY; END SEASON TODAY

Moore and Russell In Memphis Today For Big Chance On Track

Results Of Meet Will Be Relayed Back To Maryville

Spec Moore and Ray Russell, Maryville's two candidates for national track honors, are in Memphis today for the Mid-Southeastern Olympics tryouts. The two men were accompanied to Memphis by Coach Bob Thrower, who has advanced track to a very popular place in athletics at Maryville.

Hopes for their success has soared upward since the rules and regulations of the meet have been submitted to Coach Thrower. The races are not to be run on a competitive basis but instead the men will be "running against the watch". Each event must be run in a designated time and Moore stands an excellent chance to come through in his event.

Russell needs only to throw the javelin 190 feet to place in this event. The A. A. U. has set aside these distances and times for the athletes to shoot at and the winners will be sent to Boston for the final Olympics trials. One of Russell's throws against Emory and Henry went considerably over the 190 mark and he should be able to better this mark this afternoon.

Both men have been working out this week in preparation for the meet and they were in first class shape Friday morning when they left for the scene of the meet. The men will probably not be back to Maryville before Sunday or Monday but news of their success or failure is being relayed to Knoxville, then to Maryville and doubtless many of the students will be awaiting the news.

Girls Presented Athletic Awards

From the group of 185 girls who went out for athletics this year 35 will receive awards. The highest award offered is a letter and sweater, and requires 500 points. The girls earning this award are:

Mary Gamble—568 points
Lorraine Yennie—548 points
Edith Kitts—523 points
Ruth McCapmbell—506 points

Eleven girls earned more than 400 points which entitles them to a letter. Girls receiving letters are:

Mary Gillingham—478 points
Katheryn Wayland—451 points
Mildred Schoeller—449 points
Mary Hollis Carter—435 points
Ellen MaCrae—432 points
Dorothy Hassall—430 points
Mary Swacick—416 points
Cecelia Mynatt—415 points
Ruth Farlee—414 points
Sarah Dick—411 points
Cecelia Conover—403 points

The reward of mongram was given 20 girls who made over 300 points. The following girls receive monograms:

Margaret Fronebergen—392 points
Mary Cooper—390 points
Mildred Purviance—385 points
Katherine Davis—378 points

SPORT SLANTS

By BOB RULE

Today's game with Emory and Henry will end another year of sports for Maryville and again we look back over the activties in our athletes and feel darn proud of the fact that we go to Maryville.

Maryville has been represented in the Smoky Mountain Conference by football, basketball, baseball, track and tennis teams. Maryvi le headed the conference in all of these with the lone exception of basketball and oh how close they came to heading the list in this branch. It has been just another "Honaker and Thrower" year.

We have been blessed with thrills this season. Who will soon forget those games with Carson-Newman, Milligan, Tennessee, Kentucky, Tennessee Wesleyan, Howard (yes, we haven't forgotten), those clumsy Appalachian Teachers, Union (dear ole Union), Lenoir Rhyne, and L. M. U. There was plenty of good football games played out of this number.

And basketball season. That game with Milligan. I never want to see another game like that one. White and his boys gave us plenty to rave about during the winter months and we won't soon forget how that boy White shot baskets standing on his head (almost.)

Baseball, track and tennis have offered us both entertainment and amusement. It has been amusing to watch the basebellars batter opposing pitchers all over the field; it has, too, at times been amusing to watch the Highlanders run bases but all in all we have had another good year on the diamond.

Track has come just as a matter of form this year. Meet after meet was run and meet after meet was won. (How dya like the way that rimes). Spec Moore, Jim Hitch, M. Byar, O. Paul, D. Felknor, R. Russell, S. Richardson and the rest have given B. Thrower one of the best track teams that he has ever had.

Coach Smith has produced another good tennis outfit, even if he did flunk me in Spanish. His team has come through with victories in a large number of matches and they, of course, are champions of the conference. He took a very small number of men and whipped together a team that was hard to beat.

And so, as a final gesture, let me say—so long until the Echo becomes a daily.

It Took Coach Thrower But Three Years To Make "Spec" Invincible

BY BOB RULE

Three years ago, a slim, bespectacled Freshman reported to Coach Bob Thrower for track duty. This Freshman had never been on a track team, had never had the coaching that it takes to make a first class track man, but he had one thing: ambition.

He wanted to be on a track team but he did not know for sure just what he wanted to do. His legs were not even the legs of a track man and so he looked everything but a promising candidate.

Coach Bob put him to high jumping. He learned to high jump and he learned it quickly. Before many weeks of practice had passed, he was showing the way in this event and before the year was over, he was taking first places rather consistently for Maryville. He won his letter through his ability to jump. Thus started Clifton Moore's track career at Maryville College.

Very little time had passed until Coach Bob had lived up to his reputation as a "nick-namer" and so Clifton Moore was affixed with a new handle to his paternal cognomen. His glasses resulted in the name "Spec".

During his Sophomore year, Spec decided to extend his tracking ability and so he started working on the mile run. A rather strenuous race for a boy whose legs did not look sufficient to stand the grind of a good hike, to say nothing of four fast laps around a quarter mile track.

But Spec Moore ran the mile for Maryville College and, like his high jumping, his mile running was of the first order. He won the greater number of his races and again he was awarded the coveted wing bedecked "M".

Not satisfied with running the mile, Spec decided to step into Roy Taylor's shoes this year and carry the orange and garnet standard in a longer and more difficult race, the two mile. He started training when the footballers first started kicking the ball around in the early fall. He entered the cross-country and shortly before the half of the Maryville-Appalachian State Teachers football game ended, Spec Moore came jogging into sight over near the big oak tree on the practice field and finished long before the rest of the field.

The season progressed and Spec won two miles for Coach Thrower Saturday after Saturday. The L. M. U. meet arrived and Spec was pitted 'gainst Kidney, Coach Alexander's great runner, and a contender for Olympic honors. Moore left Kidney 125 yards in the rear and finished in 9:58.4, the best time that has been made in the South this year.

And now, this same slim, bespectacled Freshman, who had never done track duty until three years ago, who had never known the thrill of a decisive victory over an individual of his own ability, is standing on the threshold of greatness in the track world. His one great opportunity has come. Will he overcome the odds and make the most of this opportunity? I am inclined to think that he will.

Kiser's Circuit Blow In Tenth Brings Highlanders 8 to 5 Win

Highlander Bid For Victory Today In Final Game Of '32 Season

Johnny Kiser's home run in the tenth inning with two on base broke up a heated pitchers duel between Jim Holloway of Maryville, and Boyd of Emory and Henry yesterday and the Highlanders came through with an 8 to 5 victory in the first game of a two-day series.

The stage was all set for one of those "Dick Merriwell" finishes when Kiser stepped in and assumed the hero role. The score was tied at 5-5, the opponents had taken their turn at bat in that inning, two were on base, the fans were crying for a base knock, the hero's girl was anxiously watching his movements (I hope), the stands were full of major league scouts (perhaps), and it was raining like the devil and everybody wanted to go home. So you see, this boy Kiser was a real, honest-to-gosh hero.

The Maryvillians got off to a one run lead in the first canto by scoring two runs after the Wasps had pushed over a lone tally in their part of the first. However, the Wasps came through with two runs in the fourth when Miller clouted a home run and took a 3 to 2 lead. They increased their margin in the sixth with another score and it looked bad for the home team.

Things went along in this disagreeable condition until the eighth inning when Holloway decided that it had gone far enough and blasted one of Boyd's slants over center field for a home run with two on. This sock gave the Highlanders a one run lead but those infernal Wasps came right back in the ninth, despite the rain, and tied the game up with another score.

The Scots failed to cross the platter in their half of the ninth and so the game proceeded into extra innings. Holloway mowed the boys from Virginia down in one-two-three order in their part of the tenth and then the Highlanders won the game in the tenth, thanks to Mr. Kiser.

The teams will meet today in the final game of the series, which will also be the final game of the season for the Maryvillians. Either Duff, Kiser or Hurst will take the mound for the Scots in an attempt to end the season with a victory.

Waiter: "Have you given your order?"

"Yes—but please change it to an entreaty."

Widespread fear that business may never return to the normal isn't so great as the widespread fear that it has.

"That was a close call, old man. Don't you know you should always give a woman driver half the road?"

"I always try to as soon as I find out which half she wants."

TENNIS TEAM CLOSES SEASON WITH WINS OVER TUSCULUM

John Phay Most Consistent Man On Team; Ferguson Rates Second

Maryville College's tennis team ended its 1932 season Thursday afternoon by taking the second meet from Tusculum College by a score of 5 to 2. The victory brought Maryville's standing very near the .500 mark, having won five matches and lost six.

The boys seemed to have hit their stride, despite the fact that the season is over. They have been playing inconsisent tennis during the greater part of the year, but in making the comeback that they did they have proven that they are capable of giving Mr. Anybody's team plenty of trouble.

Earlier in the week the boys defeated Tusculum at Greeneville by 5 to 2, thus annexing the championship of the Smoky Mountain Conference. It is true, however, that only three teams in the conference are represented by tennis teams but victories over Carson-Newman and Tusculum are not to be sneezed at.

John Phay has proved to be the most consistent winner on this year's team. In all of his matches this year, including the doubles, he has come through with 13 victories. Blundon Ferguson was second with 12 victories and Capt. Fischback was third with nine.

The team's record for the year follws: matches won from Wesleyan (2), Tusculum (2) and Carson-Newman. Matches lost to Tennessee (2), Kentucky, Georgia Tech, Emory University and University of Chattanooga.

The reason politics makes strange bed-fellows is because they all like the same bunk.

was one Frederick, a little bully younger and smaller than I, but the unholy torment of my life. His methods varied from torturing the cat in my presence to annihilating my play houses and mutilating my dolls. Our final and culminating engagement began in a usual manner. One winter afternoon I was sitting in the yard, bearing malice toward none, and watching the snow melt on the grass. My pacific station seemed a challenge to Frederick's powers of perpetration, for he appeared immediately, and, with no warning (I needed none), he snatched up a handful of snow and began cramming it down my sensitive back. My first impulse, which was to run home, I suppressed, and remained seated, grinding my teeth in an effort to preserve the stony indifference which I thought would drive him away. But not so with small boys, as my brotherless existence had not taught me. My stoicism was Frederick's incentive to apply more snow. Approaching martyrdom, I clenched my fists to avoid outward indication of my mental state. From the porch, where some friends were gathered, the voice of my exasperated mother reached me, and I sensed that she spoke the opinion of the group: "If you don't whip him, I'll whip you!" I knew what the threat meant, but my indignation was heightened not because of that, but because no one seemed to understand my situation and its limitations. Another handful of snow went down my back. That was too much. With a determination born of irritations from Frederick, who represented a spiteful destiny, and from my mother, who symbolized a misunderstanding world, I reached my decision. I jumped up and started after Frederick. His surprise paralyzed him for a moment, but he recovered as befitted a tyrant, and ran. I ran after him, and around the house we went. On the way I stopped at a wheelbarrow where we had cached some icy snowballs. As Frederick peered from the corner, I sent one toward him, and followed it myself. Around the house again we went, as I gained on him and pelted him with missles. Finally I caught him, just as he was trying to enter the house. I grasped the back of his sweater in a precarious grip. He struggled violently, but I held on with a strength I had not known half an hour before. Then, preserving my hold with difficulty, and my dignity not at all, I stooped down and scooped up snow with my other hand, and methodically stuffed one handful after another down his back, muttering vindictively. When I could pack no more snow into the choked crevice between his back and his shirt, I reluctantly let him go.

The commendations I received on my brilliant self defense were lost in the new feelings that dominated me. I had taken myself by surprise, but the surprise acted as a stimulant which I did not examine until afterwards. I had no idea what to do with my victory now that I had gained it. My decision and my ultimate victory were inexplicable and useless. I realized later that I won that fight only because I startled Frederick out of his accustomed poise. Under ordinary circumstances he would have whipped me, but the phenomenon of me aroused and in action he did not know and his ignorance bred fear.

It was several years later that the similar experience occurred. My opponent in this campaign was a young gentleman of my own age and advancement in school, Kenneth by name. His particular device for teasing me was the practice familiar among our fourth-grade bare-legged circles of tickling me on the knees. I had warned him of the probable results of his action according as my mother had warned me of the certain results of my non-action. But no reforms were made. One morning I came to school with the maternal advice ringing with particular discord in my ears. I was outside the school room door waiting for it to be opened, when Kenneth arrived. His hilarious humor was explained by the fact, known to us all, that it was his birthday. And as was the custom among our clan, he had invited the entire class to his home after school to celebrate the occasion, with duly arranged hair ribbons and neckties. His spirits were bubbling, and I was the first to discover how near to overflowing they were. The pair of party socks I had on drew my attention immediately to my bare knees protruding above them, and he came running over. I should have realized that on this day of all days any misconduct on the part of the honre was to be tolerated and even excused. But I did not. My mother's pitiless decree and the past months of patient endurance combined to rouse me from my lethargy and send me to return his attentions. He ran lightly down the steps, supposing that gesture of escape would suffice to quench my momentary flame of anger. But he had not calculated the full extent of my decision. I followed him down the steps, out onto the school lawn, across the campus toward his home, shouting maledictions at him. Halfway across the campus, near an old wooden bridge, I halted for breath. Looking down, I recognized a further means of vindication. With rocks and cinders picked up from the bridge I chased him the rest of the way home. And that afternoon, oblivious of any outraged dignity I might have aroused in the host, I went with the other classmates to Kenneth's party. With perfect self-control, I presented my tissue-wrapped package, and ate my ice cream and cake with no slightest indication that I remembered having rocked him home that morning.

I won that contest not by virtue of the convenient rocks, but by my naive attendance upon his party. For thereby I announced my nonchallent superiority over him in a way he could never doubt, forgive, or forget.

The significance I have attached to these two exemplary encounters lies in the fact that I always had to be started by some exterior force. That I normally did not initiate action is evident, because I never settled the daily disputes that arose, but, with fearful anxiety, allowed them to pass. So it was inevitable that I should encounter at some time the scene I myself had created by procrastination and synthesis. The exterior force was furnished by my mother until I attained that age of reasoning in which I was able to create it. These two fights which the annals of my young experience boast as the most typical as well as the most nearly unique, are indications of my adjustments.

So it was I came to learn that life is what people make it, and everyone has the right to an attempt at making it as desires. So it was I lifted my head from the slave's yoke to the position of potential slave-driver. So it was I found that if my bluff is bigger and more convincing than my opponent's, mine is not only the bluff, but the victory. So it was I discovered that to one who with determination directs his decision, is the power to inflict a defeat, and command a triumph.

STUDENT COUNCIL ELECTS

Benjamin P. Groves was elected president pro tempore of the Student Council at a meeting of the council in Pearsons Hall Tuesday night.

Mr. Groves is now finisihng his junior year, and is majoring in Political Science.

Interantional Debate Scheduled

Maryville College, through the International Students' Federation, is attempting to schedule a three-way debate with a debate team made up of Irish university students. This news comes from Verton M. Queener, Maryville debate coach. The University of Tennessee will be the third representative in the debate.

All that is known at present, according to Prof. Queener, is that the debate will be held sometime in December 1932, if plans mature. Three questions will be used, each team speaking on one of the questions and refuting the constructive speeches of the other teams.

Prof. Queer must wait for further arrangements from the Students' Federation before he can make additional announcement.

Other plans for the 1932-1933 debate season are at present centered around the conversion of the west end of Thaw Hall into a debate room, and the organization of the public speaking class.

SENIOR STAFF EDITOR WRITES SWAN SONG

Julia Terry

Some people call it graduation; others call it commencement. In reality this leaving college is one kind of graduating and at the same time, it is one kind of commencing. We seem to be doing two things at once, and in the doing of them feel rather dazed and perhaps lost in our attempts to find the new path. There are some members of the Class of '32 who have attained their goal and have placed another more difficult one farther ahead. Then there are those who have not attained their first goal but who have used their college course as a means to a higher and finer end of ultimate service.

When we leave Maryville on June 2 there will be a great many circumstantial evidences that we are graduates. Think of the numbers of honor reports one hundred survivers of the original light brigade of 300 have signed every Tuesday morning, almost 13,000 of them during our four-year stay here. Think of the many library slips we have filled out during the two years that the library has made this admirable change. We used to autograph a composition book at the library desk. We have used over 100,000 library slips, which is a very conservative estimate when one considers the various uses that can be made of these slips.

Think of the numbers of Dr. Stevenson's sermons we have tasted, chewed and digested. Each of us has listened to about 120 in the four years, which would amount to over 12,000 sermons if we had been "preached at" individually. Think of the many words which have been added to our vocabularies during these weekly proceedings, and of the limitless lessons in 'lliteration which have been gladly given and gratefuy grasped by segacious seniors.

Think of the hymns we have sung, at least 160,000 of them, of the biscuits we have been subjected to, of the billions of beans pecks of potatoes, gallons of gravy we have looked at, if not swallowed.

Think of the steps we have climbed and unclimbed, of the trips we have made to town. What a huge bonfire could be made from the notebooks and notebook paper we have used during the four years of occupation. Think how many full moons have come and gone. Nine each year for each senior would make nine hundred moons annually or 3600 of them through the four years. We regret that we haven't taken full advantage of these many moons, but this opprtunity will continue to make monthly knockings, some of which we may hear and heed.

Think of the postage stamps we have used, at least 30,000 of them, of the bars of soap and tubes of toothpaste that have been consumed in one way or another. But even circumstantial evidences become tiresome after sufficient details have been brought forward to prove a point—the point in this case being that we seniors have really been here at Maryville.

In leaving Maryville there are certain remembrances which we shall carry with us whatever course of activity we may follow.

First, last, and always are the friends we have made, those valuable contacts which are indicative of likenesses, understanding, sympathy, and mutuality. There is something tangible, and something intangible in those associations of heart, mind, and soul. There is something of immortal in them, something permanent, strong, eternal.

There are various traditions of the College which we shall carry with us. We are victims of the jokes concerning the college graveyard and the college seal. Many of use bought chapel seats, went to Baldwin when we should have been directed to Carnegie on that memorable day. We shall remember the "Howey How", the "Alma Mater", Vespers, the seeming endless lines during registration days, joint meetings, "oonshining", football games, night lights, basketball, baseball, track meets in the rain, mountain hikes—when we used to ride the Calderwood Limited or the Sunshine Special, Anderson tower when the flag was flying, the cedars, the slatey roof of Thaw in the moonlight, the ranges of Chilhowees and Smokies to the East, and the Cumberlands to the West, the College Woods and its inamortal brook, the fountain with the iron railing, lectures, exams, midwinters, Christmas holidays, Mondays that we used to have. These and many, many other fond recollections will bring to our future enfeebled minds incidents that used to be.

In leaving our Alma Mater there are regrets and their joys. We hope that we have accomplished something of worth, that we are qualified intellectually and morally, to "carry on" in our chosen lines of activity.

vities and he hasn't ceased to talk about that yet. These sick boys must have their medicine, you know.

—o—

One thing that seems especially apparent about the graduating class of this year is the small number of students majoring in English and the much larger number of students majoring in History. Wonder if the "tradition" spirit of Dear Old Maryville has anything to do with the high number of History majors.

—o—

Dinty Moore, Maryville's Crack two miler, isn't of much worth attended the Student Volunteer meeting Sunday evening and had a very harrowing experience, and he hasn't ceased talking of it since. First Dinty had plenty of room to sit down. Then through politeness he gave his chair up to a couple, while he began to stand. Later he had to give up two thirds of his floor room and went on standing in the remaining space. No one offered him anything, notwithstanding the fact that he's our crack two miler. . . even his room mate forgot him in the humdrum of excitement which was made more exciting by the show of moving pictures and the consequent obscurity. Finally in sheer exasperation when the picture was about half over, Moore bolted to come home and tell the boys about "my night in Student Volunteer". According to Moore it was the most trying experience of his since the pigs ate his kid brother.

—o—

Some idea of what it is to "get an education instead of "accepting" an education is afforded by one William Mathieson who was injured recently in Knoxville. While Bill is flat on his back he is keeping up in every subject except for his laboratory courses. His biggest hindrance in the way of studying is his constant flow of visitors, a situation that comes about as a result of over-popularity.

—o—

As we go to press we look forward to a summer of "Now I lay me down to sleep" and backward to a winter of "I pray the lord my soul to take." Our concern about the latter comes about as a result of a year's writing of Observations.

PI KAPPA DELTA HEADED BY GROVES

Benjamin P. Groves was unanimously elected president of Pi Kappa Delta at the dinner of the fraternity in Blount Hotel, Thursday night. Elizabeth Duncan is the retiring president.

Mr. Groves has debated at Maryville for three years, the first year being on the freshman team. This year he was a member of the Maryville debate squad which went to the Pi Kappa Delta national convention at Tulsa, Oklahoma.

Those elected to serve with him were Fred Kirchner, vice-president; Arthur Lazell, scretary-treasurer; and Robert Stevenson, scribe.

Immediately preceding the election Prof. Verton M. Queener, debate coach, thanked his proteges for what he called "the fine spirit and hard work" of this year. Miss Duncan then presented Prof. Queener with a set of ivory book ends, prefacing this with a few remarks about the coach's "great worth to the school."

Afer the dinner, the freshmen and varsity debaters went to the Palace Theatre.

We'll start out our column in a small way this year by mentioning first that Paxton, "The Mighty Paxton" is back. Paxton's the same old student, which says a lot. That is. . . he does.

—0—

There must be some disagreement as to just who is running this column. The way Beale and Lazell have been casting their glimmers on these frosh co-eds it appears that they have usurped, horned in on, so to speak, the duties relative to this side of the first page. Of course it is possible that their findings might not be just the thing to print. And then again. . . . but, you ask them.

—0—

Headline: Freshman class runs off ninety-third annual shoeless handicap on Wilson field . . Barefoot boys with cheek of tan show promising track and field material. . . . . .Most freshmen ever to run in early season race.

—0—

Freshmen don't only run barefoot races. They have created a new terminology with which the older students are unfamiliar. It has been only a few days since someone asked an upperclassman if Dr. McCurry was busy. Feature that! And then, there was the one that wondered if Mr. McCurry was head of the history department. It looks like our proctor rates. By mail we find a letter directed to President Prophet. Then the post office authorities in some one of our towns were confused about a letter addressed to Merryville. . . . only. They tossed a coin and it came heads so they "tried" Tennessee. It worked. Maybe this person was thinking of the Merry Villa which has sprung up during the summer between Knoxville and Maryville. It's the place where people go to get all wet. No freshmen have found it necessary to visit the place.

—0—

And then there was the Student Council president who rode four hundred miles in an open car without any windshield. That is, the car had no windshield. Groves looms as one of the most bright and shining prospective Student Council presidents in the history of The College. He blossomed out in new array upon his arrival and just now he's in the process of what he calls a favorable change.

Y.W.C.A. WELCOME NEW STUDENTS WITH WEEK OF ENTERTAINMENT

Faculty Reception And Gypsy Party Feature In Y. W.'s Opening

From the Maryville campus to the Knoxville bus and train stations—that is the distance over which the Y. W. C. A. reached to welcome the new students this year. And not content to see the new Maryvillians safely on the Hill, the organization continued to make that first week one of new and pleasant friendships.

Pop calls and a snap were examples of the Y.W.C.A.'s early success in making new and old students acquainted with each other.

The next function which had for its objective a further orientation of the new students was the faculty reception Saturday afternoon, which was sponsored by the Y. W. C. A. and Y. M. C. A. Over sixty faculty members comprised the receiving line on Baldwin lawn, and approximately two hundred and twenty-five tagged students were received by outstretched cramped hands. Most of the latter number were new students, the fact again seeming apparent that most old students do not relish the idea of identifying themselves to the faculty.

The finale of Y. W. C. A.'s week came Saturday night when a Gypsy Party, probably because some sort of vagabonds seemed in keeping with the times, was held in the gym. Over two hundred and fifty gypsies were gathered around the campfire, which burned brightly with the aid of several electric bulbs. The Gyspy Queen was produced under the non de plum of Alberta Hamrick, and the rest of her dusky band, which on Sunday afternoons is called the cabinet, appeared singly and in pairs.

In the same evening, Frankenstein and his monster were introduced, and the funeral of Homesickness was held. Helen Thompson came forward with a roll of her own, and it wasn't Bull Durham. Elizabeth Duncan and Mary Katherine Mize displayed various articles of which they had relieved some member of the faculty, and among their booty was Miss Gamble's keys, Dr. Hussey's umbrella, and Miss Heron's lipstick. Tess Frey and Vi Webb performed in a tap dance which took on a political flavor as Tess whistled "The Sidewalks of New York".

After the evening's strenuous entertainment, the gypsies were refreshed by doughnuts, lemonade, and dixie cups. In the recent annals of Y. W. C. A. Gypsy or Hobo parties, the one of 1932 is acclaimed at present to be the most successful from the standpoint of numbers and laughs.

PRESIDENT ISSUES GREETING

The opening and the closing of the college year never lose their color or attraction no matter how often one lives through them or how similar are the experiences from session to session. Coming to the College for the first time, or returning to college, or welcoming the faculty and students as they come, these all are interesting and enriching privileges.

The President is one of a number who have spent much of the summer in Maryville building the plans and organization of the College for this 114th year of its service. And he is happy to be one of the welcomers of those who have come to share the opportunities available.

We have sought to sustain and increase the strength of our faculty, to improve our equipment and plant, in the interest of efficiency and comfort to lay foundations for a cooperative and enthusiastic group spirit, to lift our scholastic, moral, and religious standards a bit higher, and to find means to provide financial backing to students who sorely need it.

Whatever of resources the College possesses we now place at your disposal, and ask only that you enter wisely and cooperatively into the year's program.

I have earnest good wishes and high hopes concerning you all.

Y. CABINETS HAVE ENJOYABLE RETREAT AT TALLASSEE

"Christ And The College Student" Proves Profitable Discussion Theme

About forty students, most of them officers and cabinet members of the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. on College Hill, were assembled on September 10-12 at Tallassee Springs for one of the best 'Y' Cabinet retreats that ever was held.

The theme of the conference was "Associating Christ with the Lives of College Students", and the addresses and the various other phases of the conference fully justified by their soundness of content, force of argument, and depth of spiritual inspiration, the selection of this theme.

The speakers and their subjects were as follows: Rev. Dr. Elliott, of Knoxville, "Just what can the 'Y' Association do to strengthen the spiritual life of the students?"; Mr. Black, College Business Manager, "How one college student might talk to another about his spiritual needs"; Mrs. R. W. Lloyd, "How one college student might awaken the spiritual life of another"; Rev. Mr. Alexander, of Knoxville, "Continued Religious Fervor". The keynote struck by all of these speakers was that the "Y" needs are not so much governmental, financial, and social, as they are spiritual.

During the conference, a joint meeting of the two "Y" Cabinets was held, with Miss Hamrick and Mr. Duff, the presidents of the two Associations, presiding. At the same time the Program Committees held a separate joint-meeting for the purpose of more specific considerations relating to their future programs, which, it was declared, are to be more systematic, intensive, and vitally spiritual.

ANNUAL Y. M. C. A. POW WOW INITIATES PROSPERITY-PARTY

Popeye, Andrew H. Gump, And Hambone Receive Nominations

In what could be called, generally speaking, a vigorous convention night, the Prosperity party both opened and closed activites at the Y. M. C. A. pow-wow last Saturday evening. Aside from the party leaders' difference of opinion in regard to their platform, everything went off very smoothly, with a great deal of the ballyhoo going over the heads of some of the underlings present. The pow-wow was considered by former students and story lovers to be the best one in the history of pow-wowry.

The evening's program began with Clopton and Lang leading yells and teaching the new students the more unfamiliar yells and the two pep songs. After this the convention began in great style with Donald Briggs, stately New Yorker, taking the place of Temporary Chairman for the convention.

The first platform of the prosperity party which didn't involve anything particularly important was introduced by Groves of Ohio. The

Y. W. APARTMENTS WILL OPEN SOON IN REAR OF THAW HALL

Women Asked To Co-operate In Keeping New Rooms In Good Condition

The Y. W. C. A., through a committee composed of Mrs. Lloyd, Mrs. Wright, and Mrs. McMurray, has obtained and renovated the rooms in Thaw Hall directly below the Practice House apartments. During the summer the committee, assisted by Mrs. Black, planned the rooms and succeeded in carrying out their plans in a very satisfactory manner. The rooms—reception hall, kitchen, and a large double room with a balcony—have been finished with beige colored walls and old ivory woodwork. The large room contains a fire-place with an ivory colored mantel. The curtains and draperies and the upholstery of the furniture carry out the color arrangement of cream with warm shades of rose, blue, and green.

The kitchen has not been completed, but the work of the committee has now been turned over to Mrs. Lloyd, who will assist the Y. W. girls in furnishing this room. Plans are also being made to build a small dressing room later.

This apartment is at present taking the place of the Y. W. building which the girls hope to have some day. The committee in charge of the work, because of its interest in it, was satisfied with nothing but the best in material and workmanship.

It is hoped that the girls will keep the room as clean as possible as a means of showing their appreciation to the Y. W. committee.

DEATH TAKES STUDENT PATRON OF COLLEGE DURING VACATION

W. I. Milling Killed By Current; Mrs. Bassett Succumbs To Illness

Maryville students returning to the Hill this fall were sorry to hear of the deaths during the summer. 110 volt current occurred in the the college. One, a student, was a freshman in attendance last year. The other, a patron, was since the beginning of this century a loyal and beloved friend of the college.

Wilbur Milling, of Duck Hill, Mississippi, was accidentally electrocuted in the early summer months when a short circuit in a mer of two persons connected with electrical wiring he was erecting for an outdoor evening entertainment. Milling was a promising member of the track team last year, which is rather a distinction for a freshman to achieve. He ran the 100 and the 220 during last season, and was bidding fair to become an exceptional star in the future. He was a popular man not only among his track mates, but in his society, and among other groups of men. His presence will be missed in many groups this year.

Mrs. Mary A. J. Bassett, mother of Miss Almira Bassett of the faculty, died at her home in Maryville the last of June, after a long illness. Several years ago, when the Bassett residence was on the Hill, Mrs. Bassett was known by

SIX NEW INSTRUCTORS ADDED TO SERVE ON COLLEGE TEACHING STAFF FOR COMING SCHOOL YEAR

Teaching And Administration Forces Are Strengthened By Additions

Six new teachers have been added to the college faculty for the coming year. These new faculty members will supply in the departments of Psychology, English, Biology, History, and French. A detailed account of the new faculty members as issued from the President's office follows:

Dr. Paul E. Fields, of Delaware, Ohio, has been engaged as Professor and Head of the Department of Psychology and Education. He fills the position made vacant by the death of Dr. Jasper Converse Barnes a year ago.

Dr. Fields received his B. A. degree in 1926, and his M. A. degree (in Psychology) in 1927 from Ohio Wesleyan University, and his Ph. D. degree (in Psychology) in 1930 from Ohio State University.

He has taught for four years; first at Iowa State University and then at Ohio State University. During the past two years he has been at Leland Stanford University, California, as a Fellow in Psychology under appointment by the National Research Council. He has published various papers and articles and has delivered addresses before a number of the national and regional learned associations, and before scientific groups in various leading univesities. He is just now coming from Ithaca, New York, where he read a paper before the American Psychological Association. During recent weeks he has been visiting the Psychological laboratories at the leading universities of the country.

Dr. Hill Shine, of Chapel Hill, North Carolina, will be Associate Professor of English. Dr. Shine received his B. A., M. A., and Ph. D. degrees from the University of North Carolina. He has had the following. teaching experience: three years as high school teacher and principal; two years at the University of Louisville; and five years at the University of North Carolina.

Miss Jessie Katherine Johnson, recently of Athens, Tennessee, who comes as Associate Professor of English, is known in Maryville. Miss Johnson received her B. A. degree from Maryville College in 1921, and her M. A. degree from Columbia University in 1929. She has had eight years of college teaching experience, and has been

FACULTY STAYS HOME STUDIES, TRAVELS DURING VACATION

Ph. D.s Claim Attention of Many Erstwhile Instructors In College

In these days when students are regaling each other with accounts of their summer vacations, our thoughts are reminded to turn to the faculty, which also spent summer vacations, although in various places and capacities.

Though the most nearly unromantic group, from the standpoint of summer) occupations, those faculty members who spent their vacations at their respective homes will perhaps be hailed by the most students as comrades in this era which is decreasing the number not only of banks but of summer travels. In this group of instructors who spent the most of their three months in their olde home townes are Miss Jewell, Mrs. West, Mrs. Newberry, Miss Gamble, Mrs. Olin, Miss Heron, Dr. McMurray, Prof. Walker, Dr. Knapp, and Prof. Kiger, who kept the home fires burning in Maryville. Miss Green, Miss Holland, Miss Kellar, and Miss Kennedy, retired to their homes also, which are in Massachusetts, Alabama, Tennessee, and Alabama respectively.

Two variations in this group were Miss Gertrude Meiselwitz, whose vacation at her home in Wisconsin was featured by the marriage of her sister, Bernice; and Miss Merle Beebe, whose visit to her home in Missoula, Montana, was her first in several years.

Among this number also were two instructors whose home residence was enforced by illness. Miss Mildred Butcher was unable to leave her home in Knoxville, and Miss Almira Bassett was in bed during the months of July and August at her home just off the campus.

Among those faculty members who boast summer homes are Dr. and Mrs. Hussey, who were to be found in Weaverville, N. C.; and Prof. and Mrs. Ellis, whose residence was in Burrville, Tennessee, on the Cumberland Plateau.

The next largest group contains those teachers who continued, in spite of the heat of the summer, in

An Alumna Speaks—Terry

Four years ago this September I came to Maryville as a freshman wondering at though believing in college graveyards, college seals, and costly chapel seats. I had my picture taken by a terrifying student photographer who caused me to look at a most disgusting and unalarming nail in the upper right hand corner of the torture chamber. The resulting picture shows a sufficiently frightened freshman who would have made a good Britisher at Bunker Hill, with only the whites of her eyes showing.

I shook hands with seeming hundreds of faculty members and acquired a grin that carried me through many succeeding reception lines.

I saw upperclassmen with numerous badges and ribbons hanging about them and wondered if I should ever be qualified to wear even one. Green Bainonians and Blue Thetas swarmed everywhere speaking in mysterious terms of traveling and happy sisters. I told them that I had traveled four hundred miles to come to school, leaving two happy sisters at home, but they said that I didn't understand.

Nu Gamma Sigma meetings and hikes occupied part of my time and I was thus intiated into the activities of the Y. W. C. A. Through the famous game of Snap I was formally (?) introduced into Maryville social life.

Thus I began my freshman year at Maryville.

Three years ago I came to Maryville as a sophomore, wearing a ribbon or two—a freshman aspiration realized. I enjoyed the Y. W.-Y. M. retreat at Sunshine, learning much about everything and everybody.

I strode about on the campus welcoming freshmen, delighting in the fact that now I was a big sister (forgetting that I had already been a big sister for some fifteen or sixteen years). Instead of grinning through the faculty reception I helped serve the refreshments. I delved into rush week activities of my society and began to appreciate the favors bestowed upon me last year by the societies.

I was introduced into down town night life at the sophomore Hallowe'en party. I was privileged to have an elective course or two, thus proving to myself that some day I would be a junior and could start work on my major. Days began to be fuller and I wondered what I did with all the time I had when I was a freshman.

Thus I began my sophomore year

Literary Societies Welcome

BAINONIAN

Dear New Girls:

We welcome you to College Hill, and to Maryville in the true Maryville spirit. We hope that you will take passage on the good ship Bainonian and sail with us for the next four years. Our ship weighs anchor and sets sail for a week's voyage with Captain Welcome in command and Pilot Gaiety at the helm.

We who have been sailing on this ship on previous voyages cherish those happy memories and good times we have had together. Whether you board our ship or not we give you a hearty welcome to Maryville and wish you all a happy stay on our College Hill.

Helen Thompson, President.

ATHENIAN

To the New Men:

It is my privilege as president of Athenian to welcome all new men to our literary society, and in doing so I recall the words of Lavater who said, "Actions, looks, words—steps from the alphabet by which we spell character". Look over the representatives of Athenian Literary Society and see whether or not they are men with whom you would enjoy associating.

As to telling you that you are as welcome as the flowers of May to our society we hope that our "actions, looks, and words" have already far exceeded anything I might say here.

Your sincere friend,
Al "Doc" Duff.

THETA EPSILON

As we watch you new girls entering Maryville for the first time, and realize you are standing on the threshold of four years of college endeavor, we members of Theta Epsilon Literary Society wish to recommend to you the comradeship and loyalty for which we, as a society stand; to wish for you a college life of happiness, success, and honor, and to offer you the friendship and good will of each "happy sister" of us.

Nathalia Wright, president.

ALPHA SIGMA

New Men:

Alpha Sigma welcomes you as probably the most promising class in several years.

Your friendliness has impressed us and we want you to know our feelings toward you.

We urge you to join one of the societies, to realize the obligations which you take upon yourself in so doing and to carry out these responsibilities to the best of your ability.

We invite you to visit our meetings and join our fellowship.

Don't disappoint us, fellows, both societies are depending on you.

Donald W. Briggs,
President of Alpha Sigma.

Thirty Issues Per School Year by the Student Body of Maryville College.

EDITORIAL

The ordinary high school graduate is very much attracted by the potential advantages of a college course as they are presented to him by his teachers, his fellow students, and college representatives of his acquaintance. He is shown in a conclusive manner how he can some day be financially independent. Statistics are quoted to show that much increased salary awaits him after college and will more than reciprocate for the four years "lost" in his life. The potential college student is urged to exploit his capabilities to convert them, so to speak, into money.

A genuine surprise, none too pleasant as a rule, has come to the student who, devoted to his particular branch of knowledge, continues his way through school to find himself jobless. He has been under the impression that two things, his radiant personality and his sheepskin, could get him a position in any man's town. He finds it difficult to get other work for two reasons—too much specialization has made it impossible to cover much field and too much false pride keeps his chin above the level of his fellows. He can not work with the ordinary.

More modern and more practical educators and colleges guard against a situation of this sort. Education has taken on a different meaning. While nearly every student aims toward a profession, he doesn't go blindly forward with only his nose and his job in front of him, seeing only the financial benefits of a college education. He finds that college life is the beginning of actual life—a time and a place not only to work, but to play—and to live. He is being taught not simply to narrow himself, but to broaden himself; not only to develop skill, but to develop character and genuine personality.

The college furnishes the student with an opportunity to improve christian character, practice ethical behavior, and experience a human fellowship with other students. The awareness of these possibilities in college does away with the plan to make up for a loss, for there is no loss. A student should not come to college if he feels his time is being wasted.

Those emphases just mentioned are those stressed by Maryville College. The students and the faculty create a natural people who are representative of the higher talents and the development of a well rounded life capable of meeting life's everyday tasks, if they are given this opportunity.

THE ECHO STAFF

The purpose of the HIGHLAND ECHO staff is to publish a report of events and items of particular interest that occur on the Hill. Through the editorial department, the columns, and the Echo Forum, there is granted an excellent opportunity to exchange student opinion. The staff as a unit attempts to be a true expression of the student body as well as an expression of itself.

THE HIGHLAND ECHO staff is composed of carefully chosen members from each class who are well instructed in the art of newspaper writing. From the twelve freshmen only six remain as sophomore cubs and from these cubs only three or four remain as junior associate editors or staff editors. By this careful method employed each year it is possible to get the best to be had along journalistic lines. This year the staff is especially fortunate in having on it four accomplished seniors. These seniors, presumably having no chance for advancement, are working for the purpose of helping the staff and because they enjoy this work.

It is the desire of the staff to warrant the cooperation of the entire student body and the faculty and, in return, to publish the best paper in the history of the HIGHLAND ECHO.

STUDENT COUNCIL PRESIDENT PRO-TEM WELCOMES STUDENTS

To New Students:—

From many organizations you new students have been receiving a welcome to Maryville in the past few days. The Student Council also wishes to extend its bit of welcome to those who for the first time find themselves upon our campus.

Mst oof you entering our freshmen class havae hopes of graduating four years hence. Let it not discourage you when I say that according to statistics nine out of ten who enter college never receive degrees. Of course there are many reasons for this, such as the financial reason, lack of ability, maladjustments, and inability to grasp the real significance of College. It is one of the last mentioned reason that I would enlarge upon.

College is not a four year loafing period in one's life; nor is it a time when one's nose is kept constantly in a book to the exclusion of an enjoyment of College life and activity. There is a happy medium that is open to every student and it will bring success and true enjoyment out of four years spent on old College Hill.

Some of the things embodied in this happy medium are: 1, Mastery of the curriculum. This does not mean making a straight "A" grade. 2. Taking part in extra-curricular activities. 3. The making of many friends.

The college activities, like the curriculum are varied enough that every person should be able to find something of special interest. To the athletically minded student the college presents the major sports of football, basketball, baseball, track, and the minor sports of tennis, wrestling and swimming. The intellectual student can turn to such fields as debate work or Highland Echo. Those artistically inclined students have dramatics and music to occpuy their spare time. In addition every student should be a member of a literary society if he sincerely wishes to strike this happy medium.

To make your four year stay here complete one should make many friends. You have entered a college where it is easy to be friendly. Maryville offers one the opportunity of cultivating the habit of making these valuable contacts.

As you enter this year you have the very best wishes of the Student Council of this, your Alma Mater.

Benjamain P. Groves,
President Pro-tem.,
Student Council.

all students. In later years, not only her daughter, Miss Bassett, but her son, Dr. Harry Bassett, now of Southwestern College, Memphis, was a member of the faculty, teaching in the Latin department. For many years Mrs. Bassett was known as the "Grandmother of the Y.W.C.A.", and in this capacity she was a sincere and interested friend to hundreds of girls. In the opinion of those who were privileged to know her, however slightly, she was a "very perfect, gentle" woman.

Miss Irene Bewley, former Maryville student, and well-knowp impersonator, will appear at Maryville High School auditorium Thursday evening under the auspices of the Capt. Emerson J. Lonas Post of the American Legion. Miss Bewley will read "Tales of Tennessee Mountains."

The only dates some old maids ever get are those on their tombstones.

Home Again—Beale

Hard as it is to believe, we're back in school. Our roseate dreams, happening in distant lands, have become hard realities as we face the cold facts about Pearsons, classes, desirable and otherwise profs, and the like. Perspectives change as we settle to the grim business of mastering our courses, either by the medium of long, arduous, work, or else by resorting to the wily art of bluff. Superclassmen begin avoiding bull sessions at times, and freshmen cease to stand around looking as though they wonder whether or not the dogs are being properly fed back home.

The time for evolutionary astonishment is almost over, thus assuring us again that the year is officially started. Although we have been undergoing scholastic revolution the majority of our brief lives, still September inevitably brings a sense of self-awe as we contemplate our growth from senior to freshman, frosh to soph, and so on. Sometimes the less adaptable among us require several weeks to completely convince ourselves that we're really past another milestone on the rocky road to degreeship. Others among us are what we of the intelligentsia term "perpetual freshmen", or those who wake up out in the world four or more years after we enter school only to find that we've gone thru the motions in vain. We are told that it is from this last group that our national political figures are drawn, since they have learned in college the more efficient methods of spreading on the same banana oil year after year without meaning a word of it, proving that there is, somewhere in the world, a gutter for every guttersnipe.

The third point (Dr. Lloyd please note) which proves that school is really in full swing is the evidence presented by Nicotine Alley. The weeds which sprang up at the "curb" during the summer months are practically extinct, the "vice gang" can be seen in session at all hours, and the wooers of Lady Nicotine prove conclusively that we're "Home Again."

ANNUAL Y. M. C. A. POW-WOW INITIATES PROSPERITY PARTY

most noticeable feature of his speech was the high falsetto voice that the Buckeye resorted to using. His plank centered around the proposed repeal of the 19th Amendment. Several clever bits of argument accompanied the proposal.

"Senator" Beale of Georgia followed with the second plank of the platform and with a hastily prepared, but well delivered speech, proposed a heavy tax on all rules and regulations that concerned the delegates. The Georgia delegate showed the result of many years experience in party politics, having been for many years a strong democrat.

Lazell of New York, presenting Popeye's majority platform, with the help of the representative of the Tennessee Light and Power Corporation, got the delegates a bit disconcerted by his own uncertainty. Because of his former association with the former president, Roosevlt, he could not break away entirely from his former affiliations with the Progressive party. It made little material difference, however, inasmuch as one must be progressive to reach prosperity. He carried the most lifeless issue of the entire group, having to support an increase of the army, navy, and marine corps.

The nomination speeches were made as follows: Quenelle of the Volunteer State, nominating Popeye, the sailor; Rankin, also of Tennessee, nominating Andrew Gump; and James Smith of Mississippi, nominating Hambone of national cartoon fame. Hambone is well known in Tennessee. A subsequent nomination on speech was delivered by Magee of Mississippi. With the termination of this speech, the convention officially closed.

The men were next entertained by the Hi-Water quartet of Maryville. This quartet, composed of Carhart, Toms, Magee, and Paxton, did everything except sing, much to the satisfaction of those present. Bill Hannah was the "accompanist".

Al Duff, the president of the Y. M. C. A., proceeded thence to introduce a number of prominent men. In the course of their short talks it was easy to perceive that they were entering into a contest of joke telling. The winning joke was told by Dean Hunter according to an unofficial vote taken by a committee of judges. The speakers were Dr. Stevenson, Dr. Hunter, Dr. Orr, Professor Queener, Jesse James, Dr. Carson, Dr. Olin, and Lea Calloway.

The devouring of 72 watermelons culminated the program.

their pursuit of higher education, Prof. Howell, with his family, was at the University of Chicago where he is working toward his Doctor's Degree. Professors Queener and Griffiths studied at the University of Indiana, both toward the goal of a Ph. D. The entire Queener family was enrolled in Bloomington institutions of learning.

Prof. Lagerstedt was a resident at Middlebury College, Connecticutt, where he plans to receive his Doctor's Degree. Miss Zo Carroll, a new member of the faculty, almost completed the requirements for her Ph. D. degree at Duke University.

Among those professors who filled positions on the staffs of other institutins, were Dr. Hunter, who was a member of the faculty for the summer session of Duke University held in Junalluska, N. C.; Dr. Orr who taught in the Presbyterian Seminary in Chicago; and Miss Hudson, who was an instructor in Dr. oFulkes' Camp Rose Martin, under the watchful eye of Tess Frey, director of the camp.

The faculty also has its travellers and cross-country fliers. Among this group are Prof. and Mrs. Davis, who visited in Missouri; Mrs. Alexander, who with Dr. Alexander, and her sister Miss Belle Smith, travelled through New England; and Miss Hale, who visited relatives in Ohio. Coaches Honaker and Thrower trekked across approached California via plane. the continent to the Olympic Games,

HIGHLANDERS LOSE RAGGED GRID BATTLE TO HIWASSEE TEAM

INFORMATION GIVEN CONCERNING REGULATION OF Y. M. C. A.

1899 Contract Gives Management Of Bartlett To Board Of Directors

From time to time there are questions as to the uses and control of Bartlett Hall. For information of any who may be interested, THE HIGHLAND ECHO quotes the following from the Minutes of the Directors of Maryville College for the year of 1911. The signatures are those of the officers of The Directors and of the President and Secretary of the Y. M. C. A.

"Whereas, under a contract and agreement entered into on the 25th day of May, 1899, between the directors of Maryville College, a body corporate, and politic, under which Bartlett Hall, one of the buildings on the grounds of Maryville College has been under the control and management of the Young Men's Christian Association under certain rules and restriction, therein stated:—

Now the said parties have entered into this contract and agreement, that said Young Men's Christian Association of Maryville College, hereby surrenders the possession, control, and management of said building to the Directors of Maryville College, with the following reservations: that is to say:

1. The Auditorium shall be kept and used at any time needed for Association purposes for said second party.

2. A room shall be set apart for use as a Secretary's office, and also a room to be occupied by the Secretary.

3. A room for reading, also a room for games.

4. A room for use of guests when visiting.

5. It is also agreed that the Directors of Maryville College will furnish heat and light for all the rooms in the building, when necessary to be heated and lighted; and will also provide a janitor separate from the Secretary, whose duty it shall be to look after and care for the building, keep the rooms, halls, and all parts clean, protecting the walls from disfiguring marks and scratches, and all other abuse.

6. The Directors of Maryville College will further renew, change or repair the floors in the auditorium and gallery as may appear to be needed for the best. (This alteration was made soon after this agreement).

The said parties hereby agree to the terms and provisions above set out and accept the same respectively.

In witness whereof the said parties have caused this agreement to be signed by their respective presiding officers and secretaries, on this day of May, 1911".

During the present year the College is giving the President of the Y. M. C. A. the privilege of rooming with the Secretary in Bartlett Hall, although the latter is the only one mentioned in the plan quoted above. There are also two janitors appointed by the College rooming in the building. It has been decided that it is best not to use the building further than this for rooming purposes. No doubt the practice of a larger number of persons living in the building grew up during the past few years because the 1911 agreement was not familiar to all concerned.

A bird in the hand is bad table manners.

SPEC MOORE CHOSEN FOR TRACK CAPT.

At a meting held the last of the year Clifton "Spec" Moore, crack Maryville two-miler was elected track captain to serve during next year's season. Moore was one of two men to try-out at Memphis for the American Olympic team. He runs the mile and two mile.

PRE-MEDS TO DISCUSS MEDICAL COLLEGES

The Pre-medical club has been organized to encourage the acquisition of general scientific knowledge and to stimulate an interest in science, especially as related to the study of medicine.

The first meeting of the school year will be held Thursday evening, September 22nd. During the program there will be a discussion on Medical Colleges and their requirements. We particularly invite new students who are interested in the study of medicine to join us.

Only a few students missed the game last Friday night and they all stayed away for the same reason. They hated to see another of these topheavy scores with the poor visitors being the victim. There can be no doubt that the dope bucket was decidedly upset and until we go to Coach Heron to get some of the particulars, we are at a great loss to know what to do. We might mention that the feminine coach has just "calculated" that the Yankees will win the American League pennant.

SPORT SLANTS

By Beale

A new era is on us. The old sportster has departed and an imposter is in his place. No more shall last year's slanter contrive to build structures of words to bring forth into the sunshine the pithy comments on athletics we so delighted to peruse. Instead, we have a writer whose name at the head of a column is a guarantee that said column will never be considered. However, here's for tryin.

—S—

Varying emotions, from pity to scorn, have been expressed over Friday night's game. Let us remember, though, that Maryville's team is composed of five lettermen, a few of last year's reserves, and a host of green players. Time is needed to evolve a finished team, and the students should bear with the boys until they have had that time. We have material for a first-rate ball team and we'll have one, if we keep, or rather start, pulling for them.

—S—

Which reminds us that it is time for the annual roasting of the cheering section. Hiwassee, with a thimbleful of fans and a couple of leaders, did more real yelling in one trip to the plate, than the Maryville sector accomplished in the entire game, despite the fact that the latter outnumbered the former ten to one and had no need to feel embarrassed by being away from home. Those who never see the game, the moonshiners, may not realize how pitiful it seemed, but to those who actually know what was happening, the cheering was disheartening. And our football players were to be included in this last group. If we want a team that plays inspired ball, let's go about inspiring them by demonstrating some real yelling. Okay, Moonshiners! ! ! ! !

—S—

Toots Blazer captured the fancy of the fans Friday night and Coach Honaker added fuel to the fire by sending him in in the second half, when his team had just received a "break." Look to your laurels, Rock!

—S—

Jack Atkins, who taught school last year, must have been taking correspondence course in ball-carrying. That run of his Friday night looked more like one of Calloway's than anything seen lately. Too bad it couldn't count.

—S—

And, speaking of Lea Calloway, he was right there on the bench. We don't have exact figures, but we venture to say that he sat there longer Friday night than in all his football career combined. Several have mildly suggested that he might come in handy in his old position. We think so too, also.

—S—

Speaking in terms of Sport Slants we can't refrain from a reference to the styles in women's hats. Several people have suffered stiff neck from trying to follow the natural, or should we say unnatural, curvature of the Parisian lids. Wonder how many of the new hats have ever seen Paris.

GRID WARRIORS LOOK WEAK AGAINST INSPIRED LINE ATTACK OF INVADERS

Honakerites Fail In Attempt To Hold Edge During Second Half

A fighting aggregation of football midgets from Hiwassee College invaded the Wilson field precinct Friday night to capture a loosely played game by a lone touchdown. The upset came, as upsets do was a bewildering surprise to the throng of students, and freshmen, who had gathered to see the home team administer a severe punishment to the boys from Madisonville. But the boys from the neighboring city seemed to have an entirely different idea about the evening's entertainment, scoring touchdowns in the second and third quarters to defeat the Highlanders in their own back yard.

Led by a tiny halfback called Sheets, the visitors conspired to make the game interesting by a foxy combination of speed and power plays which would do credit to a team of twice their size and prestige. Play after play, behind excellent interferences, Hiwassee spread their Sheets and sailed right through the Maryville line for substantial gains, while the Scotties' ball-lugging was marked by almost inevitable traffic between the interference and the carrier.

After see-sawing through a ragged first quarter, a misdirected Maryville pass settled in the arms of the speedy Sheets, and he took to his nimble toes to convert the chance into six points. A try for extra point by placement failed.

Somewhat surprised, and quite a little angry, the Highlanders, after kicking off, took possession of the ball on Hiwassee's two-foot line

MATRONS SUBMIT TO CHANGE OF NAME

The office of the president has announced that henceforth the use of the word "matron" in referring to the woman in charge of the women's dormitories will be discontinued in favor of the expression similar to "Head of Baldwin hall".

Also, in place of the expression "assistant matron" there will be substituted the expression "assistant to the Head of Baldwin hall".

at Tennessee Wesleyan College since 1924.

Miss Zoe Wells Carroll, of Morristown, Tennessee, has been secured as Associate Professor of Biology, to take the position made vacant by the resignation of Mrs. Bessie Henry Olin.

Miss Carrol received her B. A. degree at the University of Tennessee in 1926, and her A. M. degree at Duke University in 1929. She has continued her study beyond the A. M. degree and has completed most of her work for the Ph. D. degree.

George Dunlap Crothers, of Maryville, will serve as Instructor in History, handling extra work made necessary during the time of transition in the curricular offerings; he will also be Swimming Instructor. Mr. Crothers received his B. A. degree from the College of Wooster, (Ohio) in 1929, and his A. M. degree from Columbia University in 1931. He has also completed his residence work at Columbia for the Ph. D. degree.

Miss Evelyn Merle Beebe, of Missoula, Montana, will serve as Secretary to the President, and part time Instructor in French.

Miss Josephine R. Hunter, of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, has been engaged as Head of Baldwin Hall, to fill the position made vacant by the resignation of Mrs. Lida P. Snodgrass who has rendered long and notable service in that capacity. Miss Hunter received her B. A. degree (with Phi Beta Kappa honors) from Cornell University (New York) in 1929, and her M. A. degree in College Personnel Work from the University of Pittsburgh in 1932. Her advanced study has been with the purpose of working with college girls. She has given special attention to the subjects of English, Sociology, Psychology, and Philosophy.

Robert C. Thrower has heretofore divided his time between coaching and teaching Spanish. This year he is to give full time to coaching and the new physical education program of which further announcement will be made.

Robert Lewis Smith, who has for three years been Instructor in Spanish at Maryville College, now becomes Associate Professor of Spanish, having received his M. A. degree from the University of Wisconsin at the end of the recent summer quarter.

OBSERVATIONS

Everyone's anxious to see what this new color will be that he expects to come out in. Nothing like a lot of local color, you know.

—o—

If everyone would follow after the plan of Jerry Smith (that isn't a boy, freshmen girls, so don't crave an introduction) there would not need to be any new students each year. We could spend the first semester getting acquainted all over again. It's a pet hobby of the red-head (common parlance nickname for Clara Bow) to meet people and have them fail to recognize her. Maybe she's out after big game. . . . one can't tell. Well, one can too, but we can't all tell what just one person is thinking about. We'd suggest a gain in weight of about twenty pounds before Jerry deserves to be called "the red-head" with any degree of accuracy.

—o—

There is published in this issue an article by one of the best writers ever to grace the Echo Staff. This person is Julia Terry, who is now in Dayton, Ohio, having been graduated with last year's class. Miss Terry held down a position on the staff for three years and declined a nomination for editor upon the grounds of lack of time. Her senior year she remained on the staff and wrote an abundance of material which could always be relied upon as to content and promptness in being turned in. "Irish" had become a byword among the students of Maryville and her graduation deprives the school and especially the staff of an uncompromising friend and worker.

AN ALUMNA SPEAKS

at Maryville.

Two years ago I came to Maryville as a junior, an upperclassman at last. How kind the fates had been to me! Again I indulged in a Y.M.-Y.W. retreat; again, gaily beribboned, I welcomed freshmen and played big sister.

Now I had graduated to a room in Pearsons and was confronted with color schemes and room arrangements. My roommate wanted rose, I desired green, so we had blue and lived happily ever after.

Again the "Welcome Student" signs were dusted off and placed in store windows, giving me a little private satisfaction in being a Maryvillian. Again Ricketts gave me a blue blotter for my desk and Chandler's gave me a waste basket. Proffitt's came around with a calendar and thus my room was almost furnished.

This year I proudly signed up for major and minor subjects, wondering what they all meant but hoping for enlightenment by kind-hearted professors. I somewhat quailed at the sound of junior psych., for I had heard former juniors speaking in mysterious terms of I. Q.'s, emotions, and neurones. But remembering my unnecessary ranting about sophomore systematic discourse and freshman chemistry I realized that psychology might not be half bad.

Thus, I began my junior year at Maryville.

One year ago I returned to Maryville as a senior. I displayed my senior jacket even in hot weather, for the novelty had not yet worn off. I strutted about the campus attempting to assume traditional senior dignity, but evidently it was merely an assumption. I welcomed more freshmen in behalf of Y. W., in behalf of my society, in behalf of anything I happened to think of. It was great to be back again.

With fear and trembling I entered my first theism class, but the fear and trembling soon left. No time was there to indulge in those emotions. I began to think of completing major and minor requirements, of earning quality credits for graduation. I began to realize that everything I would do the coming year would be for the last time. There would be no "next year". I looked forward to attending every ball game, every lyceum, every mid-winter—everything.

I valued experiences and relationships in a deeper way. I wanted to live as fully as I could and give as much as I could.

Thus I began my senior year at Maryville.

Now I am beginning another year—not at Maryville, no, though I feel as if a part of me remains there. I'm living the life of an alumna. What it will lead to is difficult even for my fertile imagination to comprehend. But I do know that Maryville and its associations have given me something fine, something worthwhile, something that I shall carry with me always.

GRID WARRIORS LOOK WEAK

when Stone recovered a fumble. It was the work of but one play for Captain Martin Gillespie to rush the ball straight through the center of that gallant line, into the promised land which meant a tied score. Boretsky untied the count a few seconds later with a placement.

Instead of taking sweet revenge in the second half, the Honakerites again barely managed to hold their own, and on a smoothly executed end around triple play, Hockenjosh scored the winning count for the visitors. The try for extra point failed. Maryville then came back with a valiant effort to retrieve their lost lead, but the game ended in a swirl of futile forward passes.

To the casual observer, the prospect for the immediate future seems drab indeed. But another week's work will work wonders toward coordinating a team which is composed of a group of comparative strangers. Stone, Wilson, and Russell make up a nucleus around which Coach Honaker is sure to build a formidable line. The backfield, after a few more workouts together, will be one which Maryville's foes can do well to lay for.

Wild Roses

Liebestraum
Lewis Goes Free

We were sitting in Carnegie pecking away on the Underwood not many nights hence when an interruption came from below in the form of a song (My Wild Irish Rose) rendered by a group of freshmen. Taking into consideration the time of night, the season of the year, and the voice quality of the singers, it was decided that it must have been "The Last Rose of Summer" decidedly on its last petals. . .and plenty wild.

—0—

When one leaves Maryville there is one objective that is constantly with him. . . that is, to get back on the old stamping grounds. Try as we may, we can't give quite all the credit to the work of the school, because something must be said about the surrounding country (considering, of course, its conducciveness to mountain hikes.) If you're on the north side of Carnegie, or if you're on the south side of Pearson's, or even if you're a little less fortunate, you can look out upon country that carries a genuine natural beauty. It is nature at its best and the beauty of it all is the fact that it is seldom interrupted, the chief obstruction being the buildings of Maryville. The campus itself is one of the most attractive in the South, which says a great deal. We don't hesitate a bit to believe that Maryville's got 'em all beat. . . except in football.

—0—

Just how much truth there is concerning the "Maryville" tradition is a bit hard to ascertain but it does seem that the townspeople and the college itself are coordinating to keep it from ever dying out. SSufficient proof of that is evidenced by the selection for offertory in the Presbyterian church Sunday morning. The first offertory for the new students, as well as the old students, to hear was "Liebestraum", which is German, we understand for "Love's Joy".

—0—

We've never seen a feathered horse; we've never seen girls rooming in Carnegie; we've never seen Bob Beyer play caveman, nor Viola Lightfoot running after a man, but none of these would upset us now after we'd seen Robert Stevenson sing in the choir Sunday. Most people draw the line some place. . . others don't.

—0—

Many frosh are told by the old men that it is conventional but not wise to choose one girl and go with her throughout the year at Maryville. We consider that good advice with one consideration. There are only two alternatives to this program that we know of. One method is to stag everything and

NEW HOUSE IN WOODS NEARS COMPLETION

Mrs. John A. Walker, of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, a sister of Mrs. Stevenson, has planned a new home in the College Woods near Dr. Stevenson's home. The house is to be a white frame building containing about twenty rooms with all modern conveniences.

As it is now planned, the house will be of the old colonial type, having in the front several huge white pillar supports.

A drive is being planned which will run from the two homes to Court street. This will soon be completed. Upon its completion the house is expected to be one of the most impressive beautifying elements on the entire campus.

The carpentry on the home is advancing rapidly under the direction of Mr. J. L. Vinyard, Maryville contractor. The entire framework has been completed, and the remaining work will be finished in about a month.

Mrs. Walker was obliged to come to Maryville by the untimely death of her husband in June of last summer.

NEW MEMBERS WILL BE CHOSEN TO FILL VACANCIES ON STAFF

Editorial and Business Staffs Offer Nineteen Places For Applicants

There are now several vacancies to be filled on the editorial and business staffs of THE HIGHLAND ECHO. One junior associate editor will be slected from the junior class, two sophomore cubs, from the sophomore class, and 12 freshmen apprentices from the freshman class.

There will be four assistants chosen in the next few weeks to assist the business manager. These four will consist of two juniors and two sophomores. Both men and women are free to apply for this position, but no woman is allowed to become business manager of the paper.

Applications for a position on the editorial staff as sophomore cub, or as junior associate editor, should be presented to the editor or to one of the four staff editors. In the case of the freshman, a plan will be put into use similar to the one used two years ago. The English department and the Highland Echo Staff will work together in selecting the apprentices.

A list of subjects which are adaptable to newspaper writing will be given the freshmen in the near future and they will have their first opportunity to show their capability in that way. A reasonably large number of the yearlings will be selected as possibilities after this first attempt. Those freshmen who survive the first cut will have ample opportunity to show further ability for a few weeks after which the final selection of twelve apprentices will be made.

CUPID STEALS AWAY MANY MARY VILLIANS DURING SUMMER

Former Students Are Not Disposed To Shun Matrimony

Maryville lived up to its punname Marryville during the past summer, when several graduates and former students were married here and elsewhere.

First of the summer weddings was that of Eleanor Henry '32 and Yervant Topalian '31, which was solemnized on June 3 by Dr. H. E. Orr, in the presence of a few intimate friends of the couple. They are now at home in Maryville.

A midsummer wedding of interest to many upper classmen was that of Dorothy Weatnerly '32 and Joe Sharpe, a former Maryvillian.

Jeanne Martin, a popular member of last year's sophomore class, was married to J. W. Hutchison at Clinton, Tennessee, in August. Jeanne was a member of Theta Epsilon literary society and a talented student in the expression department. The couple are now at home on Wilson Avenue.

From Miami comes an account of the wedding of Mary Elizabeth Roderick and Donald Connelly on August 29. Mary Elizabeth was a student at Maryville last year.

August 18 was the date of another wedding of wide interest to students and alumni of Maryville College. On that day Miss Mildred Crawford became the bride of Joseph McClelland. Miss Crawford, a very popular member of the class of '30, was last year an instructor in the English department of the college. Mr. McClelland was graduated in the class of '29.

The marriage of Alice Renegar '31 and Chester Porter was beautifully solemnized at the home of the bride in Fern Creek, Kentucky on the afternoon of August 13. The families of the bride and groom were the only guests. Mrs. Porter was prominent in many student activities, and achieved distinction in dramatics and debat-

INTERESTING LOT OF NEW BOOKS BOUGHT BY COLLEGE LIBRARY

French Department Receives Works Of Victor Hugo

One of the most important events in the course of the school year is the periodical arrival of a shipment of new books at the Lamar Memorial Library. The annual fall shipment has arrived and is being examined with much interest by the staff members and others who have been able to see them.

The fall shipment is small when compared to the shipments of the winter and spring, but there are many interesting books among the present collection. Some of the most interesting of these are the books which will be used for parallel reading in Dr. McMurray's new course in International Law.

New books have also been added to the reserve shelves for the other departments. On the French shelves is a new set of the works of Victor Hugo. These works are in French and will be used as reading material by advanced French students.

A number of new German and Spanish books were also included in the order.

The much discussed "I'll Take My Stand", by Twelve Southerners, isa book which promises to make very interesting reading, as does "Told at the Explorer's Club", a collection of true tales of modern exploration.

Among the additions to the fiction shelf are:

Honore W. Morrow, Black Daniel
Oliver La Farge, Sparks Fly Upward
George Oneil, Special Hunger
Warwick Deeping, The Bridge of Desire
John Buchan, The Blanket of the Dark

CHOIR ANTICIPATES A SUCCESSFUL YEAR UNDER MISS HENRY

Freshman Class Furnishes Abundance of Base Voices

In spite of the fact that much of its talent is new this year, the vesper choir, under Miss Henry's direction, expects to continue the fine work of last year. A few changes may be found necessary in the choir personnel, but Miss Henry is confident of having a well-organized choir before Christmas.

Particularly gratifying was the abundance of talent for the bass section found among the freshmen. Many good bass voices were turned away for lack of room, Miss Henry reports.

At the vesper services of the coming year, instrumental numbers will occasionally replace the usual anthems. Organ and violin music will be heard in addition to the trios, quartets, and ensemble work of the choir. As is its custom, the choir will have programs at Christmas, Easter and Commencement.

The special music at tomorrow's vesper service will be a violin duet by a senior of last year, Mrs. Yervant Topalian, otherwise known as Pat Henry, and Mildred Purviance, of this year's graduating class.

The choir, as it now stands, is as follows, according to section: Sopranos— Norma Spilatore, Mary Sloan Welsh, Marie Carlson, Jane Pettibone, Kay Carpenter, Jean Campbell, Leslie Osborne; Contralto, Mildred Purviance, Marjorie Solmons, Mary E. Cromer, Kathryn Wayland, Virginia Ross, Lucille Swafford, Ellen Macrae, Mildred Brooks, Margaret Lewis; Tenor—Willium Hannah, Gordon Grooms, Jesse Willis, Mary Mathias, Ed Greene, Bob Overly, Charles Orner, Sam Wrid, Andrew Alexander, George Buffaloe; Bass—Donald Briggs, Harry Wood, James Stevenson, Gordon Courtney, Jesse Carter, Heydon Lampe, William Maccalmont, Donnell McArthur, Peter Hamilton, Stewart Snedeker, W. H. Quigley.

QUEENER SUCCEEDS HUNTER AS HEAD OF STUDENT COMMITTEE

Dean Forced To Resign Because of Extra Duties

One of the most significant changes in the administration of the college recently took place when Dean E. R. Hunter was forced to resign his work as Chairman of the Committee on Student Publications. The students who are immediately affected by this resignation regret very much the loss of Dr. Hunter in this capacity. He has carried on this work very ably for the past fifteen years.

Verton M. Queener, history professor and debate coach, has been selected to fill the vacancy caused by Dr. Hunter's resignation. Mr. Queener is one of the most popular professors on the Hill and he has had specific experience along these lines. He was editor of the HIGHLAND ECHO in 1923-24, his senior year at Maryville. In the event that the resignation of the college Dean was imperative it is felt that the students are very fortunate in securing the services of Professor Queener.

The chief bit of supervision connected with this position is with the Chilhowean, and the Highland Echo. The chairman acts in an advisory capacity with each of the publications. The committee itself is instrumental in a large measure in the selection of the various staff members for the Echo.

Mr. John A. Davis, '30, who has been very successful in coaching at Everett High for the last two years, is now coach at Hickory, North Carolina. He is succeeded at Everett High by Harold Bird, '29, who was an outstanding athlete during his four years in college.

Very few motorists are rolling their own.

1933 ANNUAL WILL BE OFFERED TO MARYVILLE STUDENTS AT TREMENDOUS CUT IN PRICE

Beale Reports Year Book Already Planned

As school opens and everyone facts the age old problem of settling down to work, the staff of the 1933 CHILHOWEAN comes to the front with the startling as well as pleasing announcement that the price of the yearbook for the coming year has been cut from the old price of four dollars to a new level of three dollars, reducing the price by one fourth. This news is, of course, received joyfully by all students, as indicated by the large number who have already signed up for a copy. Business Manager Kipp promises to hold a copy for each student who signifies his good intentions by making a deposit of one dollar or up, as the individual may desire. He also states that the students' cooperation, which is already apparent, is of such a merit as to guarantee an early delivery of the books, as well as to assist the editor in planning for a record smashing CHILHOWEAN.

Editor Beale modestly states that the coming years' book, which is being printed by Foote and Davies, one of the largest printing establishments in the South, has already been planned, and that advance copy from the Photo-Process Engraving Co., the engravers, is very encouraging. The staff for the production has been selected and is ready to begin work at a moment's notice. It consists of: Dorothy Casseres, Elizabeth Gillis, Robert Tripp, Warren Warman, John McQueen, and Madison Byar. This group includes some of the creative talent of the Junior Class, and is sure to become of invaluable assistance to the editor.

The senior class, in its meeting on last Wednesday, was exhorted to cooperate with the photographer in getting the senior pictures (the first to be taken) finished as early as possible, with the middle of October as a deadline. Class spirit seemed to indicate that such cooperation would be forthcoming and that the pictures would be complete with time to spare. As soon as the seniors are photographed, the junior, sophomore, and freshman classes will follow in what is hoped will be rapid succession. It is urged that all pictures be in by the Christmas holiday period. No doubt the photographing will be accelerated by the reduction of the photographer's fee from two dollars to one dollar and a half.

The photographic editor also announces that anyone having snapshots of extraordinary clarity or interest, or both, may submit them for inspection at any time during the year. Such snaps, if used, however, cannot be returned.

Rev. Percy Buchanan, '22 is now on furlough in this country from his mission field in Nagoya, Japan. He and his family are located in Princeton for the winter, where Mr. Buchanan is studying.

NEW WALK

Students who have noticed with gratitude and admiration the new concrete walk which is to replace the rough and time worn brick walk from Voorhees Chapel to the Book Store will appreciate the information that the college is indebted to the generosity of President Lloyd for this campus improvement.

It is hoped that in the near future the walk will be extended to Thaw Hall, so forming a direct walkway between Thaw and the chapel. This will mean that the Book Store must be moved several feet to the south.

Such improvements mean a great deal to both the appearance and the convenience of the campus, and the students and faculty and all those connected with the college appreciate President Loyd's generosity.

EXTENSIVE CAMPUS PROJECTS BEGAN DURING SUMMER

Carnegie Receives Special Attention; Golf Course Laid Out

Practically the largest campus improvement programs to be instigated here at Maryville College was worked out for and almost entirely completed this past summer.

Some phases of the plans were only the beginnings of much larger projects. The new eight foot walk leading from the bookstore to Voorhees chapel is one of these. The intention is to add four feet to each side of the walk as it now is, making it a 16-foot pathway, and to extend the walk in its larger size to Thaw library. The old path bordering the right of Anderson hall, and leaing to chape, is now being being torn up. The pathway and the old roadway will be filled in with earth and seeded down.

The dirt for filling in the old ground will be taken from the hill in back of Carnegie. During the next month or so this same hill will be terraced back to the men's dormitory. This mny necessitate the elimination of the lower tennis court.

Buildings on the campus have likewise received considerable attention. In comparison with Carnegie, the other three dormitories have had little repair work done. In the latter hall about thirty or more rooms, particularly those in the basement, were worked over. New stairs were buit from the main floor to the second floor.

According to a hill authority.

It seems to be about time that a psychological explanation of sophomore modesty be expressed before a psychological result of it occurs. We have on our campus a group just entering the second year of higher education. This class in United States is called the sophomore class. Oxford defines anything sophomoric as something "befitting or resembling, characteristic of a sophomore; hence, pretentious, bombastic, inflated in style or manner, immature, crude, superficial."

Are Maryville's sophomores in any degree different from those of any other school? A sophomore at Maryville has the right to sit in front of the chapel beside the seniors, leaving the lowly juniors in the rear of the building, but do they realize that they are really on the sidelines? A sophomore is privilgede to assume the duties of speaking in public for a certain number of minutes without being interrupted. Perhaps he can feel a bit superior because of that accomplishment, but let him not forget that it is resuired of him in order to aid him to be able to learn how to use that privilege advantageously.

Sophomore modesty is most evident to freshmen. To be able to teach a freshman some of Maryville's peculiarities in routine, or exceptions to routine, and to be able to state in matter-of-fact tones that he is glad to be "back" this year is perhaps enough to give a sophomore a feeling of superiority. But the difficulty for the sophomore is to convey the idea of superiority without letting it be known that he realizes this superiority. He is a clever sophomore who knows his superior position and keeps it to himself, but a sophomore who knows his humble position and who doesn't care who hears about it, is more to be admired, which in reality, permits him a superior place because of his scarcity.

FROSH BOSH exander

We the "upper classmen" of Maryville College have viewed the freshman with a gray and beetling brow. As they pass in review in front of our inimitable dining hall, we gaze critically at their facial expressions, which range from complete wonderment to the most nonchalant ease. This is the second "cream of the crop" that has displayed its talents before sundry critics. Gone is the day when freshmen arrive with a knapsack over their shoulder and wearing homespun, with the nether garments striking them between ankle and knee. Now they are considered as novices making their entrance into college activities. We have come into the era of freshman suffrage. They are allowed, yea, counted upon, to take part in the affairs of the institution.

Freshmen can, in most modern institutions of learning, go to and fro about the campus without casting a furtive eye in every corner for some lurking upper classman. The paddle has been beaten into broom handles and toothpicks. The pipe of peace has been smoked. All this was not accomplished in sudden flight. But pioneering halls of learning like Maryville have played a [illegible] of a freshman.

The purpose of this lengthy epistle is not to take up space, but to say something; see, you guessed wrongly. The older students have given the new ones a friendly hand. Will they get cooperation and good will in return? There is little doubt that the freshman classes grow better and better each year, and we wish them bon voyage to and through the treacherous shoals of semester exams, and through the remainder of the year.

SELF PRESERVATION

An individual traveling at random about the country during the present period in the development of our country, is very much impressed by the kind of thinking that has taken place with the people. It aids an observer to retain an optimistic view of life to see people becoming awake and alert, beginning to search out solutions for their own problems. Unfortunately the optimism somewhat of a modified type.

This particular tendency in thought has been noticeable the last few years, and it has been largely a direct consequence of the general economic unstability among the common folk, and to all Americans in some less degree. There is becoming a more general knowledge about the function and the make-up of our own government, its duties to the people, and its possibilities as a stabilizer of a condition that is now quite topsyturvy. From this knowledge people are thus beginning to realize the corrupt nature of the present "reign" and are becoming decidedly dissatisfied. The common man plans to make a stand for himself.

This period begins on the heels of a period of mental inactivity. Since the world war there has been little visible reason to pry into national affairs, a fact which alone can be considered largely responsible for the corruptness of government. The thinking of the present time, resembles greatly that of the period during which our country was being established. That time, from the achieving of American independence until the beginning of the nineteenth century, was the most inspiring time for the common man to become interested in the affairs of government.

One can perceive, however, one disappointing element in the thinking of the modern age. Individuals think of items of any degrees of importance in relation to the bearing on themselves. Because of the over worked self-preservation instinct, people have begun to think only of their own advancement. This condition is not always good, if it ever is. One can be sure that the bonus marchers on Washington did not analyze the entire situation carefully to see if their project was for the common good. The farm picketers in Iowa, Kansas, and Illinois didn't organize except in petty bands which will accomplish no ultimate good. So it is with the miners, and all other dissenters who have started out to "fight for their right". Their motive was good, but their method was decidedly ineffective.

While we have a perceptible corruptness in government, we have likewise a corruptness in individual life and in small group life. No doubt there has been an advance in the thinking of today, an advance that could not have been brought about under different conditions, but there still exists a distinct retarding element.

To say and to illustrate these facts is simply a round-about way of saying something more important in itself. People may acquire knowledge, they may assimilate facts to bring about logical sounding conclusions, but as long as they exploit this knowledge for no good but their own, their efforts are practically spent. The only way that good can be measured, whether we choose to call it a standard of Christianity or something else, is in relation to its effect on society. Advancement of a country, a business, a college, or any institution, can be viewed only from a perspective, and in taking a perspective one can't bother to see individuals.

THE WORLD TODAY

World-mindedness is the right, duty, and privilege of every college student.

"Al" Smith seems to have taken the easiest way out of his humiliation on being defeated by Roosevelt for the leadership of the Democratic party. He bought an old political journal, and will edit it under the title, "The New Outlook."

The "merger" disease has extended into the educational field. The state university at Chapel Hill, North Carolina, the college of agriculture at Raleigh, and the women's college at Greensboro, form the latest union under a common direction.

We are told that the eleventh World Sunday School Convention, held in Rio de Janeiro on July 25-31, was "a heartening revelation of the vigor and ability of South American Protestants religious leadership."

Speaking of overpoduction, we find that there is an oversupply of trained librarians in America. Unemployment among them is rendering difficult the library schools' task of placing graduates.

One of the biggest political upsets in years occurred recently in Main gubernatorial contest, which went Democratic instead of Republican as is usual in that New England state. "As Maine goes, so goes the country," so they say, but is Maine democracy strong enough to influence the electorate if economic prospects brighten under Hoover leadership?

An authoritative opinion is that the League of Nations has the power, but not the courage, to enforce world peace.

We read the following in "The Christian Century", (Sep. 21, 1932) "In the story of his remarkable career, recently published, Upton SiSnclair gives the reason for his atitude toward liquor. He says: 'The reason was my mother whose whole married life was poisoned by alcohol, and who taught me a daily lesson of honor. It took my good and gentle-souled father thirty or forty years to kill himself, and I watched the process week by week and sometimes hour by hour. It made an idelible impression upon my childish soul, and is the reason for my being a prohibitionist, to the dismay of my "liberatarian" friends'."

STUDENT VOLUNTEERS ISSUE FIRST NEWS BULLETIN OF YEAR

Students Encouraged To Submit Letters To Open Forum

The Student Volunteer World News Bulletin, weekly publication sponsored by the Student Volunteer Group on College Hill, described on page 36 of the 1932-1933 Handbook, began its weeky issues for the new college year last Wednesday. During the first three or four weeks it will summarize the news of the summer; and by the time that task is finished, the bulletin will be issued every Monday morning with recent world news in the political social, economic, religious, scientific, and educational fields.

It is not the aim of The S. V. W. N. Bulletin always to publish "last-minute" news. Rather it seeks to give a survey of reasonably recent events. The bulletin takes sides, editorially, on many of the great questions of the day; and encourages students to send in their own opinion in the form of letters to the open forum. By this means the purpose of the bulletin may be accomplished, which is: Active world-mindedness on the part of students. There is really a great need among American college students today for an active interest in world affairs, and this buletin board is attempting to supply part of that need.

Bainonian Closes Rush Week Tonight With Iceland Trip

Theta Epsilon To Open Rush Activities Next Week

Bainonian trip to Iceland tonight in the Alumni Gymnasium will complete the new girls' travel from the tropics to the arctic.

The rush season, which began auspiciously with the Y. W. C. A. reception of the new girls has gone forward this week under the direction of Bainonian Literary Society in a series of gay events which will be terminated with tonight's entertainment. The progressive tea which was given on Tuesday afternoon was the first event, after which the new "Eskimettes" received anonymous attentions from their "Eskimos" until the splash party at Smoky Mountain Plunge, when the identity of the "Eskimos" was revealed to the "Eskimettes".

Beginning on next Tuesday, Theta Epsilon will entertain the new girls with a series of parties, which will terminate Saturday with Theta opening night. Plans for these affairs are not to be announced until next week.

EXTENSIVE CAMPUS PROJECTS BEGAN

more money was spent in Fayerweather science hall than in any building on the hill. Since most of the repair work had to do with plumbing and the like, the results are not easily recognizable.

In Thayer, several rooms were made over. On the second floor both ends of the hall were remodeled, the west end being converted into a better equipped laboratory and lecture room for Dr. Fields. Some of the instructors' rooms were changed in order to make room for the additions f Miss Johnson, Dr. Shine, and Miss Beebe.

What may interest the students more than anything else is the remodeeld swimming pool. It will not be open for several weeks, at least, but new walls and steel supports have been added to the house. The pool is about 75 by 30 feet wide. As it now is the depth of the pool is slightly more than is necessary. Coincident with the remodeled swimming pool, will be the purchase of a heating plant in order to insure an even temperature during the colder months.

Efforts to secure dressing quarters, lockers, and showers for women who are taking physical education have resulted in the intention o. converting the southeast corner of the alumni gymnasium for such purposes. There will be showers, but lockers will not be had. Part of the floor will be concrete and the remaining will be of plank. The suggestion to use that part of Bartlett basement adjoining the dressing quarters of visiting athletic teams was vetoed for several reasons, most important of which was the fact that during inclement weather, women would be forced to walk to the gymnasium. In the event that additions are made to the alumni gymnasium, the contemplated quarters for women will be in the correct location.

In the upper part of Bartlett one of the larger rooms has been provided with wooden walls for handball. The auditorium on the floor has also been repaired and painted.

The large plot of dirt immediately behind Memorial hall will become before the spring, it is hoped, the varsity courts of the college. Three courts will be constructed. On the plot of ground between the end of Memorial and Court street, it is intended that another court for the Memorial girls will be built. The thought behind the change of the varsity courts is to give tennis the spotlight which it has not had heretofore.

The most novel of all innovations at Maryville during vacation was the laying out of a nine-hole golf course. It stretches out over the ground that runs behind the chapel and over to the houses behind Pearsons Hall. Not much progress has been made, but an attempt will be made to develop winter greens, build tees, and add a few traps to the already hazardous condition of what will be the fairways.

The farm, a project that was launched last spring, has suffered accordingly from the drought. Tomatoes, planted there in large quantities, grew and ripened so quickly during the two weeks preceding the opening of school that the authorities were forced to sell them on the market. The corn was used for

Ministers Entertain Twenty New Men At Opening Assemblage

Special Committees Will Be Formed In Near Future

The Ministerial Association had its opening meeting of the school year last Wednesday evening in Athenian Hall. In addition to practically all of the old members, there were over twenty new men present, the majority of whom will probably become members of the organization. A welcome address to the new men was presented by Phil Sorce, the president. Special consideration during the meeting was given to the special committees which the members of the association go to make up each year. Usually there are three of these, the poor farm committee, the jail committee, and the country church committee. Most of the new men signified their willingness to take part in this enterprise.

It was decided at this meeting that the organization will meet every Wednesday night after supper. Next Wednesday night, according to Frank Neff, Program Secretary, will include a very interesting program.

The ministerial association is anxious to act as a unifying element in joining the future ministers of the Hill. Any one wishing to join should make arrangement with any of the officers or hand his name to any member. The constitution may be secured from Frank Mease, Secretary-Treasurer of the Association.

OPEN FORUM

September 23, 1932

Editor, The Highland Echo:

It seems necessary that something be said regarding our cheering this year. In the first place, the first prerequisite of a pep song or yell is that it contain pep. Our Howee-Hows and Fifteens have been regular funeral dirges, so far as speed is concerned. Why don't the cheer leaders take on SPEED, and inject some PEP into our songs and yells?

In the second place, the cheer leaders and many of the fans need to learn that the lowering of the pitch of tone in the Chant take place at the end of the second "Ma-ry-ville", but NOT at the end of the first one. Our Chant has been anything but effective this year.

In the third place, we fans are not disposed to take scolding from our cheer leaders. We do not elect them for that purpose, and when they overstep their mark they destroy, rather than build up our spirit. Furthermore, there has been little justification for their bossiness. Let's have genuine pep!

Finally, if we are going to cheer effectively we need leadership that embodies a thorough knowledge and accurate practice of the correct gestures; and we certainly need coordination, something that has been sadly lacking. It takes practice to be a good cheer leader, the kind that really earns his letter.

Friday Fritz Neff.

ALUMNI NEWS

Miss Mary Cohran, '29, who received her M. A. at the University of Tennessee in June, is head of the department of history in the Hickory, North Carolina High School.

Mr. Walter Courtenay, '29 and Miss Emily Simpson were married during the summer. Mr. Courtenay graduated in May from Princeton Theological Seminayr.

Mr. and Mrs. George F., "Corky" Crawford '28 and '29 are now located in Nashville. Mr. Crawford has until recently been connected with Chandler-Singleton in Maryville. Mrs. Crawford will be remembered as Miss Mary Davenport.

Rev. Robert O. Franklin, '03 and wife have recently returned to Siam, where they will take up their mission work from which they have been absent while educating their son and daughter. Eleanor is now head nurse in the department of urology of the Presbyterian Hospital, Philadelphia, and Wilbur is studying in Germany this year preparatory to joining his parents in Siam.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl McCall are located in Loudon, Tennessee, where Mr. McCall is principal of the High School. Mrs. McCall was formerly Miss Ethel Adkins, teacher of piano in the college.

Mr. Max McCulloch ,'29 is studying medicine in the University of Tennessee Medical College at Memphis.

Miss Margaret Mevis, '30 was married in June to Rev. A. S. Mosshammer and they are now located at 65 Elm Street, Windsor Locks, Conn.

Rev. C. V. Miller, '19 is now dean of Woodbury College, Woodbury, New Jersey.

COLLEGE MAID SHOP HAS SUMMER SUCCESS

The College Maid Shop has had remarkable financial success during the summer. Although occasionally machines were idle, the summer work as a whole was very satisfactory. Orders for gymnasium suits were solicited, and a result the College Maids supplied the University of Tennessee with gymnasium suits for men and women and at present they are working on gym suits for Tusculum College. They also made the suits to be used by the Maryville girls this year.

One of the most interesting orders received this summer was an order from the Westminster Choir School for choir vestments. Dr. Williamson, director of the Choir, has ordered maroon velvet cassocks and ivory satin cottas for his traveling choir and vestments for his chapel choir which is now located at Princeton, New Jersey.

A well directed advertising plan which was begun in the early summer and will continue thru the winter months, is expected to bring a great deal more work to the Maid Shop. Churches throughout the country have been written advertising choir vestments, and letters quoting prices on gymnasium suits were sent to colleges where physical education is a requirement. Should this advertising continue to bring as good results as it has recently, there should be ample work to keep everyone in the Shop busy through the school year and during next summer. Despite the outside economic unstability, the Maid Shop has run up to par and shows little, if any harmful results. Much credit for this fact can be given to the efficient management of Mrs. McMurray.

INTERCLASS FOOTBALL TO BEGIN OCT. 8

The first intramural competition of the school year will take place on October 4, when the freshman class team meets the juniors in a tag football game. Two days later the sophomore aggregation will lock horns with the seniors to decide the opposition for the winner of the junior-frosh fracas. The championship game will be played on Saturday, October 8, while Maryville's varsity is at Greeneville settling their superiority dispute with Tusculum college. These class games, which comprise one unit in the winning of the Y.M.C.A. class cup, have been found to warrant unusual interest in the past and should prove lively competition this fall.

FLORIDA CLUB

The Florida Club held the first state meeting of the school year in Pearsons Hall on September 19th. Definite plans were formulated for having an early party. After the discussion was completed, the following officers were elected to serve this year.

MARYVILLE COLLEGE HIGHLANDERS UPSET MURFREESBORO STATE TEACHERS IN EXCITING GAME FRIDAY NIGHT

COLLEGE INAUGURATES REVISED GYM PLAN FOR UNDERCLASSMEN

Diversion of Sports Offered To Replace Former Method

On Tuesday and Wednesday of this week, September 27 and 28, freshmen and sophomores and special students and upper classmen who have outstanding requirements in physical training will be registered at the Registrar's office for this semester's physical training work.

The general plan is that each student will enroll in a group, which, for an entire semester, will devote its time to one particular sport. For instance, a group will be enrolled for basket ball which will study the rules and technique of the game and engage in a considerable amount of actual playing of the game. A student who takes basket ball this semester will take some other sport next semester. Thus students taking physical training for four semesters will acquire knowledge of the theory of four different sports and will have opportunity to develop some skill in the playing of each.

The program for men provides for two groups of twenty-four each in basketball, two groups of twenty-four each in track, one group of twenty in wrestling, and one group of fifteen in tumbling. There will also be a group for work in corrective gymnastics for those recommended for that sort of work by the physical and medical examiners. These groups will be under the direct charge of Assistant Director of Athletics Thrower. Mr. Thrower will have general oversight, also, of the groups in tennis and swimming. Twenty-four places will be assigned in tennis and from forty to fifty in swimming. The beginning swimmers will have hours after three o'clock. There will be two peroids for men learning to swim, one from 3:30 to 4:15 on Tuesday and Thursday, the other from 4:15 to 5:00 on the same days. Men already able to swim fifty yards may enroll for swimming at the "A" peroid or at the peroid 11:15 Tuesday and 2:00 to 3:00 Saturday.

The program for women provides for a group of thirty in Play Ground Games, for two groups in volley ball of twenty-four each, for one group of twenty in soccer, for two groups of twenty each in basketball, for two gronps of twelve each in tennis, and for a group in corrective gymnastics. All of these groups will be under the direction of Mrs. Queener. The swimming arrangement for women will be similar to those of the men. Beginning swimmers will have two sections, one 3:30 to 4:15 Wednesday and Friday, and one 4:15 to 5:00 the same days. Advanced swimming groups will be held, one at "C" and one at 11:15 Thursday, and 3:00 to 4:00 on Saturday. The swimming classes will be under the direction

CROSS COUNTRY WILL BE RUN THIS YEAR ON NOVEMBER 11

May Establish Team For Intercollegiate Competition

The annual five-mile cross country run will be run off this year on November 11, during the Lenoir-Rhyne football game. This early announcement is made to insure the applicants an opportunity to get in shape for the long grind. Already this year there have been a number of new men asking about the cross country competition, and several have begun grooming themselves for the event.

"Spec" Moore, the iron man from Pennsylvania, won the event handily last year, clipping off more than a minute from the previous record, held by Taylor a graduate of the class fo '31. Moore is expected to run a good race again this year. Plenty of opportunity remains for new men to show themselves winners, since Hitch and Mann, running second and third in last year's race, will not be in the competition this year.

Some effort has been put forth by the track manager to organize a cross country team, composed of six runners, who will be prepared to enter varsity competition with some neighboring school. If this plan should work out, the team will be chosen in the near future.

TENNIS ASPIRANTS GET IN TRIM FOR FALL TOURNAMENT

Return of Talmadge Should Strengthen Racqueteers

During the first few weeks of school a special interest has been shown by the students in tennis. An extraordinarly good group of racqueteers have come in, while practically all of last year's team has returned, Ferguson being the only regular counted on the missing list. The outlook is strengthened by the return of Talmage, a sophomore, who showed great form two years ago.

The fall tennis tournament will begin soon, according to announcement. The first round will begin Monday. This tournament is largely for the purpose of culling the number of aspirants to a reasonable small number before the spring activities begin. A casual glance at the entire outlook would seem to indicate that Coach Smith is going to have a most productive field from which he may choose his "Cream of the Crop."

A perspective of Maryville's football stands resembles very much a funeral announcement. It has a black obrder. Just where all this black border. Just where all this to ascertain, but we do know that they get there. It does lend a bit of local color to the stands. . . if nothing else.

SPORT SLANTS

By Beale

Looking out of our own realm for the moment, we see that in the Big Ten play-off in football there is a chance for the lowliest of the cellar rats to show some stuff this year in the winning of the coveted title of Big Ten champs. With last year's victors, Northwestern and Michigan, presenting weaker teams, and the runners up having stronger teams, much genuine football seems to be in store for the fans. Those teams that are particularly improved over last year's mediocrity are Chicago, Illinois, and Indiana.

—S—

Sport fans were very much pleased over the recent truce made between the Army and Navy athletic departments. Since the disruption a few years back, things haven't seemed quite right in eastern sports. Now, with the Navy and Army playing the annual classic to decide their supremacy there will be a great deal more interest manifested.

—S—

The University of Tennessee has its usual snap schedule this year. Probably U. T. had a team that could beat anything in the south or east last year, but they never had the opportunity to show their mettle. As long as U. T. plays such schedules, the varsity men can figure on paying their own way into the Rose Bowl on New Year's day.

One of the best fields for argument is concerning the ability of two of America's greatest quarterbacks of all time, Dodd of Tennessee, and Carideo of Notre Dame. They both showed a remarkable set of brains, if not more, and plenty of sheer power. Still the conventional argument can not be entered on an even scale because U. T. never played more than three, or possibly four, hard games a season. This one fact alone led Grantland Rice to place Carideo at Quarterback on his mythical eleven the year of Dodd's graduation.

—S—

Becoming more provincial in our scope, we might say that we, of this column believe, along with some 800 other students, that Don Wilson told the truth in pep meeting the other night. Don showed himself to be a war horse in the game against the Teachers. The only thing is, he didn't show up, outstandingly, for he had a bunch of inspired men with him who felt the same as he. There can be no doubt that the return of Don to the line-up has given the boys some real fight. . . . and to identify the action against the Teachers as anything except fight would be just plain wrong.

—S—

We might mention that we join hands, hearts, and wills, with anyone who says that Jack, the Atkins boy, is one crackerjack end. After careful and critical observation it was decided that, if Jack has any weakness, we haven't found it. He has drive, he boxes his opponent, he gets down under passes, he rushes kicks, and OH, MAMMY—does he catch passes. . . or does he catch passes. . . . . He catches passes.

—S—

The fans were pleased to see the Highlanders diversify their attack against the Teachers. While we don't wish to dictate to any team's coach we can't help feeling that good passing attack might be well to hold in reserve against any opponent.

—S—

One thing missed from last year is Joe Woodard's much advertised toe. This was particularly noticeable in the first quarter with the exchange of punts being perceptibly in Murfreesboro's favor. Boretsky, West, and Payne all kicked fairly well, but the old ball missed that extra punch that Joe can give it. In the second quarter, two successive punts were very well placed by Stevedore. He looked like an old hand at getting the ball inside the 20 line marker.

—S—

There is an added significance to the result of last night's game which is not always considered. When a team is backed to the wall by five successive first downs and then pushed over the line, they don't feel like coming back as a rule. But, that's just what the Scotties did while everyone was wondering how many more touchdowns the invaders would shove across. If things don't take a change for the worse soon, we WILL have to stamp Honaker as the "gray haired man of destiny", er sump'n.

—S—

Next in order comes the Scottie's traditional foe from Tennessee Wesleyan. Press dope on either club means very little when these two elevens meet. They're both sure of one thing, that they have a battle to contend with. Next week, with some more of the old fight, a little pep from the side lines (and for goodness sake, less criticism from the yell leaders) Maryville should make the boys from Athens bite the dust.

shun the women, and the other is to adopt the method as recently employed by Yankee Lewis—to be more versatile in one's interests. . . in short to be "Just a Gigolo" The first of these leads to probably some sort of duality, the second to solitary confinement, and the third to. . . well, your guess is as good as ours. We'd suggest that everyone watch the basketball captain and see what develops.

—O—

Now Professor Ellis has gone and spoiled all the fun. We don't mean to suggest that the frosh won't err any more, but we can't look forward to the kind of entertainment we've had in the last few days. The entertainment (which involved the freshmen signing wrongly for books, brining them to the library desk and waiting for their "ticket", going in the door of the library at night, and failing, resorting to the nooks and corners in the front part of Thaw, and many other things of like nature) was everything from light comedy to heavy tragedy. The most noticeable of the latter was the freshman girl of some 165 avoirdupois failing to get in the front door at night, and the rising and falling consequent action. After a careful check on the various examples of upper two thirdism illustrated by the frosh we consider the most entertaining to be that of the girl who filled in the library slip at the place designated by "number" with the number "1". It was her first book of the day, you see. From an observer's viewpoint, and likewise from a librarian's viewpoint the writer wishes to thank Mr. Ellis for his helpful deed.

Wilson Proves A Bulwark On Defense

On a wet, slippery field, playing as underdogs to a huge, powerful Murfreesboro State Teachers team, the fighting Scots of Maryville came back to avenge their defeat of their first start by handing the teachers a 12-6 pasting. Although they were facing a team which outweighed them several pounds to the man, the home boys just refused to give up the ship and converted a couple of breaks into just so many touchdowns. The grim battle offered by the men of Honaker proved to be too much for the team which on last Saturday, held a strong Sewanee team to the same number of points that the Maryvillians garnered.

The first quarter opened something like our championship prize-fighters of today, with each team warily feeling the other out. Accurate kicks from the educated toes of West, Boretsky and Payne served to stem an onslaugh of the visitors which seemed, at first glance, irresistable. In spite of a determined defense put up by the Scots, however, the visitors opened a drive early in the second period which swept all interference before it, and marched through five consecutive first downs to scoring territory, whence the ball was carried to the promised land by a well-executed end-run.

The stands then sat back, after the try for extra point failed, to await the second half and the renewal of activities. Not so the intrepid warriors of the hills. After the kick-off, the garnet-shrouded boys held Murfeesboro powerless in her own territory for three downs. The Teachers' attempt to kick out of danger consisted of a miserable pop-fly to the thirty-yard-line, from where, after a little sparring, West tossed a beautiful pass to Jack Atkins, who joyfully received it and scampered for that land of fried chicken and gravy which meant a tied score, since Boretsky's kick from placement was a trifle wild. A few seconds later the half ended.

Maryville Highlanders Upset Murfreesboro

The Highlanders came into the second half of the contest with the intention of untying the knotted score; and this they did, although it took twenty-nine minutes of toil to accomplish this end. The visiting back who received the kick-off was halted unceremoniously in his tracks (if indeed tracks can be imprinted in the Bermuda of Wilson Field), and held there, with his ten fellows, for three downs. On the attempted punt on the fourth down, Maryville's alert flankman, Stone, rushed in and blocked the field, one of the Highlanders recovering on the Murfreesboro 25 yard line. A first down put the home team in scoring position, but the stalwart forward wall of the visitors rose to the occasion and repulsed the Scots' frenzied attempt to counter. A short kick out of danger which was brought back deep into enemy territory again gave Maryville a chance to score, but again the visitors refused to budge.

The opponents then surged up and down the field until, with about two minutes to play, Jack Atkins intercepted an enemy pass on the opponent's thirty-yard line. Another West to Atkins pass was batted down, and on the next play, West attempted a pass to Stone. Two visiting backs performed tricks with the ball until it settled into the caressing arms of Ray Russell, Maryville's doughty pivot-man. Russell was brought down on the two yard line, and after a line plunge failed, Boretsky carried the ball over off end. A kick for extra point barely missed, and the game ended a few seconds later, with the visitors tossing passes to all and sundry.

Maryville's team could not be identified with the unprepared aggregation who lost to Hiwassee a week ago. The line was much stronger, with more coordination. Russell played a great game at center, smearing plays in all directions. Stone and Atkins gave exhibitions of first-class end play, both playing a brand of heads-up ball which would do credit to any team. Wilson was, as ever, a pillar of strength. In the backfield, a galaxy of stars performed creditably. West and Boretsky showed the visitors a few things about punting which they were loath to discover. West's passing to the alert Atkins was also a thorn in the proverbial flesh of the visitors, accounting for one touchdown, and for various gains. The Gillespie boys were an ever-vigilant pair of secondary defense which stopped many a play ere it entered anything akin to open field.

VOLUME 18 — THE HIGHLAND ECHO, MARYVILLE, TENNESSEE, OCTOBER 1, 1932 — NUMBER THREE

OBSERVATIONS

Queener Flees
Vick Observes
Senator's Insomnia
Bad Tastes

Professor Queener defeated the observer in two straight tournament matches in tennis late last Thursday evening. At five o'clock on Friday morning he left for parts unknown. . . . you are to draw your own conclusions.

—0—

Much excitement was caused (contrary to precedent) by George Vick (of Maryville) last Thursday afternoon in Dr. McMurray's classroom. Vick turned the classes' attention to the outside world with "Doctah, Ah might be dreamin', but if I ain't mistakin, that roof out theh's on fiah. . . it's been smokin' now fo' several minutes". Doctah McMurray hastened to the scene of Vick's focus and came upon the startling revelation that the practice house chimney was smoking along as usual. Mr. Vick was, however, commended for his boy scout-like interest in the outside world, even though the interruption did take place during a valuable discussion in the class.

—0—

Another rather queer procedure took place during the same class. "Senator Beale", Gawgia boy is one of the individuals (we were almost urged to say "student", but on second thought. . . .) in the same class. Senator has been congratulated at different times for his angelic conduct, his sparkling wit, and his brilliant recitations, but on this particular day he received sincere congratulations from several of his fellows for staying awake the whole period. To top off the impressive ceremonies Dr. McMurray likewise offered Beale his expression of happiness over the accomplishment.

—0—

Beale has just learned why it has been so difficult to stay awake in class. Last year it was his chief draw back. He has found that the best remedy, which he has very recently employed, is to go to bed before the cock crows, yea, three times.

—0—

This pep meeting in advance of the Tennessee Wesleyan game was an affair of much excitement, to speak casually. One of the high lights of the evening was when Skid took the lead in a yell encouraging the gang to "come on gang. . . . let's get down and yell to show this old team just how much we appreciate what we're doing for them." That's the spirit!

—0—

One of the distasteful things, apparently unavoidable, is the row of refreshmen who stand just outside the chapel door each night and break up would be joint meetings. The act was funny for some time but it has recently been relegated to an unclassified territory. In the interest of other people's opinion of the college, we might say that we hope the "boys" will wise up to what it's all about. The boy scout act, we thought, was "cute", and we do have some conception of the implied meaning of that four letter word.

—0—

Then there was the frosh who was walking around in the driving rain the other day carrying his slicker. . . we saw it with our own eyes. . . . and the one who wore a new track between the two front doors of Thaw Hall trying to find the "night" entrance to the library. . . . and please. . just one more. . the ones who are flourishing the tufts of fur in the immediate vicinity of their nose in an attempt to become high class (sophomore, junior, or senior).

—0—

And at last we have what we've been wanting. . . we have a HENRIETTA. Heretfore it has been necessary to nickname someone to get her called such names, but now we have the thing in the flesh. Little Henrietta Tol of Michigan is

Y.W.C.A. PROGRAM

Miss Annie Doty, secretary of the Knoxville Y. W. C. A., will be the speaker at the Maryville Y. W. C. A.'s first official meeting in its new suite of rooms in Thaw Hall, tomorrow at 2 o'clock.

Miss Doty's subject is "The History and the Possibilities of Y. W." on which her varied contacts in national and international Y. W. work qualify her particularly to speak.

Devotions will be led by Ruth Brocious, and special music will be furnished by a sextet composed of Virginia Ross, Mary Sloan Welsh, Mary Elizabeth Cromer, Mildred Purviance, Marjorie Salmons, and Jean Campbell.

Unusual Talent Will Appear For Lyceum Program

Miss Sylvin Lent, Noted Violinist, To Appear October 24th

"Violinist has fine technique—a brilliant bow, sureness of intonation, and a pleasing tone—dazzling technical equipment." "Her flexible bowing and her extraordinary perfected technique place her at the pinnacle of her art." "Her playing is filled with the glow of youth and the warmth and sincereity of a real artist."

So read the New York Times, the Berlin Lokal-Anzeiger, and the Atlanta Journal of Sylvin Lent, young American Violinist who appears on October 24 as the first number on the Maryville College Lyceum program for this season.

Not only is Miss Lent an American, a native of Washington, D. C., but all of her unusual training has been gained in this country. She was the first American pupil to be accepted by the late Leopold Aver when he came to this country.

Upon the advice of this master, she left New York in 1922 to make her debut in Berlin. Her unqualified success on this occasion paved the way for other recitals in Dresden, Leipzig, and Munich.

Miss Lent made her New York debut on March 5, 1924, and received from her public the unanimous verdict that her name is destined to rank among the great names of women violinists. She plays, quotes a writer, with the delicacy of a woman and the strength of a man, while her performances disclose a technical mastery of the highest order.

The second number on the Maryville Lyceum program is the Don Cossack Russian Male Chorus. Enthusiastic and sensational are the press eulogies of the Cossacks of the Don province. On the first visit to America in 1930 they drew the following comments from the New

THETA'S RAINBOW PROGRAM WILL CLOSE ANNUAL RUSH WEEK

"Crock of Gold" Will Conclude Theta's Yearly Drive

Theta Epsilon rush week, which will be concluded with tonight's entertainment, "The Crock of Gold", has developed at every affair the idea of the rainbow. The colors of the rainbow, we are told, are to be interpreted tonight through song, dance, reading, and tableau.

After the program tonight the new girls will have a week to weigh the desirable qualities of the respective societies before they are asked to choose which they will join.

Theta rush week was preceded by Bainonian week, when that society entertained the new girls with a progressive tea, an Eskimo-Eskimette "splash" party, and a trip to Iceland. Theta began her rush week with a rainbow tea in the new Y. W. C. A. rooms, which was followed by the rainbow ride on Thursday afternoon. Tonight's program concludes all rush activities.

MUSIC DEPARTMENT MAKES PLANS FOR FALL CONCERT

Music Lovers Offered Chance For Excellent Entertainment

Lovers of good music always listen with an attentive ear for the first announcement from the Music Department concerning the annual Fall Concert. This event, now almost a tradition at Maryville, is important as the opening event of the college year and also because it brings to the college chapel a program presented by the best talent of the Department of Music.

While the date for the concert has not been definitely set, Miss Hale announces that it will be in the very near future and that the most advanced students of piano, voice, and violin will appear on the program. Rehearsals are now in progress.

Miss Garnet Manges and Miss Ruth Henry, both graduates in piano who are continuing their study in the department, will represent that department on the program. Also two groups will appear in ensemble for six pianos.

FIRST MEETING OF WRITERS WORKSHOP HELD WEDNESDAY

Scribblers Club Molds Organization For Coming Year

The first meeting of Writers' Workshop for the school year was held in Dr. Hunter's class-room Wednesday afternoon. No papers were presented but the time was spent in perfecting the organization and making plans for the coming year.

A new governing board consisting of Miss Jessie Heron, Inez Hamrick, Ralph Walker, and Robert Stevenson, and a membership committee, composed of Dr. E. R. Hunter, Miss Jessie Heron, Conrad Quenelle, and Arthur Lazelle were elected at this meeting. Plans for the usual fall picnic were discussed, but no decision will be made until the membership committee makes a report.

A slight change in the nature of the programs will be made this year. Instead of the program consisting wholly of finished papers, members will be allowed to present unfinished works for criticism and suggestions from the other members of the organization.

Membership in the Workshop is available to members of the junior and senior classes who have been in residence at Maryville at least one semester and who are approved by the members of the committee and by a majority of the members of the organization.

DEBATE STUDENTS ORGANIZE PUBLIC SPEAKING CLASS

Stevenson Elected Head Practice Tilts To Begin Soon

There were about thirty students present at the first meeting of the new public speaking class on Tuesday night, September 27. Students taking this course, which is a two hour course meeting on Tuesday night, and D period on Thursday, considered it advisable to organize the class and elect officers. The officers elected are:

President, Robert Stevenson
Vice President, Ercelle Hunter
Program Secretary,
Elizabeth Duncan

On Tuesday night, October 4, the subject will be the political campaign. Arthur Lazell and Benjamin Groves, affirmative, Andy Newcomer and Bob Stevenson, negatives, will debate on the subject: "Resolved that Prohobition is not an important issue in this campaign." Nathalia Wright will give a 6-minute speech on "Idealism on the Part of the Candidates", and ten members of the class will make 3 minute speeches.

This class is organizing a political campaign on the Hill and every student that registers at the polls will be allowed to cast a ballot in the straw vote. The class will sponsor political rallies to which students will be invited.

On each Tuesday night part of the class takes part in a program of debates, extemporaneous speeches and orations. During the coming month, the political campaign and the issues of the parties will be the chief subject of disscussions and speeches.

EIGHT GRADUATING STUDENTS TO TAKE SPECIAL RESEARCH

Honors Work Attracts Brilliant High Classmen

Eight students have been admitted to honors work by the faculty in charge of making such appointments. This is the first time that Maryville College has given graduating students an opportunity to do special research work in their major department.

As yet, no announcement has been made of the type of work the various students will follow. Within the next few weeks, decisions will be made and submitted to the faculty committee.

Those doing honor work are Ellen McCrae, in psychology; Nathalia Wright, in English; Ada Williams, in mathematics; Benjamin Groves, in social science. Robert Overly, in Spanish; Frank Neff, in history; Robert Rummel, in

SENIOR SARCASM

Two years ago the HIGHLAND ECHO published the reactions of upperclassmen to the incoming "upper two-thirds". One senior remarked, "There's nothing like having a freshman sister to keep one humble."

Nay, verily. There's positively nothing like it. And one's humility may be deepened if the freshman sister is a superb five feet seven in contrast to the senior sister's shrimpish stature. The ego one has carefully inflated during three year's absence "from home and sister" is suddenly and completely deflated when a well meaning but candid friend exclaims in admiring surprise, "Your little sister?" Even a modest and affectionate sister feels envious when a faculty member who knows the entire tribe states emphatically in the presence of the aforementioned m. and a. sister, "I believe she's the best looking member of the family." Of course, if you have that kind of pride, you can go around bragging about the impression your sister is making, but you're not likely to see it that way.

But looks and stature are beyond the control of both the freshman and her senior sister—fortunately. The things a freshman can be held responsible for really hurt. It's rather rank, for instance, when a freshman stays home from a swimming party to study. She'll be making grade one day. Think what that would do to a senior's reputation.

Suppose your freshman sister insisted upon taking you to Sunday School on time, or gave you bicarbonate of soda when you had a cold. How would you feel? Not merely humble: humiliated.

If you want to know how little your family and friends think of you, bring your younger sister to college, and see how much more fan mail she gets than you do. That's another experience guaranteed to keep one humble. The first week it's expected; the second week it's excusable; the third week it's unbearable.

So, the senior sister retires, and looks from afar on the gay life of a freshman. With resignation she seeks the doubtful release found in revealing her sorrows to an indifferent public.

FACULTY CLUB

"Christian Philosophy and Contemporary Thought" will be Dr. Lloyd's subject when he addresses the Faculty Club at its first meeting of the year next Tuesday evening. The club's initial dinner to which the entire college staff is invited will be held on that date in the Home Ec room in Science Hall at 5:15.

The program of the Faculty Club for the year 1932-1933 has already been planned, and the following speakers are scheduled to address the monthly meetings:

October—President Lloyd
November—Dr. Stevenson
December—Mrs. Alexander
January—Dr. Knapp
February—no meeting
March—Miss Gamble
April—Miss Hale
May—Miss Wilkinson

Dr. Lloyd Speaks To Men Concerning Dormitory Problems

Administration Head Gives Helpful Hints To Freshmen

A special meeting was held Tuesday night in the chapel for the men rooming in Carnegie Hall. The purpose of the meeting, as stated by President Lloyd, the speaker of the meeting, was to get together and discuss matters pertaining to the peculiar living conditions in the dormitory, and to come to a clear understanding of just what is expected from those living there. President Lloyd's speech fell under the traditional three points.

His first point was a discussion of general obligations laid upon men living in close quarters as they do in Carnegie Hall. Speaking of unnecessary noises and frequent dropping-in on the part of socially inclined students, he alluded to his own dormitory experiences in Chicago and also here at Maryville in the first Carnegie building.

Expressing the hope that Carnegie men would early form the habit of being considerate the privacy of their fellows, President Lloyd took up his second point, the general matter of "hazing". This, he said, is being banned in an ever-increasing number of colleges. He referred especially to the Kangaroo Courts which, it seems, are established every year despite Rule 37 in "Standards and Rules for Scholarship, Attendance, and Conduct". Although he admits that the Kangaroo Courts have usually been conducted on the basis of good nature and fun, he stressed their undesirability from a faculty viewpoint.

Finally, President Lloyd lamented the fact that students still have a tendency to kick holes through doors and resort to various other

FACULTY MEMBERS ENTERTAINED IN NEW Y.W.C.A. APARTMENTS

New Y. W. Rooms Initiated In Decorative Entertainment For New Teachers

On Friday afternoon, September 21, the teachers of the Practice House entertained in honor of Miss Johnson, Miss Carroll, and Miss Hunter, new faculty members. The entertainment was in the form of a Tea from 3:30 to 5:00 and it was held in the new Y. W. rooms. The Tea is particularly significant because it was the first event to be held in the new Y. W. C. A. apartments and it was a fitting initiation of the Y. W. rooms which have been designed with similar activities in view.

The rooms for the Tea were beautifully decorated with large vases of dahlias in a variety of colors. As refreshments, a spicy punch was served with small cookies. Many town guests as well

Religious Ed. Class Studies Students Extra Activities

Students Found To Drop Activities In Transfer From High School

Toward the latter part of the last school year a religious education class under the supervision and direction of Doctor Orr made an extensive effort to secure some findings concerning the student's attitude toward extra curricular activities in his transfer from high school to college. The findings were of such general interest, and of such astounding nature, that it was considered advisable to make a report of them in The Highland Echo.

A questionaire was sent out to a considerable number of the students from which there were 243 replies received. The various college activities were considered separately. In religious activities it was found that a decided change took place between high school and college. Practically the entire group had been active in work of this sort before coming to college and 70 had dropped out. Fifteen students who had never been active in religious activities became active in college.

In music, a like situation was found to exist. 80 dropped out of action in that field and there were only two to initiate music into their program.

Athletics, it seemed, suffered the greatest losses among college students. 106 students dropped out of athletics in their change from high school to college. Not a single one became active in athletics for the first time. This is a deplorable situation, considering the value of athletics as part of the well rounded college life.

Debate and dramatics are fields in which there are not numerous participants. Yet, 48 students dropped out of dramatics and 98 dropped out of debate. Only four students felt the urge to begin work in each of these two departments.

A phase of college that leads to a slightly different conclusion was found regarding the student's voluntary participation in religious meetings. There were 80, of the group questioned, who attended only the compulsory religious meetings. On the other hand, there were 161 who attended more than one voluntary religious meeting. Of this number, 22 went to more than five voluntary meetings every week. This is considered, generally, to be somewhat of an overburden, and is not recommended. In the meetings there is much overlapping which should, where it is possible, be integrated. Students have attended, voluntarily, the meetings of the Ministerial Association, Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A., Vespers, and perhaps a daily prayer group.

The abundance of religious organizations has been a problem of several colleges. Many that have attacked it with an organized problem for the integration of a religious program. It was in the form of a council which planned the meetings and the type of programs, eliminating the unnecessary or superfluous features. The result was highly satisfactory.

Another branch of the findings brought a fact which has been generally apparent. It has to do with the duties performed by various committees on the hill. It was reaffirmed that the tendency is to appoint over and over again the same people on all the various committees. Among the freshmen last year, 26 people did the work of 40 on the committees. The sophomore class appointed 23 people to fill 50 places. The juniors had 35 people filling 88 places, and the seniors had 18 people filling 61 places on committees. This shows that all of the 25 or 30 people who performed extra-curricular activities were forced to serve on two, and sometimes three, committees each. There should be, where it is possible, some alleviation of the work laid upon a few people who

THE HOOSIER POET

In an out of the way spot in eastern Indiana is situated the town of Greenfield, where James Whitcomb Riley, the Hoosier poet, was born and reared. The approach to the town is made on the Old National Road, by automobile, and it is so barely noticeable that one might go through the town without realizing its importance. Usually, however, some loyal Indianan furnishes the lacking information.

Coming in this general vicinity, which does seem to have a queer character all its own, a lover of Riley seems to be lost in a queer sort of enchantment which carries him away to youthful dreams. Out away from the village, on the east, a small stream is crossed; a very insignificant appearance it has, but it means much to a lover of Riley verse who has gone with the Hoosier "Up and Down Old Brandywine". Just a few rods from the much traveled highway is "The Ol' Swimmin' Hol'" the site of which has been marred by the crossing of a railroad over the immediate spot. Riley mentions this railroad in his poem.

The city, Greenfield, is known for two things. It is the reputed home of the much spoken of, and loved by all, "Old Sweetheart of Mine". At this time there is a lady living in the town who claims to be the original "Little Orphan Annie". The concensus of opinion among the older residents about the city bear out the truth of this lady's claims.

The state of Indiana has honored the "Burns of America" in a number of ways. A few years before his death a state holiday was declared by the governor. Other means of showing respect to his work have been employed. The people of this vicinity are "Riley minded" and they are proud to claim state kinship to their former neighbor and artist.

Riley is one of many examples of a great man who was inflicted with physical weakness, which, in some cases blurred his would be perfect character. He was a habitual user of liquor, a fact which had something to do with bringing about his untimely death.

Despite this handicap, the influence of Riley will remain as something outstanding in American Literature. His writing along gentle philosophic lines appeals greatly to the poetry lover. He wrote, almost always using a most delightful vernacular which is peculiar to one very small section of territory, nevertheless well distinguished. Of Riley it can be very appropriately said that "The good he has done will live after him, the evil will remain interred in his bones."

RADIO'S FATE

It is a matter of only a few years to think back to the time when the people of the country were universally elated over the perfection of a very important discovery. It was the radio. This was something absolutely new and untried, but it was only a short time until the majority of the population felt that they could place faith in something with an extremely bright prospect for a future existence. The radio was considered a valuable addition to, and an improvement upon, the newspaper and the theatre. It furnished the public with news, while it was still news, and it likewise furnished valuable entertainment.

From 1922, when the movement in favor of radio really began, until 1929, when interest began to decline rapidly, the sales of sets, parts, and accessories increased 1,400 percent.

Since 1929 there has been a very noticeable decline in the interest shown toward radio, in practically every department. It is too much in evidence to be disregarded, or to be accounted for with the conventional "depression" excuse. Radio has been made to suffer, and it has been made to suffer for one simple, fundamental, reason. The reason is this: the advertiser, and the broadcaster have underestimated the audience with which the have to deal. . . . the American Public. They have not only underestimated them—they have practically disregarded them, apparently forgetting that the people who own radios are their one market for advertising.

A comparatively few years ago the country was dotted with many small stations which broadcasted programs of considerable worth, employing talent of a high degree. While this sort of thing was going well, the Radio Commission came along and closed some stations and gave others impossible wave lengths. The Radio Commission paved the way for the present system of chains, whereby the choice of the program is left as much to the broadcaster as to the receiver.

Because of this ether monopoly, two changes are apparent in radio. First, the programs are of a much cheaper quality; second, the program, such as it is, is so interspersed with advertising that it fails to hold but little attraction for the listener. In the report of games, prize-fights, news, and everything, practiacally, one is constantly being reminded that it is the "so and so" manufacturing company sponsoring the broadcast.

The broadcast of news has been attempted, and will probably continue. The radio is supposed to give a few valuable items before they reach the newspaper reader. They are likewise supposed to be of a high type. One learns, however, that they are on the same scale as the newspaper front page, being headed by a story of a thug taking a cop for a ride, or some story that would be more suitable for a "Believe it or not" column. In broadcasting news the radio has not made a forward step.

Educated people are becoming more and more sick of the radio. Someone has suggested that a higher class of speakers grace the radio stations. The inconsistency there lies in the fact that people who can stand the present trend of broadcast could not know how to take the men of real influence if they should resort to the radio. People who listen now are listening to "stuff", which, incidentally, includes campaign speeches by the presidential candidates.

What the future of radio will hold depends on the broadcaster and the advertiser entirely. If they recognize the public and change the nature of the program there can be something left for one of the biggest institutions in existence. Present programs of radio resembles very much a pill being fed to a child. You might get it fed to him if there is enough sugar coating, but when the coating has thinned almost to the vanishing point the subject begins to "wise up".

FELLOWSHIP CLUB BECOMES ORGANIZED

The Fellowship Club was organized at its first meeting last Tuesday night in Bartlett Hall. President Duff expained the purpose of the club which is to get new fellows acquainted with one another and with the old students.

President Duff has undertaken a new program for the club which has to do with dramatics. Any new man who is interested will have a splendid opportunity to show his skill, and possibly furnish some talent for one of the mid-winters. Plays will probably be presented in the club.

James Smith, last year's president, told the new men about the over-night hike which will be in about three weeks. More mention will probably be made of this at the next meeting on Tuesday night.

The following officers were elected to serve this year:

President—S. A. Bass
Vice President—Fisher
Program Secretary—Powell
Treasurer—Christie

LITTLE CHURCH

"Give Diligence to Show Thyself Approved unto God, a Servant that needeth not to be Ashamed"—II Timothy 2:15.

In spite of the fact that this text has been very frequently used in sermons to students, its message can never fail to be of vital importance to them in their search for Truth. Especially, in a Christian institution should this portion of God's word receive a place in the student's thought concerning his course of study.

The surpeme goal of life is happiness, and religion, inherent in mankind from the beginning, is the agency through which we must seek it by bringing ourselves into harmony with the Master Mind directing the Universe. Even a thorough knowledge of the material world, desirable though it be, must be penetrated by the Light of the Spirit, if it is to pay the maximum dividend of happiness.

Christianity being the only true guide to our happiness and our ultimate victory over evil, fits perfectly into the scheme of the Universe, for its authors are indentical. It follows the universal law that everything must have exercise and growth if it must continue to live. Therefore, it may not safely be allowed to become rigid in its mechanical working principles or stale in its appeal to those who seek the Truth.

The conscientious student should never hesitate to adopt an aggressive policy in his religious thought which will prompt him to face facts according to his individual angle of approach. The laws which God has laid down in His word are sufficient only to give us a start in the quest for Truth. After seeing us started, He has in His infinite wisdom, given us intelligence enough to walk alone instead of being handcuffed and led along by a body guard of ecclesiastical commands.

God intends for us to "give diligence", or in another version, to "study" in order to know His willv Our religion must not be negative but positive, expressing itself in the classroom, on the campus, on the athletic field. It should be a part of US; not merely a part of our routine.

WORLD TODAY

Puerto Rico has just been devastated by a terrific huricane in which hundreds were killed and thousands wounded. Their government insists that they "must have everybody go to work as if nothing had happened—only more so." Washington and the Red Cross are sending aid to the homeless thousands.

To prove that Nature has no favorites, an earthquake in Greece, at the same time, killed one hundred inhabitants.

Chile apparently doesn't like its President again. The people are revolutionizing once more and armies are chasing each other up and down the country with great enthusiasm.

It is said that a great broadcasting station is to be erected in Europe for the specific purpose of sending programs to the United States. YIOU would make appropriate call letters. Germany owes the United States $8,000,000, due this week. Altogether, we have due in December from European nations $33,084,485 in principal and $91,849,936 in interest.

Mrs. Ford is planning to aid Hoover in the coming election. She is serving on the Board of Women's Republican Division and is using her influence in Hoover's favor.

Gandhi celebrated his 63rd birthday in jail at Yeroda, India, but he was allowed the special privilege of sitting under a tree in the jail yard and children came an played music and danced for him.

Winston Churchill, the popular and celebrated novelist of England suffered a relapse and was removed to a private hospital in London. He was recently ill with paratyphoid and apparently left the hospital too soon.

LLOYD'S GIFT

Some more evidence of the generosity of Dr. and Mrs. Lloyd have been discovered. Above the big open fireplaces in Baldwin Hall and the new Y. W. Rooms, are chintz hangings, which from a distance look like some sort of tapestry. These hangings add to the attractiveness of the rooms. The one in Baldwin matches Miss Hunter's rug, which was also a present from the Lloyds.

SENIORS ELECT

At the senior class meeting on September 28, the following were elected to the student council: Nathalia Wright, Elizabeth Mingea, Ellen McCrae, Elizabeth Duncan, Alexander Duff, Robert Overly, Leslie Webb, and Wilbur Johnson.

STUDENT VOLUNTEERS HAVE MANY NEW MEMBERS IN RANKS

Many Countries Indicated As Students' Choice For Life Work

An informal hymn-sing held Sept. 18 was the first gathering of the Student Volunteer group for the present school year. The first regular meeting of the year was held on September 25 in Bainonian Hall.

The characteristic Student Volunteer enthusiasm was displayed at both gatherings, and may be accounted for in part by the attendance of over seventy-five old and new members and visitors each evening. The presence of twenty-one freshmen and new students at the recent meetings insures continued growth of the group.

The program of last Sunday night included a forecast of programs by Katherine Smith, Senior Program Secretary. She announced two coming attractions of great interest One on "The Prerequisites of the Missionary" and one on "Christ the Example" were promised. The group is to be especially fortunate this year in having as speaker Mr. Fred Hope of Africa, the Rev Mr. Harry Strachan of Costa Rica and Mrs. Ethel C. Tylee who has done outstanding work among the Indians of the Amazon Valley South America.

The advisor of the group, Mr Louis A. Black was introduced last Sunday and gave a few words of greeting to the visitors and new members. A short history of the Student Volunteer Movement was given by Frank Neff. The president, Dorothy Casseres, spoke on "What the Group on the Hill Should Mean to Each Member".

From slips filled out at the meeting last Sunday night, it was found that twenty-eight of those present were planning to do mission work in the United States, and forty-five plan to work on foreign fields. As to type of work, educational work was the choice of thirty three, medical work was chosen by nine, and social service and industrial mission work were the choice of others. Evangelistic work is coupled with the other choices in the great majority of cases, which is a pleasing revelation to the leaders. The evangelistic spirit is recognized as being essential to the missionary as well as to the person who takes it as his specialty.

Countries indicated by members as choices for fields of work are the following: India, Africa, Latin America, (Brazil, Central America), Arabia, the Philippine Islands, China, Korea, Alaska and the United States.

Plans for the year include the undertaking of some project for personal work in the city, a plan for increasing the reading of mission books and literature by the members of the group, and the putting on of mission programs in the various churches and Young People's groups in Maryville. Efforts to create world mindedness and to increase interest in missions on the Campus through close cooperation with the Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A. will continue.

Letters have been written to many Maryville College students and graduates now on the foreign field. Answers to these are expected to provide interesting material for the weekly meetings as well as to inaugurate a plan for circular letters which will keep Maryville foreign missionaries and the existing Student Volunteer Group in touch with each other.

The theme for the meeting tomorrow night is Consecration. The Group will meet in Bainonian Hall after Vespers.

BOOK BROUSINGS

Sackville-West, Victoria Mary (Mrs. Harold George Nicolson). All Passion Spent. 294p. $2.50 Doubleday.

This book is an unusual piece of literary production, and is worthy of the reader's attention for a number of reasons. One of the most interesting facts in connection with the story is that the heroine, Lady Slane, wife of a brilliant statesman, and one time vicerine of India, is eighty-eight years of age. For more than sixty years this patient and duteous soul has buried her own self in the life of her famous husband. She has been taken more or less for granted by her six children, who consider her hardly capable of making an independent decision. The way in which she shows the children that she really does have a mind of her own, and the way she finds contentment in the last months of her life after Lord Slane's death, make a very interesting study.

The characterization throughout the study is unusually good. The characters of the different children, the three old gentlemen, the undertaker, the real-estate dealer, and the collecter, Lady Slane's true friends in her Hampstead retreat, are made to exist with a few strong, brief passages about each.

The method of telling the story is unusual, in keeping with the general tone of the book. One feels, as he reads, that he is looking into the mind of the character, and reading his thoughts is a most shameless manner.

Another interesting point about the book is the way it is divided, or rather, the way it is not divided. The three parts of the story are not divided into chapters, or at least the chapters are not indicated by any of the ordinary mechanical devices. One feels, rather than sees, the divisions.

If any one word were to be suggested as descriptive of "All Passion Spent", surely none could be more appropriate than "unusual".

Pollyanna Spirit

(By Webb)

Maryville College, being a little colony unto itself, has not felt the Depression very much, probably because, so far as superfluous cash is concerned, the college is always depressed. The majority of Maryville College students, however, have felt the result of the depression. According to Miss Clemmie Henry, our Student-Help Secretary, the students of last year bore up remarkably well under the adverse financial conditions. Although students did not receive the expected help from home, there were no complaints. Instead, there were requests for work from the College, and the students courageously carried on their brave tasks of helping themselves while getting an education.

Furthermore, not to take too much credit from the upper classmen, Miss Henry added, that almost all of the new students knew more about their financial affairs than had students of other years. They knew exactly how much they needed, and they were accurate in making out their budgets. Naturally the correct and complete information was helpful in assigning work, for a larger number of calls for work has been received by the College during the past year than ever before.

Night

(Mildred MacKenzie '32)

Night—
A blue-silver stone
Precious for silence and depth and quiet
The peace in which a soul awakens and looks to God.
After a day's toil
Come clear, clean stars,
The misty moon-veil.
Night—
Release of mind
Enchantment of reality and truth,
Eagle-winged souls sweeping broadly, exaltingly to infinity.
Night—
Through the dead weight of silence comes
A long joint wail
Reminder
That life is moving ceaselessly,
Rushing on, as is the train:
It is calling—and the call
Echoes in me,
Echoes the loneliness in living to high goals,
Echoes the breaking sorrow of mighty tragedy,
Beckons the beauty of the melody
Cutting through the quiet:
A meteor streaking thru the lovely homely
Panorama of little things.
It is gone into the night
All is quivering silence again.
But the vision remains
Memory of that call pounds through me
And I plod thru common duties toward my dreams
Enriched by visions—
In the night.

SPORTS

FIRST ROUND OF TENNIS TOURNAMENT PLAYED LAST WEEK

Both Old and New Netmen Display Rare Fall Form

Although J. Pluvius held sway the first part of last week and prevented anything in the way of tennis, things began to right themselves in the latter stages of the week and in the course of events, practically all of the first round matches were played. Several of the second round matches were played off Friday and Saturday. At the time of going to press, the schedule shows 12 men in each bracket left in the running from the 64 men who signed up to play.

Looming up in the remaining play of the upper division is Fischbach, who defeated his first two rivals. Fischbach's battle with W. W. Warman showed some classy tennis, the senior winning by a 9-7, 7-5 score. Fischbach continued with the game that he initiated in his program last year, placing practically all his shots rather than playing the driving game for which he's known. A new man, Karnell, shows as Fischbach's most probable opponent. Nothing seems to stand in the way of these two men meeting in the quarter finals.

In the lower division of the first bracket, two former Maryville varsity men stand out. Hurst has merely to lay McReynolds among the sweet peas until he can reach the quarter finals where he should tangle with Talmage. Talmage will be the favorite to win here.

A real battle is laid up for anyone in the lower bracket who expects to advance any farther than he already has. Those players who should make it tough for their opponents are Gillingham, Moore, Bradbury, Haub, Snedeker, and Phay. Gillingham has advanced two rounds with little difficulty. Moore won easily from opposition that didn't test his mettle, and has now to defeat Queener before reaching Gillingham. Gillingham should win out in his quarter-final bracket. A real battle looms in the next division where the two contestants showing are Bradbury and Haub. Haub, a freshman has been showing all the boys some of the tricks in the way of tennis. He surprisingly took Clopton and Jess by decisive scores. Snedeker in the next division should reach the quarter finals with little difficulty, and Phay looms as his most likely opponent coming up from the bottom.

The freshmen have presented three men who look like prospective tennis team material. Karnell, a favorite from Hanover University, Snedeker, and Haub, have been playing excellent tennis and they can promise their opponents a real match on any man's court.

New Dressing Room To Be Built For Girls

One of the good features of the gymnasium progam is the proposed dressing room in the gymnasium on which work has already begun. This change is a happy surprise to the students who have not yet completed their requirements.

Last year the room near the Swimming Pool was used by the girls, but the recent change in the pool necessitated an adjustment there. Before the new room was begun, the basement of Bartlett Hall was used, but it was found to be impracticable.

The completion date of the new dressing room which is on the southeast corner of the gymnasium, will not be known for some time.

BUSINESS MANAGERS

The committee composed of members from the Student Council and the faculty elected the new members to the Business Managership of the Highland Echo last week. The two junior representatives are David McArthur and Harry Mathias. The sophomore assistant is Frank Clark.

SPORT SLANTS

By Beale

This business of signing one's name to such personal remarks as are necessary herein is dangerous. Firstly, athletes are known to be hefty gentlemen in the pink of condition. Secondly, the writer (?) is conceded to be a spindly chap with a physique more akin to dark brown than to pink. But we must be brave, so here y'are:

—S—

We were forced, because of our customary tardiness, to sit in the enemy sector last night. But we're glad we did. For Dame Fortune led us to a seat directly behind the mother of one of the Scot backs. It was a privilege to watch that mother's calm anxiety each time her son carried the ball and was finally dragged down into the mass of players. Plainly she feared for him; yet indescribable pride was shining in her eyes as her son took the ball and forced his way through that same mass to score the initial touchdown for his team. The world is sure to benefit through possession of such brave women.

—S—

The new scoreboard was functioning more efficiently last evening. With such operation, it is an indisputable asset.

—S—

If a coach ever produced a calm passer, that coach is Rube McCray and that passer is his quarterback, Chaffin. That lad stood back there waiting for a receiver to "get open" as calmly as if he were protected by the Great Wall of China. His coolness reminded us of the immortal Bobby Dodd, although we would not commit the heresy of emparing him to the brilliant Tennessee field general. We think too much of our life.

—S—

Either the cheering has vastly improved, or "distance lends enchantment". From the enemy camp, it seemed that the Maryville cheers rolled across the gridiron like an irresistible avalanche. We could scarcely hear the invaders' brass band while the newly elected cheerladers were going through their contortions. And by the way! 'S a good thing the boys were not wearing the Scotch outfits of last year. Their shins would have become almost as cold as some of the stares we have received from divers freshman fee-males.

—S—

The Southern Conference teams got officially under way this afternoon. We have no scores to present, but we take this opportunity to shudder over the fate of some of the so-called experts who are predicting the winners. The boys are picking everybody from Rice to Notre Dame to win the S. C. championship. Most of them are, of necessity, going to be wrong. We think, along with everybody else, that Tulane, Alabama, and Tennessee are the leading contenders, but we insist that Kentucky and Vandy are under-rated. We'll see.

—S—

The third game of the world series is being played as the ECHO goes to press. Every scribe in the big towns is playing the romance of Vernon Gomez, star Yankee hurler, and June O'Dea, Broadway dancer, for everything the copy-rooms will grant. It's gegting so a sport luminary doesn't have any secrets or privacy at all. Ere long, star athletes will have to hire press agents, not to see that publicity is gotten, but to make sure that part of it is avoided.

—S—

Back to the campus. Maryville plays Tusculum in Greeneville next Saturday. 'Tis a pity we can't send up a crowd of rooters similar to the bunches Hiwassee and Tennessee-Wesleyan brought up here! Oh, Well! !

JUNIOR MEETING

The Junior class held a meeting on Friday of last week to elect members to the student council. Three men and three women were elected. Those becoming members of the council are, Elizabeth Gillis, Josephine Woodward, Lucile Swafford, Robert Tripp, Warren Warman, and Donald Fortune.

ATHLETIC BOARD OF CONTROL ELECTS NEW OFFICERS

Boretsky Chosen To Serve As Board President

After the votes had been cast for cheer leaders, the election of officers of th Athletic Board of Control was begun amid ear-splitting outbursts of pep which had been generating during the preceding election. When the name of Steve Boretsky was placed on the ballot for president, he was swept into office, with a roar of enthusiasm. The students voted by standing and their yelling for the various candidates was clearly indicative of "Who's Who at Maryville".

"Yankee" Lewis and "Specks" Moore received the offices of vice-president and secretary respectively.

As the candidates for women-representative were nominated, there was much excitement among the girls, and lusty bass yells from the various knights of the heroines. A close contest arose between Mary Gamble, Ellen Macrae, and Lucile Swafford, ending in victory for Miss Gamble and Miss Macrae.

Three very popular men were nominated for the office of men representative; John Tope, Charles Beale and Martin Gillespie. Again there was a lively contest, resulting finally in the election of Beale and Gillespie.

Enthusiasm was in no wise cooled as the voters invaded the Faculty in search of two of its members to represent them. It is felt that the election of Mr. Thrower and Miss Heron as Faculty representatives showed excellent judgment on the part of the students, for Mr. Thrower is a very valuable coach on the Hill and Miss Heron, with her enthusiasm for athletics, cannot fail to serve well.

Then last came the selection of men from Town to represent us in Athletics. Recognizing the value of the townspeople's cooperation, the voters very wisely selected Dr. Calloway and Carl Storey on the Athletic Board of Control.

It was generally considered that the choices were made wisely, and the Athletic Board should look forward to a successful year under good leadership.

SOPHOMORE MEETING

The sophs met after chapel on Wednesday to do a number of things. They had to legalize the members of the council. The heretofore illicit members, but now full-fledgelings are: Betty Brewer, Eleanor Johnson, Theron Alexander, and Herman Magee. These sophs thought they were elected last spring, but they were not councilmen until Wednesday, according to the constitution.

President James Smith exhibited foresight in having the class select six members to serve with this year's Chilhowean staff. The chosen ones are: Edna Hass, Marie Bailey, Phyllis Dexter, Hugh Crawford, Sam Waid, and Douglas Carhart. The editor and business manager of next year's Chilhowean are to be selected from this group.

Honaker Rounds Out Tenth Anniversary As Scot Mentor

Coach Thrower Proves Himself Valuable Assistant

As the football season approaches the serious stages and the freshmen are becoming "orientated" to Maryville's sport program, the time becomes ripe for a celebration in honor of one of our most outstanding men, namely Coach Lomby Scott Honaker. The current year sees "the mighty atom" or "Maryville grey-haired man of destiny" rounding out his first decade of service as mentor of Maryville's athletics.

In the course of these ten years, the Highlanders have produced athletic teams worthy of recognition anywhere. Members of these teams have scattered to the four winds to instruct other athletes, or to continue their performance as athletes, as one John Stone has been doing in behalf of the Detroit Tigers. Coach Honaker, in a word, has been Maryville's athletic Moses.

After his graduation in Roanoke, Virginia, the Scot shiek served as coach in Southern College in Georgetown, Texas; at Baldwin-Wallace in Berea, Ohio; and at the Industrial Training School for Boys at Huntington, Tennessee. He came to us, as math majors have probably already computed, in 1922, and since that time has devoted his whole time to the matter of placing Maryville on the map, athletically speaking.

Although the huge Bob Thrower has been coach here only seven years, he has already completed a decade of residence at Maryville, since he got his "book-larnin'" here. After three years of invaluable work at his tackle post in his collegiate days, he was elected captain of that mighty team of 1923 which swept all opposition before it only to be tied by Tennessee in a hectic battle in which Bob and his mates outplayed the boys "over there" in every department, but got more bad breaks than a squashed eggshell. Legend gives Robert Caperus everything from three all-Southern berths to nine all-Americans, but knowledge of an authoritative type cannot be garnered. But, whether or not he received official recognition, he goes on the books as the Scots' greatest lineman, and the man who takes his place will be nothing short of a godsend to whoever happens to be coaching then.

On receiving his diploma, Coach Thrower took up his duties as assistant coach, duties which he has indeed performed well. Maryville's lines have shown themselves well-coached at all times and the trackmen have been foremost in their field. Last year Coach Thrower took charge of the wrestling team and, with a group of largely green material, overcame all opposition in what is vulgarly known as "a big way".

Coach Thrower is a distinct credit to Maryville. He has wrought well, to the end that our athletic program has been advanced to the upper rungs of the sport ladder.

HONAKERITES DISPLAY DECEPTIVE, DRIVING ATTACK TO CONQUER RUBE McCRAY'S TENNESSEE-WESLEYANS CANINES

Line Continues To Improve As Back And Ends Uncork Brilliant Passing Attack

With pre-game dope favoring the invading Tennessee Wesleyan Bulldogs, Captain Gillespie led his fighting men onto Wilson field last night to an overwhelming victory by the score of 25-0. After holding a strong Carson-Newman team to a one-touchdown victory the preceding week, and in the meanwhile winning one of those so-called "moral victories" while at the task, Rube McCray's men were slated to do everything from holding the Scots to a tie to taking home all the practice balls. But it seems that Coach Honaker and his men neglected to read the papes, for they went to the Athenians (not a literary society, by a long shot) hammer and tongs to score touchdowns in all quarters and win a well-deserved victory.

The visitors opened a determined drive early in the first quarter, without even the formality of the usual cautious sparring in the first round. For a moment it seemed that Maryville had indeed encountered a mob which would tear her line to ribbons and score as many points as said foe desired. But that moment was short-lived. In mid-field a Wesleyan back fumbled the porcine-epidermis and Big Jim Hollaway hugged himself around that ball as though he were a personal friend of the beastie who gave his life that football might live. From that point on, no doubts were forthcoming as to the final outcome except for the minor consideration of the exact score. For Boretsky, Gillespie and Clarke

Lang Elected Head Cheer Leader; Clop Skidmore Assistant

Much Enthusiasm Shown As Students Pull For Favorites

The "pep" meeting Thursday night was made peppier by the election of three cheer leaders to insure lots of spirit at th game with Tennessee-Wesleyan College. Five "good and true" men aspired to the office. They were Jimmie Lang, Malvern Clopton, Cecil Skidmore, Erving Hardy, and Leon Brown. All five fellows had a large group of friends intent on putting them into office. For a while, the fate of Brown and Skidmore hung in the balance. In the end, the vote count placed Jimmie Lang as head cheer leader and Malvern Clopton and Cecil Skidmore as assistants.

The new cheer leaders, now better organized, expect to show Maryville some of its best yell-leading in recent years. . . . .as was shown by their spirit Friday night.

FOOTBALL GAME

calmly proceeded to rip through the foes line until, on the twenty-yard line, Steve Boretsky dashed off tackle for eighteen yards to plant the ball theoretically on Wesleyan's two-yard line. Three plays failed to advance its position, but on the fourth attempt, Clarke rushed over into the end-zone for the first counter. An attempted place-kick failed to net extra point.

For the rest of the first period and a portion of the second, the two teams fought on somewhat of an even basis, but well in the second quarter, there occurred one of the most spectacular plays that this scribe has ever witnessed on Wilson Field. The boys from downstate were executing a deceptive triple pass, and two of the stages had been completed to the complete bewilderment of most of the Maryville players and fans. But Cecil Stone, diagnosing the play perfectly, was on the invading back as he attempted a long pass down the field. Batting the ball just as it left the foeman's hands, Stone went into his juggling act and raced 65 yards for a touchdown. The fans who noticed it were tickled silly to see how Stone, a bulky lineman, dashed off and left Chaffin as though the latter were in reverse. The half ended a few moments later with Maryville in scoring territory once again.

The next touchdown came in the third quarter as a result of a concentrated attack led by Boretsky and West. Boretsky toted the ball over the line. The final score came in the fourth period when Jack Atkins snagged an enemy pass and ran through divers opposing backs for a touchdown. The game ended with Wesleyan throwing passes in all directions in a desperate attempt to prevent a whitewashing.

The cusotmary bouquets are difficult indeed for this game. The entire team played a game of heads-up ball. Everybody starred. But a write-up of the game would be truly incomplete without a word of praise for Stone's end-play. That boy boxed plays in, stopped plays cold, re.used to let punt-receivers get anywhere, and furnished a bunch of shivering moonshiners with THE football thrill of the year. The entire line was in great shape, with Collins turning in one of the best games at guard since those hectic days of MacDonald and Storey. The backfield, led by Boretsky and Gillespie, displayed their wares to the satisfaction of all present, and a good time was had by all (except Tennessee-Wesleyan).

For the visitors, the work of Hope at tackle, Chaffin at quarter, and Mitchell at half, was outstanding.

MUSIC DEPT. MAKES PLANS FOR CONCERT

This is a new feature now being introduced in many places. Those who heard these groups last year will remember the remarkable effects of the six pianos playing different solos together, giving the impression of a single instrument. Miss Hale heard an ensemble o. twelve piano this summer, each performer being a well known artist. This shows the importance of this new feature now being introduced in the field of piano playing.

Among the contributions from the voice department, Miss Frances Henry will offer some very unusual numbers to be given by the Vesper Choir. These will be sung in the balcony, and the choir will be accompanied by the organ and the pianos.

The violin department will include in its presentations a trio for violin, cello, and piano, with Miss Butcher, Mrs. Topalian, and Miss Mildred Harris, playing.

MINISTERIAL CLUB

At last Wednesday's meeting of the Ministerial Association, many new members were present to hear an enjoyable program. Frank R. Neff led the devotions and discussed the five Calvinistic doctrines adopted by the Presbyterian Church U. S. A. A number of students testified as to the help they had received from these five doctrines. Dr. Stevenson spoke a few minutes to the group congratulating the association and the new men for the large number present.

In a few weeks, two quartets will be available from the organization. One of the quartets will assist in the singing at the Student Volunteer Group meetings.

OBSERVATIONS

the new student. We haven't interviewed the newcomer, but we're on deck. (advertisement).

—O—

Old students were especially pleased to see Bill Mathieson on the scene this year at the beginning of school. Bill seems to be feeling right peert after being decidedly upset at the last of school, when the car in which he was riding got in a hand to hand bout with one of Knoxville's sturdiest telephone poles. Bill's cure seems to be complete except for a bit of a limp which does give him a little swagger. That, however, only makes him more collegiate.

—O—

Students under Dr. Hussey were much reminded of "Horse", "Tom", "Geesefeet", Cooper by a technical error the other day made by the professor. Dr. Hussey intended to say that "He will send a fat goose", but did say, "he will send a fat geese." A little mistake in number, but the gender was right. "Geese" was Cooper's pet saying, although, if one had all Tom's saying of that nature together, he'd have quite a menagerie.

—O—

Rainy days in the library remind one very much of the north football bleachers at a game. Things are about that much congested. Just why outside reading has to be crowded into the rainy days can't be quite accounted for, but it seems to be done. Speaking from the view of a library assistant, and six others, we hope you'll all pray for a long dry spell.

—O—

It is not a customary scene to see Maryville students out of control. A great number of the more fortunate ones have, however, gone wild over something that does seem to warrant such procedure. The reason for such elation is the new faculty members. Thus far, we have, in our capacity, heard something like 727 good reports of the various members, and not a one, mind you, of any other nature. From all appearances, the newcomers really rate. It can be earnestly hoped that they will be with us a long time and that things will continue as they are now. There seems to be too much genuineness to each of the new faculty members to class the feeling of the students as a passing fancy.

—O—

While the freshmen have little to do beside think of the "beautiful woman" or some such trivial thing, the older students are looking forward to the mountain hike, of which little seems to have been said. The old enthusiasm just won't die, however, and if things go as everyone plans, preparations should be in order at the first meeting of the Student Council. Maryville without a mountain hike would show impropriety as much as Ghandi wearing a Hart Schaffner Marx.

—O—

"Professor Griffitts just chides me in class all the time. He's always picking on me." This is a quotation taken from each of the freshmen girls taking the first year Chemistry. We have often wondered how Griffitts could diversify his feminine attentions so much and still teach the course. . .but, somehow they do learn chemistry. . . and that's a lot. We have to admit that the chemistry prof. is good. Any man who can teach a girl for a whole year and then get her to make the fatal promise is really getting places. He's the last word, which may be interpreted "he is", or "he has".

September 29, 1932.

To the Editor of the Highland Echo:

A number of interesting thoughts enter the mind of the new student or the onlooker as he reads the signs at the edge of the campus. "Maryville College, founded 1819" reminds the person of an old institution. Upon returning to the campus the student immediately sees evidence of improvements.

This college should be congratulated for the fact that it has courage and management to enable it to correct conditions and to make all kinds of noticeable changes. The directors and the benefactors of the school figure well here, we know. The best way to show student respect for the many changes is to take the best possible care of the campus in keeping it clean and well-kept. It would be indeed inspiring if we could remain away from school as long as our president has to return with the amount of interest he has shown. One of the very wise and commendable actions on the part of the president is to appoint a very efficient and well liked business manager to supervise improvements, besides a host of other duties.

To particularize, it seems wise to mention the repaired buildings, the new walks, the improved dormitories, the renovations in Bartlett Hall, and the new swimming pool. One small item, yet one of notice, is the placing of the names on each of the dormitories.

Announcements referring to the grading of the unsightly slope back of Carnegie and to the opening of the new golf course at the north end of the campus make up encouraging news. Hail the forerunner! The Frosh are especially fortunate in having the advantage of the new gymnasium program.

Yet, as we praise, there is a few words of suggestion that might be mentioned.

The biggest need is for tennis courts. The promise of new varsity courts is indeed music to one's ears. Another need that is really urgent is the need of chairs in the library. Too much congestion results at nearly every free period during the day when the student has time off for library use. The meals at Pearsons, though improved, have much ground to gain before they are perfect. A suggestion has been made to the effect that the Sunday evening meal should be altered a great deal. The cheer leaders might give the conventional fifteen "raws" at this suggestion. As soon as we get two girls dormitories to replace Baldwin and Memorial, and a chapel with a pipe organ we should be even more grateful than we are now.

W. W. Warman, '34.

Barr from his former days in Maryville were very happy to see him return this year. Last year Winn was out of school and his plans were to attend Wheaton, a Presbyterian school in Illinois. At the last moment, however, (about five minutes after the last moment) he decided to return to the hill. Tutt was one of Queener's best debaters and a junior associate editor elect on the Echo besides being interested in all other activities, with the exception of moonshining.

—O—

We might mention the fact that Strain, of Athenian fame, and Davis of sales-talk fame were up to par when they returned to Maryville. Both of them possess as good a line as they left college with. Strain was another of the leading men of Pi Kappa Delta.

—O—

There is something in the way of a feature article written here or there in last week's issue, written by a last year's freshman. This youngster submitted his article to the editor who was quite pleased, and who was obliged to make only little changes. There was just one set of marks that the editor wished to receive credit for. . . that is the quotation marks around the term "upper classmen". This is done in keeping with the dignity of the term, and the respect due juniors and seniors. It is a means of avoiding undesirable corruptions. . . with all due respects, of course, to Mr. Alexander. . . . or should we say, Theron.

—O—

It won't be long till our faculty will go to the polls to cast their vote; Dr. McMurray going in order to cancel the vote of Professor Queener. . . . and the others voting according to their dictates. We'll have to get the scouts out to scare up some "dirt" on these new professors. We don't have the slightest ideas concerning their political affiliations except, possibly, in one case. . Dr. Shine. He is from North Carolina, which speaks for itself. While we're shining around, we think of the expression, " a gentleman every inch of the way". If that's true of the new English prof. we can tritely exclaim, WHAT A MAN, and mean it.

The averages man thinks he isn't.

An observant gentleman calls our attention to a little change made on application blanks for a motor-car operator's pemit. Last year there was a line which read: "By whom Employed?" This year, the line reads: "If Employed, By Whom?"

York World, the Boston Evening Transcript, and others. They scored a sensational success. Led on by Serge Jaroff, they won a victory unequalled by any other foreign choral organization heard here in recent years." "Immense was the excitement of the audience. The whole choir is capable of quasi-orchestral effects. "Without a doubt, the finest aggregation of the kind we have had." "No word can describe such singing."

In the voices of these "Singing Horsemen of the Steppes" is heard the voice of the Russian people. There are their songs of religious faith embodied in the liturgical music of Tchaikovsky, Gretchaninoff, and others; their soldier songs, accompanied by wild shouts and whistling; and their folk songs of melodic and haunting beauty.

The Don Cossacks sing their songs with the intensity of their love for their homeland. They are today refugees traveling on "Nansan passes". They are designated therein as "en voyage"—that is, men without a country.

are willing to accept the responsibility of working on committees.

The matter of dues was the last thing to be recorded. It was found that the freshman paid a total of two dollars to all the organizations of which he was a member. The sophomore paid an average of three dollars and a half. The junior came nearest to a reasonable average by paying seven dollars to the various organizations. The amount for the seniors was five dollars. Very little figuring shows that each year, in each class, there is much money lost because of the members' failure to pay dues to clubs, organizations, etc. This is, at the present time, one of the biggest problems on the campus that challenges every one for a satisfactory solution.

foolish pastimes. He suggested the use of perforated stickers to take the place of thumb-tacks or nails in fastening pictures to walls. The fire-hazard was also given a place in his speech in connection with the smoking regulation on the campus.

The fact that there is sometimes a water shortage on the third and fourth floors of Carnegie Hall was brought to President Lloyd's notice by individual students. He replied that there would have to be some changes in the city piping system before a better water supply would be possible. The change will probably be made soon.

In conclusion, President Lloyd assured the men of Carnegie Hall that the Administration would cooperate with them in every possible way in working out their problems.

HOSPITAL NEWS

Humbled Seniors Take Examinations

From a sophomoric standpoint, Friday, September 30, 1932 had no unusual significance. From a senior standpoint, however, Friday, September 30, 1932 had unusual significance. That was the day on which, with fear and trembling, sinking heart and shaking knees, the no-longer dignified-seniors trekked to Thaw to openly confess their lack of knowledge. Like a scared freshman in her first chemistry class, or an "I didn't study a tihng" sophomore taking one of Professor Queener's history tests, the seniors were not only the cynosure of all eyes but they were people to be pitied, as well.

There were 122 illustrious upperclassmen eligible to take this test. Maryville College is an advocate of a great many things. Bigger and better tests have not been advocated, but perhaps we are coming to that stage. Although the test was practically the same as in previous years, there was a decided change according to the seniors. Instead of the usual spelling words-like that of the Freshman English Examination, a dictation exercise including spelling and punctuation was given. At the time of writing, the results of the 1932 Senior English Exam are not available; at the time of reading, the results of the 1932 Senior English Exam probably will be available, and here's hoping that some of the Seniors will have been able to attain their usual self-composure and dignity, even though the results may not be pleasing, in all cases.

Public Speaking Class Has First Meeting; Will Conduct Political Campaign On Hill

Debate On School Elections Will Be Held At Tuesday Meeting

The public speaking class met last Tuesday night and held its first regular program. Ben Groves and Arthur Lazell, affirmative, defeated Andrew Newcomer and Robert Stevenson, negative, in a debate on the question, Resolved: that prohibition is not an important issue in the present campaign. Randolph Shields gave a six minute talk on "Idealism in the Political Campaign". The following people gave three minute talks on various phases of the coming election: Henry Otto, Ercelle Hunter, Clifford Withers, Maria Wynn, Harry Wood, Florence Hyde, Mildred Purviance, Robert Byer, Earl Crawford, and Phil Sorce.

The class is planning to conduct a real political campaign on the Hill. The aim of this campaign is to give the students an idea as to what each party stands for, and to allow them to express their choice of candidates. This opportunity will be given in a mock election to be held on November 8. The class is divided into three groups representing the three major parties. Earl Crawford is chairman of the Republicians, Ben Groves of the Democrats, and Arthur Lazell of the Socialists.

These three political groups will hold part rallies, and diffferent members will speak on the merits of their respective candidates and parties. The student body is urged to attend these rallies, the dates of which will be announced soon, and to give enthusiastic support to their favorite party.

The program the debate class has planned for the usual Tuesday evening meeting is on the general subject of school elections. A debate on the following question has been arranged, Resolved: that candidates for major offices in student activities should conduct campaigns. Eight minute speeches are required, with four minute rebuttals. The affirmative side is being upheld by Donald Fortune and Inez Hamrick, and the negative by Randolph Shields and Nathalia Wright.

A six minute talk on "Whispering Campaigns" is to be given by Frank Neff and shorter speeches are to be delivered in the following order:

Student Office Holders - - - James Smith
Point System in Student Activities - Herbert Fuller
Cliques in Control of Student Activities - - Leslie Webb
Time Element in Student Activities - - - Reuben Alford
School Letters - Elizabeth Duncan
Lower Classmen in Student Activitis - - - Wissler

Mother Of Doctor Crothers Dies After Two Weeks Illness

Body Taken To Greenfield, Ohio For Burial

Mrs. Mary Crothers, age 93 years, died early Thursday morning at the home of her son, Dr. Wm. H. Crothers, pastor of the New Providence Presbyterian Church. Although her last illness lasted about two weeks, Mrs. Crothers has been an invalid and confined to her room for some years.

Mrs. Crothers formerly lived in Greenfield, Ohio, where her husband was, for thirty-seven years, pastor of the Greenfield Presbyterian Church. She has been living with her son for about sixteen years.

Dr. and Mrs. Crothers left Maryville Thursday night, accompanying the body to Greenfield, Ohio.

The Value Of Sound Philosophy Expressed In Speech By Dr. Lloyd

Lloyd Proves Self To Be Characteristic After Dinner Speaker

President Ralph W. Lloyd addressed the faculty club last Tuesday night on the subject, "Christian Philosphy and Contemporary Thought". The following is a resume of the president's paper:

I. The Good of Philosophy

In many modern minds philosophy has fallen on evil days. Science, not philosophy, they say, holds the key to reality. Not a few voices speak with contempt about philosophy. But such views create suspicion as to the thinker's thoroughness. Philosophy should never accept as true anything which science knows to be untrue. But there are some facts about which science has not yet obtained information and probably cannot get information. Science deals with the gathering, organizing, and explaining of data. Philosophy deals primarily with values and meanings of data and of some things which are out of reach of science. Because it is not possible to avoid asking fundamental questions about reality and conduct it is not possible to do without philosophy. Building a philosophy does not consist of the obtaining of words or theories but of an honest intellectual effort to obtain a correct world view.

II. The Basic Kinds of Philosophy

The multitudes of philosophies which have appeared in the world are in the last analysis but variations of a comparatively few fundamental types. The kind of a philosophy a man holds depends not only upon his clarity and profundity of thought but also upon that with which he principally works, upon the kind of a man he is, upon his training. If a man believes that you cannot know anything thoroughly he will believe one sort of a philosophy. If he believes that the physical world is the whole reality or that mind is primarily real or that you should believe whatever seems to work best in daily living he will construct his philosophy accordingly. According to his emphasis he is likely to be a Naturalist, a Pragmatist, an Intuitionist, a Dualist, an Idealist, a Realist, or a Mystic.

III. Elements of a Christian Philosophy

Christian philosophers have written voluminously but the Founder himself left no system of philoso-

Al Duff Elected To Head Student Council

The Student Council convened Tuesday night and elected Al Duff president. There were two nominations from the floor: Ben Groves, president pro-tem, and Al Duff, Elizabeth Duncan was elected vice president, and Ellen McCrae, secretary-treasurer.

The chair being occupied by the newly-elected president, Duff made public the edict that Mountain Hikes are a thing of the past. A discussion arose about the suggestion that the Council sponsor a cabin about seven miles from here, in the mountains. The meeting was adjourned before any definite decision was reached.

LAGERSTEDT ILL

Prof. Lagerstedt has been confined to the College Hospital for several days because of a severe case of poison ivy which he was unfortunate enough to get in the College Woods. He is recovering slowly and expects to be entirely well in a few days.

BICYCLE TOUR

Rev. Charles R. Johnson, '26, has enjoyed the unusual opportunity, during the past summer, of touring Holland, Belgium, England, France, and Germany on a bicycle.

Mr. Johnson, after his graduation from Maryville, entered the Presbyterian Theological Seminary of Chicago. He was graduated in 1929 with honors which entitled him to a travelling fellowship in Europe and Palestine. Last year he studied at the American School of Oriental Research in Jerusalem. He will complete his studies abroad at the University of Berlin this year.

In a letter describing his bicycle tour, he reports that he traveled over fifteen hundred miles, visiting many places of unusual interest which the average tourist seldom sees.

GLEE CLUBS CHOSEN TODAY; YEAR'S PLANS STILL IN MAKING

Predominance of Basses Seen In Men's Ranks

One would think that giving audience to seventy voices swelling individually upon the air in the course of five days might have some effect on one's philosophy, but Miss Frances Henry, who among other ways may be characterized by the above, was still an apparent optimist on Friday afternoon, with Saturday, the last day for Glee Club try-outs, approaching.

The basses, quotes Miss Henry, bid fair to claim the stage this year in the music department, for not only are they in excess of numbers, and superiority of tone, but they possess the faculty, rare among basses, of excellent sight-reading.

Next to the basses the males are in order of prominence. This year has seen more men apply for membership in the Glee Club than ever before. In the department of vocal instruction the men and women are about equally divided, as contrasted to former years. Does this portend a rise in the quality and quantity of the near-forgotten serenade?

The plans of the two Glee Clubs for the year are still in the making, but their programs promise to be a new step in originality and aesthetic quality.

The members of these two organizations are still in doubt as to their own identity, for it will be several days before Miss Henry, with the rich store of newly-asserted talent before her, divulges the workings of her mind on the problem of who shall constitute the vocal clubs.

Y. W. C. A. PROGRAM

"Personalities that Christians Should Know" is the subject for the Y. W. C. A. program tomorrow afternoon at 1:00 o'clock.

Invitation is extended to all girls to "come and meet those who are taking upon themselves the advancement of Christ's Kingdom by bearing the burden of their brothers".

Six contemporary characters who have been Christian "burden-bearers of the earth" will be discussed in six short addresses.

Helen Thompson will speak on "The Character and Achievements of David Bernardo". Eleanor Johnson has for her subject the "Champion of the White Ribbon of Temperance, Frances Willard." Albert Sweitzer, apostle of Christianity in Africa, will be discussed by Helen Rusk. Pierre Curie and his sister Marie, co-discoverers of radium, will be pictured by Elizabeth Peterson. Edith Vanamon's subject is Sir Wilfred Grenfel, Sturdy Missionary in Labrador. The sixth character, Kagawa, the Japanese Gandhi will be discussed by Ercelle Hunter.

The devotional part of the program will come at the conclusion of this series of talks, for it is to present the true example in Christ of one who took upon himself the salvation of the world.

OPENING NIGHT

Hamlet may habe said "The play's the thing", but we say on behalf of each new girl "Tonight's the night."

Following two rush weeks by Theta and Bainonian comes this final night when the new girls will join the ranks of their chosen society.

The scene of this momentous occasion will be the lobby of Pearsons where each potential Theta or Bainonian will indicate her choice by dropping her name into either the blue or the green box. The president of the two societies, Nathalia Wright and Helen Thompson, will be the first to welcome the new Thetas and Bainonians while old Thetas and Bainonians will be waiting upstairs to add to the welcome.

RARE PRINTS GIVEN ENGLISH DEPARTMENT BY MRS. ALEXANDER

Gift of Hundred Shakespearean Prints Are Added To Collection

The English Department of the College is again indebted to Mrs. Jane B. S. Alexander, this time for her generosity in adding to its collection of rare prints and early editions.

Mrs. Alexander's latest gift is a collection of over a hundred prints of Shakespearean interests. These prints include pictures of Ben Jonson's contemporary himself; of the most famous Shakespearean actors and actresses, from Nathanial Field, a contemporary of the poet, to Edwin Booth and Mrs. Sarah Siddons; of the Avon town of Stratford, with its romantic pivot of attention, the Globe theater; and of scenes from the principal plays of Shakespeare.

These valuable pictures have been displayed in Dr. Hunter's classroom, where they will be of interest not only to members of English 305, but to every lover of the man from Stratford.

The second gift of Mrs. Alexander's is a similar rare print collection of Dickens, which contains a variety of pictures of the author, his characters, and his contemporaries.

In addition to the Dickens prints, the donor has included five early "Household Editions" of Dickens. These books, Sketches from Boz, Nicholas Nickleby, Little Dorrit, Our Mutual Friend, and Dombey and Son, are in a large green paper edition, and are profusely illustrated with interesting old prints.

BEALE INJURED

A very unfortunate accident occurred in the junior-freshman touch football contest last week, when Beale, playing right end for the juniors, collided with an opposing player and received a broken jaw.

Beale was imediately taken to the Lamar Hospital where Dr. Calloway attended him, placing his jaw in a cast. An X-ray, taken at Dr. Calloway's office showed the injury to be a double fracture.

Beale, who is editor-in-chief of the Chilhowean, and sports editor on the Echo staff, will be handicapped in his work for three weeks, during which time it will be necessary for him to wear a cast and take only liquid food.

SUNDAY NIGHT GRACE

Last Sunday evening, the Y. M. C. A. quartet, with Harry Wood, William Hannah, Gordon Grooms, and Arthur Courtnay, sang for the evening grace, "Now The Day Is Over".

It was decided to substitute this selection for "Day Is Dying In The West", which was used most of last year. This new song will be sung tomorrow night and each Sunday night during the year unless some other announcement is made.

The man who has not anything to boast of but his ancestors is like a potato—the only good belonging to him is underground.

Dr. Ralph Lloyd And Miss Clemmie Henry Will Leave On Extensive New England Trip

College Representatives Will Speak To D. A. R. And Women's Clubs

Dr. RalRph W. Lloyd will leave Maryville College next Thursday for Boston, Massachusetts, the first stop on a month's speaking tour over the New England States, centered chiefly in Massachusetts and Connecticutt. Accompanying Dr. Lloyd on the trip will be Miss Clemmie Henry, Student-Help Secretary, who has traveled over this country on speaking tours in previous years. Most of the speaking engagements will be in connection with D. A. R. chapters, which are particularly strong in the northeastern part of the country. The D. A. R. organization has been interested in Maryville for the past twenyt-five years, being introduced to the college by Miss Margaret Henry of Maryville who had traveled over that country on speaking tours. Miss Henry, a relative of Miss Clemmie Henry was an accomplished, and learned speaker. Several engagements have been arranged with women's clubs in the different cities. In all, up to the present time, Dr. Lloyd has scheduled twenty-five addresses. Miss Henry will speak to various chapters and women's clubs, often speaking in the same town with Dr. Lloyd.

The trend of Dr. Lloyd's talks will be along the line of the present day need of citizenship. He will seek to show the valuable contribution that colleges of the type of Maryville make toward successful citizenship. The first lecture will be on Saturday, October 15, at Farmingham, Massachusetts. Other important engagements are at Lowell, Massachusetts; Bridgeport, Connecticutt; Woburn, Massachusetts; Bristol, Connecticutt; and Holyoke, Massachusetts. On November 15, at 1:45 p. m. Eastern Standard Time, Dr. Lloyd will broadcast a fifteen minute address over station WTIC at Hartford, Connecticutt.

No arrangements have been made for any of the five Sundays on the trip, but it is probable that plans will be made at a later date. The concluding lecture will be at Woburn, Massachusetts, on November 18, after which Dr. Lloyd and Miss Henry will return to their routine duties at Maryville.

Unusual Variety In Plays Chosen For Dramatic Season

Sir James Barrie's "Mary Rose" Has Been Selected By College Players

Dramatic Committees of the literary societies, and other organizations interested in play production, have been functioning during the past few weeks, and as a result of their activities, announcements are being made concerning Maryville's dramatic season. An unusually wide variety in the selection of plays indicates a season of contrasted types on the stage.

Much interest is displayed in the student productions at Maryville, and they have been pronounced by competent critics the best amateur performances in this section of the country. The college has considerable talent available, and the casting of the plays is awaited with much interest.

The first play of the year will be presented by the Maryville College Players sometime in November. The definite date has not been set but will be announced soon. The delicate and appealing "Mary Rose", one of the best pieces from the pen of Sir James Barrie, has been selected by the Players as a fitting drama for the initial production of the year. This organization has given notable performances in the past years, and with so happy a selection to start with, it is hoped that this year will see a continuation of their usual successes.

The annual Mid-Winter performances will be ushered in with Bainonian's presentation of Rachel Crothers' charming comedy, "A Little Journey". The scene of this play is a Pullman coach, and its action transpires during a four day journey to the west coast. The interpretation of different character types, from the haughty dowager to the college boys, sustains the interest in this play. Perhaps the most interesting character is Jim West, a Scattergood Bains type, who spends most of his time helping other people out of trouble.

The Y. W. C. A. will present as its annual benefit number Veiller's dramatic "Within the Law". This play may not be presented, however, until the beginning of next semester.

Though the final decision as to what Alpha Sigma will present for its mid-winter has not been made, it is very probable that Mary Roberts Rhinhart's thriller, "The Bat", will be selected by that organization. This pay will demand unusual lighting effects, and will be somewhat of a novelty on the Maryville stage.

Societies To Accept New Members Sat.

Saturday, October 15, will be the date for new men to choose and join their literary society. As soon as each new man decides upon his society he is to present his name to one of the present members of that society. This name is then presented by the old member, and it is considered and voted on. All men entering the societies must be "voted in".

The prospective members are asked to take note of this procedure and hand their name to an old member as soon as it is convenient.

Miss Ellen Hitch, student in the Maryville College Expression Department, gave a thirty minute recital before the members of the Home Demonstration Club of Blount County, which met at the Court House Friday, October 7th.

DEATH OF MR. J. A. COX IS SHOCK TO FAMILY AND FRIENDS

Prominent Banker Succumbs To Heart Attack

The many friends of Mr. J. A. Cox were greatly shocked on Tuesday morning to hear of his sudden death at his home on Court street.

Mr. Cox had attended the college foot-ball game on Friday evening and, although he had contracted a cold and had been under a physician's care, no anxiety had been felt concerning him. When his daughter Elizabeth called him to breakfast on Tuesday morning and he failed to respond, it was found that he had succumbed to a heart attack.

For thirty-five years Mr. Cox was a resident of Maryville. During the last quarter-century he was an official in the Bank of Maryville, first as cashier and after as president. Last month he was chosen presiednt of the merged institutions of the Bank of Blount County and Bank of Maryville. In addition to his extensive business interests, he was active in the civic, philanthropic, and religious life of the comunity. His loss will be deeply felt throughout this entire section.

His two daughters, Misses Ruth and Elizabeth, have both been Maryville College students, and to them the sympathy of both college faculty and students is extended.

LITTLE CHURCH

It would be well for us as students unmooring for another—or, perhaps, the first-voyage on the sea of college life to stabilize our ships with some ballast. Perhaps a simple definition of the gospel about Christ would be the most steadying thing that we could take on board.

In 1 Corinthians 15:1-4, Paul makes a clear statement of that gospel. We can almost imagine that he is actually addressing us, as he writes, "Brethren, I declare unto you the gospel—by which ye are saved, if ye keep in memory what I preached unto you,—how that Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures; and that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day according to the scriptures."

The gospel is the most important piece of information that we can know: that Christ, who is God, died bearing our sins; and that he rose again from the dead. Christ died to take away our guilt (1 Peter 2:24). Christ lives to take away our desires and tendencies to go on sinning (Gal. 2:20). He is the double cure for the double malady of committed sin and present temptation to sin.

However, it is not enough for a man to be aware of the existence of such a gift from God which will enable him to step back into fellowship with God. He must appropriate the gift by simply accepting it, by simply believing that Christ died for him, by trusting in Christ alone for his own salvation (John 3:14, 15).

The whole story can be graphically summed up in this way:

CHRIST died for ME lives in

"Christ" is the subject of it all; "me" is the object of it all. "Christ" accomplishes two things: he died, he lives. But all that he accomplishes does "me" no good, unless "me" receives "Christ" through faith.

The beauty of it is that no one has to be "good" before he can receive Christ. No one has to clean house, in order to invite Christ in. Let Christ in just as you are and he will do the house-cleaning.
